GENERAL PREFACE.

THE Code of Regulations and Acts in force in the territories under the Presidency of Bengal has recently been published, in the chronological order and original form of enactment, with the omission of the rescinded and extinct portions, and with the additions of references, notes, and indexes. The object of the present work is to present the rules of each separate topic of legislation so classified and arranged that, without the labour and hindrance of following out the references and searching the index in order to trace a succession of amending and modifying provisions scattered over the whole length of the Code, the law in respect of each subject might be read as it actually exists. The necessity of such a work as an assistance to future legislation, as a means to discover what needs alteration and amendment, as a basis of consolidation, as a ready aid in comparing proposed emendations with existing provisions, was so apparent, that the Honourable Court of Directors commissioned the editor of the Code to undertake the task. In execution he has found it to occupy more time, though he has not relaxed in the work, and to be fraught with more difficulty, notwithstanding his previous experience, than he had anticipated. If it is not now so perfect as he would desire, it is because, for the satisfactory execution of such a work, it would be necessary that the whole should have been completed before a page was committed to press; but the time for such a course could not be spared; and to expedite the completion, two presses have been simultaneously employed on its different portions.

The larger classification of subjects was easily settled, but their subdivision was not so readily arranged. In the Judicial portion, both Civil and Criminal, the greatest changes had occurred in the long period which the Code embraced, and many subjects presented themselves in a variety of aspects, and under much diversity of treatment, while the early provisions framed for the original institutions remained partially applicable to the altered condition in which the later legislation had placed them: such complications compelled repeated attempts before the arrangement could be satisfactorily settled. Many minute modifications of sentences, which are not apparent without comparison with the original passages, have required in their adaptation much time, care, and deliberation.

The principles on which the work proceeded were, to bring together from all parts of the Code whatever pertained to the subject of each division in the arrangement, to exclude all rescinded and inoperative matter, and all portions which had merely directed or occasioned such extinction, and also the recitals and repetitions which, in the later enactments, had been introduced to explain the grounds of proposed modifications. the new provisions being here actually substituted in the places before occupied by the superseded rules, the explanations could only serve to encumber the text. When duties had been transferred from one officer, or class of officers, to another, they are treated throughout as appertaining to the functionary on whom they were last devolved. Where a rule had been framed to apply to more than one person or duty, which it had been found necessary to arrange under different subdivisions, such rule is given in extenso where it first applies, and is referred to in the places where it subsequently occurs. Thus, for example, in the rules respecting the uncovenanted judges, their powers are for the greater part alike, though the higher grades, and especially the highest, have jurisdiction and authority peculiar to themselves. The rules common to the three grades are set forth as respecting the first, and referred to as regarding the second and third.

Rules were occasionally enacted which had a large and sweeping operation over previous provisions of very extensive application; such, for example, are those of Regulation VII., 1829, which released the judicial authorities from furnishing at stated periods many formal returns before prescribed by various Regulations; such also were those of Regulation II., 1834, which substituted imprisonment for corporal punishments and fine in lieu of labour, with certain exceptions. In all such cases, the provisions affected by the latter law have been modified so as to conform to that now in force. When any matter had been the subject of various treatment in successive enactments, the final result is applied to the substantive rule.

If it should be found that some provisions are retained which in practice are superseded by circular orders of Government, or constructions of the Sudder Court, it must be observed that the compiler of this work had only to deal with the legislative enactments as he found them in the code. Where so much complexity existed as had necessarily arisen in the varied legislation of sixty years, seldom simplified by consolidation, such directions were absolutely required for the guidance of public officers; the earlier Regulations often contained rules of detail, which would have been better left to be settled and altered by the controlling authorities, in the various departments of administration, and practical changes have no doubt, in many instances, been effected without a corresponding modification of the Regulations themselves; but, to incorporate them in the present work, would have been a departure from the undertaking with which the compiler was charged, and to have ventured on so extensive and uncertain a field of operation, at a distance from the sphere of actual administration, would have been an attempt dangerous to be made.

The rules which modify and apply the Mahomedan Law to the administration of Criminal Justice in the British Courts, partly lay down general principles, and partly give specific directions for the application of those principles to the punishment of crimes of different degrees of atrocity. The most convenient mode of dealing with those provisions seemed to be to arrange what belongs to the former class, under a general head in the "Criminal" division, entitled "Mahomedan Law," and to leave the latter class among the rules for the guidance of the Courts in dealing with "Specific Offences."

It has been endeavoured to make the division and arrangement sufficiently particular to be orderly and clear, without being too minute. In a few instances the principles of separation which have been indicated above have been necessarily departed from, as the subject would not permit their observance without greater inconvenience than advantage; but the exceptions will be readily perceived, and will not, it is hoped, create any difficulty in the use of the work. Thus, for example, the rules respecting the appointment, removal, and responsibilities of public officers have all been kept together, relating, as they do, collectively to officers in the various departments of the service; so also, under the head of "Civil Judicature," where generally the procedure in original suits and appeals is separately arranged, the rules in regard to paupers, in both stages, are placed together under the head "Pauper Suits," because the whole procedure in respect of paupers is particular and exceptional, and the rules regarding their appeals are few, and in their construction intimately blended with those for the original suits.

Occasional notes are introduced in the course of the work, where any doubt or difficulty appeared to require observation or explanation.

Rules of local application were a source of some difficulty to deal with. The original Regulations of the Code of 1793 had been extended, as far as regards the judicial and general branches, with little but verbal alterations. The principle applied, therefore, was to cast the exceptional rules of those divisions into an appendix. The revenue Regulations, however, required a different mode of dealing with them, because the revenue administrations of Benares and the Ceded and Conquered Provinces were characterized by essential differences, affecting in various ways many of the rules which related to the parallel matters in the original Code. The particular mode in which this branch of legislation is dealt with is fully stated in the prefatory note to the section "Land Revenue."

The work has been so prepared as to be used either as a whole, or in separate portions. To most of the general divisions there is prefixed a note explanatory of its structure and arrangement, a table of contents, and also a numerical table exhibiting all the rules throughout the Code which related to the subject-matter of the division. In the latter table is given the paragraph number by which each rule that is retained will be found, whether singly or in amalgamation with others, and the provisions which have been left out of the arrangement are marked with the reason for their omission.

To assist in reference when the work is used as a whole, and to show at one view the arrangement both in its general classification and its subordinate divisions, a table of all enactments incorporated in the arrangement is added; and with a view to afford a ready means of ascertaining under which division any particular subject is arranged, a general index of matters is subjoined.

It has been the anxious desire of the compiler that the work should be easy of reference, and satisfactorily complete, and he can truly say that he has spared no pains to render it so, with what success he must leave to be decided by those for whose use it is designed. It was a great satisfaction to him to learn that a sketch of the plan on which it was proposed to execute the work, and a specimen portion, having been officially brought under the notice of the Hon. B. Peacock, the law member of the Legislative Council at Calcutta, that gentleman was pleased to approve of the plan, and to add that a work completed according to that plan would be very useful. Encouraged by this opinion from so high an authority, the compiler proceeded with more cheerful spirit to the completion of a task which he trusts will be more useful in the result than it was enlivening in its execution.

In part of the work the compiler has had assistance from his talented and long experienced coadjutor, Mr. John Dowson, one of the Assistant Secretaries of the Royal Asiatic Society and Professor of Hindustani in University College, London, whose brilliant progress in mastering, and ability and success in imparting the knowledge of four Oriental languages, is scarcely more remarkable than his aptitude for public business, his clearness in apprehending, and his accuracy in retaining the varied knowledge which his industry has enabled him to gather. Had his important duties as a teacher left more of his time at disposal, the present work would have been more expeditiously completed.

THE following Sections were omitted in their places, having dropped out in settling the arrangement. The omission was discovered in the final comparison of the lists.

Place in "CIVIL JUDICATURE," after paragraph 269, page 50:—

The Civil Courts are to appropriate one day, or two or more days when they shall deem it necessary, in each week, for the trial of all suits between Government or the collectors, and proprietors or farmers of land, regarding demands on account of the public revenue assessed upon the lands, or advances for tuccavy, water-courses, reservoirs, or embankments, and also suits between proprietors and farmers of land, and dependent talookdars, regarding revenue, or between any of the above descriptions of persons and their under-farmers and ryots, regarding rent, or the rates of pottahs, or advances for tuccavy, water-courses, reservoirs, or embankments. The Courts are to proceed to the trial of the causes above mentioned on the days so allotted, without regard to any other descriptions of causes that may have been previously filed, which are to be tried on separate days.—Reg. III., 1794, sec. xxii.

---

Such parts of the existing Regulations as declare the collectors of revenue to be amenable to the Zillah and City Courts for any acts done by them in their official capacity, in opposition to the Regulations, shall be held applicable to any magistrate, or joint magistrate, or assistant to a magistrate, who may be employed in the collection of the public revenue.—Reg. IV., 1821, sec. vi., cl. 1.

Provided always, that if such individual shall, at the same time, hold the office of judge of the zillah or city in which the act in question may have been committed, such act shall not be cognizable by the Zillah or City Gourt, but by the Provincial Court of the division in which such zillah or city may be included.—Reg. IV., 1821, sec. vi., cl. 2.

In the institution of suits for the recovery of the public revenue, or in any case in which the institution of a suit by the collector in the Zillah or City Courts is authorized or directed by the Regulations, a magistrate or joint magistrate, or assistant to a magistrate, employed in the collection of the revenue, not being himself in charge of the office of judge of a Zillah or City Court, shall proceed according to the Regulations already in force for the guidance of the collectors under similar circumstances.—Reg. IV., 1821, sec. vii.

It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to vest the whole or any portion of the jurisdiction and powers of a civil judge and of a collector of revenue in the hands of the same officer whenever, and so long as such an arrangement may, for special purposes, appear expedient.—Reg. V., 1825, sec. iii., cl. 1.

Provided that in all such cases the judge shall be precluded from trying and determining in his Civil Court any claims which may be preferred by individuals for acts done by him in his official capacity of collector, but such claims shall, as already provided for by the second clause of Section VI., Regulation IV., 1821, be cognizable in the Provincial Court of the division, and not in the Zillah or City Court.—Reg. V., 1825, sec. iii., cl. 2.

Place in "LAND REVENUE," after paragraph 153, page 316:—

No native of the territories subject to the Government of the East-India Company, nor any natural-born subject of her Majesty, resident therein, is, by reason only of his religion, place of birth, descent, colour, or any of them, disabled from holding the office of deputy collector, under Regulation IX., 1833.—Act XV., 1843, sec. vi.

The following Act was received from India after the Section to which it would belong had been printed, some of the provisions of which it modifies. Its place would be in the Section "CRIMINAL JUDICATURE," page 172.

---

Whereas the provisions of Section III., and Section VII., of Regulation XI., 1831, have been found inconvenient, and whereas it is expedient that Regulation XI., 1831, as amended by this Act, should be extended to the whole of the Provinces of Benares; it is enacted as follows:—

I. Section III. and VII., Regulation XI., 1831, of the Bengal code are hereby repealed.

II. Wherever any Tehseeldar shall have Police jurisdiction under the provisions of Section II. of the said Regulation XI., 1831, every Darogah of Police hereafter appointed within the local limits of the Police jurisdiction of such Tehseeldar, shall be subordinate to, and subject to the control of such Tehseeldar, in his capacity of Chief Police Thannadar.

III. Regulation XI., 1831, as amended by this Act, shall extend to the whole of the Province of Benares, and all powers vested by the said Regulation in the Governor-General in Council, may be exercised by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces.—Act XVI., 1854.

PREFATORY NOTE

TO THE SECTION "CIVIL JUDICATURE"

In arranging this portion of the enactments of the Bengal Code, considerable difficulty has been experienced in dealing with the general, though gradual changes effected in the number and powers of the Civil Courts, and the relation towards each other of those which now exist These changes have practically modified many more sections and parts of sections than have been either formally repealed, or declared subject to modification by specific enactments, and they had to be introduced in the places which they severally affected.

The present collection begins with the enactments establishing and defining the powers of the several Courts of Original Jurisdiction; these are followed by the Rules of Procedure, first in the Zillah Courts as the general model to which the practice of the other courts is chiefly made to conform, and then the special rules which modify the practice of the Courts of the Uncovenanted Judges.

Next in order come enactments which lay down certain principles for the administration of justice, or which provide for modes of trying original suits not coming within the ordinary operation of the courts. Then follow provisions relative to Special Suits in which the procedure is peculiar, and exceptional.

The next great division contains the rules respecting Appeals; and first as to Regular Appeals, it is shown to and from what jurisdictions appeals lie; the rules of procedure common to both the Courts of Appeal are then given. These are followed by the powers and duties of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. This division closes with the rules for Special or Second Appeals, those to the Queen in Council, and Summary Appeals.

After the above is placed a collection of rules which have operation equally in Courts of Original and Appellate Jurisdiction; among these are the enactments respecting Interest, and the conditional sales denominated Bye-bil-wuffa These are followed by rules which affect the Succession to Landed Property, and the Protection of the Property of Deceased Persons from wrongful possession. Next are placed the rules for the Registry of Deeds, including the preparation of deeds by Cauzies of Towns.

The rules for the appropriation of Treasure found, and those regarding Pleaders and Stamps, close this Section Rules having local operation only are added as an Appendix.

---

Some rules which are common to the Civil and Criminal Courts will form a Section of themselves, at the head of which will be placed those which define the constitution and powers of the SUDDER COURTS exercising a joint jurisdiction, civil and criminal, as Supreme Courts, Dewanny and Nizamut.

CONSTITUTION AND JURISDICTION.

MOONSIFFS.

1. The selection and number of moonsiffs shall be regulated in such manner as the Governor-General in Council may be pleased to direct, and no person by reason of birth or descent, or of class, or of religious persuasion, shall be incapable of being a moonsiff; and every moonsiff being a British born subject of the Queen, or a descendant of such British born subject, shall, in respect of all acts done by him as such moonsiff, be liable to the same proceedings, and shall be amenable to the jurisdiction of the same tribunals, as if he were not of British birth or descent.—Reg. V, 1831, secs. iii and xiii; Act VIII, 1836.

2. Every person who may in future be appointed to the office of moonsiff will be furnished by the judge with a sunnud, and previously to entering upon the duties of his office, he shall make and subscribe a solemn declaration according to the following form:

"I, A. B., appointed to the office of moonsiff of ———, do solemnly declare, that in the trial and determination of all suits which may come under my cognizance, and in the execution of all the other duties of my office, I will act according to the best of my abilities and judgment, without partiality, favour, or affection; that I will not directly or indirectly receive, or knowingly allow any other person to receive any money, effects, or property, on account of any suit that may come before me for decision, or on account of any public duty which I may have to execute. I will strictly adhere to all the rules prescribed for my guidance; and I will in all respects, truly and faithfully execute the trust reposed in me."—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xi; Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. ii.

3. Whenever a sunnud may be granted to a moonsiff under the preceding paragraph, a copy of it, under the official seal and signature of the judge, shall also be delivered to him, in order that it may remain permanently affixed in some conspicuous place in his cutcherry.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xii.

4. The moonsiff shall, in lieu of fees and other compensation, receive from Government such monthly allowances as may be fixed by the order of the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xii, cl. 2.

5. The local jurisdiction of moonsiffs shall be so arranged as to correspond with those of the thannahs, or local police jurisdictions, and shall have the same local denomination as that of the corresponding police jurisdiction.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. vi, cls. 1 and 2.

6. The Sudder Courts are empowered to include two or more entire police jurisdictions within that of one moonsiff, and to abolish any of those offices whenever local or special circumstances may, in their judgment, render it expedient. They are further at all times authorised to cause the cutcherry of a moonsiff to be removed from the town or village in which it may be held, to any other town or village within the limits of the same moonsiff's jurisdiction which may appear more convenient.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. vii.

7. Upon the death, removal, or resignation of any sudder ameen or moonsiff, the zillah judge shall, if necessary, immediately nominate another person in his room, and shall cause all papers in the causes depending before the late sudder ameen or moonsiff to be delivered over to his successor, or otherwise to be disposed of as circumstances may require.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, secs. xlviii and lxxiii.

8. In the removal of sudder ameens and moonsiffs, it shall not be necessary, in all cases to require full and legal proof of disqualification; but whenever a zillah or city judge shall have reason to believe that any principal or other sudder ameen or moonsiff within his jurisdiction is disqualified by neglect of duty, incapacity, notorious corruption, or other gross misconduct, he shall state the grounds of his opinion to the commissioner of revenue and circuit for the division, and provided that officer concur with him in opinion, they shall jointly submit a report thereof for the consideration and orders of the Governor-General in Council, if the report relates to a principal sudder ameen or sudder ameen, or to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, if the report relates to a moonsiff, through the secretary to Government in the judicial department; and it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council, or Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as the case may be, should they be of opinion that sufficient grounds exist, to direct the immediate removal of such principal, or other sudder ameen, or moonsiff; provided, however, that no principal or other sudder ameen or moonsiff shall be removed from office without the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, or the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxvi, cls. 1 and 2.

9. Provided also, that it shall be competent to a judge of a Zillah or City Court, whenever he may see urgent necessity for so doing, to suspend any principal sudder ameen, sudder ameen, or moonsiff, within his jurisdiction, without any previous communication with the commissioner of the division; and in all cases in which the commissioner of the division may dissent from the judge as to the propriety of removing any of the officers above named, it shall be competent to the judge to submit his own opinion to that effect to the Governor-General in Council, or the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as the case may be; such report, however, to be accompanied by a copy of the dissent which the commissioner may deem it necessary to record on the occasion. —Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxvi, cl. 3.

10. Provided also, that it shall be competent to any commissioner of revenue and circuit to recommend, on grounds assigned, the removal of any moonsiff, sudder ameen, or principal sudder ameen; but every such recommendation shall be previously submitted through the judge of the zillah or city, whose assent or dissent shall accompany the recommendation to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or the Governor-General in Council, as the case may be.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxvi, cl. 4.

11. Moonsiffs and sudder ameens shall be liable to an action in the Civil Court for corruption in the discharge of their trust, or for extortion, or for any oppressive or unwarranted act of authority; and upon proof of the charge to the satisfaction of the judge, he shall cause the offender to pay such damages and costs to the party injured as may appear to be equitable. —Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. x, cl. 1, and sec. lxvii.

12. Principal sudder ameens, sudder ameens, and moonsiffs, shall be liable to a criminal prosecution for corruption, extortion, or other misdemeanor committed by them in the discharge of any part of their duty, and on conviction before the Sessions Court, shall be subject to fine and imprisonment proportionate to the nature and circumstances of the case; but no principal sudder ameen, sudder ameen, or moonsiff, shall be liable to be prosecuted for want of form, or for error in his proceedings or judgments, nor shall any process be issued against any principal sudder ameen, sudder ameen, or moonsiff, who may be charged with corruption, extortion, or any oppressive and unwarranted act of authority, unless the zillah or city judge shall be previously satisfied by sufficient evidence that there is reason to believe the charge to be well founded.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. x, cl. 2, and sec. lxvii; and Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxvi, cl. 5.

13. No person whatever shall, by reason of place of birth, or by reason of descent, be, in any civil proceeding whatever, including proceedings connected with arrears or exactions of rent, exempted from the jurisdiction of the courts of the moonsiffs.—Act III, 1839, sec. iii; Act VI, 1843, sec. vii.

14. Persons invested with the powers of moonsiff shall be competent to receive, try, and determine suits of every description, if the landed or other real property to which the suit may relate shall be situated, or if in all other cases, the cause of action shall have arisen, or the defendant, at the time when the suit may be commenced, shall reside as a fixed inhabitant, within the limits to which their respective jurisdictions may extend. For money, or other personal property, not exceeding in amount or value the sum of three hundred rupees, provided the claim include the whole amount of the demand arising from the cause of action. For the property or possession of land, or other real property. Provided, however, that no moonsiff shall try any suit in which he himself, or any of his relatives or dependants shall be a party.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. v, cls. 1 to 3; Act VI, 1843, sec. viii.

15. Moonsiffs who may be appointed under the provisions of Regulation V, 1831, shall be competent, in addition to the authority possessed by moonsiffs generally, of receiving, trying, and deciding claims to arrears of rent preferred by regular suit, in like manner to dispose of all claims preferred by under-tenants, or others who may be desirous of resisting the distraint of their property, or the attachment of their persons, or who may prefer a claim to damages on account of such acts.—Reg. VIII, 1831, sec. xi.

16. Moonsiffs are prohibited from receiving or trying any suits which persons may desire to prefer to them in formâ pauperis.*—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xiii, cl. 3.

* Reg. V, 1831, sec. v, cl. 5 repealed this prohibition, and added that it should be competent to the judges to refer such suits to the moonsiffs, but that clause is repealed by Act XXXVI, 1852, sec. 1.

17. Regular suits instituted to set aside the summary judgments of collectors for land rent are declared cognizable, according to their amount, by the principal sudder ameens, sudder ameens, and moonsiffs.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. x.

18. In cases where a moonsiff cannot try a suit because he himself, or any of his relatives or dependants, is a party to the suit, it shall nevertheless be competent to the moonsiff to receive the suit, and forward it to the judge of the zillah to which he is subordinate, who may thereupon refer the same for trial and decision to any other moonsiff of the district.—Act VI, 1843, sec. ix.

19. The zillah and city judges may, for any reason that may appear to them sufficient, bring up for trial before them, or the sudder ameens, any causes that may be depending before the moonsiffs, or may transfer such causes from one moonsiff to another.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xlvii.

20. All suits within the competency of a moonsiff to decide, shall ordinarily be instituted in the Moonsiffs' Courts. Provided, nevertheless, that it shall be competent to a zillah or city judge to receive such suits, and to try them himself, or to refer them for trial to any other court subordinate to his authority, whenever he may see sufficient reason for so doing.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. vii.

21. Whenever a zillah or city judge, in the exercise of the discretion vested in him by the preceding paragraph, shall refer for trial to a sudder ameen, or principal sudder ameen, a suit within the competency of a moonsiff to decide, such suit shall be subject to the same rules in regard to stamp duties, and to the same rules in regard to appeal as the said suit would have been subjected to had it been received and tried by the moonsiff in the first instance.—Act XXV, 1837, sec. v.

SUDDER AMEENS.

22. The selection and number of sudder ameens shall be regulated in future in such manner as the Governor-General in Council may be pleased to direct. No person shall by reason of place of birth or descent, or of class or of religious persuasion, be incapable of being a sudder ameen, and every sudder ameen being a British born subject of the Queen, or a descendant of such British born subject shall in respect of all acts done by him as such sudder ameen be liable to the same proceedings, and shall be amenable to the jurisdiction of the same tribunals as if he were not of British birth or descent.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xiii; Act VIII, 1836.

23. The Mahomedan and Hindoo law officers of the Zillah and City Courts shall not be deemed sudder ameens ex officio, but shall be eligible to the office like other individuals; and whenever they may be so elected, the judge shall generally refer such cases as are likely to involve questions of Hindoo Law to the Hindoo Law officer, and of Mahomedan Law to the Mahomedan Law officer.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxix; Reg. V, 1831, sec. xiv, cl. 2.

24. Sunnuds shall be granted to sudder ameens under the seal and signature of the judge, drawn up according to a prescribed form.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxv.

25. Every person who may in future be appointed to the office of sudder ameen shall, previously to entering upon the execution of the duties of his situation, make and subscribe a solemn declaration before the judge of the zillah or city in which he may be appointed to officiate, according to the following form:—

I, A. B., appointed to the office of sudder ameen of the zillah or city of ———, do solemnly declare, that in the trial and determination of all suits which may come under my cognizance, and in the execution of all the other duties of my office, I will act according to the best of my abilities and judgment, without partiality, favour, or affection; that I will not directly or indirectly receive, or knowingly allow any other person to receive, any money, effects or property, on account of any suit that may come before me for decision, or on account of any public duty which I may have to execute. I will strictly adhere to all the rules prescribed for my guidance; and I will, in all respects, truly and faithfully execute the trust reposed in me.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxvi; Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. ii.

26. The sudder ameens shall in lieu of fees and other compensation receive from Government such monthly allowances as may be fixed for them respectively by the orders of the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. XIII, 1824, sec. ii, cl. 2.

27. Removal of sudder ameens.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xlviii, and lxxiii; Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxvi, cls. 1 to 4. (See "MOONSIFFS" paragraphs 7 to 10.)

28. Sudder ameens liable to prosecution in the Civil and Criminal Courts.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. x, cls. 1 and 2, and sec. lxvii; Reg. V. 1831, sec. xxvi, cl. 5. (See "MOONSIFFS," paragraphs 11 and 12.)

29. No person whatever, shall, by reason of place of birth, or by reason of descent be, in any civil proceeding whatever, exempted from the jurisdiction of any sudder ameen.—Act XI, 1836, sec. ii.

30. Whenever there shall be more than one principal sudder ameen, or more than one sudder ameen, attached to the court of any zillah or city judge, and not having any special local jurisdiction, it shall be the duty of such judge to appoint from time to time the several moonsiffs' divisions, which shall constitute the special local jurisdiction of each of such principal sudder ameens and sudder ameens, and that each of such principal sudder ameens and sudder ameens shall be empowered to take cognizance of all such suits as are mentioned in paragraph 39, provided the landed or other real property to which the suit may relate shall be situated, or in all other cases the cause of action shall have arisen, or the defendant at the time when the suit may be commenced shall reside as a fixed inhabitant within the limits of such local jurisdiction as aforesaid. —Act IX, 1844, sec. iii.

31. The zillah and city judges are declared competent to refer to any of the sudder ameens subject to their authority, for trial and decision, any original suits instituted in their courts for money or other personal property, or for the property or possession of land, or of other real property, the amount or value of which, calculated according to the rules specified in No. 8 of the Schedule (B.) referred to in Section XVII, Regulation X, 1829, may not exceed 1,000 rupees. Provided, however, that no suit shall be referred for trial to a sudder ameen, in which he himself or his relatives, or dependants, shall be a party.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xv, cl. 2.

32. (Suits regarding rent cognizable by sudder ameens.)—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. x. (See "MOONSIFFS," paragraph 17.)

33. When a plaintiff may have been admitted by the judge of a Zillah or City Court to institute his suit in formâ pauperis, under the rules for paupers contained in Regulation XXVIII, 1814, and the suit may, in other respects, be referrible to a sudder ameen, it shall be competent to the judge to refer the same for trial and decision by one of the sudder ameens attached to the Zillah or City Court, or stationed in any other part of his jurisdiction; and the suit so referred shall be proceeded upon by the sudder ameen as in other suits referred to him, subject to the provisions contained in Regulation XXVIII, 1814.—Reg. XIII, 1824, sec. iv, cl. 2.

34. The provisions in the Regulation above mentioned respecting pauper defendants in original suits, as well as those respecting pauper appellants and respondents in appealed cases, shall likewise be considered applicable to defendants in original suits, and to appellants and respondents in appealed cases referred for trial to sudder ameens; but no person shall be admitted by a sudder ameen to prosecute or defend an original suit or appeal, in formâ pauperis without the written order of the zillah or city judge, authorizing the admission of the party as a pauper under the provisions of Regulations XXVIII, 1814.—Reg. XIII, 1824, sec. iv, cl. 3.

35. The judges who are empowered by Section V. of the Regulation above mentioned to employ an authorized officer of the court in taking the examinations of parties and witnesses for the purposes therein specified, may however employ the sudder ameens attached to their respective courts, in taking such examinations and generally in making the inquiries provided for by that Regulation. But no final order for the admission of a pauper shall be passed by a sudder ameen, nor shall the commitment of pauper plaintiffs to close custody, in pursuance of Section XI, Regulation XXVIII, 1814, be carried into execution by a sudder ameen, without the sanction of the judge.—Reg. XIII, 1824, sec. iv, cl. 4.

36. The provisions of Section XI, Regulation II, 1821, and of Clauses 2 and 3, Section II, Regulation III, 1824, are declared applicable to principal sudder ameens, or sudder ameens who may be stationed at any other place than the fixed station of the Zillah or City Court, or with jurisdiction within the limits of any magistracy, joint magistracy, collectorship, or deputy collectorship.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. xvii.

NOTE.—The following are the provisions referred to in the preceding paragraph, with the addition of clause 1, sec. ii, Reg. III, 1824.

37. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to extend the jurisdiction which may be vested in a register, with regard to the cognizance and trial of regular suits under the rules in force upon the subject, to those portions of other districts in which such register may be authorized to exercise the powers of joint magistrate.—Reg. III, 1824, sec. ii, cl. 1.

NOTE.—This first clause is not extended by section xvii, Reg. VII, 1832, to principal sudder ameens and sudder ameens.

The provisions contained in the existing Regulations for the guidance of principal sudder ameens and sudder ameens stationed at a distance from the sudder station shall be equally applicable to the trial and decision of suits which may be instituted before them, or referred to them, under the foregoing paragraph.—Reg. III, 1824, sec. ii, cl. 2; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. xvii.

NOTE.—This general expression, "existing Regulations" in the above second clause would seem necessarily to include the provisions of Regulation XXIV, 1814, and secs. xi, xii, and xiii of Regulation II, 1821, referred to in the preceding first clause, as they contained the rules "for the guidance of registers stationed at a distance from the sudder station;" and though many of those rules have been superseded by later enactments, they are all subjoined, those which are inoperative are noted in brief—those which are in force, or respecting which a doubt may exist, are given in extenso.

(Principal sudder ameens and sudder ameens to furnish reports).—Reg. III, 1824, sec. ii, cl. 3. Superseded by Reg. VII, 1829.

Ministerial act of registers.—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. xi.—Repealed by sec. i, Act XIX, 1853.

(Only declares modifications.)—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. xii; cl. 1, unnecessary.

(Governor-General in Council may appoint one or more additional principal sudder ameens, or sudder ameens.)—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 2. Superseded, as regards principal sudder ameens by sec. xvii, Reg. V, 1831; and as regards sudder ameens by sec. xiii, Reg. V, 1831.

It shall further be competent to the Governor-General in Council to station the principal sudder ameens, or sudder ameens, at any place or places within the jurisdiction of a Zillah or City Court of Dewanny Adawlut; and whenever a principal sudder ameen, or sudder ameen, may be stationed at any place not being the sudder station of the Zillah or City Court, the sittings and proceedings of such principal sudder ameens and sudder ameens shall be held in a convenient and open court room, to be provided for that purpose at such place as Government may direct.—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 3; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. xvii.

(Issue of process.)—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 4. Superseded as regards principal sudder ameens by cl. 5, sec. xviii, Reg. V, 1831; and as regards sudder ameens by cl. 4, sec. xv, Reg. V, 1831.

The judges of the Zillah or City Courts, and the public officers acting under them, are required to aid and support the execution of any process which may be issued by the principal sudder ameens and sudder ameens; and any disobedience or resistance to process so issued is hereby declared to be liable to the same penalties as disobedience or resistance to the process of a Zillah or City Court.—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 5; Reg. V, 1831, sec. xv, cl. 4, and sec. xviii, cl. 5.

The judicial powers of a principal sudder ameen or sudder ameen who may be stationed at a place not being the station of the zillah or city Dewanny Adawlut, under the provisions of this section, shall be the same as those of the principal sudder ameen or sudder ameens employed at the station of the Zillah or City Courts, viz., to try and decide according to the Regulations in force, any suits or matters which may be referred to them by the zillah or city judges, and which may be cognisable by such principal sudder ameens or sudder ameens, either in their ordinary jurisdiction, or under the special powers with which they may be vested, in conformity with section ix of this Regulation.—Reg. suits from the court in which they may have been instituted, and to try them himself, or to refer them for trial to any other court subordinate to his authority, and competent in respect to the value of the suit whenever he may see sufficient reason for so doing.—Act. IX, 1844, sec. ii.

41. Whenever a zillah or city judge shall refer for trial to a principal sudder ameen a suit within the competency of a sudder ameen to decide, such suit shall be subject to the same rules in regard to stamp duties, and to the same rules in regard to appeal as the said suit would have been subjected to had it been referred to and tried by the sudder ameen in the first instance.—Act XXV, 1837, sec. vii.

PRINCIPAL SUDDER AMEENS.

43. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to appoint to any zillah or city jurisdiction one or more principal sudder ameens with the powers hereinafter specified. No person by reason of place of birth, or by reason of descent, or of class or persuasion, shall be incapable of being a principal sudder ameen, and every principal sudder ameen being a British born subject of the queen, or a descendant of such British born subject shall, in respect of all acts done by him, as such principal sudder ameen, be liable to the same proceedings, and shall be answerable to the jurisdiction of the same tribunals as if he were not of British birth or descent.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xvii, cls. 1, and 2; Act VIII, 1836.

44. The persons selected for the office shall be appointed by the Governor-General in Council, and shall receive their sunnuds or commissions from Government, under the signature of the secretary in the judicial department.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xvii, cl. 2.

45. The principal sudder ameens will receive such monthly allowances as may be fixed by the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xvii, cl. 3.

46. Every person appointed to the office of principal sudder ameen shall, previously to entering upon the execution of the duties of his situation, make and subscribe, before the judge of the zillah or city in which he may be employed, the solemn declaration required by section ii, Regulation XVIII, 1817, to the same effect as the oath before required.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xvii, cl. 4; Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. ii, cl. 2.

47. (Removal of principal sudder ameens.)—Reg. V, 1831, xxvi, cls. 1 to 4. (See "MOONSIFFS," paragraphs 8 to 10.)

51. The zillah and city judges are authorized to refer to the principal sudder ameens any original suits instituted in their courts for money or other personal property, or for the property or possession of land or other real property, whatever may be the amount or value of such property; provided that no suit be referred to a principal sudder ameen in which he himself, or his relatives, or dependants shall be a party.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xviii, cl. 1, and Act. XXV, 1837, sec i.

52. In cases where, by reason of the above clause, a suit cannot be referred to a sudder ameen, because he himself or his relatives or dependants are a party to the suit, and where the zillah and city judges cannot refer such suit to be tried by any other competent authority, it shall be lawful for each of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to direct, by an order authenticated by the official signature of their register, that the cognizance of such suit shall be transferred to any other Zillah or City Court subordinate to the same Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; and the judge of such other Zillah or City Court may thereupon refer such suit in the same manner as if the same had been originally instituted in the court of such other zillah or city.—Act. XXVII, 1838, sec. ii.

NOTE.—The clause referred to is the first of sec xviii, Reg. V, 1831, which relates to Principal Sudder Ameens only. It is therefore clear that the rule here provided for "Sudder Ameens" must be intended to apply to Principal Sudder Ameens. Perhaps the term "Sudder Ameens" is here used generally, and intends to include Principal Sudder Ameens as well as Sudder Ameens.

53. It shall be competent to every zillah or city judge to refer for trial and decision any original suit preferred under the provisions of clause 1, section xxx, Regulation II, 1819, of the Bengal Code, to any principal sudder ameen, anything in the existing regulations to the contrary notwithstanding.—Art. XXV, 1837, sec. iii.

ZILLAH COURTS

59 The Zillah Courts of Dewanny Adawlut, or courts of judicature for the trial of civil suits established in the several zillahs and cities, are to be denominated after the zillah or the city in which they are respectively established—Reg III, 1793, sec ii

60 It shall be lawful for the Governor-General in Council, by an order in council, to create new zillahs in any part of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, and to alter the limits of existing zillahs.—Act XXI, 1836.

61 Each Zillah and City Court is to be superintended by one judge, who, previous to entering upon the execution of the duties of his office, is to take and subscribe the following oath before any person whom the Governor-General in Council may commission to administer it

62 When the number of civil causes depending before the judge of any Zillah or City Court may be such as to require the aid and appointment of additional judges for the speedy investigation and decision of such causes, the Governor General in Council, at the recommendation of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or otherwise, if it shall appear to him expedient, will appoint any number of additional judges for the zillah or city wherein it may be requisite, to be denominated "Additional judges of such Zillah or City," who, previously to entering upon the execution of the duties of his office, shall take and subscribe the same oath as is directed to be taken and subscribed by the judges of the Zillah and City Courts—Reg VIII, 1833, sec ii, cl. 1

63. The additional judges so appointed are empowered to perform any part of the duties of the judge of the zillah or city to which they may be appointed, or that the Governor-General in Council may assign to them, and such additional judges, in the performance of those duties will exercise the same powers, and be guided by the same rules and regulations in every respect, as the zillah or city judge—Reg VIII, 1833, sec ii, cl. 2.

64 The special jurisdiction of the Zillah Courts is to extend throughout the districts and places that are or may be included in the zillahs in which they are respectively established The special jurisdiction of the Courts of Dewanny Adawlut for the cities, is to extend over those cities and the places adjacent, which are or may be included in the limits of their respective jurisdictions.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. iv.

65. The Zillah and City Courts respectively are empowered to take cognizance of all suits and complaints respecting the succession or right to real or personal property, land-rents, revenues, debts, accounts, contracts, partnerships, marriage, caste, claims to damages for injuries, and generally of all suits and complaints of a civil nature, provided the landed or other real property to which the suit or complaint may relate shall be situated, or in all other cases the cause of action shall have arisen, or the defendant at the time when the suit may be commenced shall reside, as a fixed inhabitant, within the limits of the zillah or district over which their jurisdiction may extend. —Reg. III, 1793, sec. viii.

66. Collectors of the revenue and their assistants and native officers, salt agents and their assistants and native officers concerned in the manufacture of salt, the collectors of the customs and their assistants and native officers employed in the collection of the customs, the mint and assay masters and their assistants and native officers, are declared amenable to the Zillah or City Court in the jurisdiction of which they may reside or carry on the public business committed to their charge, for any acts done in their official capacity, in opposition to any Regulation—Reg. III, 1793, sec. x.

67. If a suit shall have been instituted in the Court of Dewanny Adawlut of any zillah or city in which it may have been cognizable, no other Zillah or City Court is to entertain a suit for the same cause of action; and on proof being made in the court in which the second suit may be commenced, that a prior suit for the same cause of action has been instituted in another Zillah or City Court competent to try it, the court in which the second suit may be brought is to dismiss it with costs, to be paid by the party so suing. And if any person shall have commenced a suit in the Dewanny Adawlut of any zillah or city, and whilst that suit is depending, or after a decree may be passed in it, shall commence another suit in any other Zillah or City Court of Dewanny Adawlut for the same cause; or if any person shall commence a suit in any Zillah or City Court of Dewanny Adawlut, which shall appear to the judge to be frivolous, vexatious, or groundless, he is not only to dismiss the suit, with such costs as he may deem it equitable to award against the plaintiff, but is to fine him in such amount as he may think proper, upon a consideration of the nature of the case and the situation and circumstances in life of the offender, and commit him to close custody until he pays the fine.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. xii.

68. The Zillah and City Courts are prohibited entertaining any cause which, from the production of a former decree, or the records of the court, shall appear to have been heard and determined by any former judge, or any superintendent of a court having competent jurisdiction. If any doubt should arise respecting the competency of the former jurisdiction, the judges are to report the circumstances to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and wait the instructions of that court.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. xvi.

69. The Zillah and City Courts are prohibited interfering, in any respect, in any cause or matter of a criminal nature, declared cognizable by the magistrates of the several zillahs and cities, the Sessions Courts, or the Nizamut Adawlut, or any other courts for the trial of cases of a criminal nature, that now exist, or which may be hereafter established; excepting for contempt and perjuries committed in open court, as prescribed in the Regulations and Acts in force.—Reg, III, 1793, sec. xviii.

70. Into whatever zillah or city the provisions of Regulation V, 1831, have been introduced, the judge of the Zillah or City Court shall have primary jurisdiction in all suits in which the value or amount of the claim may exceed five thousand rupees.—Reg V, 1831, sec. xxvii, cl. 3.

71. No person whatever shall, by reason of place of birth, or by reason of descent, be, in any civil proceeding whatever excepted from the jurisdiction of the Zillah or City Courts.—Act XI, 1836, sec. ii.

72. The Zillah and City Courts are prohibited hearing, trying, or determining the merits of any suit whatever, against any person or persons, if the cause of action shall have arisen previous to the 12th of August, 1765; or any suit whatever against any person or persons, if the cause of action shall have arisen twelve years before any suit shall have been commenced on account of it; unless the complainant can show, by clear and positive proof, that he had demanded the money or matter in question, and that the defendant had admitted the truth of the demand, or promised to pay the money; or that he directly preferred his claim within that period, for the matters in dispute, to a court of competent jurisdiction to try the demand; and shall assign satisfactory reasons to the court why he did not proceed in the suit; or shall prove that, either from minority or other good and sufficient cause, he had been precluded from obtaining redress.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. xiv.

73. The limitation of twelve years for the commencement of civil suits, shall not be considered applicable to any suits for the recovery of the public revenue, or for any public right or claim whatever, which may be instituted by or in behalf of Government with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, or by direction of any public officer or officers who may be duly authorized to prosecute the same on the part of Government.—Reg. II, 1805, sec. ii. cl. i.

74. All claims on the part of Government, whether for the assessment of land held exempt from the public revenue without legal and sufficient title to such exemption, or for the recovery of arrears of the public assessment, or for any other public right whatever (the judicial cognizance of which may not have been otherwise limited by some special rule or provision in force), shall be heard, tried, and determined in the several courts of civil justice to which the cognizance thereof may properly belong, under the general Regulations which have been or may be hereafter enacted, if the same be regularly and duly preferred at any time within the period of sixty years from and after the origin of the cause of action: Provided that such cause of action shall not have originated within the provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, before the 12th August, A.C. 1765, or within the province of Benares, before the 1st July, A.C. 1775, or within the provinces ceded by the Nawaub Vizier, before the 10th November, A.C. 1801, or within the provinces constituting the zillah of Allyghur, or within the northern and southern divisions of the zillah of Saharumpore, or within the zillah of Agra, before the 30th December, 1803, or within the zillah of Cuttack before the 14th October, 1803, being the periods of the Company's accession to the civil government of the above provinces respectively.—Reg. II, 1805, sec. ii. cl. 2; Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. vi, cl. 2; Reg. XIV, 1805, sec. v.

75. The limitation of twelve years shall also not be considered applicable to any private claims of right to lands, houses, or other permanent immovable property, if the person or persons in possession of such property, when the claim of right thereto may be preferred in a competent Court of Judicature, shall have acquired possession thereof by violence, fraud, or by any other unjust, dishonest means whatever; or if such property shall have been so acquired by any other person or persons from whom the actual occupant or occupants may have derived his or their title, and shall not have been subsequently held under a just and honest title (such as inheritance, purchase, fair donation, or any other fair title believed to have conveyed a right of possession and property), during a period of twelve years antecedent to the time of preferring a claim of right thereto in a competent court: Provided that such violent, fraudulent, unjust, or dishonest acquisition, be established to the satisfaction of the court in which the claim may be preferred: or if the suit be appealable, to the satisfaction of the proper Court of Appeal.—Reg. II. 1805, sec. iii, cl. 1.

76. In all such cases, viz. when the original cause of action may have arisen more than twelve years before the institution of the suit, and the claim may not be cognizable under the exceptions and provisions contained in the Regulations, but may be nevertheless cognizable under the provision made by the preceding paragraph, from the defendant's having acquired possession of the claimed property by violence, fraud, or other unjust and dishonest means, or from the property after being so acquired by any other person, not having been subsequently held by the present occupant and his predecessors under a just and honest title during the prescribed period of twelve years, the plaintiff shall set forth the same distinctly, either in his petition of plaint, or in his replication. The court, after taking the answer and rejoinder of the defendant, shall, if the alleged unjust and dishonest acquisition be denied by the defendant, examine any evidence that may be adduced by the plaintiff in proof of his allegation, as well as any evidence that may be brought by the defendant to prove his just and honest acquisition of the property claimed, or the just and honest possession thereof by himself and his predecessors during more than twelve years, after which the court shall determine whether the suit in question be cognizable under the present rule and section or otherwise; and if such determination be in favour of the plaintiff, or, in appealed cases, if a determination for the cognizance of the suit be passed by the Court of Appeal, the merits of the plaintiff's claim of right shall be heard, tried, and determined, notwithstanding the lapse of time, in like manner as if the claim had been regularly preferred within twelve years after the origin of the cause of action.—Reg. II, 1805. sec. iii, cl. 2.

77. Provided, that nothing in the preceding paragraph, or in any part of the existing Regulations, shall be held to authorise the cognizance of any suit whatever in any court of justice, if the cause of action shall have arisen sixty years before the institution of such suit; nor shall any plea on the part of the plaintiff for the non-prosecution of his claim of right during a period of sixty years after the origin of his alleged cause of action, nor any original defect of title on the part of the possessor of the property claimed after the lapse of such period, be deemed a sufficient ground for taking judicial cognizance of any suit so preferred. Moreover, although the property claimed may have been acquired by an insufficient title within the period of sixty years, hereby fixed as the utmost limit for the cognizance of any claims in the established courts of justice, if the property so acquired shall have descended by inheritance to the person in possession when the claim thereto may be preferred after a lapse of twelve years, or if such person shall have obtained just and honest possession thereof by purchase, fair donation, or by any other title believed to be just and valid, and not appearing to be in any respect collusive for the purpose of depriving the plaintiff of his right, and either such occupant himself, or any other person in his behalf, or from whom the property may have been obtained under any of the titles aforesaid, or the whole in succession shall have held quiet and unmolested possession, under a title believed to be just and valid, during a period of twelve years antecedent to the time of a claim thereto being preferred in a competent court, the provisions above made shall not be considered applicable to any private claims to property so circumstanced, which are therefore to be deemed inadmissible, as heretofore, after twelve years from the origin of the cause of action, unless the same be cognizable under the exceptions and provisions already in force.—Reg. II, 1805, sec. iii, cl. 3.

78. Provided further, that no length of time shall be considered to establish a prescriptive right of property, or to bar the cognizance of a suit for the recovery of property, in cases of mortgage or deposit, wherein the occupant of the land or other property may have acquired, or held possession thereof as mortgagee, or depositary only, without any proprietary right; nor in any other case whatever wherein the possession of the actual occupant, or of those from whom his occupancy may have been derived, shall not have been under a title bond fide believed to have conveyed a right of property to the possessor.—Reg. II, 1805, sec. iii, cl. 4.

79. All suits, complaints, and informations, cognizable by the Civil Courts of Judicature, for the recovery of any fine or penalty receivable by Government or by the informer, on account of the unlicensed manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors or drugs, the illicit manufacture or sale of salt or opium, the fraudulent evasion of the stamp duties prescribed by the Regulations, or on account of any other fines or penalties recoverable, either by a regular suit or by summary process, in the Courts of Dewanny Adawlut, under any Regulation in force which may not have fixed a specific period for the recovery thereof, shall be preferred to the proper courts, in such manner as the Regulations require, within one year after the act for which the fine or penalty may be demandable shall have been committed; and no such suit, complaint, or information (not otherwise specially provided for), shall be admitted and proceeded upon in any court of justice after the period prescribed, unless the same be prosecuted on the part of Government, and good and sufficient cause be assigned why it has not been brought forward to judicial cognizance within one year after the commission of the act whereupon the fine or penalty sued for is demandable.—Reg. II, 1805, sec. vi.

80. All suits and complaints for penal damages (viz. for pecuniary penalties on account of any act or omission, in opposition to the laws and regulations, exclusive of a compensation for actual losses), in cases wherein such damages are allowed by the Regulations to individuals, and for the recovery of which by judicial process no specific period may have been fixed, are also required to be preferred to the proper courts of justice within one year after the cause of action shall have arisen, or as soon afterwards as it may be in the power of the party aggrieved to prefer the same; and no such suit or complaint shall be received and proceeded upon in any court of justice, after the expiration of one year from the time when the alleged cause of action may have arisen, without good and sufficient cause being assigned why the same has not been judicially prosecuted at an earlier period. Provided, that this restriction be understood to be strictly applicable to claims to penal damages only (as above described), and be not considered applicable to any suits for the recovery of the property, or for the value of property, appertaining to the plaintiff; or for a compensation or indemnification on account of any damage to, or loss of, property actually sustained by the plaintiff; in all which cases the general rules of limitation are to be applied, as in other suits of individuals for the recovery of their rights in the Civil Courts.—Reg. II, 1805, sec. vii.

81. The Dewanny Adawlut of the Zillah of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs is not to receive or entertain any suit, under any pretence whatever, relating to any land, house, tenement, or hereditament, nor any dispute regarding the boundaries of lands, houses, tenements, or hereditaments, situated within the town of Calcutta (which, for the purpose of this rule, is declared to be bounded by a line drawn by the bridge and nullah of the Baug-bazar, or Cow-cross, the Mahratta intrenchment, and the road adjoining to it continued to the westward of the Colligaut-road, the Govindpore nullah, and the river). The court is commanded not to intermeddle with, or take cognizance of the suits above-mentioned, which are to be considered entirely exempt from its jurisdiction. But the above prohibitions are not to be construed to extend to preclude the Court of Dewanny Adawlut of the zillah of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs entertaining any suit concerning marriage or caste, in which no money or other valuable thing may be demanded or decreed, although the cause of action shall have arisen, or the defendant may reside, or shall have resided at the time the suit commenced within the limits of the town of Calcutta.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. xvii.

CIVIL JUDICATURE.

PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS.

ZILLAH COURTS.

INSTITUTION OF SUITS.

1. The Zillah and City Courts are to be held in a large and convenient room in the city or place at which they are respectively established, three days in every week, or oftener if the state of the business shall render it necessary Whenever the judge of a Zillah or City Court, from indisposition or other cause, shall be prevented holding a court three days in each week, as above required, he is, at the expiration of the week, to report the cause of the court not being so held to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. This report is not to be made when the court may be shut pursuant to orders from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. No rule, order, proceeding, or decree is to be made, but on court days and in open court.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. v.

2 The Zillah and City Courts are to use a circular seal, one inch and three quarters in diameter. The seals of the Zillah and City Courts are to bear an inscription to the following effect, "The seal of the Dewanny Adawlut of the zillah (or city) of ....." The seal of each court is to remain in the custody of the judge —Reg III, 1793, sec. vi.

3 No complaint is to be received but from the plaintiff, nor any answer to a complaint but from the defendant, or their respective vakeels duly empowered. Nor is any person to be permitted to do any act, or to be heard viva voce in any stage of a cause, excepting the plaintiff or defendant, or their vakeels or witnesses.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. ii.

4 Every complaint that may be presented in a Zillah or other court of original jurisdiction shall state precisely the grounds of complaint, the time when the cause of action arose, the name and residence of the person or persons complained against, the total sum of money or personal property claimed, or if the claim be for landed property whether malgoozary or la-khiraj, or the profits thereof, it shall state the amount or value thereof which shall be calculated according to the rules prescribed in No. 8, Schedule B. Regulation X, 1829.—The plaint shall also state all material circumstances which may elucidate the transaction and may tend to bring the matter in dispute to a distinct issue. The complaint is to be signed and numbered, and dated in the order in which it may be received by the judge of the court and registered in a book to be kept for that purpose.—Reg IV, 1793, sec iii, Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xvii.

5. Upon the institution of a civil suit in a court of original jurisdiction, the general first process against the defendant shall be a notice, containing a short statement of the demand, with a requisition to attend in person or by vakeel, and to deliver an answer to the plaint, on or before a certain day to be specified in the notice.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. ii, cl. i.

6 If the defendant have an accredited agent at the place where the court is held, expressly empowered, either by a clause in his general mokhtarnamah, or by a separate mokhtarnamah granted for that purpose, to receive on behalf of his constituent notices or other judicial processes, which may not be specially ordered to be served personally by an officer of the court, the notice shall be tendered to such agent, to be communicated by him to his principal; and the agent's acknowledgment to be endorsed upon it shall be accepted as a sufficient service of it, if he be desirous of giving such acknowledgment in preference to the notice being served on the person of his principal by an officer of the court.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. ii, cl. 2

7. If the defendant shall not have an accredited agent at the place where the court is held, or if he shall not have expressly authorised his agent to receive notices of the above description; or if such agent shall decline receiving the notice for communication to his constituent and the defendant be resident within the jurisdiction of the court, it shall be served on him through the nazir of the court by a single chupprassy or peon, who shall require only the acknowledgment of the defendant to be endorsed upon it, or if he be absent from his usual place of residence, the acknowledgment of his principal agent, or for any person acting for him during his absence If the defendant be resident within the jurisdiction of any other court than that in which the suit may have been instituted, the notice shall be transmitted to the judge of the court in which the defendant may reside, to be served in the manner above directed. If the defendant be neither resident within the jurisdiction of the court in which the suit may be instituted, nor of any other court, and the suit shall notwithstanding be cognizable, either in claims to landed or other immovable property, from the property claimed being situated within the jurisdiction of the court, or in other cases from the cause of action having arisen within its jurisdiction, the notice, if the suit be for land or other immovable property, shall be served upon the defendant's agent or representative in charge of such property; and in other suits, the judge shall cause notice of the claim to be conveyed to the defendant, in such manner as may appear most certain and convenient according to the circumstances of the case.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. ii, cl. 3.

8. The notices issued to molungees and others employed in the manufacture of salt, shall be served in the manner directed by the existing Regulations with respect to the service of summonses upon persons so employed, when sued as defendants in the Civil Courts.—Reg. II, 1806, Sec. ii, cl. 4.

9. If a defendant to whom a notice may have been issued, as directed in paragraph 5, shall abscond, or is not after diligent search to be found, or shall shut himself up in any house or building, or retire to any place, so that the notice cannot be served upon him, the judge on receiving the nazir's return to this effect, shall issue a proclamation, to be stuck up in some conspicuous part of the room in which the court may be held. The proclamation is to contain a copy of the notice, and shall declare that if the party shall not appear on a day to be fixed (which shall not be less than fifteen days from the time that the proclamation may be fixed up), the court will proceed without further notice to try and determine the cause without the appearance or answer of the defendant. The court is likewise to order a copy of the notice and proclamation to be fixed up with all practicable despatch on the outer door of the house in which the defendant may have usually dwelt, or in some conspicuous place in the village, or other place, in which he may have generally resided. The nazir is to return the order, with an endorsement stating at what times and places the notice and proclamation may have been fixed up. The return of the nazir is to be filed in court, and to form a part of the record of the trial. If the defendant shall not appear in person or by vakeel, by the time limited in such proclamation, or if a defendant who may have been served with a notice as directed in paragraph 5, shall not appear in person or by vakeel within the time specified, or if, having appeared, he shall refuse to answer the plaint or make other default, or admit the truth of the complaint, the court shall proceed to try the cause ex parte; and after examining the plaintiff's evidence in support of his claim, shall give judgment in the same manner as if the defendant had appeared, answered, and entered into proof.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xi; Reg. II, 1806, sec. iii.

10. If a defendant, after receiving the notice above prescribed, shall attend in person or by vakeel and deliver his answer to the plaint, and no reason shall subsequently appear to the court for requiring security for his appearance during the trial of the suit, he shall be allowed to defend the cause to its termination, without being called upon for such security. But if the judge shall be satisfied by sufficient proof that there is reason to believe that the defendant intends to abscond and withdraw himself from the jurisdiction of the court, he may, either on the institution of the suit, or at any time whilst the suit is depending in the court, issue process against the defendant, requiring him to give security and answer to the complaint either in person or by vakeel, under penalty of being committed to close custody until such security be given, or the decree of the court be complied with, or until an attachment of property shall have taken place, to secure the execution of the ultimate judgment in the cause. The security bond to be executed in such instances, shall, in substance, correspond with that prescribed by section iii, Regulation XI, 1797;* and in fixing the amount of the security to be required, the judge shall exercise his discretion with respect to the responsibility of the surety or sureties to be found by the defendant for his personal attendance when required; and in the first instance, whatever may be the claim of the plaintiff, shall demand from the defendant such security only as may appear necessary to secure his appearance during the trial of the suit: Provided, that if at any time in the course of the trial the security so taken from the defendant shall appear to the judge insufficient, he is authorised and required to take such further security as he may think necessary to secure the appearance of the defendant.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. v; Reg. II, 1806, sec. iv; Reg III, 1802, sec. ii; and Act VI, 1843, sec. iv.

NOTE.—Form of security bond prescribed in sec. iii, Reg XI, 1797:—

"Whereas a suit has been instituted in the Dewanny Adawlut of the Zillah [or city] of ——— by ———, plaintiff, against ———, defendant; and whereas ———, inhabitant of ———, have voluntarily become security for the appearance of the said defendant to answer to the above suit, and perform all such orders as may be passed thereupon, until the final decree on it shall have been carried into execution, I do therefore hereby engage and bind myself, my heirs and successors, that the said defendant shall appear in person, or by vakeel, to make answer to the plaint against him in the suit aforesaid, on the ———, being the day on which his appearance has been required in the said Zillah (or City) Court, and further, that the said defendant shall personally attend at the said Zillah (or City) Court whenever the same may be required by the judge thereof, at any time whilst the above suit is depending before the Zillah Court or Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or before the final decree which may be passed thereupon by the above courts, respectively, shall be fully and completely carried into execution; in default of which, and in the event of my not producing the said defendant when called upon, I will be answerable for such sum as may be adjudged against him, and for the performance of whatever order or decree may be passed against him on the suit above-mentioned."

11. In any case, if the judge be satisfied by sufficient proof that there is ground to apprehend the defendant means to dispose of the property in his possession by any private transfer, or to cause the public sale of any disputed land, by withholding the assessment upon it, or to remove any personal property from the jurisdiction of the court whilst the suit against him is depending, for the purpose of avoiding the execution of an eventual judgment against him, the judge is authorized to call upon the defendant for malzaminy security, in such sum as may appear sufficient to make good the ultimate judgment of the court: and in the event of such security not being given (within a reasonable time to be allowed for that purpose), to cause the attachment of any land, effects, or other property belonging to, or possessed by the defendant, to the amount or value of the cause of action in the suit depending, or the attachment of which may be deemed necessary to secure the execution of the judgment to be passed in the cause.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. v, cl. 1.

12. The attachment in such cases shall be made by a written order of the court, to be read and proclaimed upon the spot, and to be affixed in some conspicuous situation at the place where the property is situated; after which any private alienation of the property sequestered, whether by sale, gift, or otherwise, during the continuance of the attachment, shall be deemed illegal and void, and any unauthorised removal of the property so attached during such period, with a view to oppose or evade the sequestration, shall be punishable, on proof, as an act of resistance to the process of the court, according to the provisions in force concerning resistance to the process of the civil courts. In suits for landed property of considerable value, wherein it may appear necessary for the purposes of justice to divest the defendant from the management of the land until the suit be decided, or malzaminy security be given, the attachment shall be made through the collector of the district in which the land is situated, as prescribed by section vi. Regulation V, 1798, in appealed cases, wherein neither the appellant nor respondent may be able to give security for staying execution of the decree. But in other cases, the attachments which may be ordered under the present rule shall not, without special cause to be recorded on the proceedings of the court, remove the defendant or his representative from the possession and management of the land, or other property attached, until a decision be passed in the cause before the Zillah or City Court; nor be understood to preclude any act of the defendant or his representative relative to such property, which may be consistent with the object of the attachment.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. v, cl. 2.

13. Upon the decision of the suit, the judge shall pass such further order relative to the property attached, as may be just and conformable with the judgment given in the cause. If the decree be against the defendant, all right and interest possessed by him in the property attached (saving arrears of rent or revenue due from land, and any other bonâ fide claims which may be entitled to satisfaction in preference to the decree) shall be held answerable for the execution of the judgment, in the mode prescribed by the Regulations. But if the plaintiff's claim be dismissed, or be not in any considerable proportion established against the defendant, all expense and loss to the defendant which may arise from the attachment of his property in consequence of such claim, shall be reimbursed to him by the plaintiff as part of the costs of suit.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. v, cl. 3.

14. Whenever any property may be attached by order of a Zillah or City Court, under the above provisions, the trial of the cause shall be proceeded on and brought to a conclusion as speedily as possible, without regard to the order of time with respect to other depending causes in which it may have been instituted. The attachment shall also be taken off on the delivery of sufficient malzaminy security, at any time previous to the decision of the cause in the Zillah or City Court.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. vi.

15. If a defendant for whose appearance security may have been taken, shall not appear, or having appeared, shall refuse to give answer, the plaintiff is permitted to institute a suit against the sureties on their engagement, and is to be entitled to recover from them whatever he may prove to be due to him from the defendant, or he may proceed against the defendant, in the same manner as defendants are directed to be proceeded against who have been served with a notice, and have not appeared, or have refused to give answer.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xii.

16. In any case in which the defendant shall be a Hindoo or Mahomedan woman, of a rank or quality which, according to the customs and usages of the country, would render it improper to compel her to appear in an open court of justice, the judges of the Zillah and City Courts are not to issue any compulsory process against her, to compel her to appear and make answer, but are to issue a notice requiring her to appear in person or by vakeel, at a certain time, to be named in the notice, in the Zillah or City Court, and answer to the complaint, and abide by the orders which the Court may think proper to pass in the cause. The notice is to be directed to the nazir of the court, and is to contain a short account of the nature of the demand or complaint, with a notice, that if the defendant shall not appear, as required at the time specified in it, or having so appeared, shall not answer to the complaint at the time which may be fixed by the Court, or make any other default, the court will proceed to try and determine the cause in the same manner as if the defendant had appeared, answered, and done what she is authorized or required to do in defence of the suit. The notice is further to command the nazir to deliver a copy of it to the dewan, or some principal servant of the defendant. The nazir is not to have recourse to compulsion to enforce the notice, but is to serve it in the manner herein directed, and no other. The nazir is to return the notice on the day appointed for the appearance of the defendant, with an indorsement specifying in what manner he has executed it; and if he has not executed it, the reason why it has not been executed. If the defendant should appear in person or by vakeel, the court is to fix a certain day according to its discretion, for her to answer to the complaint, and to appoint a day for the parties to deliver in their pleadings, and the court is to try and determine the cause, in the same manner as suits instituted against persons not being women of the above mentioned description. Upon the notice being issued, if the dewan or other principal servant of the defendant shall abscond or otherwise act so that the notice cannot be served upon him, or shall not, after diligent search and inquiry be found, the judge, upon the return of the notice, and proof being made before him on declaration or oath of the fact, is to proceed against the defendant, in the same manner as he is directed to proceed against a defendant, who after diligent search, cannot be found, or shall have absconded, or otherwise acted so that he could not be served with a notice. If a female defendant, on whom no notice can be served, shall not appear as required, or appearing shall neglect or refuse to answer, or make other default, or admit the truth of the complaint, the court on examining the allegations of the plaintiff only, and receiving the depositions of his witnesses, are to decree and give judgment, in the same manner as if the defendant had appeared, answered, and entered into proof.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xiii.

17. If the defendant shall appear, either in person or by vakeel, the court is to fix a day, according to its discretion, for him to answer to the complaint, and if it shall deem it reasonable so to do, may at any time allow the defendant a further period for delivering his answer. When the defendant has delivered in his answer to the complaint, the plaintiff is to reply to it on the next court day; but he is not to be permitted to introduce in his reply any matter whatever which may not be contained in his complaint, but is either to acknowledge the answer of the defendant to be true, or simply and shortly deny the truth of such of the facts in the answer as he intends to dispute, or simply deny the truth of all the facts contained in it, or the competency of the answer. The defendant is to rejoin to the reply on the same day; but is not to be permitted to introduce in his rejoinder any matter not contained in his answer, but is simply to deny the truth of the reply of the plaintiff, or the parts of it which he means to dispute, and aver the truth or competency of his own answer; and no further pleadings whatever are to be admitted in the cause. Whenever a defendant shall refuse or neglect to rejoin at the time appointed for that purpose, the court is to proceed in the trial in the same manner as if the defendant himself had rejoined.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. vi, cl. 2; Reg. IV, 1793, sec. v.

18. No supplemental complaint, or other supplemental pleadings, shall be admitted in any suit, unless the court, upon a perusal of the pleadings previously filed, and from a consideration of the circumstances alleged by the parties, shall deem it just and proper to admit such supplemental plaint or other supplemental pleadings to be filed in the suit.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. vi, cl 3.

19. If during the trial of any regular suit it shall appear that the plaint has been written on stamped paper of a less value than that which ought to have been used under the provisions of No. 8, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829, and the court shall be of opinion that the error or omission did not arise from any fraudulent motive, or from any design on the part of the plaintiff to evade the provisions of the Regulations, it shall be competent to the court, either to permit or to direct the plaintiff or appellant in the suit to file a duplicate of the plaint on stamped paper, of such a value as may be sufficient to complete the full amount of the stamp duty prescribed.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. vii.

20. In the trial of original regular suits, as well as in the trial of appeals in such suits, the prescribed pleadings shall be completed and read in open court, before any exhibits are filed or witnesses summoned in support of the allegations of either of the parties; unless special and sufficient reason be assigned for taking the immediate deposition of a witness, without waiting until the pleadings are completed and read in open court.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. x, cl. 1.

21. If from the pleadings in the case the points at issue cannot be clearly ascertained, or if from any other reason further explanations may be requisite, the courts shall, on the day on which the suit may be first brought to a hearing, make such inquiries from the parties or their pleaders as may appear necessary, with a view to ascertain the precise object of the action and the grounds on which it is maintained, and shall record the result on their proceedings.—Reg. XXVI. 1814, sec. x, cl. 2.

22. The court shall then consider and record the point or points to be established respectively by the plaintiff or appellant, and by the defendant or respondent, and shall proceed to take the evidence which may be adduced by either party upon such points, in the manner prescribed by the rules in force.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. x, cl. 3.

23. In like manner, if proof shall be required on any other points in the course of the trial, such points shall be recorded on the proceedings, and the proper party shall be called upon for the requisite evidence; and no exhibit shall be filed, or witness summoned, unless expressly declared to be in proof or refutation of some point upon which the court may have directed that evidence should be taken.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. x, cl. 4.

24. In any regular or summary suit, appeal, or proceeding in any of the civil courts of the East India Company, and also in any summary suit, or other proceeding of a civil nature before any court, officer, or other person having by law or by consent of parties, authority to examine witnesses, any party to such suit, appeal or proceeding, shall be competent and entitled to give evidence as a witness either on his own behalf or on behalf of any other party to the suit, appeal, or proceeding in the same manner as if he were not a party to the same: Provided that no party to a suit, appeal, or proceeding, who shall offer himself as a witness therein, shall, without the consent of all parties thereto, be examined otherwise than in open court, in such manner as the court may direct having regard to the usages and customs of the country, unless such examination shall be taken under, and subject to the rules prescribed by paragraphs 56 and 62.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. ii.

25. No person shall, by reason of any interest in the result of any suit or of any interest connected therewith, or by reason of relationship to any of the parties thereto, be incompetent to give evidence in any such suit.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. iii.

26. A husband or wife shall be competent to give evidence for or against the other provided that the examination shall take place in open court, in such manner as the court may direct, having regard to the usages and customs of the country, or that it be taken and read, and subject to the rules prescribed in paragraphs 56 and 62, provided also that any communication made by husband or wife to the other during their marriage, shall be deemed a privileged communication, and shall not be disclosed without the consent of the person making the same, unless such communication shall relate to a matter in dispute, in a suit pending between such husband and wife.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. iv.

27. Any party to a suit may be compelled to give evidence as a witness therein, and also to produce any document in his possession or power, in the same manner, by the same process, and subject to the same rules, as if he were not a party to the suit, except so far as is otherwise provided by this Act: Provided that no court need to compel the attendance of any party to such suit, for the purpose of giving evidence therein, if such party shall satisfy the court that he has no personal knowledge of any material subject of inquiry in the suit, and that he cannot give any material evidence therein. Nothing in this paragraph shall exempt any party to a suit from being summoned to produce a document.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. v.

28. After the parties in a suit in which, according to the practice of the court, a day is fixed for the hearing, shall have filed their exhibits and lists of witnesses, the court shall by an order in writing, appoint a day, not less than fifteen days after the date thereof, for the examination of witnesses and the hearing of the suit.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. vi.

29. The list of witnesses required to be furnished in any suit shall include the names of all the witnesses, whether parties to the suit or not, whom the party filing the list may intend to call as witnesses, or whom he may require to be summoned to give evidence or produce any document, also a list of the documents which he may require to be produced.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. vii.

30. If any party to a suit shall require the attendance of any other party thereto as a witness to be enforced, he shall by himself or his pleader, make a special application to the court for an order for a summons to compel the attendance of the party, and shall show to the satisfaction of the court sufficient grounds in support of such application, otherwise a summons shall not be issued. In cases in which, according to the practice of the court, a day is fixed for the hearing, the application shall be made before such day shall be fixed.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. viii.

31. The court, upon the application of the pleader of any party to a suit, whose attendance as witness is required, or without such application, if the court think fit so to do, may, before making such order, cause notice to be given to the party or his pleader fixing a day for such party to show cause why he should not attend and give evidence, and may also, from time to time, if necessary, for good and sufficient cause, enlarge the time for such purpose.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. ix.

32 In support of the cause shown, the courts shall receive a declaration in writing of the party, if signed by him, and delivered into the court by himself or his pleader.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. x, cl. 1.

33. If the party making such declaration shall wilfully and corruptly make any false statement therein, he shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be proceeded against, and upon conviction punished accordingly.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. x. cl. 2.

34. If no sufficient cause be shown on the day fixed, or upon any subsequent day to which the court shall enlarge the time for that purpose, the court shall cause a summons to be issued for compelling the party to attend and give evidence.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xi.

35. The court on the requisition of any party to a suit, or his pleader, may cause a summons to be issued to every person who shall be required to produce any material document. Previously to the issuing of any summons for the attendance of any person to give evidence or produce a document, the party requiring the same shall pay into court such sum as shall appear to the court to be reasonable, to defray the travelling and other expenses of such person, in passing to and from the court in which he may be required to attend and give evidence, and for one day's attendance thereat. In fixing the sum to be paid into court, regard shall be had to the rules, if any, established by the court or board, if any, to which such court shall be subordinate. The sum so paid into court shall be tendered to the witness at the time of serving the summons if it can be served personally. In addition to the sum so paid into court, the court before whom any person who may attend in pursuance of a summons, or proclamation, to give evidence or produce any document, may order such further sum to be paid to the person so attending by the person causing the summons or proclamation to be issued, as may appear to be necessary to defray his travelling and other expenses, and also the expenses of his detention under the summons, or proclamation, and in case of default in payment, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the goods of the person ordered to pay the same, and the witness shall not be bound to give evidence or produce any document until such sum shall be paid.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xii.

36. Every summons for the attendance of a witness to give evidence, or to produce a document shall require the intended witness to attend at a time and place to be named in the summons, and shall also state whether the attendance of the witness is required for the purpose of giving evidence, or producing a document, or for both purposes. If a witness, whether a party to the suit or not, is required to attend, and to produce before the court any document alleged by the party summoning him to be in his possession or power, a direction to attend the court with such document shall be inserted in the summons, and the document which the witness may be so called upon to produce, shall be described in the summons with convenient certainty.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xiii.

37. Every such summons shall, if possible, be served personally upon the person thereby required to attend, by showing the original to such person, and at the same time delivering or tendering to him a copy thereof.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xiv.

38. Such service must be made a sufficient time before the time specified therein for his attendance to allow the witness a reasonable time for preparation and for travelling to the place at which his attendance is required.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xv.

39. Any person, whether a party to the suit or not, may be summoned to produce a document without being summoned to give evidence, and any person summoned merely to produce a document shall be deemed to have complied with the summons if he cause such document to be produced, instead of attending personally to produce the same.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xvi.

40. Any person who shall be summoned to appear and give evidence shall be bound to attend at the time and place named for that purpose.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xvii.

41. Any person attending to produce a document may be called upon to produce the same without being sworn or examined as a witness.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xviii.

42. A witness not a party to the suit or proceeding to which he is summoned, shall not be bound to produce his own title deeds, unless he shall have agreed in writing with the party requiring the production thereof, or with some person through whom he claims to produce such deeds.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xix.

43. A witness, whether a party or not, shall not be bound to produce any document relating to affairs of State, the production of which would be contrary to good policy, nor any document held by him for any other person who would not be bound to produce it if in his own possession.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xx.

44. A witness being a party to the suit shall not be bound to produce any document in his possession or power which is not relevant or material to the case of the party requiring its production, nor any writing or correspondence which may have passed between him and any legal professional adviser. If any party, however, offer himself as a witness, he shall be bound to produce any such writing or correspondence, in his custody, possession, or power, if relevant or material to the case of the party requiring its production.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxi.

45. Every witness summoned to produce a document shall, if the same be in his custody, possession, or power, be bound to produce it, or cause it to be produced to the court, although there be a valid objection to the right of the party calling for it to compel its production, or to the reading, or putting it in as evidence, or to the disclosure of the contents thereof; the validity of any such objection made by the person producing the document shall be determined by the court, and for the better determination thereof, it shall be lawful for the court to receive any admissible evidence which the person producing the document may give respecting it, and it shall also be lawful for the court to inspect the document, and if necessary to call to its assistance any person whom it may appoint to interpret the same. Such person, however, shall be previously sworn truly to interpret the same to the court alone, and not to disclose the contents thereof except to the court, unless the court shall order the document to be given in evidence. If the court shall be of opinion that such document shall not be produced, the court shall not disclose the contents thereof to the parties, or take any note, or make any mention of the contents or effect thereof in its judgment or proceedings, but shall return the document at once to the party producing the same, having previously marked the same for the purpose of identification, and shall record in its proceedings that a document, identifying it by the mark put upon it, was called for by the person, naming him who shall call for its production, that the person having the possession of the document, naming him, objected to its production, and the reasons, if any, for such objection, together with the reasons of the court for refusing to compel its production. If the court shall refuse to enforce the production of a document, or to receive the same in evidence, the Court of Appeal may, upon a regular appeal, compel the production of such document, and if such court shall think that the production of the same ought to have been enforced, or that it ought to have been received in evidence, may themselves enforce its production, and receive it in evidence, and decide the case upon such document, coupled with the other evidence given in the suit.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxii.

46. A barrister, attorney, or vakeel, shall not, without the consent of his client, disclose any communication made by the client to him in the course of his professional employment, nor any advice given by him professionally to his client, nor the contents of any document of his client, the knowledge of which he shall have acquired in the course of his professional employment. The privilege, however, is that of the client, and if any party to a suit shall give evidence therein at his own instance, he shall be deemed thereby to have waived his privilege, and to have consented to the disclosure by such barrister, attorney, or vakeel, of any such matter as aforesaid, which may be relevant, and which the barrister, attorney, or vakeel would have been bound to disclose, but for the privilege of his client, and the barrister, attorney, or vakeel shall be bound, upon examination, to disclose any such matter.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxiii.

47. If any witness, whether a party to a suit or not, to whom any summons to give evidence or produce a document, shall have been personally delivered, shall, without lawful excuse, fail to comply with such summons as required by this Act, or attending, or being present in court, shall, without lawful excuse, refuse to give evidence, or to subscribe his deposition, or to produce any document in his custody or possession, named in such summons as aforesaid, upon being required by the court so to do, the court shall have full power and authority to issue an order in writing to the nazir to apprehend and bring the witness before the court; or if he be already before the court, to take him into custody. And such court may impose on such witness a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees for his default or refusal, realizable by attachment and sale of his property, and may commit him to close custody until he shall consent to give his evidence, or to sign his deposition, or to produce the document, and any such fine as aforesaid shall be levied and recovered by attachment and sale of the property of such person: Provided that no fine imposed under the provisions of this paragraph shall exceed the amount of the property in dispute in the suit. If any such person shall abscond, or keep out of the way, so that he cannot be seized or brought before the court, his property shall be liable to attachment and sale in the same manner as is provided by paragraph 50, with respect to a witness on whom the service of a summons cannot be effected. If such person shall be a party to the suit, the court, instead of proceeding in the manner above pointed out, may, if the witness be a plaintiff, appellant, or petitioner, dismiss the complaint, appeal, or petition, with costs against such party, or if such party be a defendant or respondent, may hear, and decide the case against such defendant or respondent ex-parte. If any such complaint, appeal, or petition shall be dismissed for such cause, the complainant, or petitioner shall be debarred from preferring any other petition, appeal or complaint in respect of the same matter.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxiv.

48. Any person present in court, whether a party or not, may be called upon and compelled by the court to give evidence, and produce any document then and there in his actual possession, or in his power, in the same manner and subject to the same rules as if he had been summoned to attend and give evidence, or to produce such document, and may be punished in like manner for any refusal to obey the order of the court.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxv.

49. Any person, whether a party to the suit or not, to whom a summons to attend, and give evidence or produce a document, shall be personally delivered, and who shall without lawful excuse, neglect or refuse to obey such summons, or who shall be proved to have absconded, or kept out of the way to avoid being served with such summons, and any person who, being in court, and upon being required by the court to give evidence, or produce a document in his possession, shall, without lawful excuse, refuse to give evidence, or sign his deposition, or to produce a document in his possession, shall, in addition to any proceedings under this Act, be liable to the party at whose request the summons shall have been issued, or at whose instance he shall be required to give evidence, or produce the document, for all damages which he may sustain in consequence of such neglect, or refusal, or of such absconding, or keeping out of the way as aforesaid, to be recovered in a civil action —Act XIX, 1853, sec xxvi

50 If a person, whether a party to a suit or not, for whose attendance either to give evidence or produce a document a summons shall be issued, cannot, after diligent search, to be certified by return of the nazir, be found, the court upon proof that the evidence of such witness, or the production of the document is material, and that the witness absconds, or keeps out of the way, to avoid being served with a summons, and that he could not, after diligent search, be found or served with the summons, may cause a proclamation requiring the attendance of such person to give evidence or produce the document at a time and place to be named therein, to be affixed, in the presence, and with the attestation of two respectable householders in some conspicuous place, upon or near to his house or place of abode, and if such person shall not attend at the time and place to be named in such proclamation, and it be proved to the satisfaction of the court that the witness cannot be found, his property, real and personal, to such amount as the court shall deem reasonable, (but subject to the same limitation as to the articles exempt from attachment as in case of attachment for arrears of rent,) shall be liable, under an order of the court, to attachment and sale Provided always, that when the order for attachment and sale shall have been issued by any court subordinate to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, a summary appeal shall lie within one month from the date of the order of the subordinate court to the court to which its orders are generally appealable, and that the rules for the time being in force in regard to sales made in execution of decrees, as to the mode and period of attachment and the place or manner of sale, and as to claims of third parties to property attached and notified for sale, shall be held applicable to such sales —Act XIX, 1853, sec xxvii

51 The cost of the attachment shall be borne in the first instance by the party applying for it, and the court issuing the summons and attachment shall not proceed to sale of the property, but shall order the same to be released from attachment if the witness shall appear and satisfy the court that he did not abscond, or keep out of the way to avoid service of a summons, and that he had not notice of the proclamation in time to attend at the time and place named therein Upon the appearance of such witness the court shall make such order in regard to the costs of the attachment as it shall deem fit If the witness appearing shall fail to satisfy the court that he did not abscond, or keep out of the way to avoid service of a summons, and that he had not such notice of the proclamation as aforesaid, it shall be in the discretion of the court to order the property attached, or any part thereof, to be forfeited and sold for the purpose of satisfying all costs incurred in consequence of such defaulter absconding, or keeping out of the way, and such fine not exceeding the amount in dispute in the suit as the court may deem fit to impose upon the witness, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, and the condition in life of the witness, or the court may order the property to be released from attachment upon payment of such costs and fine as aforesaid —Act XIX, 1853, sec xxviii, cl 1

52 An order made in pursuance of this section shall be subject to appeal in the same manner and within the same period, as an appeal against an order for attachment and sale under paragraph 50 —Act XIX, 1853, sec xxviii, cl 2

53 All orders as to fines, and the levying thereof, or as to imprisonment under this Act, shall be subject to a similar appeal within one month from the date of the order —Act XIX, 1853, sec xxix

54 It shall not be necessary to postpone the hearing or decision of a case for the non-production of a document, or for the evidence of a witness who may neglect or refuse to attend, or who shall abscond, or keep out of the way, or who cannot be served with a summons, beyond such period as shall appear proper to the court, having regard to all the circumstances of the case; provided that when a summons shall have been issued for the attendance of a plaintiff or appellant in a suit to give evidence, or produce a document, the court shall, at the request of the defendant or respondent, unless there be good reason to the contrary, postpone the hearing or decision until the plaintiff or appellant can be personally summoned, or shall attend and give evidence, or produce the document required, and that where a summons shall have been issued for the attendance of a defendant or respondent to give evidence or produce a document, the hearing or decision shall, upon the application of the plaintiff or appellant, be postponed in like manner, unless there be good reason to the contrary, until the defendant or respondent can be personally summoned, or shall attend and give evidence, or produce the document required —Act XIX, 1853, sec xxx

55 On the day appointed for the hearing, the evidence of the attending witnesses shall be taken orally in open court, in the presence and hearing, and under the personal direction and superintendence of the judge The evidence of each witness given upon such examination shall be taken down in writing, by or in the presence and under the superintendence of the judge, not ordinarily by question and answer, but in the form of a narrative, and when completed shall be read over to the witness, and signed by him in the presence of the judge, and of the parties to the suit, or their vakeels, or such of them as may think fit to attend. In case the witness shall refuse to sign the deposition, the judge shall sign the same, and record the reason, if any, given by the witness for such refusal, together with such remarks thereon as the judge shall think fit to make. It shall be in the discretion of the judge to take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer, if there shall appear any special reason for doing so, or any party, or his vakeel, shall require it. If any question put to a witness be objected to by either of the parties, or their vakeels, and the court shall allow the same to be put, the question and answer shall be taken down, and the objection, and the name of the party making it, shall be noticed in taking down the depositions, together with the decision of the court upon the objection. The judge shall also record such remarks as he may think material respecting the demeanour of any witness whilst under examination.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxi.

56. In cases where the evidence is needed of females, who, according to the custom of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear as witnesses in a court of justice, and in which the court shall be of opinion that the ends of justice require and justify it, such court may issue a commission to any officer of the court, or other person, to be named in such commission, for the examination of such females in the hearing of the parties to the suit, or their vakeels, in such manner as the court may direct, having regard to the custom and usage of the country, and with liberty to the parties, or their vakeels, to cross-examine, anything in paragraph 71 to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxii.

57. On or before the day appointed for trial, the court may for any sufficient reason, such as the unavoidable absence of any material witness, or for other good cause, on the application of either party, postpone the hearing to another day, to be named, on such terms as to the payment to the opposite party of his costs occasioned by the postponement, and otherwise, as to the court shall seem reasonable. In such case notice in writing shall be given to each of the witnesses to attend and give evidence, or to produce a document, on the substituted day, instead of the day mentioned in their summonses, if there be time to do so and the judge shall so order. The notice shall be served in the same manner as a summons. The service of such notice shall have the same effect as if the substituted day had been originally named in such summons as the day for the appearance in court to give evidence, or produce a document, and all the provisions in this Act relating to summonses to give evidence or produce documents, shall extend to such notices in the same manner as if such notices had been expressly mentioned in such provisions. If the application be too late to serve such notices, the court may order that the examination of any witness who may be present, or shall attend in pursuance of a summons, shall be proceeded with, and that the further hearing of the case, after the examination of such witness, shall alone be postponed.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxiii.

58. Unless the hearing be postponed in manner aforesaid, it shall commence on the day appointed, or as soon afterwards as the business which may be pending before the court, and may be entitled to priority, will allow, and the recording of evidence on the trial of any suit, when begun under the rules above enacted, shall, unless there be good and sufficient reason to the contrary (which reason shall be recorded), continue on the same day, or on consecutive business days, until the whole of the evidence of the witnesses present shall be heard. The parties, or such of them as desire it, shall then be heard, either by themselves or their pleaders, orally, on the merits of the case, as regards the issues both of fact and law, and after considering the arguments and evidence, the judge shall record his judgment under Act XII, 1843.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxiv.

59. If the court, after the evidence of all the witnesses shall have been heard, and before hearing the pleaders or recording the judgment, shall think it necessary for the ends of justice to inspect any document, or to examine any party to the suit, or any other person whose evidence may appear to be material, the court, of its own accord, may cause such party or person to be summoned to attend as a witness, to give evidence, or to produce such document, if in his possession, on a day to be appointed, and may examine such party or person as a witness in open court, or in such other manner as the court may direct, upon any question which the party or witness may be bound to answer and the court may think necessary, and may also compel the production of any document mentioned in such summons, which any such persons may have in his possession or power, and be bound to produce. Any witness so called shall be subject to the cross-examination of either party, or his vakeel. If such person, whether a party or not, shall be a female, who, according to the custom of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear as a witness in a court of justice, the court may order such person to be examined in the manner provided by paragraph 56, upon such questions as it may direct. The commissioner, or other person authorized to take the examination in such case, may put such further questions as in his judgment may be necessary, or may arise out of the answers to be given to the questions directed by the court.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxv.

60. The judge may cause public notice to be given in court, either before or during the examination of any witness, requiring all or any other witnesses, whether parties or not, who have been summoned or inserted in the list of witnesses in the same cause, to leave and to remain out of court until further order. Any witness in a cause who without lawful excuse shall wilfully remain in or come into court, contrary to such notice, shall be punishable in the same manner as for a contempt of court in open court. Whenever such notice shall be given, the consequence of disobedience thereto shall be publicly explained at the time of giving the notice.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxvi.

61. Any party to a suit, appeal or proceeding who may be examined as a witness therein, shall, except as otherwise provided by this Act, be examined according to the rules for the time being in force as to the examination of witnesses not being parties to the suit, and shall be punishable for any false evidence given by him, in the same manner as if he were not a party.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxvii.

62. The words "witness" and "witnesses," in paragraphs 68 to 74, shall respectively include any party or parties to a suit, and the said Act (paragraph 68 to 74) shall be read as if the words "or party" "or parties" had been used in such Act (paragraphs 68 to 74), in conjunction with the words "witness" or "witnesses" respectively: Provided that the deposition of a party taken under the provisions of this paragraph at the instance of any opposite party may be read in evidence by, or on behalf of, such last mentioned party, without the proof required by paragraph 71. Provided also that no deposition of any party taken under the provisions of this paragraph shall be read or used in evidence unless taken and read at the instance of some opposite party, or unless it shall be proved that the deponent is unable, from sickness or infirmity, to attend to be personally examined, or is, without collusion, or any reference to the suit, at so great a distance from the court, that in the judgment of the court it would be unreasonable to require his personal attendance in court for the purpose of giving such evidence, in which last-mentioned case it shall be discretionary with the court, having regard to the nature of the case and of the evidence given, either to allow or to refuse such deposition to be read.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxviii.

63. No appeal shall lie from any order or decision of a judge with respect to summoning or examining any party to a suit, or as to allowing a deposition to be read under the paragraph next preceding.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xxxix.

64. If any party to any such suit as aforesaid, shall, in any pleading or statement, refer to any document in his possession or power, as a material proof or document in support of his claim or defence, he shall file such document with the pleading or statement, unless the court shall, for good and sufficient cause, extend the time for filing the same; and any adverse party shall be entitled, by himself, or his vakeel, to inspect and take a copy of the document.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xl.

65. In the construction of this Act, unless where it is otherwise expressly provided, or there is something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction, or which would render such construction inapplicable to the case, the word "court" shall mean any civil court of the East India Company, and shall include any judge or other officer or person mentioned in paragraph 24; the word "judge" shall be understood to mean the chief judicial authority presiding in any such court, and shall include any officer or person having, by law, or consent of parties, authority to examine witnesses and to act judicially; the word "suit" shall be deemed to mean and include any suit, appeal or proceeding mentioned in paragraph 24; the word "witness" shall include all persons competent and liable to give evidence, whether parties to any suit or proceeding or not. Words importing the masculine gender or singular number shall include the feminine gender or plural number, and vice versâ.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xli.

66. This Act shall extend only to civil proceedings, and to the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, and shall not include any of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts of Judicature.—Act XIX. 1850, sec. xlii.

67. The provisions of paragraphs 31 to 34 shall not extend to the Zillah of Chittagong or Sylhet.—Act XIX, 1853, sec. xliii.

Examination of Absent Witnesses.

68. It shall be lawful for any court, and the several judges thereof, in every civil proceeding, depending in such court, upon the application of any of the parties to such proceeding, to order the examination, upon interrogatories or otherwise, before any officer of any such court, or other person or persons named in such order, of any witnesses within the jurisdiction of the court where the proceeding shall be depending, or to order a commission to issue to any subordinate court for the examination of such witnesses upon interrogatories, or otherwise, or to order a commission to issue to any other court for the examination of witnesses at any place or places out of such jurisdiction upon interrogatories or otherwise, and by the same, or any subsequent order or orders, to give all such directions for taking such examinations, as well within the jurisdiction of the court wherein the proceeding shall be depending as without, as may appear reasonable and just: Provided always, that any court to whom any such commission shall be directed, shall take the examination in open court, in all cases where witnesses are able to attend in court, and are not exempted from attendance by law, absolutely, or at the discretion of the court. Provided also, that such commissions as aforesaid for the examination of witnesses out of such jurisdiction, may be directed otherwise than to some court, under special circumstances which may appear to the court issuing the commission to render such special direction expedient. Provided also, that all commissions issued and orders made by any court of the East India Company, and which are required to be executed within the local limits of any of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts, shall be directed in manner hereinafter mentioned.—Act VII, 1841, sec. ii.

69. When any order shall be made for the examination of witnesses within the jurisdiction of the court wherein any such proceeding as aforesaid shall be depending by the authority of this Act, it shall be lawful for the court, or any judge thereof, in and by the first order to be made in the matter, or any subsequent order, to command the attendance of any such person to be named in such order, and to direct the attendance of any such person to be at his own place of residence, or elsewhere, if necessary or convenient so to do, and to produce all necessary documents and papers. And the wilful disobedience to any such order shall be deemed a contempt of court, and punishable as in other cases of refusing or neglecting to give testimony: Provided always, that every person whose attendance shall be required under this Act, shall be entitled to the like payment for expenses and loss of time as upon attendance in court in cases where such expenses are now allowed.—Act VII, 1841, sec. iii.

70. It shall be lawful for every court or person authorized to take the examination of witnesses by any order or commission issued in pursuance of this Act, and they are hereby authorized and required to take all such examinations upon oath or affirmation, where an affirmation is admissible or required upon a trial, and if upon such oath or affirmation any person making the same shall wilfully and corruptly give any false evidence, every person so offending shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of perjury, and every person causing or procuring another person to commit the offence of perjury hereby defined, shall be guilty of subornation of perjury.—Act VII, 1841, sec. iv.

71. Before any order or commission for the examination of any witness under this Act shall be issued, the court or judge issuing the same shall be satisfied that there is good reason for believing that the witness will be unable to attend at the usual time for examination, by reason of absence from the jurisdiction, sickness, or other cause allowed by law. And before granting any such commission, the court granting the same shall make particular inquiry as to the present residence of the witness whose deposition is to be taken under such commission, and as to the court of the same degree as the court granting such commission, or of inferior degree to such court which may be nearest to the place of residence of the witness, and the commission shall ordinarily be directed to such court of equal or inferior degree as may most conveniently execute the same: Provided, however, that if there be doubt as to which is the most convenient court of equal or inferior jurisdiction, such commission may be directed to the judge having jurisdiction within the district within which the commission is to be executed. And the judge shall at his discretion execute the commission in his own court, or direct it to any subordinate court within his district, which shall have the same effect for all the purposes of this Act as if the commission had in the first instance been directed to such subordinate court. And no deposition taken under this Act, except as hereinafter mentioned, shall be read in evidence without the consent of the party against whom the same may be offered, unless it be proved that the deponent is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, or dead, or unable from sickness or infirmity to attend to be personally examined, or distant without collusion more than fifty coss from the place where the court is held, or exempted by law absolutely, or at the discretion of the court, from personal appearance in court, or unless the court shall at its discretion dispense with the proof of any of the above circumstances, or shall authorize the deposition of any witness being read in evidence, notwithstanding proof that the causes for taking such deposition have ceased at the time of reading the same; and after the witness shall be produced, and shall have delivered his testimony, it shall be lawful for the court at its discretion to authorize the reading of the deposition. And all depositions taken under this Act, being duly certified, may be read, at the discretion of the court, without proof of the signature to such certificate.—Act VII, 1841, sec. v.

72. Any court other than one of Her Majesty's courts, or any judge thereof, may issue such commissions as aforesaid, and such orders as are indicated in paragraphs 68 and 69 to be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any of Her Majesty's courts, and all such commissions and orders, except when directed otherwise than to a court, shall be directed to a Court of Requests* having jurisdiction within such limits, or any part thereof.—Act VII, 1841, sec. vi.

73. Such commissions and orders as aforesaid may be issued for execution under this Act within the territories of princes and states in alliance with the East India Company, and all persons within such last-mentioned territories being in the service of the East India Company are hereby required to pay obedience thereto, and for disobedience thereof, shall, on being found within the jurisdiction of the court, or judge issuing any such commission or order, be punishable in like manner, as if such offence had been committed within such jurisdiction; and for giving false testimony under the same shall be punishable by any court of justice within the territories of the East India Company.—Act VII, 1841, sec. vii.

74. Whenever the evidence of any absent witness shall be required out of the jurisdiction of the court in which the proceedings for which the evidence is wanted may be pending, and the commission shall be directed to any court, such court may punish the wilful disobedience of any such order as aforesaid as a contempt, notwithstanding it shall not itself have made such order, with the same amount of punishment as in other cases of refusing or neglecting to give testimony. —Act VII, 1841, sec. viii.

FURTHER RULES FOR THE TRIAL OF SUITS.

75. Every exhibit is to be marked with some letter or number to identify it, and the letter or number is to be referred to in the deposition proving it. All exhibits proved by witnesses not present in court are, in the same manner, to be marked and referred to in the depositions proving them, and are to be endorsed and minuted as having been read at the time they may have been read in the court.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. vi.

76. If any exhibit or written evidence is offered to a Zillah or City Court in a cause depending before it, and the judge of the court shall think it just and proper to reject it, he is to endorse upon it the word "rejected," together with the names of the parties in the cause, and the name of the party who produced the document, the date on which it may be rejected, and his reasons for not admitting it (which may be written either upon the document rejected or on a paper to be annexed to it), and to subscribe his name to the endorsement, and return the document, with his reason so written, to the person who produced it.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. vi.

77. The judges of the Zillah and City Courts are strictly enjoined not to order or allow of a report of any matters of facts relating to any cause depending before them, with a view to the passing a decree, to be made to them by any officer of the court, or any other person; excepting in cases in which special authority for that purpose may be given to the courts by any Regulation. This rule, however, is not to be construed to prevent a judge referring any question arising on the Mahomedan or Hindoo law to the cauzy or pundit of the court, respect being had to the law in which each is conversant. When a reference of this nature is deemed necessary, a statement of the facts on which the question of law may arise is to be made out in writing, and signed by the judge of the court, and delivered to the cauzy or pundit for his opinion upon it. A blank is to be left for the answer of the law officer on the same paper on which the question is stated, or on a paper firmly annexed to it. The answer is to be attested with the signature of the law officer, and the dates on which the questions may be stated to him, and the answer may be given, are to be specified.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xvi.

78. In cases of disputed property regarding lands, houses, or their limits or boundaries, in which the court may deem a local investigation proper, the court is to appoint an ameen, who is to be sworn to make a true and faithful report to the court of the several matters which he may be directed to investigate, and not to take or receive, directly or indirectly, from either party, any gratuity, reward, or consideration, besides the sum which may be allowed to him by the court. The ameen is to be ordered to make his report in writing, subscribed with his name, and to deliver it into court on a certain day, which is to be specified in his commission. The report is to be received by the court as evidence in the cause, with regard to the matters which the ameen may be commissioned to investigate, and no other. The court may order such sum to be paid to the ameen as may be thought reasonable for his trouble, and the amount is to be added to the costs, and paid by the person against whom the decree may be passed. But the court is to be careful that expenses are not unnecessarily incurred by the ameen by delay or other means.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xvii.

* The "Calcutta Court of Small Causes," established under the provisions of Act IX, 1850, is declared in Sec. vi. of that Act to be a Court of Requests within the meaning of this Act.

79. The plaintiff is to pay the charges of summoning the defendant and his own witnesses, and of all process attended with expense which may be issued in his behalf previous to the decision of the suit.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xviii.

80. The judges of the Zillah and City Courts are to order the causes depending in their respective courts to be brought on for trial according to the order in which they may be filed; except in cases in which it may be otherwise directed by any Regulation, or in which the judge may think it proper for special reasons, which he is to state at large upon the record of the trial, to bring on the cause before its turn. The causes for the trial of which a day may be appointed by the judge shall be entered in a book, and on the day fixed shall be called on for trial, in the order in which they may have been entered. A paper containing a list of the causes, and the day appointed for the trial of them, is to be fixed up in some conspicuous part of the court-room.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xix.

LOCAL INVESTIGATIONS.

81. In the trial of regular suits by the zillah and city judges, or in miscellaneous cases, whenever the adjustment of accounts regarding the execution of decrees, and mercantile or revenue transactions, or the investigations of disputes between landlord and tenant, or of other special matters of account, fact, or usage, may be requisite, and such adjustment or investigation, if conducted by the judge himself, would occupy a larger portion of his time than could be conveniently devoted to it, the judge is authorized to direct any of the sudder ameens under his jurisdiction to make such adjustment or investigation.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxxvi, cl. 1.

82. The judge shall, in these cases, furnish to the sudder ameen such part of the proceedings and such detailed instructions, as may appear necessary for his information and guidance, and shall direct the parties, or their vakeels or authorized agents, to attend upon the sudder ameen during the adjustment or investigation.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxxvi, cl. 2.

83. The instructions must distinctly specify whether the sudder ameen is merely to transmit the proceedings which he may hold on the inquiry, or also to report his own opinion on the point referred for his investigation.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxxvi, cl. 3.

84. The proceedings of the sudder ameen are to be received in evidence in the case, unless the judge may have reason to be dissatisfied with them, in which case he will make such further inquiry as may be requisite, and will pass such ultimate judgment or order as may appear to him to be right and proper.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxxvi, cl. 4.

85. The adjustments or investigations described in this section shall be referred to such sudder ameens in all cases in which it would be improper to burthen the parties with any additional expense. In consideration of the monthly salary received by such sudder ameens from Government, they shall not be entitled to receive any additional compensation in those instances, either from the parties or from Government. If any necessary expense be incurred in making the inquiries or adjustments referred to, it shall be competent to the judge, on the completion of the inquiry or adjustment, to order payment of the amount of such necessary expense by one or both of the parties in the case, as may appear just and proper.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxxvi, cl. 6; Reg. XIII, 1824, sec. v.

86. In questions which may arise in suits depending before the judge or any Zillah or City Court relating to the adjustment of accounts in revenue or mercantile transactions, or regarding the boundaries of lands or houses, or regarding the right of way in roads or pathways, or regarding any rights in forests, commons, rivers, lakes, ponds, wells, reservoirs, or watercourses, or regarding the quantity or description of land and the rent to which it is liable, and generally in all questions of local rights and usages which cannot be conveniently decided without an inquiry upon the spot, the zillah or city judge may empower any moonsiff within his jurisdiction to make a local investigation into the merits of the question in dispute.—Reg XXIII, 1814, sec. l, cl. 1.

87. The zillah or city judges shall furnish to the moonsiffs such part of the proceedings, and such detailed instructions in each case, as may be necessary for his information and guidance; and shall enjoin the moonsiff either merely to take the requisite evidence in the presence of the parties or their vakeels, and to transmit the same to the court, or likewise to transmit, with the evidence so taken, a report of his own sentiments on the point at issue, founded on the result of the investigation held by him.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. l, cl. 2.

88. The proceedings of the moonsiff are to be received as evidence in the case with regard to the specific matter which he may have been directed to investigate; but if the judge shall have reason to be dissatisfied with the proceedings of the moonsiff, he is at liberty to make such further inquiry as may be requisite, and to pass such ultimate judgment as may appear to him to be right and proper.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. l, cl. 3.

89. The zillah and city judges are further authorised to employ the moonsiffs in delivering over formal possession of lands, houses, or other real property, in conformity with decrees, regular or summary.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. li, cl. 1.

90. The moonsiffs may be employed, at the discretion of the zillah and city judges, in the attachment and sale of personal property, for the purpose of realizing the amount of fines, or of decrees, regular or summary.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lii.

91. The zillah and city judges are further empowered to employ the moonsiffs in ascertaining and reporting upon the sufficiency of securities, and the indigence of persons suing in formâ pauperis.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. liii.

92. The provisions of the preceding paragraphs are not intended to preclude the Zillah and City Courts from deputing an ameen for local inquiries, or from employing the authorised officers of the court in the execution of the various duties above detailed, whenever they may deem it expedient to do so in conformity with the existing Regulations; and the zillah and city judges will be careful that the time of the moonsiffs be not so much occupied in the miscellaneous duties above described, as to interfere materially with the early trial and decision of the regular suits depending before them.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. liv.

93. When the parties or their vakeels have been heard and the witnesses on both sides examined and the exhibits received and considered, the judge is to give judgment according to justice and right, and is to order the costs to be paid to the party in whose favour the decree may be made.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. vii.

94. The judges are invariably to state in every decree the grounds on which they pass it. —Reg. III, 1793, sec. xx.

95. In cases for which no specific rule may exist, the judges are to act according to justice, equity and good conscience.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. xxi.

96. The judges are to insert in their decrees the names of the witnesses whose depositions may have been taken, the title of every exhibit read in the cause, and the amount of the annual produce of the land, or the sum of money or the value of the property or thing decreed. The decree is to be sealed with the seal of the court, and signed by the judge, and dated on the day on which it may be passed. They are likewise to insert in their decrees all sums paid or payable by the parties under the Regulations, on account of fees or stamp-duties, as well as on account of compensation for the expense of witnesses, and of subsistence money to peons employed in serving the processes of the courts, and of all other costs and expenses of the suit. Such costs and expenses shall be ultimately charged to the parties cast, or to the parties respectively, in such proportions as the court may deem equitable.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xxvi; Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxvii.

97. So much of all decrees as consists of the points to be decided, the decision thereon, and the reasons for the decision, and all injunctions for the revision of decrees in regular suits, and all orders for reviews of judgment, which shall be passed by the judges of Sudder Courts, or by judges of Zillah and City Courts, or by subordinate or assistant judges of zillahs, shall be written originally in English, and signed by the judge or judges at the time of pronouncing such decision and orders; and shall be translated into the vernacular language commonly used in the court wherein the suit to which the decree or order relates shall have been instituted; and the translation shall be incorporated in the decree.—Act XII, 1843, sec. i.

98. Doubts having been entertained whether any of the established Zillah or City Courts are competent to provide in their decrees for the payment by instalments of money adjudged by them, or to make such provision, in cases of indigence, at any period after passing their decrees, it is hereby declared, that the civil courts in general are restricted from granting indulgence of time in the satisfaction of a final judgment, when property from which such judgment can be satisfied (whether belonging to the party against whom the judgment is given, or to his surety or sureties for the performance of such judgment) may be forthcoming; unless the party in whose favour the decree is passed shall consent to waive his right of immediate enforcement, under an engagement for gradual payment or otherwise; or unless a short postponement of the sale of property shall, under any particular circumstances, appear just and equitable. But when no property may be pointed out from which the judgment can be enforced, and the party against whom it is passed, or his surety if he have given any, may be willing to engage (under sufficient malzaminy or hazirzaminy security, as one or the other may be tendered or required) for the liquidation of the amount due by instalments within such period as the court passing the final decree, or entrusted with the execution of it, shall deem reasonable and proper, it shall be competent to the court by which the final judgment is given, and to any superior court revising the proceedings of an inferior court, to accept the engagement so offered, and to cause execution of the decree in conformity therewith, so long as the conditions of it shall be duly fulfilled. In such cases, if the person delivering the accepted engagement shall have been taken into custody, he shall be immediately discharged, and shall not be liable to further arrest in execution of the judgment to which such engagement may refer, except on failure to perform the terms of it; nor shall any interest be chargeable in such instances beyond what may be provided for in the engagement.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. x.

99. That the quinquennial register of landed property paying revenue to Government, directed to be prepared by Regulation XLVIII, 1793, may be kept complete, the Zillah and City Courts are strictly enjoined to transmit to the collector of the Zillah and the Board of Revenue a copy of every decree that they may pass, or which may be sent to them to be enforced by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, regarding the proprietary right in, or possession of, any zemindarry, independent talook, or other land, paying revenue immediately to Government, or in anywise concerning the possession of such land. The judge is to transmit the copy of the decree within ten days after he may pass or receive it. The decree is to be attested with the signature of the judge and the seal of the court, and is to be accompanied with a short abstract of it, specifying the date of the decree, the names of the purgunnah or purgunnahs, the talook or talooks, the turf or turfs, the village or villages, or the portions of each, which may be decreed, the name or names of the person or persons last in possession, the person or persons to whom the lands may be decreed, and if the land be decreed to two or more persons, the shares awarded to each person.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. ix; Reg. LVIII, 1795, sec. iv.

100. The judges of the Zillah and City Courts shall furnish the collectors of the districts in which the land may be situated, and the Board of Revenue, with a copy of every decree in suits between individuals which they may pass, or which may be sent to them by superior courts to enforce, by which the right in, or possession of, any lands held exempt from the payment of public revenue, under whatever description of grant the same may be so held, may be affected, in order that the collectors may be enabled to make the necessary entries of the alterations in such right or possession to be inserted in the quinquennial registers of lands held exempt from the payment of revenue, directed to be kept by Regulations XIX, and XXXVII, 1793, and XLI, and XLII, 1795. The copies of such decrees shall be transmitted by the judge within twenty days after the same may be passed or received by him.—Reg. LVIII, 1795, sec. iii.

101. In all original suits or appeals wherein Government may be one of the parties, the court which may pass judgment, whether for or against Government, shall, in addition to the copies of decrees required by the existing Regulations to be delivered to the parties, transmit a copy of the decree, as soon as the same can be prepared, to the secretary to the Government in the judicial department, for the information of the Governor-General in Council. Such copies of decrees are not required to be upon stamped paper; but are to be duly authenticated by the official seal and signature of the judges by whom the same may have been passed, and are to be accompanied with an English translation.—Reg. II, 1805, sec. ix.

102. The judge, either at the time of making the decree or on a subsequent day (of which the court is to give notice to the parties or their vakeels) within ten days after passing the decree, is to deliver or tender in open court to each party, or their vakeels, a true copy of the decree, authenticated as above directed, with an endorsement made upon it of the date on which the copies may be delivered; and an entry of the delivery or tender, with the date on which it may be made, is to be inserted in the margin of the record opposite to the decree. If either of the parties, or their vakeels, shall not be present at the time the decree may be passed, and the prescribed copy of it may be produced in the court to be delivered, or shall not attend on the subsequent day which may be fixed for the delivery of the copies, after previous notice of the day shall have been given to them, or shall refuse to take the copy of the decree when tendered as above directed, the copy is to be deposited amongst the records of the court, and the cause of the non-delivery of it to the party is to be noted upon it in writing, and in the margin of the record opposite to the decree.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xxvi.

103. The copies of decrees passed by the civil courts of justice not being always prepared in time to be delivered or tendered in open court to the parties or their vakeels, within ten days after passing the decree, as directed in the preceding paragraph, and such delivery or tender of the decrees of the Zillah Courts being sometimes delayed, from unavoidable causes, till nearly, or even until after the expiration of the period limited for appeals, whereby the parties who may not be present when judgments are passed against them in the civil courts are precluded from having the proper means of determining whether to appeal from such judgments or otherwise; it is provided, that the period of three months, which is limited by the existing Regulations for appeals from the decisions of the Zillah and City Courts to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as well as the period of one month limited for appeals from the decisions of the principal sudder ameens, sudder ameens, and moonsiffs, to the judges of the Zillah and City Courts, and the period of six months limited for receiving appeals from the judgments of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to her Majesty in Council, shall be calculated, respectively, from the date on which a copy of the decree appealed from may have been delivered, or tendered in open court, to the appellant or his vakeel, as directed by the Regulations above mentioned; or in the event of neither the party nor his vakeel being present to receive a copy of the decree when ready to be delivered to him, the calculation shall be from the date on which the cause of the non-delivery of the decree may be noted upon the copy prepared for delivery, under the official signature of the judge, principal sudder ameen, sudder ameen, and moonsiff, as provided for by the Regulations in such cases. The rule prescribed to the judges of the Zillah and City Courts, for endorsing on the copies of decrees delivered or tendered by them, as well as inserting in their records, the date of delivering or tendering such copies, is also to be carefully observed by the principal sudder ameens, sudder ameens, and moonsiffs, that the exact period of such deliveries or tenders may at all times be ascertainable; and the judges are to communicate this rule to the principal sudder ameens, sudder ameens, and moonsiffs within their respective jurisdictions, for their information and guidance.—Reg. II, 1805, sec. viii.

NOTE.—The rules respecting tender of copies of decrees, and the calculation of the period of appeal from the date of such tender, though not repealed, appears to be superseded by the provisions of sec. viii, Reg. XXVI, 1814, and by the later enactments, which always refer to clause x of that section for the rule of limitation of the right of appeal. Those rules will be found under the head "Appeals."

EXECUTION OF DECREE.

104. The Zillah and City Courts, and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, shall not be required to carry into execution any decree which may be passed in original suits or in appeals, except in conformity with the following rules and provisions.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xv. cl. 4.

105. Any party who may be desirous of obtaining the execution of a decree, shall appear either in person or by an authorized pleader, before the court by whom such decree may have been passed, and shall present a petition written on the stamped paper prescribed in No. 10, sched. B, Reg. X, 1829, praying for the execution of the decree.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xv. cl. 5.

106. The petition shall state the number of the suit, the names of the parties, the date and substance of the decree, whether any appeal has been preferred or admitted from the decision, and whether any and what adjustment of the matter in dispute has been made between the parties subsequently to the decree; it shall further contain a statement of the specific amount due to the petitioner under the decree, whether on account of costs of suit or otherwise, and the name of the individual or individuals against whom the enforcement of the decree is solicited.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xv. cl. 6.

107. The court, after causing the purport of the petition to be compared with the decree contained in the original record of the suit, shall proceed to execute the same in conformity with the provisions which are now in force, or which may be hereafter enacted.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xv, cl. 7.

108. Applicants for execution of decrees may file with their petitions an authenticated copy of the decree of which execution is sought to be taken out, and in such case it shall not be necessary to compare the petition with the decree contained in the original record of the suit, anything in the preceding paragraph to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act XXVI, 1852, sec. vi.

109. The decree is to be executed, if it be for a zemindarry, independent or dependent talook, or other estate or real property, by causing possession of the property to be delivered to the person to whom it may be decreed; if it be for personal property or a sum of money, by causing the specific thing to be delivered, or the value of it, or the sum of money decreed, to be levied by public sale by auction of a sufficient portion, or, if requisite for the satisfaction of the decree, the whole of the lands, houses, and all other effects, either real or personal, belonging to the party against whom the judgment may have been given, or by the attachment of his person, or where it may be necessary, both by the sale of his property and effects, and the attachment of his person.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. vii.

110. Provided, however, that if the suit shall have been tried ex-parte, or that an interval of more than one year shall have elapsed between the date of the decree and the application for its execution, or that the enforcement of the decree shall be solicited against individuals being heirs or representatives of the original parties in the suit, or against one only of several individuals equally affected by the decree, or if there shall appear reason to believe that the matter in dispute has been adjusted by the parties subsequently to the decree, either by the voluntary surrender of the thing adjudged or by the payment of the sum decreed, either in whole or in part, by kistbundee or otherwise, it shall be competent to the court, instead of proceeding to the immediate enforcement of the decree, to issue a notice to the party against whom execution may be sued out, requiring him to show cause, within a limited period to be fixed by the court, why the decree should not be executed against him. If upon such notice the party shall not attend in person or by vakeel, or shall not show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the court why the decree should not be forthwith executed, the court will cause the judgment to be satisfied according to the rules in force. If the party shall attend in person or by vakeel and shall offer any objection to the enforcement of the decree, the court shall issue such order, after a due consideration of the circumstances of each case, as may appear just and proper.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xv. cl. 8.

111. The preceding rules shall not be construed to prevent the courts from issuing process of execution, for the purpose of recovering any fees or costs which may be due to Government. In such cases, as well as in suits in which a party may have been allowed to plead in formâ pauperis, the courts shall proceed without any application from the parties to enforce execution of the judgment, so far as relates to the recovery of the amount of fees or costs due to Government.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xv. cl. 9.

112. The provision of paragraph 110 was meant to be imperative in the cases referred to, and not to leave a discretion with the court; at the same time, with a view to guard against abuses, it is now further provided that whenever it may be shown, by satisfactory evidence, that the party against whom the decree was passed, or, in the event of his decease, his legal representative, who may have become answerable for the fulfilment of it, is about to remove or dispose of the property from which the judgment should be satisfied, the court shall be authorized to require security in such amount as may appear sufficient for making good the decree, and, in the event of such security not being given, to cause an attachment of property, as provided for in similar cases, whilst a suit is depending.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. vii.

113. It shall be competent to the zillah and city judges to refer to the principal sudder ameens subordinate to them, applications for the enforcement of decrees, to be executed by the said principal sudder ameens, under the rules prescribed applicable to such cases.—Act V, 1836.

114. Every party who shall have obtained a judgment in any court of the East India Company, in any part of the territories under the government of the East India Company, or in any court established by the authority of the Governor-General of India in Council in the territory of any foreign prince or state, and who shall be unable to enforce or obtain satisfaction of the same by execution within the jurisdiction of such court, may enforce and obtain execution of the same in any part of the said territories under the government of the East India Company in the manner following.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. i.

115. The party may apply to the court which shall have pronounced such judgment for a copy thereof, and also for a certificate that satisfaction of such judgment has not been obtained by execution within the jurisdiction of the said court, also for a copy of any order for execution of such judgment that may have been passed, and, if necessary, for a translation of the said judgment and order for execution into the English language. The court, unless there be any sufficient reason to the contrary, shall cause such copy, and certificate, and translation, if necessary, to be furnished, and the same shall be signed by the judge, or one of the judges of the court, and sealed with the seal of the court.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. ii.

116. If such court shall be the principal civil court of original jurisdiction in the district, the judge shall describe himself accordingly in the certificate, and shall also name the court and the district.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. iii.

117. If the court shall not be the principal civil court of original jurisdiction in the district, the copy of the judgment and of the order for execution, if any, the certificate of the judge, and the translation, if any, shall, without delay, be transmitted to the principal civil court of original jurisdiction in the district, and the judge, or one of the judges of such court shall issue a certificate under his hand and the seal of the court, verifying the signature of the judge of the court in which the judgment shall have been given to the documents above mentioned; and in such certificate, the judge signing the same shall describe himself as the judge, or one of the judges of the principal civil court of the district, and shall also name the court and the district.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. iv.

118. All copies, translations, and certificates which may be furnished by or transmitted to the principal civil court of original jurisdiction in the district in which such judgment shall have been given, shall be transmitted by such court without delay to the principal civil court of original jurisdiction in the district in which the party may wish to have the judgment enforced or executed; and such court shall cause the said documents to be filed therein, without any proof of the judgment or order for execution, or of the copies thereof, or of the translations, if any, or of the seal or jurisdiction of any court, or of the signature of any judge, unless the court to which such documents shall be transmitted, shall, under any peculiar circumstances to be specified in an order, require the same.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. v.

119. The copy of any judgment, or of any order for execution, when filed in the court to which it shall be transmitted for the purpose of being executed or enforced as aforesaid, shall for such purpose have the same effect as a judgment or order for execution made by such court, and may be enforced or executed by such court, or any court subordinate thereto, to which it may entrust the enforcement or execution thereof.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. vi.

120. When application shall be made to any of the said courts to enforce or execute the judgment of any other court as aforesaid, the court to which the application shall be made or referred shall proceed to enforce or execute the same according to its own rules and mode of procedure in like cases; and the last-mentioned court shall take cognizance of and punish all wrongful acts or irregularities done or committed in enforcing and executing such judgment; and all persons disobeying or obstructing the enforcement or execution of any such judgment shall be punishable by such last-mentioned court, in the same manner as if the said judgment had been pronounced by such court.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. vii.

121. The decrees, of which execution is to be general, of any military Courts of Requests holden within the said territories under the Government of the East India Company, or mentioned in section xvii, Act No. XI, 1841. ("MILITARY," paragraph 218), may be enforced in the manner provided by this Act. No such decree, however, shall be enforced under this Act against the person of the debtor, if a soldier. In the case of a decree of a military Court of Requests, the copy, decree, and certificate, and translation, if any, shall be signed by the officer commanding the station or cantonment, who shall describe himself accordingly; and no proof of the decree, or of the signature or appointment of such officer, or of the jurisdiction of the court, shall be necessary, unless the court to which the same may be presented shall think fit, under any peculiar circumstances to be specified in an order to require the same.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. viii.

122. A petition for execution under this Act of any judgment of a moonsiff's court, or of any decree of a military Court of Requests, may be written on plain paper.—Act XXXIII, 1852 .sec. ix.

123. An appeal shall lie from any order for the enforcement or execution of a judgment under this Act, in the same manner, and subject to the same rules and regulations as if the judgment had been originally given by the court making such order.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. x.

124. In paragraphs 114 to 123 the word "judgment" means a judgment in a civil suit or proceeding, and includes any final decree or order in a civil suit or proceeding. The word "party" shall include any person who would be entitled to maintain a suit upon the judgment. The masculine gender shall include the feminine, and the singular number shall include the plural.—Act XXXIII, 1852, sec. xi.

125. For the relief of insolvent debtors and their sureties, who may be in confinement for the satisfaction of the decrees of the civil courts, and may have no means of discharging the amount demandable from them by instalments or otherwise, the judges of the Zillah and City Courts, and the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, are further empowered, on receiving from the person or persons confined, in such cases, a statement upon oath or affirmation, containing a full and fair disclosure of all property belonging to them, whether in lands, money, or effects, or of whatever description, and whether held in their own names or in the names of any other person, or jointly with others, to cause inquiry to be made for the purpose of ascertaining the truth of such statement, or the validity of any objections thereto which may be offered by the party at whose instance the prisoner or prisoners may be in confinement; and if the result of such inquiry shall satisfy the court that the statement of property so delivered is true and faithful, and that the persons confined possess no other means of discharging the amount demandable from them, and the property included in the statement, or such part thereof as the court may deem it proper to sell in satisfaction of the judgment passed, shall be given up for sale, the court, on receiving such surrender of property, may cause it to be sold in the mode prescribed by the Regulations, and may order the release of the person or persons in confinement, either with or without hazirzamin security for his or their appearance when required. Provided, however, that nothing in this paragraph which is meant to grant relief in cases of real inability and fair dealing only, shall entitle any debtor or surety confined under the judgment of a civil court, to be released without full satisfaction of such judgment, if he shall be guilty of any fraudulent concealment of property, or shall have committed any manifest fraud or misdemeanor, which may appear to the court to render him an improper object of the relief intended for persons acting with good faith, and willing to surrender all the property in their possession for the benefit of their creditors. Nor shall release from confinement, in any instance, under this paragraph, prevent the creditor from bringing to sale (by application to the court), in full payment of the sum adjudged due to him, any property which may be subsequently possessed by the party released; or from causing such party to be again confined until the judgment be fully satisfied, when it may appear by sufficient proof that he had fraudulently concealed any property actually belonging to, and known to have been possessed by him, either in his own name, or that of others in his behalf, at the time of his discharge. Provided further, that all proceedings held and orders passed by the judges of the Zillah and City Courts, under the discretion vested in them by this paragraph, shall, on representation of the parties affected thereby, be open to the final decision of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. xi.

126. With a view to prevent the protracted imprisonment of persons confined in execution of decrees for sums of inconsiderable amount, it is provided, in addition to the foregoing rule, that no person shall be liable to personal confinement, in satisfaction of a decree, for any sum not exceeding sixty-four rupees, beyond a period of six months; but that at the expiration of that period, any person so confined shall be entitled to be released. But any property which may belong to such person shall at all times, either during his imprisonment, or subsequently to his release, be liable to attachment and sale, for the purpose of realizing the amount of the judgment, or such part thereof as may remain due.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xlv, cl. 7.

127. If the defendant in any suit decided by the Court of Requests for the town of Calcutta, the plaintiff in which shall have obtained a judgment, shall retire, before execution of the same, into the jurisdiction of the judge of the zillah of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, the judge of the said court, upon receiving a written application from the said plaintiff, either in person or by vakeel, setting forth the above circumstances, and accompanied by a copy of the judgment duly authenticated, is hereby authorised and directed to proceed to execute the said judgment in the mode prescribed by the existing Regulations for executing his own decrees.—Reg. XVI, 1812, sec. ii, cl. 1.

128. Provided always, that if the defendant in such case shall allege any cause against the execution of the judgment which shall appear to the judge to require the determination of the commissioners of the Court of Requests, the judge shall, upon such defendant entering into sufficient security to satisfy the judgment, if the judge should deem this precaution necessary, allow the said defendant a reasonable period to apply to the said commissioners; upon the expiration of which, unless the said defendant should produce an order properly authenticated from the said commissioners, certifying that the judgment ought not to be put into execution, the judge shall forthwith proceed to execute the judgment as prescribed in the preceding paragraph.—Reg. XVI, 1812, sec. ii, cl. 2.

129. Provided further, that no defendant who shall have been confined in the gaol of the said commissioners, and shall have been liberated under the rules established for the guidance of the said commissioners by the Governor-General in Council, on the 11th February, 1805, in consequence of having received diet money for a given period, shall again be confined by the judge of the zillah of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs in execution of the same judgment; but that, in all such cases, execution shall proceed against the property only of the defendant.—Reg. XVI, 1812, sec. ii, cl. 3.

130. If the defendant in any suit decided by any court of justice of the zillah of the Twenty-Four Pergunnahs, the plaintiff in which shall have obtained a decree, shall retire before execution of the same into the jurisdiction of the Court of Requests, that court, upon receiving a written application from the judge of Dewanny Adawlut of the zillah of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, setting forth the above circumstances, and accompanied by a copy of the decree duly authenticated, is hereby authorised and directed to proceed to execute the said decree in the mode prescribed for the execution of judgments obtained in the Court of Requests, and on payment of the like costs as are demanded for the execution of such judgments in ordinary cases: Provided always, that nothing in this Act contained shall be held to authorise the said Court of Requests, to execute any decree except the cause of action in respect of which such decree was obtained were such that, if it had occurred within the local jurisdiction of the said court, it would have been cognizable by the same.—Act XXVII, 1839.

SALES IN EXECUTION OF DECREES BY THE COURTS THEMSELVES EXCEPT IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.

131. In the territories subject to the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, except the North-West Provinces, attachments and sales of land, or of any interest in land, in satisfaction of the decrees or other process of the Courts of Civil Judicature, shall be made by such courts, or under their directions, and the rules now in force for the attachment and sale of such real property as the Courts of Civil Judicature are now authorized to sell in satisfaction of decrees, without application to the revenue authorities, shall apply to attachments and sales made under the authority of this Act.—Act IV, 1846, sec. iii.

132. The judges of the Zillah and City Courts, who usually employ the nazirs of those courts, or the sudder ameens at the station of the judge, and the local moonsiffs in other parts of their jurisdictions, to conduct the public sale of personal property in execution of decrees or other judicial process, are authorized to employ the same officers, when it may appear expedient, in the public sale of houses, gardens, orchards, or small portions of lakheraj land, under the provisions of this Regulation.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iii, cl. 1.

133. In all cases of attachment and intended sale, whether of personal property or of the landed property above described, in execution of any decree or other judicial process, a proclamation of the intended sale, with particulars of the time and place of sale, of the property to be sold, and of the amount due, for the recovery of which the sale is ordered, shall be made in the current language of the country, for at least thirty days before the appointed day of sale, exclusive of the day of sale and the date on which the proclamation may be ordered. Such proclamation shall be made in the usual mode, by beat of drum, on the spot where the property is attached; and a written notification to the same effect shall also be affixed in some conspicuous place within the village or town in which the attachment may take place, as well as in the cutcherry of the local moonsiff; and at the cutcherries of the collector of the district, and the zillah judge or other officer who may have ordered the sale. When the sale is to be made by a sudder ameen, the notification shall also be affixed in the cutcherry of such sudder ameen.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iii, cl. 2.

134. The usual processes for attachment and sale, in such cases, may either be issued successively or simultaneously, as the judge or other judicial officer, directing the sale, may in each instance think proper, with reference to the circumstances of the case. But no sale shall in any instance take place without a previous proclamation, for the period specified in the preceding paragraph; and any material irregularity in the sale, which may be established, on a summary inquiry, to the satisfaction of the judge, or other officer, by whom the sale may have been ordered, shall be sufficient to invalidate the sale; provided that a petition, written on the stamped paper required for miscellaneous petitions to the Zillah and City Courts, and stating circumstantially the irregularity which may have taken place, be presented to the judge, or other officer, by whom the sale may have been ordered, within one month after the sale.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iii, cl. 3.

135. Whenever a public sale may be set aside as invalid under the preceding paragraph, or on any account whatever, and no collusion or fraud shall appear on the part of the purchaser, he shall be entitled to receive back his purchase-money, on restoring any property delivered over to him, with or without interest, in such manner as it may appear proper to direct in each instance.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iii, cl. 4.

136. The summary decision passed by the zillah or city judges, under the preceding paragraphs, shall be open to a summary appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, under the general rules for such appeals.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec iii, cl. 5.

137. In the event of any claim being preferred to the property advertised for sale, under the provisions of the preceding paragraphs; or of any objection being offered to the proposed sale, within the period of the proclamation; such claim or objection shall be inquired into by the judge, or other officer, who may have ordered the sale, or may be referred for inquiry and report to a sudder ameen or local moonsiff; and if it appear necessary, the time of sale shall be postponed till such claim or objection have been investigated; provided that the representation of it (which, in all instances, is required to be preferred to the judge or officer ordering the sale, as soon as practicable after the publication of the intended sale) shall not appear to have been designedly and unnecessarily delayed, with a view to obstruct the ends of justice. In such cases, when the fraudulent design may appear evident, the sale shall not be postponed; and the claimant shall be left to prosecute his claim, after the sale, by a regular civil suit.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iii, cl. 6.

138. In all cases of a public sale of property, under the foregoing rules, it shall be clearly explained to the bidders at the sale, that nothing is guaranteed to them in the land, or other property sold, beyond the rights and interests therein of the individuals answerable for the amount of the decree, or other process, in execution of which the sale is made.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iii, cl. 7.

139. Whenever a holder of a decree of any Court of Civil Judicature shall apply to such court for the sale in execution of any estate paying revenue to Government, or any portion of such estate, he shall, at the time of making such application, file an authenticated extract from the register of the collector's office, specifying the jumma of such estate, which shall be inserted in the notification of sale.—Act IV, 1846, sec. iv.

140. The purchaser at any such sale shall be required to deposit immediately, either in cash, Bank of Bengal notes, or post bills, or Government securities duly indorsed, fifteen per cent. on the amount of his bid, and in default of such deposit, such land or interest therein shall forthwith be put up again and sold; and if the purchaser, having paid the deposit required, shall neglect or refuse to pay the purchase money within the period which may be stipulated, the deposit shall be forfeited and shall be applied to defray the expenses of the sale, and the surplus shall be forfeited to Government, and the land, or interest therein, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy what remains due, shall be again put up to sale, due notification having been first given.—Act IV, 1846, sec. v; Act XXV, 1850, sec. ii.

141. The judges of the several civil courts are authorized to require the aid of the local collector in the enforcement of all decrees which may be passed by them, or which may be sent to them for enforcement by the Superior Courts, affecting the proprietary right to, or possession of, any lands paying revenue to Government, or held exempt from the payment of revenue, whenever it may appear conducive to their speedy and complete execution, whether by giving possession to the parties entitled thereto, or by the adjustment of a wasilaut account, or otherwise.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. vi.

SALES IN EXECUTION OF DECREES BY THE COLLECTORS IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.

142. In the north-west provinces of the territories subject to the presidency of Fort-William in Bengal, attachments and sales of land, or of any interest in land, in satisfaction of the decrees or other process of the Courts of Civil Judicature, shall (except in the case of land, which the courts themselves are now by law authorized to attach and sell) be made by the collector, or any of his subordinate officers under his directions, upon the requisition of such courts.—Act IV, 1846, sec. vi.

143. Every such requisition shall specify the number of the suit, the court which made the decree, the amount to be realized, the names of the parties, distinguishing those whose land or interest it is intended to sell, and the amount for which each is liable, if they are severally liable, and the land or interest which each is alleged in the schedule of the party applying for execution to be possessed of.—Act IV, 1846, sec. vii.

144. The collector shall issue a proclamation in the current language of the country of any intended sale of land, or any interest therein, thirty days at least before the day appointed for the sale, exclusive of the day of sale, and of the day on which the proclamation is issued; and the said proclamation shall specify the name of the person whose land or whose rights and interest in certain land are to be sold, and the jumma of the estate constituting the property, or in which the property is situate; also, particulars of the property to be sold, of the time and place of sale, and of the amount due for the recovery of which the sale is ordered, and such proclamation shall be fixed up in some conspicuous place within the village or town in which the said land is situate, or which is nearest to the said land, and in the cutcherries of the local moonsiff, of the collector, of the zillah or city judge, and of the court from which the requisition issued.—Act IV, 1846, sec. viii.

145. The provisions contained in paragraph 140 shall be applicable to sales of land, or any interest in land, in execution of decrees of court or other judicial process.—Act IV, 1846, sec. ix.

146. The provision contained in paragraph 138, shall be considered applicable to all public sales of land made by the collectors, or other officers of Government, in the revenue department in execution of decrees of the courts of judicial process; and the following additional rules are prescribed respecting such sales, in modification of those now in force.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iv, cl. 1.

147. In the event of any claim being preferred, or objection offered to the collector, against the sale of the lands proposed to be sold, as not belonging to the person or persons answerable for the amount of the decree or other process to be enforced, and consequently not liable to be sold in execution thereof, the collector shall communicate such claim, or objection, with any information which his official records may enable him to furnish on the subject, to the court which may have applied for the sale; and shall be guided by the instructions which he may receive in answer, whether to proceed with the sale, or otherwise.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iv, cl. 4.

148. In all cases of a claim, or objection being communicated by a collector to the court enforcing a decree or other process under the foregoing paragraph, or of a claim to lands proposed for sale in execution of judicial process, being received from the claimant, by the judge or other officer who may have required the sale, it shall be his duty to enter upon an immediate summary inquiry into the truth and foundation of such claim; and if it appear proper, he shall instruct the collector to postpone the intended sale until such inquiry shall have been completed: Provided, however that such postponement shall not be necessary when the claim or objection may not have been preferred within a reasonable time after the collector's publication of the intended sale, and may appear to have been intentionally delayed, with a view to obstruct the sale. In such cases the court may order the sale to take place, and refer the claimant to a regular suit in prosecution of his claim.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. iv, cl. 5.

149. A doubt having been entertained, whether public sales of land made by the revenue officers of Government, in satisfaction of decrees or other process of the Court of Judicature, can be summarily set aside without a regular civil suit, or proof of irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale, or otherwise; it is hereby declared, that the Zillah or City Court, or other judicial authority who may have ordered the sale in such cases, shall be competent to declare the same null and void, and to order a re-sale in the mode prescribed by the Regulations, if, on summary inquiry, any material deviation therefrom, and consequent irregularity in the sale, be satisfactorily established; provided that a petition containing a circumstantial statement of such irregularity, and written on the stamped paper required for miscellaneous petitions in the Zillah and City Courts, be presented to the court by which the sale may have been ordered, within a month after the sale. In such cases the court directing the sale to be set aside shall further be competent to direct a return of the purchase-money, with or without interest, as provided for in similar cases by Paragraph 135.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. v, cl. 1.

150. The summary decisions passed under this section shall be open to a summary appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, under the general rules for such appeals.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. v. cl. 2.

SALES IN EXECUTION OF DECREES—RULES COMMON TO ALL TERRITORIES.

151. The rules contained in the Regulations shall not be considered applicable to the sale of houses, gardens, orchards, and small portions of land held exempt from the public assessment; the sale of which, when requisite in execution of any decree, or other judicial process, shall be made as heretofore, by order of the court or officer empowered to enforce the decree or process, without application to the Board of Revenue, or the collector of the district, or other officer in the revenue department.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 2.

152 The judge, or other officer, empowered under the Regulations to enforce a decree or other judicial process by a sale of property, is authorized to cause the public sale of any house, garden, orchard, or small portion of lakheraj land, which may be liable to be sold in execution of the decree, or other process, in like manner as he is authorized to cause the public sale of any personal property liable to be sold in execution of the same.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 3.

153. Sales of land, or of any interest in land, in execution of decrees of court, or other judicial process, shall be of the nature of private transfers.—Act. IV, 1846, sec. x.

154. The Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall, from time to time, frame such rules as to them shall seem meet, and as shall not be repugnant to anything in this Act contained, for the attachment and sale of property in satisfaction of decrees or other process of the Courts of Civil Judicature, which rules shall, after they have been approved by the Governor-General of India in Council, have the same force as if they had been part of this Act, until revoked by the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut with the approbation of the said Governor-General of India in Council, or by the said Governor-General of India in Council.—Act IV, 1846, sec. xi.

155. All applications which may have been made by the Courts of Civil Judicature to the revenue authorities for the sale of land, or of any interest in land, in satisfaction of decrees or other process of such courts, previously to the passing of this Act, shall be proceeded upon as if this Act had not been passed.—Act IV, 1846, sec. xii.

SECURITY AFTER DECREE.

156. Whenever a person claiming the proprietary right in land, houses, or other immoveable property not in his possession, shall obtain a decree, upon investigation of the merits of the case, the Court, before which the suit may be tried in the first instance, adjudging him to be the proprietor of such lands, houses, or other immoveable property, he shall obtain possession thereof in execution of such decree, notwithstanding an appeal therefrom, provided he shall give good and sufficient security for performing the decree which may be passed upon the appeal, in a sum equal to one year's produce of the property adjudged, if malgoozarry land, or ten years' produce if the land be lakheraj, or the computed value, if it be a house, or immoveable property of any other description.—Reg. XIII, 1808, sec. xi, cl. 2.

157. Provided, however, that if the court to which the appeal may be preferred in such cases, shall, in any instance, see special cause for leaving the appellant in possession during the appeal, it shall be competent to that court to order the same; requiring, in such case, from the appellant, the same security as is above required to be given by the respondent.—Reg. XIII, 1808, sec. xi, cl. 3.

158. Provided further, that whether the appellant or respondent be left in possession of lands paying revenue to Government during an appeal, if the party in possession of such lands shall neglect to pay the revenue due upon the assessment, and a public sale shall in consequence be ordered to take place, the party not in possession, by payment of the revenue due, and giving the prescribed security previously to the sale, shall be put in immediate possession, and shall be entitled to charge the amount so paid, with interest thereupon at the rate of one per cent. per mensem, in any adjustment of accounts which may be directed in the final decree upon the cause.—Reg. XIII, 1808, sec. xi, cl. 4.

159. Notwithstanding the appellants, in causes depending before the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and the Zillah Courts, may have entered into the security required of them, those courts are authorized, in cases wherein, from the delay in the decision, the security so given may appear insufficient, on the application of the respondent or respondents in all such cases, to require any additional security which they may deem necessary to secure the party who may have obtained a judgment in his favour, from any loss by the non-execution of such judgment during the appeal; and in default of such further security being given within a reasonable period, to be fixed for that purpose, the courts are empowered to direct the judgment in question to be carried into execution, in like manner as if no security had been given by the appellant; provided that, in such cases, good and sufficient security, as prescribed by the Regulations, be given by the respondent, previous to his being put in possession of the property in litigation.—Reg. V, 1798, sec. iii.

160. If during the trial of an appeal, the Court, before whom such appeal may be depending, shall see ground to believe that the security taken from the respondent is insufficient, it is authorized and required to take from him such further security as it may judge necessary. In all cases of appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that court is also authorized to take any additional security it may judge necessary, as provided with respect to security for staying the execution of decrees by the preceding paragraph.—Reg. III, 1802, sec. ii.

161. In all instances wherein the plaintiff, in any of the established courts of justice, may obtain a judgment in his favour for land or other real property, and the defendant appealing therefrom to a superior court may be left in possession of the property, under the security prescribed by the Regulations, any private transfer of such property by sale, gift, or otherwise, or any mortgage thereof which might be made by such appellant during an appeal, whether regular or special, would, in the event of the judgment against him being confirmed on the appeal, be of course, and is declared to be, null and void; but as mulguzarry lands (lands assessed with the public revenue) are in all cases, by whomsoever possessed, held answerable for the public revenue assessed thereon, and as, according to the general rules established for the collection of the public revenue, such lands, and also lakheraj lands, and other property appertaining to the same estate, may become liable to sale by Government, from the neglect of the party in possession to discharge the revenue due therefrom, by which sale, in cases of appeal, the party to whom the property of the lands is ultimately adjudged might notwithstanding be deprived of it, unless he purchased the same at the public sale; to obviate all doubt respecting the right of the party making the purchase in such cases, it is hereby declared, that whenever any land or other property, for which a judgment may have been obtained in any of the established courts of justice, but which, during an appeal from such judgment by the party cast, may be left in the possession of the appellant, shall, while such appeal is pending, or before the ultimate judgment thereon, be put in execution, be sold by Government to make good an arrear of the public revenue due from the appellant, and shall be purchased by the respondent, the party so purchasing, in the event of such property being finally adjudged to him on the appeal, shall be entitled to recover from the appellant, so left in possession, the full amount of his purchase-money, and of all expenses attending the purchase so made by him, with interest thereon at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum, in addition to any other sum which may be adjudged due to him on account of the profits arising from the land, or other property in question, anterior to the sale. It is further declared, that in the case above supposed, if the respondent shall not have purchased the land or other property sold by Government to make good an arrear of public revenue due from the appellant left in possession thereof, and if the ultimate judgment on the appeal be in favour of such respondent, he shall be entitled to recover from the appellant left in possession the amount of the purchase-money paid for the property so sold and adjudged to the respondent, with interest thereon at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum, in addition to any other sum which may be adjudged to him on account of the profits arising from the property so sold anterior to the sale of it; unless the property in question shall have been directly or indirectly purchased by the appellant himself, or in his behalf, at the public sale; in which case, on clear proof thereof being made by the respondent to whom such property may be ultimately adjudged, he shall be entitled to the possession thereof, and to all profits arising therefrom, as may be directed by the decree in the case, notwithstanding the fictitious sale supposed.—Reg. V, 1798, sec. iv.

162. The principles of the preceding rules are to be considered equally applicable to cases in which the plaintiff may be put in possession of land or other property adjudged to him, during an appeal; and generally, to all cases in which the possession of property may be transferred by the decree of any court of justice, from which decree an appeal may be depending in a superior court. —Reg. V. 1798, sec. v.

163. As cases may occur wherein neither the appellant nor the respondent may be able to give the prescribed security for staying the execution of decrees, or for the execution thereof in favour of the plaintiff, in all such cases, the property adjudged shall be held in attachment during the appeal, or until such time as one of the parties may be able to give the required security by the collector of the district wherein the land may be situated, at the expense of the party who may be ultimately declared entitled thereto; and under the provisions relative to the attachment of lands for sale in pursuance of decrees of the courts of justice, as far as the same are applicable. No attachment however, is to be made by any collector in the cases herein supposed, until he receive a precept, requiring him to make the same, from the court wherein the original judgment in the cause may have been passed; which precept shall state specifically the property to be included in the attachment, and shall require the collector to continue the same till ordered to be withdrawn by a further precept from the court, to be issued either on the prescribed security being given by one of the parties, or on the cause being finally determined.—Reg. V, 1798, sec. vi.

164. All persons who may enter into security bonds for the execution of decrees of the civil courts, or for staying the execution of judgments in civil suits during an appeal in such suits, are prohibited from transferring, or from causing to be transferred, by sale, gift, mortgage, or otherwise, any land or other immoveable property belonging to them, and specified in the schedule of property on which their security may have been accepted, until the object of their security shall have been completely fulfilled.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiii, cl. 2.

165. This prohibition, however, shall not be construed to affect the legality of any private transfer or mortgage of such property, in cases in which the amount of any demand on the surety, which may eventually arise under the terms of the security bond, shall be duly discharged by him; but it is hereby declared, that no private transfer or mortgage of such property which may be made by a surety in the interval between the execution of the security bond and the final and complete enforcement of the judgment, shall be considered to bar the prior right of the court to hold the whole or any part of such property answerable in the first instance for the amount of any demand upon it which may eventually arise under the terms of the security bond, and which may not be duly discharged by the surety.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiii, cl. 3.

166. Decrees for money or other moveable property, shall be stayed or enforced in cases of appeal, according to the rules now established, with the following addition thereto.—Reg. XIII, 1808, sec. xii, cl. 1.

167. The security to be given by appellants for staying the execution of decrees appealed from, in cases of money or other moveable property, or by respondents, when such decrees are carried into execution during an appeal, shall be sufficient, in addition to the amount or value adjudged, to cover the interest that may be expected to arise upon the amount payable under the decree, if confirmed in appeal, according to the provision for adjudging interest in such cases.—Reg. XIII, 1808, sec. xii, cl. 2.

168. The provisions of sections v and vi, Regulation II, 1806 (paragraphs 11 to 14), shall be held applicable in all cases wherein an attachment of property made by a court in an original suit may be continued during the trial of an appeal before a superior court, or in which such superior court may judge it proper to order an attachment of property in default of security being given, as required, either by the appellant or respondent in any depending appeal.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. vii.

169. The judges of the several courts by which security may be taken from appellants or respondents for performing the decrees to be passed on appeals, are enjoined to be particularly careful in ascertaining that the security received is good and sufficient; and they are required, in all cases, to cause the nazir or other officers by whom the property of the sureties may be ascertained, to deliver in as accurate a statement as can be obtained of such property, with a full report of the inquiry made respecting it, informing him, at the same time, that he will be held responsible for any wilful misrepresentation in his statement or report.—Reg. XIII, 1808, sec. xiii.

170. When personal bail or security for money or other property may be demandable from a party in any original civil suit or appeal, and he shall tender a deposit of money or of promissory notes, or other obligations of Government, or any other sufficient money security, to the amount required, such deposit shall be accepted instead of hazirzaminy or malzaminy securities, and shall be carefully kept by the treasurer of the court, to be restored or disposed of as the court may direct on the termination of the cause, or whenever the purpose for which the deposit is made shall have been accomplished.—Reg. II, 1806, sec. viii.

171. It shall not be necessary in any Court of Appeal of the East India Company to take any security for costs, but it shall be in the discretion of every such Court of Appeal to demand security for costs from the appellant or not, as it shall see fit, before the respondent is called upon to answer; any law or regulation to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act III, 1846.

REVIEW OF JUDGMENT.

172. Any persons considering themselves aggrieved by a decree passed in a regular civil suit or appeal by a Zillah Court, or a principal sudder ameen, from which decree no further appeal may have been admitted by a superior court, and who, from the discovery of new matter or evidence which was not within their knowledge, or could not be adduced by them at the time when the decree was passed, or from any other good and sufficient reason, may be desirous of obtaining a review of the judgment passed against them, are at liberty to present a petition for this purpose to the court in which the decree in question may have been passed. Such petition shall be written on stamped paper, of the value prescribed No. 7, Sched. B, Reg. X, 1829, and shall be presented within the period of three calendar months from the delivery or tender of the decree, calculated according to the provisions of clause tenth, section viii, Regulation XXVI, 1814. The courts are, nevertheless, authorized to admit applications for a review after the period above-mentioned, provided that the parties preferring the same shall be able to show just and reasonable cause, to the satisfaction of the court, for not having preferred such application within the limited period. In such case, however, the courts are enjoined to proceed with caution, and to state at large upon the proceedings their reasons for admitting such applications after the limited period. If the courts shall be of opinion that there are not any sufficient grounds for a review, they shall reject the petition, and their order to that effect shall be final; but if, on the contrary, they shall be of opinion, that the review desired is necessary to correct an evident error or omission, or is otherwise requisite for the ends of justice, they shall report the same to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, transmitting at the same time a statement of the grounds of their opinion, with a copy of the petition presented to them, and a copy of the decree passed in the case. If the principal sudder ameen shall be of opinion that the review applied for ought to be admitted, he shall report the case to the zillah or city judge, who is authorized to grant permission under the same rules as are prescribed by the existing Regulations in cases where similar applications may be made to the court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iv, cl. 2; Reg. V, 1831, sec. xix, cl. 2.

173. The foregoing rule shall be also applicable to the courts of sudder ameens and moonsiffs: Provided always, that if a sudder ameen or moonsiff shall be of opinion that a review of his judgment ought to be granted, he shall report the case to the judge, who is authorized to permit such review, under the same rules as are prescribed by the existing Regulations with respect to similar application to the court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Act XXVI, 1852, sec. iii.

174. The court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in cases referred to them under paragraph 172, as well as in all cases in which a petition may be presented to them for a revision of their own judgments, which may not have been appealed to the Queen in Council (or though appealed, the proceedings in which may not have been transmitted to the Queen in Council), are authorised to grant the review desired, if upon a consideration of the reasons stated, the circumstances of the case shall appear in justice to require it. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall record on their proceedings the grounds upon which a review may be granted by them in each instance, and shall issue any instructions regarding the admission or rejection of new evidence in the case, which they may deem just and proper.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iv, cl. 3.

175. The order of a Zillah or City Court, or of a principal sudder ameen, or of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, rejecting the petition for a review in the first instance, or of the latter court refusing to sanction a review when applied for by a lower court, shall not be construed to preclude the party from instituting a regular appeal (if the case be appealable) in a competent court, subject to the conditions and rules prescribed by the Regulations in force for the admission of such appeals. —Reg. XXVI. 1814, sec. iv, cl. 4.

176. Whenever the petition for a review of judgment may be presented after the period of three months from the delivery or tender of the decree, it shall be written upon the stamped paper prescribed in No. 8, Sched. B, Reg. X, 1829, with reference to the amount or value of the property adjudged against the party desiring the revision, in like manner as if a regular appeal were preferred from such judgment, unless the party desiring the review be a pauper, in which case the provisions relative to pauper appellants, contained in Reg. XXVIII, 1814, shall be held applicable. —Reg. II, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 1.

177. If the petition for a review of judgment shall be rejected by the court receiving the same, as not containing sufficient grounds for the review desired, the petitioner shall not be entitled to receive back the amount of the stamp duty paid for the paper on which the petition may have been written; but in the event of its having been written on the stamped paper prescribed in No. 8, Sched. B, Reg. X, 1829, the court rejecting the petition is vested with a discretionary authority in any particular instance, wherein the forfeiture of the entire stamp duty may appear excessive on due consideration of the circumstances of the case, to order the refund of any portion thereof, not exceeding three-fourths of the total amount, from the public treasury.—Reg. II, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 2.

178. When the rejected petition may have been written on the stamped paper prescribed in No. 7, Sched. B, Reg. X, 1829, and shall be found, by the court rejecting it, groundless and litigious, so as to merit a fine, in addition to the small stamp duty paid in conformity with that section, the court is authorized and required to impose such fine as may be proportionate to the circumstances of the case, and the condition of the party, not exceeding the amount of the stamp duty which would have been payable if the petition had been written on the stamped paper prescribed in No. 8, Sched. B, Reg. X, 1829; Reg. II, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 4.

179. When the petition for a review of judgment may be admitted, the court reviewing the case will, on deciding it, pass such order relative to the stamp duty paid by the petitioner as may appear just and proper, whether for his reimbursement by the opposite party as part of the costs of suit, or for the refund of any portion of it, not exceeding three-fourths, by Government.—Reg. II, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 4.

180. Whenever the judge or judges who may have passed the decree, or if the decree have been passed by two or more judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, when any of such judges shall continue attached to the court at the time when the petition for a review is received, and shall not be precluded, by absence or other cause, for a period of six months after the receipt of the petition, from considering and recording his order or opinion upon the same, it shall not be competent to any other judge or judges of the same court to enter upon a consideration of the merits of the petition, and record an order or opinion thereupon, it being the obvious intention of the rules referred to, that application for a review of judgment made in pursuance thereof, should, as far as practicable, be received and disposed of by the judge or judges who may have passed the decision; subject to the regular course of appeal, if the case be appealable to a superior court. Provided, however, that this restriction shall not be considered applicable to cases not open to a further appeal, in which a single judge of the court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut may appear, on the face of the decree, to have exceeded the powers vested in him by the Regulations. In such cases, the decree being imperfect and irregular, it shall be competent to a majority of the judges of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, concurring in opinion as to such irregularity, to proceed upon the petition for a review, in the manner prescribed.—Reg. II, 1825, sec. iii.

181. Applications for review of judgments passed by principal sudder ameens in suits exceeding in amount or value the sum of 5,000 rupees shall be made by such principal sudder ameens directly to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and shall be conducted in all respects as applications for review of judgments of zillah judges.—Act XXV, 1837, sec. iv.

REFERENCE TO COLLECTOR ON REVENUE ACCOUNTS.

182. In causes concerning rent or revenue, or other matters heretofore cognizable in the Courts of Maal Adawlut, between proprietors of land, or farmers of land holding their farms immediately of Government, and their respective dependent talookdars, under-farmers, or ryots; or between dependent talookdars, and their under-farmers, or ryots; or between under-farmers, farming lands of proprietors of land, or of farmers of land who farm their lands immediately of Government, or of dependent talookdars, and their dependent talookdars, under-farmers, or ryots; or between other persons concerned in the collection or payment of land rents or revenues, either as principals or sureties; the judge is empowered to refer to the collector for his report, any accounts, the adjustment of which may be necessary towards the decision of the suit. The reference is to be made to the collector by a precept under the signature of the judge and the seal of the court, in which shall be specified the accounts referred, and the papers which the judge may think it necessary to send in elucidation of them, and the time by which the report is to be made. The judge may likewise command the parties or their vakeels, and any witnesses they may have to produce, to appear before the collector, that he may examine them regarding the accounts, and also empower the collector to administer the customary oaths or affirmations to the witnesses, or to examine the parties on oath or affirmation, if they shall agree to be so examined. The collector shall submit his report on the accounts to the court by the prescribed time, attested by his official seal and signature, or assign his reasons for not having been able to complete it by the period directed. The judge, upon the receipt of the collector's report, shall either confirm, set aside, or alter his adjustment of the accounts, or pass such decision respecting them as may appear to him proper. But the rules in this section are not to extend to empower the judge to refer to the collector any accounts relating to suits in which he or any of his public officers, or private servants, or Government may be a party.—Reg. VIII, 1794, sec. xiii.

SPECIAL RULES IN NATIVE COURTS.

MOONSIFFS.

183. All laws and rules now in force relating to the mode of procedure in the trial and decision of original civil suits in the courts of the judges and principal sudder ameens shall also apply to and regulate the mode of procedure in the trial and decision of original civil suits in the courts of the sudder ameens and moonsiffs.—Act XXVI, 1852, sec. ii.

184. Moonsiffs are themselves to investigate the suits cognizable by them in a public cutcherry or court room, and are not to allow their officers, servants, or dependants, or any other person, to interfere therein.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xiv.

185. The moonsiffs are to try the suits depending before them by hearing the pleadings of the parties, by examining their documents, and by taking the depositions of their witnesses, in the presence of the parties or of their vakeels duly constituted. They may also examine the truth of the claim by the oaths or affirmations of the parties, if they mutually consent to that mode of examination.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xxviii.

186. It shall be the duty of the moonsiff or sudder ameen to restrain and discourage, as much as possible, the insertion in the plaint of irrelevant matter and of terms of abuse and reproach against the character of the defendants or others. The plaint shall be signed and numbered, and dated in the order in which it may be received by the moonsiff or sudder ameen, and the number of the suit, the names of the parties, the date on which the petition is received, the amount claimed, and the subject-matter of the suit, shall be carefully entered in a book to be kept by the moonsiff or sudder ameen. With a view to ascertain that the register-books are regularly kept, and that depending suits are brought to a hearing according to their order on the file, the zillah and city judges are respectively required to inspect them once at least in each year, and for this purpose shall require the several moonsiffs or sudder ameens to transmit them to the court either during the period of the Dussera or Mohurrem vacation as may be most convenient.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, secs. xviii. and lxxiii.

187. The moonsiffs and sudder ameens shall try all suits depending before them in the order in which they have been filed or numbered; provided, however, that the zillah or city judge be at all times authorized, either upon a report from the moonsiff or sudder ameen or upon other grounds of information, to direct the moonsiff or sudder ameen, to bring any particular suit or suits to a hearing and determination without attending to the regular order of the file.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, secs. xxvi. and lxxiii.

188. In the examination of witnesses, the moonsiffs are enjoined carefully to prevent the parties and their vakeels or agents from instructing or intimidating the witnesses, or from putting to them leading questions, or questions suggesting a particular answer: questions, also, with regard to the personal character of the parties, or on points evidently irrelevant to the matter in dispute, are to be avoided as much as possible.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xxxvi.

189. The moonsiffs and sudder ameens are strictly prohibited from confining or otherwise punishing witnesses; and they are enjoined to take the depositions of witnesses attending before them with all due expedition, so that they may not be exposed to any vexatious delay or unnecessary detention from their respective homes and employments.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, secs. xxxiii. and lxxiii.

NOTE.—This section is repealed as far as it is inconsistent with Act XIX, 1853, by sec. ii of that Act.

190. No fees shall be levied on exhibits filed before the moonsiffs and sudder ameens, and exhibits shall be received in suits depending before those officers respectively without any derkhast or written application for that purpose.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xxxviii, cl. 1, and sec. lxxiii.

191. When an exhibit is filed in a suit before the moonsiff or sudder ameen, it shall be dated and signed or sealed by him, and shall be marked with some letter or number to identify it, and such letter or number shall be distinctly referred to in those parts of the depositions of the witnesses, or of the proceedings, or of the decree, as may allude to such exhibit.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xxxviii, cl. 3, and sec. lxxiii.

192. When the defendant may be a person employed in the departments of salt or opium the notice to be served on the defendant shall be inclosed within a sealed cover, addressed to the agent, or to the assistant, or to the gomastah, ameen, or head officer of the nearest aurung, kothee, or choukee, subordinate to them, and shall be superscribed with the official seal and signature of the moonsiff. The agent, or his assistant or head native officer, shall cause the notice to be duly served and acknowledged by the defendant, and shall then return it to the moonsiff.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xx.

193. If any individual whose evidence is required shall be a person employed in the provision of salt and opium under the agents of Government, the summons shall be served in the same manner as is prescribed in the preceding paragraph respecting the issue of notice to a defendant. The moonsiffs will be careful not to summons such persons unnecessarily, and on their attendance shall cause them to be examined and dismissed with all possible despatch.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xxx.

194. If any moonsiff shall require the evidence of a person not within his local jurisdiction, and such person shall not attend at the requisition of the parties, the moonsiff shall issue the necessary process for procuring the attendance of such person, and send the same to the moonsiff within whose local jurisdiction such person is, who shall indorse such process and cause it to be duly served and executed.—Act XVII, 1845, sec. ii.

195. All powers now exercised by zillah judges for enforcing the attendance of any person upon whom a summons to appear as a witness has been duly served, and who has failed to attend in their courts, shall be exercised by moonsiffs for enforcing the attendance of any person upon whom a summons to appear as a witness has been duly served, and who has failed to attend in their courts. Provided that all orders passed by moonsiffs shall be subject to an appeal to the zillah or city judge, whose decision thereon shall be final.—Act XVII, 1845, sec. iii.

196. When the decision shall have been passed, the moonsiff or sudder ameen shall cause two copies of it to be prepared, and after attesting them with his seal and signature, shall, within one week after the date of the decree, tender the said copies in open cutcherry, both to the plaintiff and defendant, or to their vakeels respectively. He shall indorse on the back of the said copies the actual date on which they may be tendered to the parties in open cutcherry; and if either or both of the parties shall fail to attend, or shall refuse to receive the copies so tendered, he shall certify the same on the back of the copies.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xli, cl. 1, and sec. lxxiii.

197. Any moonsiff or sudder ameen who may be guilty of wilfully misstating or falsifying, or of causing to be misstated or falsified, the date and purport of the indorsement above directed to be written on the copies of the decrees, or of keeping back such copies of decrees from either of the parties, with the view of defeating or opposing a bar to their right of appeal, shall, on proof thereof, be liable to dismission from office, and to such discretionary fine to Government as may be deemed proper by the court.—Reg. XXIII, sec. xli, cl. 2, and sec. lxxiii.

198. So much of all decrees as consists of the points to be decided, the decision thereon, and the reason for the decision, which shall be passed by principal sudder ameens, sudder ameens, or moonsiffs, shall be written originally in the vernacular language of such principal sudder ameen, sudder ameen, or moonsiff, and signed by such principal sudder ameen, sudder ameen, or moonsiff, at the time of pronouncing such decision; and (in case such vernacular language shall not be the same as the vernacular language commonly used in the court wherein the suit to which the decree relates shall have been instituted) shall be translated into such last-mentioned vernacular language, and the translation shall be incorporated in the decree.—Act XII, 1843, sec. iii.

199. The provisions of Act XXI, 1850, respecting the law to be administered with reference to the religion of the parties are to apply to moonsiffs.—Act XXVI, 1852, sec. iii.

200. Decrees passed in the courts of the sudder ameens and the moonsiffs shall be executed by those courts, under the general rules prescribed for the execution of decrees passed by the zillah judges; provided, however, that the rule in question, as regards all the officers above named, shall not be considered to warrant their issuing any order on their own authority for the confinement of a defendant in execution of civil process. Where such order may be requisite, the officer by whose authority the party may have been apprehended shall forward him, together with the subsistence-money lodged for his detention, to the zillah or city judge, who, unless he see reason to the contrary, shall direct his commitment to gaol by means of his own officers. In appeals from the orders of the moonsiff or sudder ameen in such cases, the decision of the zillah or city judge shall be final.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. vii.

201. The moonsiffs shall retain on their establishments nazirs, to whom the provisions of clause 8, section xiv, Regulation XXVI, 1814, respecting the payment of tullubana, shall be applicable.—Act XIV, 1845, sec. ii.

202. It shall be competent to the sudder ameens and moonsiffs to demand security from the defendant, under the provisions of sections iv and v, Regulation II, 1806 (paragraphs 10 to 13), in cases pending before them; and also to proceed, without reference to the zillah judge, to the realization of fines imposed by them, provided that all orders passed by the sudder ameens and moonsiffs under this paragraph, be subject to an appeal to the zillah judge.—Act VI, 1843, sec. iv.

203. The rules applicable to pleaders in the courts of the zillah and city judges shall be applicable, so far as they are capable of application, to pleaders in the moonsiffs' courts.—Act I, 1846, sec. xi.

204. Whenever a pleader has conducted himself in such a manner in the court of a moonsiff as would have rendered him liable to a fine if he had so conducted himself in the court of a zillah or city judge, it shall be competent to such moonsiff to impose such fine; provided that an appeal from all orders imposing such fines shall lie to the zillah or city judge, whose decision thereon shall be final.—Act I, 1846, sec. xii.

207. The sudder ameens are themselves to investigate the suits referred to them in a public cutcherry or court-room, and are not to allow their officers, servants, or dependants, or any other person to interfere therein.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxxi.

Whenever a pleader has rendered himself liable to a fine in the court of a principal sudder ameen or sudder ameen, it shall be competent to such principal sudder ameen or sudder ameen to impose such fine; provided that an appeal from all orders imposing such fines shall lie to the zillah or city judge, whose decision thereon shall be final.—Act I, 1846, sec. x.

PRINCIPAL SUDDER AMEENS.

219. In the trial and decision of all original suits the principal sudder ameens shall be guided by the rules established for the conduct of business in the courts of the zillah and city judges.—Act VI, 1843, sec. i.

220. The principal sudder ameens are themselves to investigate the suits referred to them in a public cutcherry or court-room, and are not to allow their officers, servants, or dependants, or any other person, to interfere therein.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xviii, cl. 2.

221. (Language of decrees.)—Act XII, 1843, sec iii. (See "MOONSIFFS," paragraph 198.)

222. Decrees passed in the courts of the principal sudder ameens shall be executed by those courts, under the general rules prescribed for the execution of decrees passed by the zillah and city judges; provided, however, that in such cases an appeal from the orders of the principal sudder ameens shall lie, in the first instance, to the zillah and city judges, and specially to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxii.

223. (Principal sudder ameens to have nazirs.)—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. v, cl. 5. (See "SUDDER AMEENS," paragraph 216.)

224. It shall be competent to the zillah and city judge to authorize any of the vakeels of his court, or of those attached to the sudder ameens, to practise in the court of the principal sudder ameens.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xviii, cl. 3.

225. (Principal sudder ameens may fine vakeels.)—Act I, 1846, sec. x. (See "SUDDER AMEENS," paragraph 218.)

226. The principal sudder ameens shall furnish such monthly and other periodical reports of business done in their courts as the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut may be pleased to direct.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxiii.

227. All official correspondence or communications addressed by principal sudder ameens to the courts of justice, or to other public authorities, shall be transmitted through the channel of the respective judges of the zillah and city courts, except in instances which may appear to require immediate dispatch. But in all cases in which such principal sudder ameens may find it necessary to transmit any official communication to a court or other public authority, in any other mode than through the zillah or city judge, they shall forward a copy of such communication with as little delay as possible, for the information of the zillah or city judge.—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 11; Reg. VII, 1832, sec xvii.

228. In all matters of form or practice relative to the proceedings of a principal sudder ameen stationed at any place not being the fixed station of the zillah or city court, for which no express rule may be prescribed in this or any other Regulation, the principal sudder ameen shall be guided by the instructions of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 12; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. xvii.

GENERAL RULES.

WHAT LAW TO ADMINISTER IN CASES OF SUCCESSION.

229. The Zillah and City Courts are not to pass a decree in any suit concerning the succession or right of inheritance to a zemindarry, talook, land, house, or other real property, to which there are more claimants than one, who by the Hindoo or Mahomedan law (respect being had to the religion of the claimants) would be entitled to a portion of the property; excepting the property be by the decree adjudged to all the claimants, in the proportions to which they may be respectively entitled.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. xiii.

230. In suits regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, and caste, and all religious usages and institutions, the Mahomedan laws with respect to Mahomedans, and the Hindoo laws with regard to Hindoos, are to be considered as the general rules by which the judges are to form their decisions. In the respective cases, the Mahomedan and Hindoo law officers of the court are to attend to expound the law.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xv.

231. By the preceding paragraph it was evidently intended that the law officers attached to the several civil courts should expound the law in the cases referred to in that paragraph, and that the judges should be guided by such exposition in all common cases wherein they might have no reason to doubt the accuracy of it: but in particular cases wherein they might entertain such doubt, either from the objections of the parties, founded on other law opinions exhibited by them, or from a reference to the known books of Mahomedan or Hindoo law, or from whatever cause, if the judge or judges trying the suit should consider the exposition given by their immediate law officer insufficient, it was not meant to preclude them from obtaining a further exposition from the law officers of the superior courts, by a reference of the case to them through the judges of these courts, as has been the occasional practice in some of the courts, and is now declared to be at the discretion of the courts, whenever they may deem such reference necessary for the purposes of justice. It is at the same time to be observed, that the courts are not authorized to refer any point of law to individuals not acting in a public capacity, and to whom, consequently, no responsibility attaches; although there is no objection to any of the courts receiving law opinions, quoting or referring to authorities tendered to them by the parties during the trial of the suit in support of their claims, and if the courts shall deem it proper so to do, referring them to their own law officers or those of the superior courts, to enable them to determine on their due weight and application to the case.—Reg. II, 1798, sec. iv.

232. The rule contained in paragraph 230 shall be the rule of guidance in all suits regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, and caste, and all religious usages and institutions that may arise between persons professing the Hindoo and Mahomedan persuasions respectively.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. viii.

233. It is declared, however, that the above rules are intended and shall be held to apply to such persons only as shall be bonâ fide professors of those religions at the time of the application of the law to the case, and were designed for the protection of the rights of such persons, not for the deprivation of the rights of others. Whenever, therefore, in any civil suit, the parties to such suit may be of different persuasions, when one party shall be of the Hindoo, and the other of the Mahomedan persuasion, or where one or more of the parties to the suit shall not be either of the Mahomedan or Hindoo persuasions, the laws of those religions shall not be permitted to operate to deprive such party or parties of any property to which, but for the operation of such laws, they would have been entitled. In all such cases the decision shall be governed by the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience; it being clearly understood, however, that this provision shall not be considered as justifying the introduction of the English, or any foreign law, or the application to such cases of any rules not sanctioned by those principles.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. ix.

234. So much of any law or usage now in force within the territories subject to the Government of the East India Company, as inflicts on any person forfeiture of rights or property, or may be held in any way to impair or affect any right of inheritance by reason of his or her renouncing, or having been excluded from the communion of any religion, or being deprived of caste, shall cease to be enforced as law in the courts of the East India Company, and in the courts established by royal charter within the said territories.—Act XXI, 1850.

ARBITRATION.

235. In suits that may be brought before any of the courts of civil judicature concerning disputed accounts, partnerships, debts, doubtful or contested bargains, or non-performance of contracts, in which the cause of action shall exceed two hundred rupees, the courts are to recommend the parties to submit the decision of the matters in dispute to arbitration.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. ii.

236. In all suits for money or personal property, the amount or value of which shall not exceed the sum of two hundred rupees, the courts are empowered, with the consent of the parties, to refer the suit to the decision of one arbitrator. The parties, or their vakeels, upon agreeing to the reference, shall, on or before the next court day, mutually choose some one common friend or indifferent person who may be willing to undertake the arbitration. If the parties shall not agree with respect to the person to be appointed arbitrator, or if the person nominated by them shall refuse to accept the arbitration, and the parties, or their vakeels, cannot agree in the appointment of another person willing to undertake the arbitration, the court, with the consent of the parties, is to appoint as arbitrator in the cause, the proprietor of the estate in which the cause of action shall have arisen, or the farmer, if the estate be held in farm of Government, or the cauzy of the pergunnah, or the tehseeldar, or any other creditable person, provided that the person so to be nominated by the court be not in any respect interested in the matter in dispute. But, if the parties cannot agree in the nomination of an arbitrator, or if the person whom they may nominate shall refuse to accept the trust, and the parties cannot agree upon the appointment of any other person willing to undertake the arbitration, or shall not consent to the appointment of an arbitrator by the court, the cause is not to be referred to arbitration, but is to be tried by the court. In the event of the parties, or their vakeels, agreeing in the nomination of an arbitrator willing to accept the arbitration, or to an arbitrator being appointed by the court, the person so chosen or appointed shall be the arbitrator in the cause. The parties, however, in suits of the nature of those described in this paragraph are to have the option of choosing two or more arbitrators to decide their cause, in the same manner as the parties in the causes specified in the preceding paragraph.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. iii.

237. The judges of the courts are enjoined to afford every encouragement in their power to persons of character and credit to become arbitrators; but they are not to employ any coercive means for that purpose, nor to permit any of their public officers or private servants, to be arbitrators in a cause. In all cases, the courts are directed to endeavour, but without using any compulsion, to prevail upon parties to submit their cause to the arbitration of one person to be mutually agreed upon by them. In every case (with the exception of the cases specified in the preceding paragraph, which the courts are empowered to refer to one arbitrator with the consent of the parties), the parties are to choose the arbitrators, who are to decide the matter in dispute without fee or reward.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. iv.

238. Whenever a suit shall be submitted to arbitration, the court in which it may have been instituted, previous to the arbitrator or arbitrators entering upon the arbitration, is to cause the parties to execute arbitration-bonds, binding themselves to abide by the award and agreeing that it be made a decree of the court. The court is to fix such time as it may think reasonable, upon a consideration of the nature and circumstances of the case, for the delivery of the award, and the period so fixed is to be specified in the bonds. If the cause shall be referred to two or more arbitrators, the following provisions are to be made for completing the award, in the event of the arbitrators not delivering it by the limited time, either from disagreement, or other cause. If the decision of the suit shall be referred to two or more arbitrators, whether an odd or an even number the parties are to have the option of nominating jointly one person as umpire: or if the number of arbitrators appointed shall be three or more, being an odd number, to agree that the award given by the majority shall be final, or to permit the arbitrators to nominate an umpire. The name of the umpire, and the time by which he is to make his award, in the event of the arbitrators not delivering it by the limited period, are to be specified in the bonds, which are to be executed before the arbitrators enter upon the inquiry. In the event of an umpire being appointed, and the arbitrators not agreeing in an award by the limited period, their authority is to cease from such period, and the umpire is to give his award.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. v.

239. When a cause shall be referred to arbitration and the bonds specified in the preceding paragraph shall have been executed, the court is to transmit to the arbitrator or arbitrators a copy of the bill of complaint, and by a short writing under the seal of the court, refer to him or them the matters in dispute between the parties. In the trial of the suit, the arbitrators are to investigate the matters in dispute, by hearing the pleadings of the parties and examining their respective witnesses and documents. The court is to issue the same process to the parties and to the witnesses whom the arbitrator or arbitrators, or the parties, may desire to have examined, to appear before the arbitrator or arbitrators, and to administer such oaths or affirmations to the parties and witnesses as the court is authorised to administer in causes tried before it: and persons not attending in consequence of such process, or making any default, or refusing to give their testimony, or to sign their depositions, or being guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or arbitrators during the investigation of the suit, are to be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties, and punishments, by order made by the arbitrator, or arbitrators, as they would incur for the same offences in suits tried before the court; provided that the arbitrator or arbitrators shall report the order, with the reason for making it, to the court, and obtain its consent thereto, which is to be signified by the judge or judges signing the order. In cases in which an arbitration may be held at a considerable distance from the court, the court may grant commissions to the arbitrators to administer the proper oaths or affirmations to witnesses whom they may be desirous of so examining.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. vi.

240. In cases where arbitrators or umpires shall not have been able to complete the award by the limited time, from want of the necessary evidence or information, or other good and sufficient cause, the courts are empowered to allow a further time for the delivery of the award. In the first-mentioned case, the courts are to fix a period by which the umpire (if an umpire shall have been appointed) shall deliver his final award, in the event of the arbitrators not completing their award by the expiration of such further time.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. vii.

241. When a final award in a cause shall be made, either by the arbitrators or the umpire, it is to be submitted to the court under the seal and signature of the person or persons by whom it may be made, together with all the proceedings, depositions, and exhibits in the cause. The court is to pass a decree conformably to the award, and the decree is to be carried into execution in the same manner as other decrees of the court.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. viii.

242. The award of an arbitrator or arbitrators is not to be set aside, except it be fully proved to the satisfaction of the court, by the oaths or affirmations of two credible witnesses, that the arbitrator or arbitrators has or have been guilty of gross corruption or partiality in the cause in which the award may be made.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. ix.

243. Parties in suits depending in the Civil Courts of Judicature respecting the property in land, or limited tenures therein, or rights dependent thereon, shall be at liberty to refer their suits to arbitration, and shall, by all due means, be encouraged by the courts to resort to that mode of adjusting their differences.—Reg. VI, 1813, sec. ii, cl. 1.

244. The preceding rules respecting the reference of suits to arbitration, the appointment of arbitrators and umpires, the investigation of suits referred to arbitration, the time and mode of making the award, and the setting aside or confirming the same, are declared applicable to suits referred to arbitration by the Courts of Judicature under this Regulation.—Reg. VI, 1813, sec. ii. cl. 2.

245. Persons between whom disputes may exist respecting the property of land, or limited tenures therein, or rights dependent thereon, whether the same be or be not depending in the Courts of Judicature, are at liberty, without any application to the courts, to refer the same to private arbitration; and the awards made by the arbitrators and umpires appointed in such case by the parties shall be supported and enforced by the courts, under the following rules and limitations. —Reg. VI, 1813, sec. iii. cl. 1.

246. Whenever a dispute respecting the matters above enumerated shall have been referred to private arbitration, and an award shall have been duly made, if either party shall refuse to perform the award, it shall be competent to the other party, within the period of six months from the date of the award, to apply summarily to the Dewanny Adawlut; and upon such application, if the court, after calling upon the opposite party for his answer, be satisfied that the award was duly made by arbitrators or umpires appointed by the free-will and consent of the parties, and such award shall be liable to no impeachment, which would have warranted the setting it aside if it had been made under the authority of the court, shall cause the same to be summarily executed as a decree of court, calling upon the arbitrators and umpires, if necessary, to attend and give their assistance in the execution of their said award; provided always, that if such application for the enforcement of a private award shall not be made within the period above prescribed, the court shall not admit any plea whatever for the delay, but shall reject such application and refer the party preferring it to a regular suit.—Reg. VI, 1813, sec. iii, cl. 2.

247. Whenever private awards shall be tendered by the parties in regular suits, the courts, if such awards shall appear to have been performed, and the possession of the contested property to have been held under them, shall allow equal validity to the same as if they had been made under the authority of the courts. But if the awards tendered shall not have been performed at all, or shall have been performed only in part, the courts shall not admit the same, unless they be established by clear and satisfactory proof, shall be distinct and intelligible so as to admit of easy execution, and the delay which may have occurred in the performance of them shall also be duly accounted for.—Reg. VI, 1813, sec. iii, cl. 3.

248. No decree relating to the matters above enumerated shall be amended or reversed upon the ground of the same being founded on an award of arbitration not authorised by the Regulations at the time the award was made, unless such award be in itself open to just cause of impeachment. —Reg. VI, 1813, sec. iv.

249. If a petition of appeal shall be preferred against the decision of any court, founded on an award of arbitration, it is to be dismissed with costs; unless it be fully proved to the satisfaction of the court, by the oaths or affirmations of two credible witnesses, that the arbitrators have been guilty of gross corruption or partiality, in the cause in which they have made the award.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xxviii; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xxii.

NOTE.—Collectors revising settlements are authorized to refer to arbitration any disputes cognizable by them under the provisions of Regulation VII, 1822; and any judicial questions before them, in which the interests of justice may in their opinion require that the case be decided by arbitration, are also referrible under Reg. IX, 1833.

EMPLOYMENT OF NATIVES AS PUNCHAYET-ASSESSORS, OR JURY.

250. The Governor-General in Council is declared competent to grant the powers specified in the following paragraphs to any European officer presiding in a court for the administration of civil justice, such powers to be exercised either in any particular suit in any specified district, or generally by such officer, in any suits that may come before him, and in any part of the country where he may be employed; provided that it shall always be competent to the Governor-General in Council to revoke and annul the grant of such powers whenever he may see sufficient cause for so doing.—Reg. VI, 1832, sec. ii.

251. In the trial of civil suits, original or appealed, it shall be competent to every court in which an European officer thus empowered presides, to avail itself of the assistance of respectable natives in either of the three following ways.—Reg. VI, 1832, sec. iii, cl. 1.

252. First, by referring the suit, or any point or points in the same, to a punchayet of such persons, who will carry on their inquiries apart from the court, and report to it the result. The reference to the punchayet and its answer shall be in writing, and shall be filed in the suit.—Reg. VI, 1832, sec. iii, cl. 2.

253. Or, secondly, by constituting two or more such persons assessors or members of the court, with a view to the advantages derivable from their observations, particularly in the examination of witnesses. The opinion of each assessor shall be given separately and discussed; and if any of the assessors, or the authority presiding in the court, shall desire it, the opinions of the assessors shall be recorded in writing in the suit.—Reg. VI, 1832, sec. iii, cl. 3.

254. Or, thirdly, by employing them more nearly as a jury. They will then attend during the trial of the suit, will suggest, as it proceeds, such points of inquiry as occur to them; the court, if no objection exists, using every endeavour to procure the required information, and after consultation will deliver in their verdict. The mode of selecting the jurors, the number to be employed, and the manner in which their verdict shall be delivered, are left to the discretion of the judge who presides.—Reg. VI, 1832, sec. iii. cl. 4.

255. It is clearly to be understood that, under all the modes of procedure described in the three preceding paragraphs, the decision is vested exclusively in the authority presiding in the court. —Reg. VI, 1832, sec. iii. cl. 5.

AFFIRMATIONS SUBSTITUTED FOR JUDICIAL OATHS OF HINDOOS AND MAHOMEDANS.

256. Except as hereinafter provided, instead of any oath or declaration now authorized or required by law, every individual of the Hindoo or Mahomedan persuasion within the territories of the East-India Company shall make affirmation to the following effect :—

"I solemnly affirm, in the presence of Almighty God, that what I shall state shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."—Act V, 1840, sec. i.

257. If any person making such affirmation as aforesaid shall wilfully and falsely state any matter or thing, which, if the same had been sworn before the passing of this Act, would have amounted to perjury, every such offender shall be subject in all courts to the same punishment to which persons convicted of perjury were subject before the passing of this Act.—Act V. 1840, sec. ii.

258. Any person causing or procuring another to commit the offence defined in the preceding paragraph, shall be subject in all courts to the same punishment to which persons convicted of subornation of perjury were subject before the passing of this Act.—Act V. 1840, sec. iii.

259. This Act shall not extend to any declaration made under the authority of Act No. XXI, of 1837, nor to any declaration or affirmation made in any of Her Majesty's Courts of Justice; provided always, that the words, "Her Majesty's Courts of Justice," shall be deemed not to mean, nor extend to, the Courts of the Justice of the Peace.—Act V, 1840, sec. iv, and Act II, 1847.

PROCEDURE IN CERTAIN SPECIAL SUITS COGNIZABLE BY THE CIVIL COURTS.

SUITS AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT AND ITS OFFICERS.

260. Collectors of the revenue and their assistants and native officers, salt agents and their assistants and native officers concerned in the manufacture of salt, the collectors of the customs and their assistants and native officers employed in the collection of the customs, the mint and assay masters and their assistants and native officers, are declared amenable to the Zillah or City court in the jurisdiction of which they may reside or carry on the public business committed to their charge, for any acts done in their official capacity, in opposition to any Regulation.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. x.

261. If a native, or any other person not being a British subject, shall consider himself aggrieved under any Regulation, by an act done by any of the officers of Government described in the preceding paragraph, pursuant to a special order originating with the Board of Revenue or other superintending Board, the officer by whom the act may be done is not to be liable to be sued for it. In such cases, Government is to be considered as the defendant; and the person deeming himself aggrieved is to present a petition to the court to which the officer by whom the act complained of may have been done shall be amenable in his public capacity, stating wherein he considers himself injured under the Regulations, and praying that the Governor-General in Council will order the court in which the cause may be cognizable, to try the points or matters contested agreeably to the Regulations. The judge to whom the petition may be presented is to forward it immediately to the Board to which the person complained against may be amenable, who, provided they shall not think it proper to afford the redress that may be solicited by the petitioner, and the courts of justice shall be competent to try the cause, will direct the court in which it may be cognizable, to proceed to the trial of it. If the said Board shall order the cause to be tried, the court is immediately to send a written notification of the order to the complainant, and the cause is to be considered as filed in the court from the date of the notification. The court is then to proceed to try the suit, under the same rules and regulations as are prescribed for the trial of suits between individuals. The officer by whom the act complained against may have been done, is to carry on the suit under the directions of the Board of Revenue, or other superintending Board, according to the immediate authority under which he may have acted, and is to issue the necessary instructions to the vakeel of Government in the court in which the suit may be instituted, or subsequently carried in appeal. In the event of Government being cast in any of the courts, the officer entrusted with the management of the suit is to send a copy of the decree and proceedings of the court to the Board of Revenue, or other superintending Board, according to the immediate authority under which he may have acted, with a letter stating any objections that he may have to offer to the decision. The Boards above mentioned will order an appeal from the decisions that may be transmitted to them, under this paragraph to be preferred or not, as may appear to them advisable. The costs and damages that may be awarded against Government, in suits instituted under this paragraph, are to be defrayed from the public treasury. All special rules respecting cases of the nature of those described in this paragraph are to be duly attended to by the plaintiff, and the boards and officers concerned in them.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. xi, and Reg. II, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 1.

262. Whenever a petition of complaint may be preferred against a collector of the land revenue or customs, salt agent, or opium agent, or other person amenable for acts connected with his official duties, to any Court of Civil Judicature competent to receive and try such cases, the judge or judges of such court shall transmit the petition so received to the Board of Revenue, or other superintending Board to which the person complained against may be subject.—Reg. II, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 1.

263. The Board of Revenue, or other superintending Board, on receipt of any petition of the nature described in the preceding paragraph, shall immediately take the circumstances stated therein into their consideration, in order to judge whether the redress solicited should be granted directly by Government, or whether the complainant should be left to prosecute his suit in the regular course of law.—Reg. II, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 2.

264. Should the superintending Board be of opinion, after making due inquiries on the subject, either by consulting their own records, or by a reference to the local authorities, or in any other mode which may be judged advisable, that the party complaining has been actually aggrieved, and that he is entitled to redress directly from Government, they shall submit the necessary report on the subject, accompanied with their opinion as to the nature and extent of the relief which should be granted.—Reg. II, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 3.

265. Should the superintending Board be of opinion, after making due inquiries on the subject, that the party complaining should be left to prosecute the case in the regular course of law, they shall inform the judge or judges of the court from whom the petition may have been received of the result of their deliberations on that point; and such communications shall be deemed sufficient authority for the formal institution and trial of the suit in question. The Boards aforesaid shall at the same time determine whether the suit should be defended by the public officers as an action against Government, or by the person affected by the complaint in his individual capacity, and shall inform the judge or judges by whom the case may have been referred to them of their decision on this point accordingly.—Reg. II, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 4. (See "SETTLEMENT," paragraph 407, to 414. "REALIZATION OF REVENUE." "REALIZATION OF RENT." "LA KHIRAJ." "INDIGO," paragraphs 19 to 24. "OPIUM," paragraphs 16 to 23, and "SALT," paragraphs 14 to 20, 22 to 25, 29 to 33, 36, 37.

266. In cases in which a party preferring a petition of complaint against a collector of the land revenue, or of customs, or other person amenable to the Courts of Civil Judicature, for acts connected with his official duties, may not be considered entitled to redress from Government, under the provisions of paragraph 264, and who may consequently, under the preceding paragraph, proceed to prosecute the case in the regular course of law, such suit shall be entered on the file of the court, from the date on which the petition was originally received, and the case shall be brought to a hearing and determination in the order in which it would have been heard and determined had it been originally instituted on such date.—Reg. XIII, 1829, sec. v.

267. Government is not and shall not be held liable for any error or irregularity which may have occurred, or shall occur, in any order, proceeding, or decree of any Court of Judicature, whether a revenue or other officer of Government may or may not have been, or shall or shall not be, employed in giving effect to the order, proceeding, or decree deemed to be erroneous or irregular. Nor shall any officer of Government be held liable for anything done or suffered in conformity with an order, proceeding, or decree of a court as aforesaid; and if any person or persons shall sue Government, or any officer of Government, for anything done or suffered under an order, proceeding, or decree of court as aforesaid, such person or persons shall be nonsuited, with costs.—Reg. XI, 1822, sec. xxxviii.

268. The principle contained in the preceding paragraph is and shall be held applicable to all orders, proceedings, or decrees made, held, or passed by any public officer, in virtue of powers vested in him for the judicial cognizance of any pleas, suits, complaints, or informations whatsoever, unless otherwise specially provided. No judge, magistrate, justice of the peace, collector or other person acting judicially shall be liable to be sued in any civil court, for any act done or ordered to be done by him in the discharge of his judicial duty, whether or not within the limits of his jurisdiction; provided that he at the time, in good faith, believed himself to have jurisdiction to do or order the act complained of; and no officer of any court or other person, bound to execute the lawful warrants or orders of any such judge, magistrate, justice of the peace, collector, or other person acting judicially, shall be liable to be sued in any civil court, for the execution of any warrant or order which he would be bound to execute if within the jurisdiction of the person issuing the same.—Reg. XI, 1822, sec. xxxviii, and Act XVIII, 1850.

269. All complaints against the collector of customs at Calcutta, or his public officers, or any other public officer at the presidency, which, by the Regulations in force, are cognizable in any civil court shall be received, tried, and determined, as prescribed in the Regulations, by the judge of the Dewanny Adawlut of the twenty-four pergunnahs.—Reg. VII, 1806, sec. viii.

SUITS—BY OR AGAINST NATIVE PRINCES THROUGH THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

270. In cases in which sovereign native princes, whether residing within the British territories or otherwise, shall have claims to prefer, as individuals, to lands or other things, the cognizance of which is vested by the general constitution of the country in the courts of civil judicature, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to order a suit to be instituted, through the medium of the public officers, for the recovery of the lands or other things which may be so claimed, in the court which, on the principles of the general regulations, is authorized to inquire into and decide upon the right to the disputed property.—Reg. IV, 1812, sec. ii, cl. 1.

271. In like manner, should a suit be instituted in any of the established courts of civil judicature, by any zemindar or other person, for the recovery of lands or other things in the occupancy of any native prince whom it would be improper to require to defend the action himself, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to order such suit to be defended by the public officers.—Reg. IV, 1812, sec. ii, cl. 2.

272. Suits which may be instituted or defended under the preceding rules shall be conducted by the collectors of the land revenue, aided by the vakeels of Government at the several civil courts, under the directions of the Boards of Revenue; which boards will, of course, on all such occasions be furnished by the Governor-General in Council with such information and instructions as may appear necessary to enable them duly to superintend the conduct of the prosecution or of the defence.—Reg. IV, 1812, sec. iii.

273. In all original suits and appeals in which Government may be a party under the provisions of the present Regulation, the court which may pass judgment shall, in addition to the copies of the decrees required to be delivered to the parties, transmit a summary of the decree with as little delay as possible, in the English language, to the secretary to Government in the judicial department, for the information of the Governor-General in Council, who, on receipt of such summary, will issue any orders to the Boards of Revenue which the case may appear to require, or will cause the necessary notification to be made to the person on whose behalf the cause shall have been prosecuted or defended, of the final judgment given on the action.—Reg. IV, 1812, sec. iv.

SUITS—IN WHICH THE NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL AND HIS FAMILY ARE PARTIES.

274. In complaints brought before any civil court, in which it shall appear, either by the application of the Nazim or the representation of the defendant, at or before the time of giving in his or her answer, or by the petition of the complainant, that both parties are servants or relations of his Excellency, or the widows or female descendants of the former Nazims of Bengal, the parties are to be referred for justice to the Nazim, or to any person whom he may appoint to dispense it. Upon a complaint being preferred against any servant or servants of his Excellency by persons of a different description, the court in which the complaint may be instituted is either to refer it to his Excellency, or to hear it in the ordinary manner, according to its discretion, taking care at all times, and in all matters, to pay every proper attention to the dignity and long-established rights of the Nabob. Provided, however, that in all cases in which either the plaintiff or defendant shall prefer the jurisdiction of the Court to that of the Nazim, the judge is to try and determine the suit in the same manner as if neither of the parties had been persons of the description specified in this paragraph.—Reg. XVI, 1793, sec. x.

275. All references which the officers in the judicial department may have occasion to make to the Nawab of Bengal under the provisions contained in the preceding paragraph; and generally, all other applications which those officers may deem it necessary to make to the Nawab, shall be transmitted to his Highness through the channel of the officer holding the appointment of superintendent of Nizamut affairs.—Reg. XIX, 1805, sec. ii.

276. All applications which the collectors of the land revenue in the different zillahs or the collectors of Government customs, or any other public officer, may find it necessary to make to the Nawab, on matters connected with their respective public duties, shall in like manner be transmitted to his Highness through the channel of the superintendent of Nizamut affairs.—Reg. XIX, 1805, sec. iii.

277. Applications or references of the nature above described may be transmitted by the public officers of Government in the form of a letter in the Persian language addressed to his Highness the Nawab, under the signature of the person by whom such application may be made, and forwarded under an unsealed envelope to the superintendent of Nizamut affairs; or the substance of the reference or application may be stated in an English letter addressed to the superintendent of Nizamut affairs, who will without loss of time, make the necessary communication to the Nawab, and forward his answer to the officer of Government from whom the application may have been received.—Reg. XIX, 1805, sec. iv.

278. Whenever an application may be made in writing addressed to his Highness the Nawab, one established address, suitable to the high rank of the Nawab, and to the official situation of the person by whom the application may be made, shall be observed, agreeably to the form contained in the Persian transcript of this Regulation.—Reg. XIX, 1805, sec. v.

279. All applications to her Highness the Munnee Begum, to the Bubboo Begum, or to the Waledeh Begum, or to the brothers of his Highness the Nawab, sons of the late Nawab Mobarek-ul-Dowlah, or to his brothers by marriage with the daughters of his father, shall be addressed according to the form above-prescribed to his Highness the Nawab, and forwarded through the superintendent of Nizamut affairs.—Reg. XIX, 1805, sec. vi.

280. Should it, on any occasion, appear to the superintendent of Nizamut affairs that the reference or application which he may be desired to make to the Nawab is liable to objections, either from its tenor or from defect of form, the superintendent may, in such case, delay the communication of it to the Nawab and report the circumstances to the Governor-General in Council, who will pass such orders on the subject as the case may appear to require.—Reg. XIX, 1805, sec. vii.

281. The forms prescribed in the Persian transcript of this Regulation shall be observed, whenever any of the public officers of Government may have occasion to address letters to the Munnee Begum and Bubboo Begum.—Reg. XVI, 1806, sec. ii.

282. Whenever any of the public officers may have occasion to address any of the other branches of the Nawab's family, they are required to apply to the superintendent of the Nizamut affairs for the proper form of address.—Reg. XVI, 1806, sec. iii.

283. It is already prescribed that all applications which may be made to his Highness the Nawab shall be transmitted through the channel of the superintendent of Nizamut affairs. In like manner, all applications which may be made to the other members of the Nawab's family shall be forwarded through the channel of that officer.—Reg. XVI, 1806, sec. iv.

284. In order to obviate any doubt or misconstruction respecting the intent of the rule contained in paragraph 277, it is hereby explained, that all letters addressed to the Nawab himself, or to any other branch of his Highness's family, shall be sent through the channel already prescribed, under an open envelope, bearing the private seal of the writer or his name written in the Persian character.—Reg. XVI, 1806, sec. v.

285. It shall be competent to the agent to the Govenor-General at Moorshedabad, or other officer, however denominated, exercising for the time being the control and superintendence of the affairs of the Nizamut on the part of the Governor-General in Council, to institute suits in the Courts of Civil Judicature on the part of his Highness the Nazim of Bengal, and to conduct them, as plaintiff or appellant, in such manner as may appear proper.—Reg. XIX, 1825, sec. ii.

286. In like manner, should any suit be instituted in any Court of Civil Judicature against his Highness the Nazim of Bengal, the ordinary notice shall be issued upon the agent to the Governor-General, or other officer aforesaid, who shall conduct the defence on the part of his Highness.—Reg. XIX, 1825, sec. iii.

287. Provided always, that security shall not be required from, nor shall attachment in any case issue against his Highness, or against the agent to the Governor-General, or other officer aforesaid; but should the court require the payment of any costs, damages, or other sums of money, or the delivery of any lands, and after order duly made and served on the agent, any unreasonable delay should arise, it shall be competent to the court to transmit a copy and translation of the decree or order to the secretary to Government in the Persian department, when the Governor-General in Council will issue such orders as may be necessary for the discharge of the amount due.—Reg. XIX, 1825, sec. iv.

SUITS—BY INHABITANTS OF FOREIGN TERRITORIES.

288. Every person being an inhabitant of a foreign territory, who may desire to institute or defend an original suit, or to prosecute or defend an appeal in any civil court, shall be required to furnish security for all eventual costs of suit, which may be adjudged payable by such person, and shall furnish such security by a surety or sureties residing and possessing property within the limits of the Company's territory, and within the jurisdiction of the Company's court. Such security shall be furnished by a plaintiff or appellant within six weeks of the date on which his plaint or appeal is filed, and a defendant or respondent shall furnish it within six weeks of the date on which the usual summons is served on him; unless such security be so furnished, the suit of such person, if plaintiff, shall not be proceeded in, if defendant or respondent, he shall not be allowed to defend his suit or appeal, but the cause shall be decided ex parte on the statements and proofs of his opponent. And no appeal shall be admitted from the party who may have failed to give the required security, until he shall first have made good the whole of the costs demandable from him in the lower court, and given the necessary security to cover the costs in appeal.—Reg. XIV, 1829, sec. ii, cl. 1.

289. The same rule shall be applicable, and the same mode of proceeding shall be observed, in the event of any person who may have instituted or defended any original suit, or prosecuted or defended an appeal in a civil court, becoming an inhabitant of a foreign territory, before a decree is passed on such suit or appeal, and failing to give the required security within six weeks of its being demanded by the court, and such demand the court is required to make immediately on the circumstance becoming known, even though no motion should be made to that effect.—Reg. XIV, 1829, sec. ii, cl. 2.

290. It is however provided, that nothing contained in the above provisions shall be considered applicable to pauper suitors. —Reg. XIV, 1829, sec. ii, cl. 3.

NOTE.—By Act III, 1845, it is provided that the taking security for costs in appeal shall be left to the discretion of courts; but that provision will probably not be considered applicable to the parties here referred to.

CASES IN FORMA PAUPERIS—SUITS.

291. No person shall be hereafter entitled to institute or defend any suit in formâ pauperis in any Civil Court of Judicature, unless the amount or value of the thing claimed shall exceed the sum of sixty-four rupees.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. iii.

292. No person shall be hereafter permitted to institute a suit as a pauper in any Civil Court of Judicature, if the claim shall be for damages on account of loss of caste, slander, abusive language, assaults, or personal injuries of any description; or if the claim shall be for the possession or recovery of deeds or papers, or for fines, forfeitures, or pecuniary penalties on account of any breach of the Regulations. Nor shall any person be entitled to institute any suit in formâ pauperis, in any Civil Court of Judicature, unless the court in which his petition may be presented shall, before granting such petition, be satisfied by the examination of the petitioner, or of his or her agents or witnesses (which examination shall be taken on oath, or solemn affirmation), that there is probable cause for instituting the suit.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. iv, and Act IX, 1839, sec. i.

293. Whenever a party may be desirous of instituting an original suit as a pauper in any civil court, he shall appear in person before such court, and shall present a petition. Provided, however, that if the party be a female of a rank and description which, according to the prejudices of the country, would render it improper to require her personal attendance in a court of justice, such petition may be presented by a mokhtar or agent duly authorised for that purpose.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. v. cl. 1.

294. The petition shall contain a general statement of the nature and grounds of the demand, of the value of the thing claimed, according to the provisions of Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829, of the name of the person or persons intended to be sued, and a schedule of the whole real or personal property belonging to the petitioner, with the estimated value of such property. —Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. v, cl. 2.

295. In all suits instituted in formâ pauperis the pleadings on the part of the defendant, as well as all papers filed on his part on which a stamp is required by Schedule (B.) of Regulation X, of 1829, may be written on unstamped paper, and copies of orders or proceedings which the defendant may be required to take shall be furnished to him on unstamped paper; provided always that on the conclusion of the suit, the court shall calculate the whole of the costs which would have been incurred by the defendant on account of stamp duties if the suit had not been instituted in formâ pauperis, and shall charge the same to the party cast, or to the parties respectively in such proportions as may be deemed reasonable.—Act IX, 1839, sec. ii.

296. The court in which the petition may be presented, or an authorised officer of the court, shall then proceed to take the examination of the petitioner, or if the petitioner be a female of the description mentioned in paragraph 293, the examination of her agent, with regard to the points above noticed, and shall question him particularly with respect to any real or personal property which the petitioner may have recently sold, mortgaged, transferred, or otherwise disposed of. Such examination shall be taken on oath, or on a solemn declaration in lieu thereof, under the provisions in force, in that behalf.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. v. cl. 3.

297. In taking the examination of the petitioner or agent in such cases, it shall be the duty of the court to admonish him that any wilful misrepresentation or falsehood, or the fraudulent concealment of any material fact regarding the property in the petitioner's possession, or the recent transfer of such property, will subject him to be tried for perjury, and, on conviction, to the punishment which is now or may be hereafter prescribed for that crime by the Regulations. The petitioner or agent shall subscribe his examination, which shall then be authenticated by the court in the usual manner.- Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. v, cl. 4.

298. If upon such examination it should appear to the court that the petitioner is possessed of property sufficient to defray the expenses of the suit, or that he has recently sold, mortgaged, or otherwise transferred any property with the view of being admitted to sue as a pauper, the court will at once refuse to admit his suit in that form, and will refer him to the general rules in force.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. v, cl. 5.

299. If there shall appear any grounds for suspecting that the petitioner is possessed of property, or has recently transferred any property beyond that which he may have acknowledged or stated in his petition and examination, the court may issue a notice to the adverse party, signifying that if such party shall appear within a reasonable period to be fixed by the court, he shall be permitted to show cause why the plaintiff should not be allowed to sue as a pauper. The court may also summon witnesses, or institute a local inquiry in the neighbourhood of the petitioner's residence, with the view of ascertaining whether the petitioner has recently transferred, or is possessed of any property beyond that stated in his examination.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. v, cl. 6.

300. If from the result of such inquiry, or at any subsequent period, it should be satisfactorily established that the petitioner or the agent of a female petitioner has been guilty of wilful perjury in his examination, the court will not only refuse the prayer of the petitioner (or nonsuit the plaintiff if the cause be depending), but will cause the person appearing to have been guilty of perjury to be committed to the Sessions Court to take his trial for such offence.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. v, cl. 7.

301. If none of the objections stated in paragraphs 298 and 300 should exist, and the petitioner should not appear to be possessed of sufficient property to enable him to defray the probable expenses of the suit, the court is empowered to admit him to sue as a pauper, on his finding two good and sufficient sureties, both of whom shall be householders, for his appearance whenever his attendance may be required by the court.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. vi, cl. 1.

302. When the required sureties shall have been furnished, if the pauper shall be unable to prevail on any of the vakeels of the court to undertake his suit, and he shall be unable to plead the cause in person, the court may require any of the authorized pleaders of the court to undertake and plead the suit.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. vii, cl. 1.

303. The courts are to state on the record of the trial their reasons for every exercise of the power vested in them by this section; and the order of the court, in such cases, shall be a sufficient warrant to the vakeel to plead in the suit without filing the usual vakalutnamah.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. vii, cl. 2.

304. The stamp duty which has been substituted for the institution fee by Regulation X, 1829, shall not be required from plaintiffs who may be admitted to sue as paupers under this Regulation. The notice to the defendant, the summons for witnesses, and other processes on the part of the plaintiff, shall be served through the chuprassies on the establishment of the courts without any expense to the plaintiff; and the copy of the decree, as well as copies of orders or proceedings which he may be required to take, shall be furnished to a pauper plaintiff on unstamped paper.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. viii.

305. If the pauper plaintiff shall gain his suit, the court will cause the defendant to make good the amount of the fees due to the pleader who may have been employed on account of the plaintiff, or such part of them as the court may decree.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. x, cl. 1.

306. If the plaintiff shall not establish his claim, and the court shall deem the suit to be unfounded, vexatious, or wilfully exaggerated, and the plaintiff shall not pay the amount of his own fees and the fees and costs which may be awarded against him in favour of the opposite party, the court is authorized to commit him to close custody in the civil gaol, without labour, for a period not exceeding six months.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xi, cl. 1.

307. Such order of confinement shall be carried into immediate execution, and shall not be suspended in consequence of the plaintiff's being desirous of appealing from the judgment. Provided, however, that the plaintiff shall at any time be entitled to his discharge from such confinement, on his paying into court the full amount of the costs and expenses awarded against him in the decree.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xi, cl. 2.

308. If the pauper plaintiff shall abscond, and his sureties shall not produce him before the court, and the order for his imprisonment cannot therefore be carried into effect, the said sureties shall be called upon to make good the full amount of the costs adjudged against the plaintiff. In the event of their refusing or failing to make good the costs, the court is authorized to commit them to close custody, without labour, in the civil gaol, for a period not exceeding six months, subject to the provision contained in the preceding paragraph.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xi, cl. 3.

309. The confinement of a pauper plaintiff, or of his sureties, under this section, shall not preclude the court from realizing the costs and expenses adjudged against a pauper plaintiff; but in all cases in which such plaintiff may fail to make good the costs and expenses to which he may be declared liable in the decree, whether those costs may be due to the defendant or to Government, the court shall endeavour to realize the amount by the sale of any property which may belong to the plaintiff, either at the time of the decree or subsequently thereto.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xi, cl. 4.

310. When a plaintiff may have been admitted by any civil court to institute his suit in formâ pauperis, under the rules for paupers contained in Regulation XXVIII, 1814, and the suit may, in other respects, be referrible to a sudder ameen, it shall be competent to the judge to refer the same for trial and decision by one of the sudder ameens attached to the Zillah or City Court, or stationed in any other part of his jurisdiction; and the suit so referred shall be proceeded upon by the sudder ameen as in other suits referred to him, subject to the provisions contained in Regulation XXVIII, 1814.—Reg. XIII, 1824, sec. iv, cl. 2.

311. The provisions in the Regulation above mentioned respecting pauper defendants in original suits, as well as those respecting pauper appellants and respondents in appealed cases, shall likewise be considered applicable to defendants in original suits before sudder ameens; but no person shall be admitted by a sudder ameen to prosecute or defend an original suit or appeal in formâ pauperis, without the written order of the zillah or city judge, authorizing the admission of the party as a pauper under the provisions of Regulation XXVIII, 1814.—Reg. XIII, 1824, sec. iv, cl. 3.

312. The judges who are empowered by paragraphs 293 to 300 to employ an authorized officer of the court in taking the examinations of parties and witnesses for the purposes therein specified, may however employ the sudder ameens attached to their respective courts, in taking such examinations and generally in making the inquiries provided for by that Regulation. But no final order for the admission of a pauper shall be passed by a sudder ameen, nor shall the commitment of pauper plaintiffs to close custody, in pursuance of paragraphs 306 to 368, be carried into execution by a sudder ameen, without the sanction of the judge.—Reg. XIII, 1824, sec iv, cl. 4.

CASES IN FORMA PAUPERIS.—APPEALS.

313. If any party to an original suit may be desirous of appealing in formâ pauperis from the decision passed in such suit, he shall present a petition to the court by which his appeal may be regularly cognizable under the Regulations.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 1.

314. Such petition shall be accompanied by an authenticated copy of the decree, and shall contain a schedule of the whole real or personal property belonging to the petitioner, and the estimated value of such property, together with a statement of the specific grounds on which the petitioner may desire to prefer an appeal.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 2.

315. If upon a perusal of the petition and a copy of the decree, the original judgment shall not appear to the court to be erroneous or unjust, or if the nature of the cause shall not appear to be of sufficient importance to merit a further investigation in appeal, the court will reject the petition, and will refuse to admit the petitioner to sue in appeal as a pauper.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 3.

316. Provided, however, that the petitioner shall nevertheless be entitled to institute his appeal, on performing the conditions of appeal prescribed by the Regulations for persons not suing as paupers.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 4.

317. If upon a perusal of a petition presented under the preceding rules, and of the copy of the decree accompanying it, the court shall be of opinion that there is reason to believe the judgment to be erroneous or unjust, or that the nature of the cause renders it deserving of a further investigation in appeal, the court is empowered to admit the appeal, subject to the rules and conditions prescribed in paragraphs 293 to 301. Paragraphs 302 to 309 shall also be considered applicable to persons who may be admitted to appeal in formâ pauperis.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xiii.

318. If a decision be passed in any original suit in favour of a pauper plaintiff, and the adverse party shall appeal from such decision, the principles of the rules contained in paragraphs 303 to 305 shall, without any further inquiry, be considered applicable to the respondent or original pauper plaintiff in such appealed suit, provided that the execution of the original decree shall have been suspended during the appeal.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xiv.

319. If a decision in favour of a pauper plaintiff be reversed in appeal, the amount of the stamp duty substituted for the institution fee which may have been paid by the appellant shall be returned to him by the court, together with such portion of the deposit which may have been made by him on account of the fee payable to his vakeel, as may be deemed reasonable, and the amount of such stamp duty and deposit, as well as other costs and expenses which may be awarded in the decree against the respondent, shall be recovered from any property which the respondent may at any time be found to possess.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xv.

320. If a defendant or respondent in any suit (except in the case provided for by paragraph 318) shall be desirous of being admitted to plead in formâ pauperis, he shall appear, either in person or by an authorized agent, before the court in which the suit may be depending, and shall present a petition containing an exact schedule of the whole real or personal property belonging to him, and theestimated value of such property.—Reg XXVIII, 1814, sec xvi, cl 1.

321 The court to whom such petition may be presented shall then proceed in conformity with paragraphs 296 to 300—Reg XXVIII, 1814, sec. xvi, cl 2.

322 If, after the examination and inquiries prescribed in those paragraphs, the court shall be satisfied that the petitioner is not possessed of sufficient property to defray the probable expenses of the suit, and that he can neither plead the suit in person nor prevail on any of the authorised pleaders of the court to undertake the defence of the suit, the court is empowered to grant to the petitioner the same advantages and facilities in the defence of the suit as are allowed to pauper plaintiffs and appellants, under paragraphs 302 to 305, and no security except for personal appearance shall be required from such defendant or respondent.—Reg XXVIII, 1814, sec. xvi, cl. 3.

323 The rules contained in Regulation XXVIII, 1814, are intended to apply to regular suits and appeals only, and not to summary suits or summary appeals of any description, but the provisions in that Regulation respecting appeals in forma pauperis from decisions passed in original suits, shall be considered applicable to any second or special appeals which may be preferred in forma pauperis, and which may be deemed admissible under the rules in force in respect of special appeals Reg XXVIII, 1814, sec. xvii; Reg. II, 1825, sec. v.

324. Copies of the proceedings and judgments of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in appeal to the Queen in Council shall be furnished without expense to paupers who may be parties in such appeals, and shall be written on unstamped paper of European manufacture—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec xviii.

325 The proviso contained in paragraph 293, in regard to females of rank, shall be applicable, at the discretion of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal respectively, to any party desirous of appealing in formâ pauperis to either of those courts—Act XIX, 1840

CIVIL JUDICATURE.

PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF APPEALS.

---

APPEALS—REGULAR.

FROM AND TO WHAT JURISDICTION.

1. An appeal shall lie to the zillah or city judges from all decisions which may be passed on the trial of original suits by the moonsiffs and sudder ameens; and the decisions thereupon shall be final except on special appeals under Act XVI, 1853.—Reg. XXIV, 1814, sec. vi, cl. 2; Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxviii, cl. 1; Act XVI, 1853, sec. iv.

2. In all suits originally decided by the principal sudder ameens, the amount or value of which may not exceed 5,000 rupees, and in respect of all interlocutory orders passed by them in such suits, an appeal shall lie to the zillah or city judge, and a further or special appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; but in all suits exceeding the above amount or value, and in respect of all interlocutory orders in such suits, the appeal from the decision of such principal sudder ameen shall be direct to the court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and shall be conducted in all respects and according to the same rules as if it were an appeal from the decision or interlocutory orders of a zillah judge to the said court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxviii, cl. 2; Act XXV, 1837, sec. iv; Act VI, 1843, sec. ii.

3. Whenever a zillah or city judge shall have referred for trial to a principal sudder ameen a suit within the competency of a moonsiff to decide, and such suit shall have been decided by a principal sudder ameen, the appeal from such decision shall lie to the zillah or city judge, and shall be tried by him only, and the decision of the zillah or city judge on such appeal shall be final, anything in the existing Regulations to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act XXV, 1837, secs. v and vi.

4. In all suits originally decided by the zillah or city judge, an appeal shall lie to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxviii, cl. 3.

TIME FOR PREFERRING.

5. In all cases in which an appeal from the orders or decision of a principal sudder ameen, sudder ameen or moonsiff, to a zillah or city judge is authorised by law, such appeal shall not be received, unless the same be preferred within the period of thirty days from the date of the order or decision of the said principal sudder ameen, sudder ameen or moonsiff, to be calculated according to the rules prescribed in paragraph 18, or unless it shall be proved that the appellant was prevented by circumstances beyond his control from presenting his appeal within the above-mentioned period.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. ii, cl. 3; Act XXV, 1837, sec. ix.

6. It is hereby declared that the foregoing limitations shall be strictly adhered to, notwithstanding the intervention of Hindoo or Mussulman holidays, or the established vacations, within the prescribed periods for preferring appeals. When such periods, however, may expire during an adjournment of the court, on account of any holiday or vacation, no default shall attach to the appellant, provided his petition of appeal be presented immediately on the re-opening of the court —Reg. VII, 1832, sec. ii, cl. 4.

7. Any person dissatisfied with the decision of a moonsiff or a sudder ameen, shall be at liberty to appeal from it to the judge, provided the petition of appeal be presented within thirty days after the date on which copies of the decrees may have been furnished or tendered to the parties or to their vakeels. A discretionary power, however, is vested in the judge of admitting appeals from decisions of the moonsiffs and sudder ameens, although the petitions may not be presented within the prescribed period, if the appellant shall show satisfactory cause for not having before presented the petition.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xlvi. cl. 1, and sec. lxxiii.

GENERAL RULES.

8. All petitions of appeal from decisions of the moonsiffs and sudder ameens are to be presented to the judge of the zillah or city in which the moonsiffs or sudder ameens may officiate, and those officers are prohibited from receiving any petitions of appeal from their own decisions.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xlvi, cl. 2, and sec. lxxiii.

9. All petitions of appeal from decisions of moonsiffs and sudder ameens are to be presented by the appellant in person, or by one of the authorised vakeels of the court; and if the appeal shall be admitted, and the appellant and respondent shall not plead their cause in person, their respective vakeels are to be allowed the same fees as in other suits tried before the judge.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xlvi, cl. 3, and sec. lxxiii.

10. Decisions of the moonsiffs and sudder ameens are not to be set aside for want of form or for irregularity in their proceedings, but on the merits only.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xlvi, cl. 4, and sec. lxxiii.

11. When an appeal may be received from the decision of a moonsiff or a sudder ameen, the judge is empowered to suspend the execution of the decree, provided the party appealing against it shall give good and sufficient security within a reasonable period to be fixed by the judge, to perform the decree of the court.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. xlvi, cl. 5, and sec. lxxiii.

12. Any party who may be desirous of appealing from a judgment passed against him by a principal sudder ameen, which may be appealable to the Zillah Court shall be at liberty to present his petition of appeal, without an authenticated copy of the decree to the court in which the decision may have been passed. Such petition of appeal shall not be required to contain the specific grounds or reasons of the appeal, but may state shortly that the party being dissatisfied with the judgment is desirous of appealing from it. The petition must be written on stamped paper, according to the rates and provisions contained in No. 8, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. viii, cl. 2.

NOTE.—The option of presenting the petition of appeal in the court of original jurisdiction, or in the court appealed to, is left to the principal sudder ameen only, as representative of the register, in suits appealable from that officer to the Zillah Court. Petitions of appeal from the sudder ameens and moonsiffs must be presented in the Zillah Court, and those to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in the court appealed from.

13. The principal sudder ameen, after referring to the decree in the original record of the suit, shall then admit the appeal; provided that the petition of appeal shall have been duly presented in the mode above prescribed, within the periods limited for the admission of such appeals under the existing Regulations.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. viii, cl. 3.

14. The specific objections to the judgments and detailed grounds and reasons for preferring the appeal may be stated at the option of the party in the original petition of appeal, or may be subsequently filed in the court trying the appeal as a separate pleading. In the latter case, such pleading is to be written on the stamped paper, and according to the rates prescribed for other pleadings in No. 9, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. viii, cl. 5.

15. Under the preceding rules, parties in suits decided in the first instance in the court of a principal sudder ameen, and appealable to the Zillah Court, will be enabled to prefer an appeal from such decision without the necessity of filing an authenticated copy of the decree; but if any party in a suit which may be so appealable to a Zillah Court may be desirous, under the option allowed by the Regulations, of presenting his petition of appeal in the court by which the appeal is to be tried, rather than in the court by which the decision may have been passed in the first instance, it shall be requisite for such party to file with his petition of appeal an authenticated copy of the decree.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. viii, cl. 7.

16. For the purpose of obtaining an authenticated copy of the decree, the party desiring it shall furnish to the court by whom the decision may have been passed, one, two, or more sheets or rolls of the stamped paper prescribed in No. 2, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829, as may be necessary for transcribing the decree.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. viii, cl. 8.

17. When such stamped paper shall be furnished, the court shall cause to be endorsed on it the date of its being furnished, the name of the party on whose account it may be presented, and the number of the suit to which it may be intended to be applicable, and shall grant to the party a corresponding receipt for the same on unstamped paper; the copy of the decree shall then be prepared and duly authenticated, and shall be delivered or tendered to the party by whom the stamped paper may have been furnished, or to his vakeel in open court, and the date of the delivery or tender of such copy shall be also endorsed on the copy.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. viii, cl. 9.

18. The respective periods limited by the Regulations for the admission of appeals shall be calculated from the date on which the decision may have been passed; excluding from the calculations of such period the interval which may have elapsed, in each instance, between the date on which the requisite stamped paper may have been furnished by the party to the court, and that on which the copy of the decree may have been tendered or delivered to the party in open court, in the mode prescribed by the Regulations. The courts will, in all cases, be enabled to ascertain such interval by the endorsements on the copy of the decree required to be made under the preceding paragraph.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. viii, cl. 10.

19. The principles of the rules contained in paragraphs 16 to 18, are to be considered applicable to all copies of decrees from which a party may be desirous of preferring a special or a summary appeal; and to all copies of orders passed by the judges of the Zillah and City Courts, and by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which those courts may be required to furnish to parties under the provision of any Regulation.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. viii, cl. 11.

20. Whenever a court of appeal shall admit an appeal which may have been preferred to them after the limited time, they are to enter on the record of the trial their reasons at large for admitting the appeal.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xii; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. x.

21. In the hearing, trying, and deciding of regular appeals, the zillah judges, and the principal sudder ameens when appeals are referred to them by the zillah judges, are to be guided generally by the same rules as are prescribed to the courts of original jurisdiction in respect of original suits.—Adapted from Reg. V. 1793, sec. xi; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. vii; Reg. V, 1831, sec. xviii, cl. 4.

22. In appeals which may be preferred to the courts of appeal, no proceedings are to be held, or any acts whatever done, either on behalf of the appellants or respondents, except by the appellants or respondents themselves, or by a vakeel admitted to plead in the court under Act I, 1846; nor by any vakeel before his vakalutnamah shall have been filed in the court; and no persons, excepting such parties or their witnesses, or such vakeels, shall be heard, viâ voce, in any stage in the cause.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xxii, and Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xx.

23. In all regular appeals the petition is to state (respect being had to the matter decreed) the annual produce of the lands, whether lakhiraj or malguzary, the sum of money or the value of the property which may be decreed, the name of the person in whose favour the decree may be given, the court in which it may have been passed, when it was made, what was decreed by it, and whether the decree has been executed.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xii; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. x.

24. The pleadings in appealed suits shall be conducted and filed in the same manner and under the same rules as pleadings in original suits subject to the following modifications.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. ix, cl. 1.

NOTE.—Act XV, 1853, having repealed Act IV, 1850, and secs. ii, iii, and iv of Act XXX, 1850, which related to appeals to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the following provisions seem to be still applicable to appeals from the lower courts to the Zillah Courts, which stand in the same relation to those courts as the Provincial Courts did to the Zillah Courts under Reg. V, 1793. The following provisions are therefore retained as applicable in appeals to the Zillah Courts

25. In all regular civil suits which may be appealed to a Zillah or City Court, or to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, it shall be left to the option of the respondent either to file an answer to the petition and reasons of appeal, or not, as he may judge proper: Provided, however, that if no answer shall be filed by a respondent, it shall be competent to the court trying the appeal, in all cases in which it may be deemed expedient, to direct the respondent to file an answer to the petition of appeal, or to any particular points in it which may appear to require an answer or explanation.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. ix, cl. 2.

26. No further pleadings beyond the answer of the respondent shall be admitted in any appealed suits, except the duplicate of the plaint provided for by clause 1, section vii, Regulation XXVI, 1814 ("PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraph 19), or such supplemental pleadings as may be authorised by the court under the provisions of clause 3, section vi, of that Regulation ("PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraph 18).—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. ix, cl. 3.

27. Fifteen days after the receipt of the appeal, the court from which the appeal may have been preferred, is to certify, under the hand of the judge and the seal of the court to the court to whom the appeal has been preferred the record duly made up and authenticated, including the original pleadings, depositions, &c., exhibits filed in the case with a list of them; it shall not be necessary, in the first instance, to transmit the applications and processes for the attendance of witnesses, the returns of the nazir, and other miscellaneous papers and proceedings not material to the trial of the appeal: Provided, however, that it shall at all times be competent to the court to which the appeal shall have been made, to call for such miscellaneous papers, or to direct the parties to produce copies of the same, should the court think it necessary to refer to them. Previous to transmitting the above-mentioned papers, the judge of the court from which the appeal has been preferred, is to cause true and faithful copies of all the originals to be made out and deposited in his court in lieu of the originals. The copies are to be deemed records of the court, and are to be received in evidence in any other court. In cases where any original deposition, or other original proceedings or matter whatsoever, shall have been previously entered in the court, in any book which may likewise contain either proceedings in other distinct causes, or any other matter, so that such original papers cannot be transmitted to the court appealed to without the other proceedings or matters, the judge of the court appealed from in the manner before directed, is to certify a true and authentic copy of such original papers, and that the original of each copy transmitted is so entered in such book. But he is, nevertheless, to transmit the original pleadings of the parties, and the original exhibits which shall have been delivered in or produced by the parties, and read in the course of the cause before the court, if they be forthcoming, in the manner before required. In cases where any original paper shall have been mislaid or lost, and a copy of it shall have been entered in any book of proceedings, the copy is to be deemed the original, and the judge is to transmit a copy of it to the court appealed to, and in like manner to certify it, and that the original, after due search, cannot be found.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xiii; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xi; Reg. IX, 1831, sec. viii.

28. The courts of appeal shall be guided by the provisions of Act XIX, 1853 ("PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS" paragraphs 24 to 67), in respect of the attendance and examination of witnesses, and all matters to which that Act relates.—Adapted from Act XIX, 1853.

29. The petition of appeal, pleadings, depositions, and exhibits in the courts of appeal, are to be numbered, marked, dated, and signed in the same manner as the complaint, pleadings, depositions, and exhibits are ordered to be numbered, marked, dated and signed in the courts of original jurisdiction. The decrees are to be signed by the judges, and attested, and copies so signed and attested are to be delivered to the parties.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xxix; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xxviii.

30. In cases for which no specific rules may exist, the courts of appeal are to act according to justice, equity, and good conscience.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xxxii; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xxxi.

31. Whenever an appeal shall be preferred to a zillah or city judge from the decision of any moonsiff, sudder ameen, or principal sudder ameen, and whenever any such appeal may be referred by a zillah judge to a principal sudder ameen under the provisions of paragraph 34, it shall not be necessary to serve any process on the respondent in the first instance; and if, after the perusal of the record of the original suit and the petition of appeal in the presence of the appellant or his vakeel, the judge or principal sudder ameen shall see no reason to alter the decision appealed from, it shall be competent to him to confirm the same, and to communicate the order for confirmation through the court from whose judgment the appeal was made to the respondent, with a view to enable such respondent to take immediate measures for the execution of the decree.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xvi, cl. 3; Act VIII, 1850, sec. i.

32. Every judge and principal sudder ameen who shall confirm any decision under the preceding rules without giving notice to the respondent, shall record his reasons for rejecting the appeal.—Act VIII, 1850, sec. ii.

33. The courts of appeal are empowered in cases of appeals, in which it shall appear to them that the original suit has not been sufficiently investigated in the lower court, or for any other cause that may be deemed reasonable by the court of appeal, either to receive such further evidence as they may think necessary for the just determination of the suit, and to give judgment upon it, or to refer the suit back to the court in which it originated, accompanied by such special directions to the judge with regard to the new evidence he is to receive respecting it, as may be deemed by the court most conducive to justice and the convenience of the parties and witnesses. But in every case in which the court of appeal may exercise the power above vested in them by this paragraph, they are to enter upon the record of the trial their reasons for having exercised it. In cases in which the court may judge it proper to receive such further evidence themselves, they are empowered to examine the witnesses to be produced, vivâ voce, in open court, in conformity with the rules in that behalf contained in Act XIX, 1853.—Reg. V. 1793, sec. xviii; Reg, VI, 1793, sec. xvi.

34. It shall not be competent to a zillah or city judge to refer any appeal for trial to a sudder ameen, but whenever it may appear to any such zillah or city judge that his file is so heavy as to make it impracticable for him to dispose of all the appeals which may be pending with reasonable despatch, he shall make a special report of the case to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, soliciting permission of that authority to refer such specified number of appeals from the decisions of moonsiffs or sudder ameens, as he may deem necessary for trial, to the principal sudder ameen attached to his court, in which case it shall be competent to the court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to comply with the application for the transfer.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xvi, cl. 2.

35. In the trial of any appeal or on the hearing of any petition of appeal from any decision or order of any court of inferior jurisdiction if a single judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or a zillah or city judge, or a principal sudder ameen to whom such appeal has been referred by a zillah or city judge, shall be of opinion that no sufficient ground has been shown to impugn the correctness or justness of such decision or order, it shall be competent to such judge, without reference to the order of the file, to confirm the same without the attendance of the opposite party, and with or without a revision of the whole proceedings, as the nature of the case may appear to require. On the other hand, if a single judge shall be of opinion that the decision or order appealed against ought to be altered or reversed as being manifestly unjust or at variance with some Regulation in full force, or in opposition to the Hindoo or Mahomedan law, or other law applicable to the case, or as having been passed without sufficient investigation of the merits, or as grounded on an assumption obviously erroneous or irrelevant with reference to the points at issue, it shall be competent to such single judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, zillah judge, or principal sudder ameen, to issue an injunction pointing out the irregularity, illegality, or other defect apparent in the proceedings, decision, or order appealed against, and requiring that the court by which the same may have been held or passed shall revise the case, and proceed thereon in such manner as may appear conformable to justice and to the Regulations.—Reg. IX, 1831, sec. ii, cl. 2; Act VII, 1838; Act XXVI, 1852, sec. ix.

36. No order or decision of any of the civil courts of the East India Company shall be reversed, altered, or remanded on account of any error, defect, or irregularity, not productive of injury to either party.—Act IX, 1854.

37. To prevent the encouragement of litigious appeals, the lower courts of appeal, in all cases wherein they may confirm the decree of a lower court, are to adjudge interest, at the rate of one per cent. per mensem, on all sums receivable by the respondent under the decree passed in his favour, from the date of such decree, and are authorised to punish appeals which may appear to them litigious by a fine to Government, proportionate to the condition of the party and the circumstances of the case.—Reg. XIII, 1796, sec. iii.

38. Decrees passed in the courts of the judges or principal sudder ameens, in cases of appeal from the decisions of the sudder ameens or moonsiffs, shall be executed by the courts in which the original decisions were passed, under the general rules prescribed for the execution of decrees passed by those courts—applications for the execution of such decrees shall be presented, together with a certified copy of the decree of the judge or principal sudder ameen, to the court of original jurisdiction. In appeals from the orders of the moonsiff or sudder ameen in such cases the decision of the zillah or city judge shall be final.—Act VI, 1843, sec. v.

CONSEQUENCES OF NON-PROSECUTION AND DEFAULT.

39. If a plaintiff or appellant in any court shall at any time neglect to proceed in his suit or appeal for six weeks, the suit or appeal shall be dismissed; and it shall not be necessary to give the plaintiff or appellant any notice previous to dismissing his suit or appeal. The suit or appeal shall be dismissed as of course after the expiration of six weeks, without any proceeding on the part of the court, or of the defendant, or otherwise, or assignment of any reasons, unless the plaintiff or appellant, or his representative in case of his death, upon special application, shall have previously satisfied the court of the propriety of allowing further time. The court shall record upon the proceedings the reasons at large for allowing further time in all cases in which further time may be allowed; but it shall not be necessary to specify the reasons for refusing any application for further time.—Act XXIX, 1841, sec. i.

40. In all cases in which a suit or appeal is dismissed under the preceding paragraph, the court shall award to the defendant or respondent the costs he may have incurred in the suit or appeal. But such dismissal shall be no impediment to the institution of a new suit or appeal, where the party is not precluded by lapse of time, or period of appeal or otherwise than by the mere circumstance of having instituted the suit or appeal dismissed, and of such dismissal; and such dismissed suit or appeal shall not prevent lapse of time under the law of limitations being incurred. —Act XXIX, 1841, sec. ii.

41. No appeal shall lie against the decision passed in accordance with the provisions of the preceding paragraphs, other than a summary appeal on the part of default.—Act XXIX, 1841, sec. iii.

42. Whenever an appeal in any civil courts shall have been dismissed under the provisions of Act XXIX, of 1841 (paragraphs 39 to 41), it shall be competent to the court which shall have dismissed such appeal to re-admit the same if the appellant shall make application for that purpose on the stamp prescribed for miscellaneous petitions, within three months after the appeal shall have been dismissed, if dismissed by the Sudder Court, and within one month after the appeal shall have been dismissed, if dismissed by any other court, and shall satisfy the court that the dismissal was occasioned by the default of his vakeel or by unavoidable accident.—Act XVI, 1845, sec. i.

43. Provided always that no appeal which has been re-admitted under this Act, and again dismissed under the provisions of Act XXIX, of 1841, shall be again re-admitted.—Act. XVI, 1845, sec. iii.

44. In any civil court, every default of a plaintiff or appellant, in all suits or appeals, and in all suits open to appeal, shall be held to be cured whenever the opposite party, passing over the default, shall have taken any step in the suit or appeal, and whenever the court shall have passed judgment in the suit or appeal, whether such opposite party shall or shall not have taken any such step.—Act XVII, 1847.

SUDDER DEWANNY ADAWLUT.

GENERAL POWERS.

45. No person whatever shall, by reason of place of birth, or by reason of descent, be, in any civil proceeding whatever, exempted from the jurisdiction of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Act XI, 1836, sec. ii.

VI, 1793, sec. ix, cl. 3.

50. Every petition of regular appeal in a case appealable to either of the Sudder Courts shall be presented to the court in which the decision was passed within six weeks from the day of the decision. Such petition of appeal shall, except in cases of petitions under paragraphs 74 to 82, contain only notice that the party, being dissatisfied with the decision, is desirous of appealing from it.—Act XV, 1853, sec. ii, cl. 1.

51. The Sudder Court may extend the time for presenting such petition of appeal to the lower court upon being satisfied that there is sufficient cause for such extension of time. The application for such extension of time may be made directly to the Sudder Court, or through the intervention of the lower court, at the option of the applicant.—Act XV, 1853, sec. ii, cl. 2.

52. On presentation of a petition of regular appeal to the court in which the decision was passed, notice thereof to the respondent, as well as a proclamation to the same effect, shall immediately issue from that court; and a copy of the proclamation shall be forthwith fixed up in some conspicuous part of the court-house of the said court. If the notice cannot be personally served, the proclamation shall at once be fixed upon the door of the respondent's dwelling-house, or in some conspicuous place in the village or place where he usually resides; or in cases in which the respondent shall not have a fixed residence within the jurisdiction of the Company's courts, the proclamation may be fixed upon the door of his house of business or cutcherry, or the notice may be served on his known local agent. In case the proclamation cannot be fixed or the notice served in the manner above mentioned, the proclamation shall be fixed up in such other place, if any, as the said last-mentioned court shall direct. The nazir shall make a return to the court stating when and where the notice and proclamation have been served or fixed up. The return of the nazir shall be filed in court, and shall form part of the record of the case, and such return shall be published by fixing up the same in some conspicuous part of the court-house of the lower court.—Act XV, 1853, sec. iii.

53. It shall be necessary to copy, authenticate, and deposit only the exhibits in the case, and also any other papers of importance, including the pleadings, or any parts of them which either of the parties shall require to be copied, authenticated, and deposited in the lower court previously to their being transmitted to the Sudder Court.—Act XV, 1853, sec. iv, cl. 1.

54. If either of the parties require any papers to be copied, authenticated, and deposited, such party shall, either by himself or his pleader or authorized agent, give notice in writing thereof to the lower court before the expiration of fourteen days from the time of the publication of the return of the nazir as aforesaid. Such notice shall specify the papers which the party requires to be copied, authenticated, and deposited.—Act XV, 1853, sec. iv, cl. 2.

55. Either party may by himself or his pleader or authorized agent before the presentation of an appeal, give notice in writing to the lower court, specifying any papers or documents which he requires to be copied, authenticated, and deposited in the event of an appeal being preferred.—Act XV, 1853, sec. iv, cl. 3.

56. The petition of appeal, together with the record of the lower court, shall be certified to the Sudder Court as soon as conveniently may be after the presentation of the petition of appeal: provided that the same shall not be certified within the time allowed to the parties for specifying the papers which they desire to be copied, authenticated, and deposited.—Act XV, 1853, sec. v.

57. On arrival of the appeal record at the Sudder Court, notice shall be affixed in the court-house of the said court, requiring the appellant to file, within six weeks from the date thereof, his grounds of objection to the decision of the court below. Within the said space of six weeks the appellant shall file in the said Sudder Court his grounds of objection to the decision.—Act XV, 1853, sec. vi.

58. On the filing of the grounds of objection by the appellant, notice shall be affixed in the court-house of the Sudder Court requiring the respondent to file his grounds of objection, if any, to the appeal or to the decision of the lower court within four weeks from the date of such notice.—Act XV, 1853, sec. vii, cl. 1.

59. Within the said space of four weeks, the respondent shall file any grounds of objection which he has to the appeal, or which relate to such parts of the decision as are involved in the appeal.—Act XV, 1853, sec. vii, cl. 2.

60. If the respondent shall desire to object to any part of the decision of the lower court not involved in the appeal, he may present a separate petition of appeal to the Sudder Court within the said space of four weeks, or within such further time as the said Sudder Court shall allow for that purpose.—Act XV, 1853, sec. vii, cl. 3.

61. The respondent shall in such case file with his petition of appeal his grounds of objection to that part of the decision to which his appeal relates, otherwise his appeal shall not be received.—Act XV, 1853, sec. vii, cl. 4.

62. At the expiration of the time allowed to the respondent for filing his grounds of objection and for filing a separate petition of appeal in the Sudder Court, the record shall be deemed complete, and the case ready to be called up for decision on any day which the Sudder Court may notify, unless the respondent within such time file a separate petition of appeal in the Sudder Court.—Act XV, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 1.

63. If the respondent file a separate petition of appeal in the Sudder Court, notice shall be fixed up in the court-house of the Sudder Court to the effect that the respondent has filed such separate appeal, and the notice shall require the appellant to file any grounds of objection which he may have thereto, within the space of four weeks from the date of the notice.—Act XV, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 2.

64. Within such space of four weeks the appellant may file any grounds of objection which he has to such appeal, or which relate to that part of the decision which is involved in the respondent's appeal. At the expiration of the time allowed for filing such grounds of objection by the appellant, the record shall be deemed complete, and the case ready to be called up for decision on any day which the Sudder Court shall notify for that purpose.—Act XV, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 3.

65. If the appeal of either party be dismissed or withdrawn, the appeal of the other may be heard alone; otherwise the two appeals and the proceedings thereon shall form one record, unless the Sudder Court shall otherwise order.—Act XV, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 4.

66. The respondent shall not be allowed to present a separate petition of appeal in the Sudder Court, if he shall previously have presented a petition of appeal to the lower court.—Act XV, 1853, sec. ix.

67. All grounds of objection which shall be filed by either the appellant or the respondent, shall be stated distinctly and concisely without any argument or narrative of facts, and shall be numbered consecutively, and except in the cases hereinafter mentioned, shall be on paper bearing the stamp duty prescribed by Article 9, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829.—Act XV, 1853, sec. x, cl. 1.

68. The Sudder Court may extend the time for filing grounds of objection either by an appellant or respondent upon special application for that purpose, and upon sufficient reasons being shown to the satisfaction of the said court for such extension of time. In such case the objections may be filed within such extended time.—Act XV, 1853, sec. x, cl. 2.

69. Either party may, by leave of the Sudder Court, or any judge thereof, at any time before the hearing, amend his grounds of objection, or add grounds of objection to those filed, upon such terms and conditions, and within such time as the said court or judge may order. The said court may also, upon the hearing of any appeal, allow either party to amend his grounds of objection, or to add further grounds, or to urge and be heard by himself or his pleader in support of any objection not included in his grounds of objection, upon such terms and conditions as to postponement of the cause, and as to the payment of costs or otherwise, as the court shall think just, to prevent the opposite party or his pleader from being taken by surprise or otherwise. Without such leave of the court, neither party shall be allowed to urge or be heard in support of any objection not included in his grounds of objection filed. But the court shall not be confined to such grounds of objection on deciding the cause.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xi.

70. The Sudder Court may call up for hearing and decision on any day the court shall notify, and without regard to the place in which the case stands in the general list of appeals, any grounds of objection filed by the respondent or the appellant to the appeal of the opposite party, and the Sudder Court may hear and decide upon such grounds of objection before calling the case up for decision upon the grounds of objection to the decision of the lower court.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xii, cl. 1.

71. If the grounds of objection filed by the appellant and respondent, shall be upon points of law only, and shall not raise any question of fact, the Sudder Court may order the case to be called up for hearing and decision on any day which the said court shall notify, without regard to the place in which it stands in the general list of appeals pending in the said court.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xii, cl. 2.

72. If the grounds of objection filed shall raise questions of law and fact, and it shall appear to the Sudder Court that the decision of the law may render it unnecessary to determine any question of fact so raised, the court may order the case to be called up for decision upon the law alone, in the first instance, in the manner pointed out in paragraph 69, and if their decision of the case upon the law shall render it unnecessary to determine any question of fact, the said court shall pass a final decision in the case, otherwise the court shall determine the law only, and the case shall be afterwards set down in the list of regular appeals for hearing upon the question or questions of fact, and shall be determined in the same manner as any other regular appeal.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xii, cl. 3.

73. If any party to a regular suit be desirous of being admitted to appeal in formâ pauperis to the Sudder Court, the following procedure shall be adopted.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 1.

74. The appellant shall present his petition to the lower court according to the rules prescribed by paragraphs 50 and 51. Provided that a petition to appeal in formâ pauperis against any decision passed before this Act shall come into operation, may be presented within three months from the day of the decision.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 1.

75. Petitions of appeal by parties desirous to appeal in formâ pauperis shall contain a statement to that effect, and also a schedule of the whole real and personal property belonging to the petitioner, and the estimated value of such property, and shall be written on paper bearing the stamp duty of two rupees per sheet.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 2.

76. Upon the presentation of such petition, the notice to the respondent and the proclamation shall state that the appellant desires to appeal in formâ pauperis.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 3.

77. On arrival of the appeal record at the Sudder Court, the same procedure shall be adopted in that court as in other cases of regular appeal, except that after the filing of the grounds of objection by the appellant, and before notice shall be given requiring the respondent to file his grounds of objection, the Sudder Court shall determine, according to the rules now applicable to the determination of such cases, whether or not the appellant shall be allowed to appeal in formâ pauperis.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 4.

78. If the Sudder Court allow the petitioner to appeal in formâ pauperis, notice shall be given to the respondent to file his grounds of objection in the manner provided by paragraphs 58 to 61, and the same procedure shall be adopted subsequently thereto as in other cases of regular appeal under this Act. The rules and conditions now applicable to persons admitted by the Sudder Court to appeal in formâ pauperis shall continue in force except where the same are inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 5.

79. If the Sudder Court refuse to allow the petitioner to appeal in formâ pauperis, the said court may make an order to the effect that the appellant upon filing a petition of appeal in that court, upon paper stamped with the stamp duty required by Article 8, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829, and upon re-filing his grounds of objection on paper stamped with the stamp duty required by Article 9, of the same schedule, may proceed with the appeal according to the rules prescribed by this Act in the case of persons not appealing as paupers.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 6.

80. Upon such order being made, the appellant shall file his petition and re-file his objections upon paper stamped with the stamp duty required by paragraph 78, within two weeks from the date of such order, or within such further time as the said court may allow for that purpose, otherwise the appeal shall stand dismissed.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 7.

81. Upon the re-filing of the grounds of objection according to the provisions of the last preceding paragraph, notice of the order and of the re-filing of such objections shall be given to the respondent in the manner prescribed by paragraphs 58 to 61, and the respondent shall be required to file his grounds of objection, if any, according to the provisions of those paragraphs, The procedure subsequent to such notice shall be according to the general provisions of this Act.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii. cl. 8.

82. If an appellant shall petition to appeal in formâ pauperis, his grounds of objection may be written on plain paper.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiii, cl. 9.

83. If an appellant shall be permitted to appeal or a respondent to defend in formâ pauperis, all grounds of objection subsequently filed by either party may be written on plain paper.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xiv.

84. No decision shall be reversed or altered, nor shall any case be remanded upon appeal to the Sudder Court on account of any error, defect, or irregularity not productive of injury to either party, nor opposed to any express enactment contained in the general Regulations or Acts of Government.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xv.

NOTE.—The foregoing rules from paragraphs 73 to 84 affect the provisions of paragraphs 313 to 325, in Procedure on Pauper Appeals, pages 55 and 56; but in respect only of Procedure in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

85. This Act extends only to regular appeals which shall be presented after the passing of this Act in civil cases appealable to either of the Sudder Courts in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal.—Act XV, 1853, sec. xvi.

86. How to proceed on a difference of opinion arising between the judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. II, 1801, secs. vi and xiii; Reg. XXV, 1814, sec. xviii; Reg. VI, 1831, sec. vii; and Reg. IX, 1831, secs. ix and x. (See "SUDDER COURT.")

87. It shall be lawful for each of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to direct, by an order authenticated by the official signature of the register of such Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that the cognizance of any original suit, or of any appeal which may be brought before any Zillah or City Court subordinate to such Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, shall be transferred to any other Zillah or City Court subordinate to the same Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Act III, 1837, sec. i.

88. Provided always, that whenever either of the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall, in the exercise of the power given by the preceding paragraph, direct the transfer of the cognizance of any suit, such Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall cause the reasons for such transfer to be recorded on its proceedings.—Act III, 1837, sec. ii.

89. If it shall at any time appear to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, that from the pressure of business in any of the Zillah Courts, any suit of the amount fixed for appeals to the Queen in Council, can be more conveniently or expeditiously tried in the first instance by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut than by the Zillah Court, before whom they may be depending, it shall be competent to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to order the transfer of all or any of such suits from the Zillah Courts to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. In the transfer and trial of such suits, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall be guided by the same provisions as are prescribed for the conduct of the Zillah Courts regarding the transfer and trial of original suits depending in the Zillah and City Courts.—Reg. XXV, 1814, sec. v, cl. i.

POWERS OF SINGLE JUDGES.

90. Whenever from any unavoidable cause, the regular sittings of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut cannot be held before two or more judges of that court, or whenever it may appear requisite for the speedy trial and decision of the great number of appeals depending before the said court or for the general dispatch of business, that separate sittings should be held before one or more judges thereof, it shall be competent to a single judge of the said court to hold a sitting of court on all matters within the cognizance of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and to pass orders and judgments in conformity to the Regulations; and to dispose of all cases regular as well as miscellaneous (with the exception of the cases specified in paragraph 93), subject to the following provisions.—Reg. XIII, 1810, sec. vi, cl. 2; Reg. XXV, 1814, sec. vi; Reg. IX, 1831, sec. ii. cl. 1; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. xv.

91. In the trial of appeals, or on the hearing of any petition of appeal from the decisions or orders of any courts of inferior jurisdiction, if a single judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall be of opinion that no sufficient ground has been shewn to impugn the correctness or justness of such decision or order, it shall be competent to such single judge without reference to the order of the file, to confirm the same without requiring the attendance of the opposite party, and with or without a revision of the whole proceedings, as the nature of the case may appear to require. On the other hand, if a single judge shall be of opinion that the decision or order appealed against ought to be altered or reversed, as being manifestly unjust, or at variance with some Regulation in force, or in opposition to the Hindoo or Mahomedan law, or other law applicable to the case, or as having been passed without sufficient investigation of the merits, or as grounded on an assumption obviously erroneous or irrelevant, with reference to the points at issue, it shall likewise be competent to a single judge to issue an injunction pointing out the irregularity, illegality, or other defect apparent in the proceedings, decision, or order appealed against, and requiring that the court by which the same may have been held or passed shall revise the case, and proceed thereon in such manner as may appear conformable to justice and to the Regulations.—Reg. IX, 1831, sec. ii, cl. 2.

92. A single judge of the Sudder Dewanny, holding a sitting under this Regulation, may exercise his discretion in calling for the proceedings of the lower courts, or such parts of them as may appear necessary, and may further order a report on any points requiring explanation, prior to passing a determination on the case or matter in appeal.—Reg. IX, 1831, sec. ii, cl. 3.

93. Provided, however, that if the decree or order appealed against shall have been passed in a regular suit or appeal, after a full investigation of the merits, and the ultimate judgment to be passed on the case may rest on a mere difference of opinion as to the facts or evidence, or on a disputed or doubtful point of law, or construction of any Regulation in force, it shall not be competent to a single judge to alter or reverse such decree or order. In such cases he shall always call in two other judges of the court to sit with him, and the appeal shall be then heard by the three judges sitting together, and be decided by them without any additional voices. In such cases the decree or final order shall be signed by the three judges, if they agree together: but if one of them dissent from the view taken by the majority, by the two judges who agree together, and the signature of the third judge shall not be considered requisite, but his opinion shall be recited in the decree or final order.—Reg. IX, 1831, sec. ii, cl. 4; Act II, 1843, sec. i.

94. Provided that the preceding rule shall not be applicable to summary appeals, or to appeals in miscellaneous cases, nor shall it be held to interfere with the powers of a single judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, under paragraph 91.—Act II, 1843, sec. ii.

95. No judge of either of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny shall be disqualified from being one of three judges sitting for the hearing and decision of an appeal, by reason of his having passed the decision in the lower court, against which the appeal is made.—Act II, 1851.

96. It shall further be competent to a single judge to direct that the execution of any judgment or order passed by an inferior court, in all cases in which that measure may appear to him expedient, may be stayed until a final decision has been passed thereon.—Reg. IX, 1831, sec. ii, cl. 5.

97. Provided, however, that nothing in the foregoing paragraphs shall be understood to prohibit a single judge in any case of difficulty or importance in which he may deem it expedient and proper that the matter at issue should be decided by two or more judges of the court, from recording his own opinion thereon, and referring the case to another judge.—Reg. IX, 1831, sec. ii, cl. 6.

98. To enable the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut duly to exercise the powers hereby vested in them, the several courts of subordinate jurisdiction are strictly enjoined to conform to those parts of the Regulations in force which require them to record the point or points at issue between the parties, and the grounds on which their judgment or orders may be issued.—Reg. IX, 1831, sec. ii, cl. 7.

99. Single judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut holding sittings are authorized to perfect interlocutory decrees and orders; provided that it shall not be competent to a single judge to reverse or alter any decree or order of any other judge or judges of the court. Single judges may also execute all decrees and orders of the Sudder Court, ascertain and determine the sufficiency of securities, summon and examine witnesses, and determine on the admission or rejection of appeals. A single judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut may receive miscellaneous petitions relative to matters depending before or decided by any Zillah or City Court in all cases wherein the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are authorized to receive such petitions, and to proceed thereon as the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are empowered to proceed.—Reg. I, 1807, sec. iv, cls. 2 and 4; Reg. XIII, 1810, sec. iv, cls. 2 and 6, and sec. viii.

100. The powers vested in a single judge of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall not be construed to prevent the court at large, or any two judges of the court, from re-examining witnesses whose depositions may have been taken before a single judge, if it appear requisite; or from examining any other witnesses in the cause, or generally from passing any order that may appear proper and consistent with the Regulations, whether in addition to, or in qualification or abrogation of, any previous order of a single judge.—Reg. I, 1807, sec. vii.

APPEALS—SPECIAL

101. A special appeal shall lie to the Sudder Courts from any decision passed on regular appeal in any of the civil courts subordinate to the said Sudder Courts respectively, on any of the following grounds, namely.

1st. On the ground that the decision hath failed to determine all material points in difference in the cause, or hath determined the same or any of them contrary to law or usage having the force of law;

2nd. On the ground of a misconstruction of any document;

3rd. On the ground of any ambiguity in the decision affecting the merits,

4th On the ground of any substantial error or defect in procedure, or in the investigation of the case, provided such error or defect be apparent on the record, and shall have produced, or be likely to have produced, any error or defect in the decision of the case upon the merits Provided always that no such special appeal shall lie, nor shall any such decision be reversed, altered, or remanded by any of the said Sudder Courts, upon the ground that the decision of any question of fact is contrary to or not warranted by the evidence duly taken in the cause, or any probability deduced from the record.—Act. XVI, 1853, sec. iv.

102. A petition of special appeal may be presented in the Sudder Court, or it may be presented in the court in which the decision objected to was passed, for transmission to the Sudder Court. In either case the petition must be presented within three months from the date of the decision appealed against, unless the petitioner can show just and reasonable cause to the satisfaction of the Sudder Court for not having presented it within such limited period.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. v, cl. 1.

103. Every such petition of special appeal shall be accompanied by authenticated copies of the decree objected to and of the decree of the court of original jurisdiction If the appeal be presented in the court in which the decree objected to was passed, such last mentioned court shall forthwith forward the same to the Sudder Court with an endorsement thereon of the date on which it was presented, together with the copies of the decrees of the lower courts by which it was accompanied —Act XVI, 1853, sec v, cl. 2.

104. An application for an extension of the time for presenting a petition of special appeal may be made directly to the Sudder Court, or through the intervention of the lower court, at the option of the applicant —Act XVI, 1853, sec v, cl 3.

105. Every petition for a special appeal shall set forth concisely and under distinct heads the grounds of objection to the decision appealed without any argument or narrative, and such grounds shall be numbered consecutively—Act XVI, 1853, sec. vi.

106 The Sudder Courts shall cause lists of the petitions which shall be presented for the admission of special appeals to be prepared weekly, and to be affixed in the court-houses of the said Sudder Courts respectively. The said lists shall set forth the dates on which such petitions are likely to be brought on for hearing, and the said Sudder Courts shall cause extracts from the said lists to be transmitted to the courts in which the decisions on regular appeal were passed, such extracts shall be affixed in some conspicuous place in the last-mentioned courts, and extracts therefrom shall be transmitted by such courts to the courts in which the original suits were instituted, and such last-mentioned extracts shall be affixed in some conspicuous place in the said last mentioned courts The time to be fixed by the Sudder Court for the hearing of any petition shall not be less than six weeks from the date of despatch of the extracts referring to the same from the Sudder Court The date of the despatch of each extract shall be notified thereon. —Act XVI, 1853, sec. vii, cl. 1.

107 At any time within the period of one month from the date of the despatch of the extract referring to the appeal, or within such further time as the Sudder Court shall for just and reasonable cause allow for that purpose, the respondent may present a separate petition of special appeal in the Sudder Court upon any of the grounds upon which a special appeal will lie against any part of the decision of the lower court not involved in the appeal of the opposite party, provided the respondent shall not previously have presented a special appeal in the cause Such petition, however, shall not be inserted in any list to be prepared in pursuance of the preceding paragraph.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. vii, cl. 2

108 If the petition of appeal or the appeal of either party be dismissed, withdrawn or rejected, the application for appeal, or the appeal, as the case may be, of the other party, shall be heard alone according to the provisions of this Act; otherwise, all applications for special appeal and all admitted special appeals relating to the same decision, shall respectively be heard together unless the Sudder Court shall otherwise order in any case —Act XVI, 1853, sec. vii, cl. 4

109 It shall be lawful for one or more of the judges of the said Sudder Courts, respectively, to hear applications for special appeals, duly presented as aforesaid, in the presence of the appellant, or his pleader, and also of the respondent or his pleader, or such of them as shall attend, and it shall be competent for such judge or judges to call for and peruse any document forming a part of the record of the cause: or to order the amendment of the petition of special appeal forthwith, or within such time as he or they may order, not exceeding one month from the date of such order; or to make an order of reference to the court which pronounced the decree appealed from for further information or explanation; or to pass an order for admitting the appeal for hearing or for rejecting the same; or, if it shall appear that the facts have not been sufficiently recorded, or that the case is otherwise so insufficient that the Sudder Court could not, if the appeal were admitted, pass a final decree thereon, but for no other cause, to issue an injunction, setting forth the errors, irregularities, or other defects in the decision appealed against, and remanding the same to the court by which the same shall have been passed, in order that such decision may be reviewed by the last mentioned court, and that such order or decree may be passed thereon as shall be conformable to law. Provided always that no such remand shall be ordered as aforesaid, except upon grounds whereon a special appeal will lie under this Act. If any such application shall be heard by only two judges, and they differ in opinion as to admitting the appeal for hearing, it shall be admitted.—Act XVI, 1853, section viii, cl. 1.

110. An order for admitting a special appeal for hearing shall specify, for the information of the court, the grounds upon which it was admitted. But neither the court nor the parties shall be confined to those grounds upon the hearing.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 2.

111. If an order be passed for admitting the special appeal for hearing, the case shall be brought on to the file of the court to be heard and determined in due course.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 3.

112. If an order for rejecting a special appeal or for remanding a case be made by one judge only, such order shall not be final, but it shall be laid before another judge of the same court, who shall hear the application for the appeal in the presence of the appellant or his pleader, and also of the respondent or his pleader, or such of them as shall attend. If the second judge be of opinion that the appeal ought to be rejected or the case remanded, he shall pass a final order to that effect; if he be of opinion that the appeal ought to be admitted, he shall pass an order for admitting the same, and the appeal shall thereupon be admitted, heard and determined in due course, in the same manner as if it had been admitted in the first instance.—Act XVI, 1853 sec. viii, cl. 4.

113. A final order for remanding a case shall not be made without notice to the respondent to enable him to appear and be heard.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 5.

114. Any judge by whom an order for admitting a special appeal shall be made, may certify that in his judgment the decision of the lower court is manifestly erroneous upon any of the grounds upon which a special appeal will lie, and thereupon the appeal may be set down for hearing in a list to be called the list of Certified Special Appeals. All cases entered in such list may be called up in due course for hearing and decision according to the provisions of this Act, without regard to the general list of special appeals pending in the Sudder Court.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 6.

115. If an application for a special appeal be heard by a number of judges sufficient according to the provisions of this Act to hear and determine the appeal, and it shall appear that the decision is manifestly erroneous or that the case ought to be remanded, the appeal may be heard and determined forthwith, if the respondent or respondents be present or represented by a pleader or pleaders, otherwise the court may order the case to be entered in the list of certified appeals, and the same shall be entered accordingly.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. viii, cl. 7.

116. Every order for rejecting a special appeal shall state the reason for disallowing each of the grounds set forth in the petition, and every such order of rejection may be once reviewed by the judge or judges by whom the same was passed, or by any judge or judges sitting for or instead of him or them, if they or he shall think fit to review the same. Provided that no such review shall be allowed unless application for the same be made within three months from the date of such order.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. ix, cl. 1.

117. If any such order be rescinded, or if the judges who shall review the same shall be equally divided in opinion, the appeal shall be admitted, and the case brought on to the file of the court, and heard and determined in due course.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. ix, cl. 2.

118. A petition for the review of such order shall be written on paper stamped with a Government stamp of the value of two rupees a sheet.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. ix, cl. 3.

119. When any special appeal shall be admitted, the same shall be heard and determined by three or more of the judges of the Sudder Court, and such hearing and determination shall be upon all the grounds whereon a special appeal will lie under this Act.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. x, cl. 1.

120. The Sudder Court may at any time before or at the time of the hearing of any special appeal or any application for a special appeal, allow either party to amend the grounds of objection set forth in his petition, or to add further grounds of objection thereto; or to urge and be heard by himself or his pleader in support of any objection not included in his petition, upon such terms and conditions as to postponement of the hearing, and as to the payment of costs or otherwise, as the court shall think just, to prevent the opposite party or his pleader from being taken by surprise or otherwise. Without such leave of the court, neither party shall be allowed to urge or be heard in support of any objection not set forth in his petition. But upon hearing the application or determining the appeal, the Sudder Court shall not be confined to the grounds of objection set forth in the petition.—Act XVI, 1853, sec. x, cl. 2.

NOTE.—The following rules are not repealed by sec. i, Act XVI, 1853; but the whole of Act III, 1843, was repealed by that enactment Section ix of the last-mentioned Act reserved such then existing laws relating to Special Appeals as "were not inconsistent with the provisions of that Act." The rules here following seem to be necessary to the working of Special Appeals. Perhaps their importance did not present itself so as to lead to their being specially reserved.

121. Petitions of special appeal shall be written upon the stamped paper prescribed with reference to the value or amount of the suit, calculated according to the provisions of Regulation X, 1829, or any provisions which may be hereafter enacted for the valuation of property sued for in the civil courts. The petition shall be presented either by the party in person or by an authorised pleader of the court. In the latter case, the petition shall be signed by the pleader, who shall certify on the back of the petition that he has duly considered the grounds stated for admitting a special appeal under paragraph 101, and believes them to be well founded and sufficient.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec ii, cl. 3.

122. If, on a consideration of the circumstances of the case, the court shall see reason for admitting a special appeal, the appellant shall be required to furnish the prescribed security within a resonable period to be fixed by the court. When the required security shall have been duly furnished, the court will admit the special appeal, and proceed to investigate the suit under the rules prescribed in Act XVI, 1853.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. ii, cl. 4.

123. If the court shall not see sufficient reason for admitting the special appeal, and shall in consequence reject the petition, the appellant shall not be entitled to receive back the amount or value of the stamp on which the petition may have been written. The courts are, however, vested with a discretionary authority in any particular instance of hardship, to refund any portion not exceeding three-fourths of the amount of such stamp duty to the party who may have paid the same, or to his legal representative.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. ii, cl. 5.

124. The provisions of Regulation XXVIII, 1814, respecting appeals in formâ pauperis from decisions passed in original suits, shall be considered applicable to second or special appeals which may be preferred in formâ pauperis, and which may be hereafter deemed admissible under the rules of Act XVI, 1853.—Reg. II, 1825, sec. v.

XVI, 1797, secs. ii and iii.

XVI, 1797, sec. iv.

127. In all cases wherein the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut may admit an appeal to the Queen in Council, they are to cause copies to be made of all the proceedings held, and judgments or orders given in the case appealed, including the whole of the evidence and documents, omitting all

No other certified copies of the record shall be transmitted to agents in England by or on behalf of the parties in the suit; and the fees and expenses incurred and paid for the preparation of such transcript shall be stated and certified upon it by the register or officer preparing the same.—Reg. XVI, 1797, sec. v, and Order in Council, 13th June, 1853, paragraph II.

128. The expense of preparing the copies of proceedings and documents required by the preceding paragraph, and of translating into the English language such of the aforesaid proceedings as may have been originally drawn out in the country languages, shall be defrayed by the parties prosecuting the appeal, and the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are empowered and required to cause the deposit by the appellant, within the time allowed for furnishing security for costs of appeal, of such a sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expense of making the aforesaid copies.—Act II, 1844, secs. i and ii, and Order in Council, 13th June, 1853, paragraph ii.

129. Translations of papers in appeals to the Queen in Council, how to be prepared.)—Reg. II, 1801, sec. xix. (See "SUDDER COURT.")

130. Copies of the proceedings and judgments of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in appeal to the Queen in Council, shall be furnished without expense to paupers who may be parties in such appeals, and shall be written on unstamped paper of European manufacture.—Reg. XXVIII, 1814, sec. xviii.

XVI, 1797, sec. iv, and Act II, 1844, sec. ii.

132. In case the judgment appealed from shall have been passed in pursuance of any local Regulation or Regulations enacted by the Governor-General in Council, or in case any such Regulation shall have been referred to in the judgments passed by any of the courts, wherein the cause appealed from may have been tried and decided, a copy of such Regulation or Regulations, or an extract therefrom containing all that has reference to the matter at issue, shall be annexed to the several copies of the proceedings prepared in conformity to paragraph 127, whether for delivery to the parties or for transmission to Her Majesty in Council.—Reg. XVI, 1797, sec. vi.

133. Provided always, that nothing in this Regulation is to be understood to bar the full and unqualified exercise of Her Majesty's pleasure upon all appeals to her from the decisions of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, either in rejecting any she may consider inadmissible under the statute respecting such appeals, or in receiving any she may judge admissible, notwithstanding the provisions made in this Regulation, which has reference to the local jurisdiction only, and particularly to that of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as a necessary rule for their guidance, subject in the whole of its provisions to the ultimate determination of Her Majesty in Council.—Reg. XVI, 1797, sec. vii.

NOTE.—It is declared by the Act 8 & 9 Vict. cap. 30, sec. ii, that any appeal admitted in India after 1st January, 1846, shall be considered to be abandoned and withdrawn, unless some proceedings shall be taken IN ENGLAND in the same by one or more of the parties thereto, within two years after registration at the Council Office of the arrival of the transcript.

134. No stamp duty or institution fee shall be payable in respect of any proceeding in any appeal, or in respect of any paper or copy of any paper necessary for any appeal from any court of the East-India Company to Her Majesty in Council.—Act XI, 1839.

III, 1828, sec. iv, cl. 5.

NOTE.—The following provisions, from paragraphs 136 to 138, are applicable to the execution of all decrees in appeals.

136. Every decree or order in appeal of Her Majesty in Council, or of any Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or of any zillah or city judge, which shall be made after the passing of this Act, and also every such decree or order in appeal which has been made before the passing of this Act, and for the execution or enforcement whereof no petition has been presented, shall be enforced and executed by the court which made the first decree or order appealed from, in the manner and according to the rules and laws applicable to the execution and enforcement of original decrees or orders made by such last-mentioned court.—Act XXV, 1852, sec. i.

137. Any person desirous of enforcing or obtaining execution of any such decree or order made in appeal as aforesaid shall present a petition for that purpose to the court which made the first decree or order appealed from, and the said petition shall be accompanied by a certified copy of the decree or order made in appeal, and sought to be enforced or executed.—Act XXV, 1852, sec. ii.

141. ORDERS OF HER MAJESTY IN COUNCIL.

AT THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE,

The 13th day of June, 1853.

Present:

THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT.

|---|---|
| Lord President | Earl of Aberdeen |
| Lord Steward | Earl of Clarendon |
| Duke of Newcastle | Viscount Palmerston |
| Duke of Wellington | Mr. Herbert |
| Lord Chamberlain | Sir James Graham, Bart. |

Whereas there was this day read at the Board a report from the Right Honourable the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, dated the 30th May last past, humbly setting forth that the Lords of the Judicial Committee have taken into consideration the practice of the committee with a view to greater economy, despatch, and efficiency in the appellate jurisdiction of Her Majesty in Council, and that their lordships have agreed humbly to report to Her Majesty that it is expedient that certain changes should be made in the existing practice in appeals, and recommending that certain rules and regulations therein set forth should henceforth be observed, obeyed, and carried into execution, provided Her Majesty is pleased to approve the same:

Her Majesty, having taken the said report into consideration, was pleased, by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, to approve thereof, and of the Rules and Regulations set forth therein, in the words following, videlicet:—

I. That, any former usage or practice of Her Majesty's Privy Council notwithstanding, an appellant who shall succeed in obtaining a reversal or material alteration of any judgment, decree, or order appealed from, shall be entitled to recover the costs of the appeal from the respondent, except in cases in which the Lords of the Judicial Committee may think fit otherwise to direct.

II. That the registrar or other proper officer having the custody of records in any court or special jurisdiction from which an appeal is brought to Her Majesty in Council be directed to send by post, with all possible despatch, one certified copy of the transcript record in each cause to the registrar of Her Majesty's Privy Council, Whitehall; and that all such transcripts be registered in the Privy Council Office, with the date of their arrival, the names of the parties, and the date of the sentence appealed from; and that such transcript be accompanied by a correct and complete index of all the papers, documents, and exhibits in the cause; and that the registrar of the court appealed from, or other proper officer of such court, be directed to omit from such transcript all merely formal documents, provided such omission be stated and certified in the said index of papers; and that especial care be taken not to allow any document to be set forth more than once in such transcript; and that no other certified copies of the record be transmitted to agents in England by or on behalf of the parties in the suit; and that the fees and expenses incurred and paid for the preparation of such transcript be stated and certified upon it by the registrar or other officer preparing the same.

III. That when the record of proceedings or evidence in the cause appealed has been printed or partly printed abroad, the registrar or other proper officer of the court from which the appeal is brought shall be bound to send home the same in a printed form, either wholly or so far as the same may have been printed, and that he do certify the same to be correct, on two copies, by signing his name on every printed sheet, and by affixing the seal, if any, of the court appealed from to these copies, with the sanction of the court.

And that in all cases in which the parties in appeal shall think fit to have the proceedings printed abroad, they shall be at liberty to do so, provided they cause fifty copies of the same to be printed in folio, and transmitted, at their expense, to the registrar of the Privy Council, two of which printed copies shall be certified as above by the officers of the court appealed from; and in this case no further expense for copying or printing the record will be incurred or allowed in England.

IV. That on the arrival of a written transcript of appeal at the Privy Council Office, Whitehall, the appellant, or the agent of the appellant prosecuting the same, shall be at liberty to call on the registrar of the Privy Council to cause it, or such part thereof as may be necessary for the hearing of the case, and likewise all such parts thereof as the respondent or his agent may require, to be printed by Her Majesty's printer, or by any other printer on the same terms, the appellant or his agent engaging to pay the cost of preparing a copy for the printer at a rate not exceeding one shilling per brief sheet, and likewise the cost of printing such record or appendix, and that one hundred copies of the same be struck off, whereof thirty copies are to be delivered to the agents of each side. and forty kept for the use of the Judicial Committee; and that no other fees for solicitor's copies of the transcript, or for drawing the joint appendix, be henceforth allowed, the solicitors on both sides being allowed to have access to the original papers at the Council Office, and to extract or cause to be extracted and copied such parts thereof as are necessary for the preparation of the petition of appeal, at the stationer's charge, not exceeding one shilling per brief sheet.

V. That a certain time be fixed within which it shall be the duty of the appellant or his agent to make such application for the printing of the transcript, and that such time be within the space of six calendar months from the arrival of the transcript and the registration thereof in all matters brought by appeal from Her Majesty's colonies and plantations east of the Cape of Good Hope, or from the territories of the East India Company, and within the space of three months in all matters brought by appeal from any other part of Her Majesty's dominions abroad; and that in default of the appellant or his agent taking effectual steps for the prosecution of the appeal within such time or times respectively, the appeal shall stand dismissed without further order, and that a report of the same be made to the Judicial Committee by the registrar of the Privy Council at their lordships' next sitting.

VI. That whenever it shall be found that the decision of a matter on appeal is likely to turn exclusively on a question of law, the agents of the parties, with the sanction of the registrar of the Privy Council, may submit such question of law to the Lords of the Judicial Committee in the form of a special case, and print such parts only of the transcript as may be necessary for the discussion of the same; provided that nothing herein contained shall in any way bar or prevent the Lords of the Judicial Committee from ordering the full discussion of the whole case, if they shall so think fit; and that in order to promote such arrangements and simplification of the matter in dispute, the registrar of the Privy Council may call the agents of the parties before him, and having heard them, and examined the transcript, may report to the committee as to the nature of the proceedings.

And Her Majesty is further pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the foregoing Rules and Regulations be punctually observed, obeyed, and carried into execution in all appeals or petitions and complaints in the nature of appeals brought to Her Majesty, or to her heirs and successors in council, from Her Majesty's colonies and plantations abroad, and from the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man, and from the territories of the East India Company, whether the same be from courts of justice or from special jurisdiction, other than appeals from Her Majesty's Courts of Vice-Admiralty, to which the said rules are not to be applied.

Whereof the judges and officers of Her Majesty's courts of justice abroad, and the judges and officers of the superior courts of the East India Company, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

W. L. Bathurst.

ORDER IN COUNCIL of the 10th April, 1838, made pursuant to 3 and 4 Wm. IV, c. 41, for regulating Appeals from the Supreme and Sudder Dewanny Courts in the East Indies, Prince of Wales Island, Malacca, and Singapore.

Whereas, by an Act passed in the fourth year of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the better Administration of Justice in His Majesty's Privy Council," it is amongst other things enacted, that "it shall be lawful for His Majesty in Council from time to time to make any such rules and orders as may be thought fit, for the regulating the mode, form, and time of appeal to be made from the decisions of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or any other Courts of Judicature, in India or elsewhere, to the eastward of the Cape of Good Hope (from the decisions of which an appeal lies to His Majesty in Council), and in like manner from time to time to make such other regulations for the preventing delays in the making or hearing such appeals, and as to the expenses attending the said appeals, and as to the amount or value of property in respect of which any such appeal may be made:" and whereas His said late Majesty did, by his Order in Council, on the 16th day of January, 1836, approve certain rules and orders for regulating the mode, form, and time of appeal from the decisions of the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and also certain regulations for the preventing delays in the making of hearing of such appeals, and as to the expenses attending such appeals; and the said rules, and orders, and regulations were set forth in certain schedules, A and B, to and by the said Order in Council of the 16th of January annexed and approved: and whereas His said late Majesty did, by his further Order in Council made on the 10th day of August, 1836, alter and amend the said Schedule B, by cancelling the rule No. 5 of the said Schedule B so approved as aforesaid, and ordering that, in lieu of the said fifth rule thereof, a certain other rule in such last-mentioned order set forth should be substituted:* and whereas the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council hath deemed it expedient to cancel and rescind all the said rules, orders, and regulations, and to make and substitute others in lieu thereof:—

Her Majesty is therefore pleased, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to cancel and rescind all the said rules, orders, and regulations in the said recited Orders in Council of the 16th day of January, 1836, and the 10th day of August, 1836, respectively contained, and thereby or by either of them approved, and to approve of the several rules, orders, and regulations contained in the schedule hereunder written or hereunto annexed, and to order, as it is hereby ordered, that the same be respectively observed by Her Majesty's Supreme Courts of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, Fort St. George, and Bombay respectively, by the Court of Judicature of Prince of Wales Island, Singapore, and Malacca, and by the said several Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and all other Courts of Judicature in the territories under the government of the East India Company, and by all persons whom it shall or may concern. Whereof the Governor-General and the Council of India, the Governor of Fort William in Bengal, the Governor in Council at Fort St. George, the Governor in Council at Bombay, the Governor of Agra, the Chief Justice and the Judges of Her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William aforesaid, the Chief Justice and Judges of Her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort St. George, the Chief Justice and Judges of Her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature at Bombay, the Court of Judicature of Prince of Wales Island, Singapore, and Malacca, the Judges of the several Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in the East Indies, and the Judges of all other Courts of Judicature in the territories under the government of the East India Company, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

(Signed) C. C. GREVILLE.

That from and after the 31st day of December next, no appeal to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in Council, shall be allowed by any of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, Fort St. George, Bombay, or the Court of Judicature of Prince of Wales Island, Singapore, and Malacca, or by any of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or by any other courts of judicature in the territories under the government of the East India Company, unless the petition for that purpose be presented within six calendar months from the day of the date of the judgment, decree, or decretal order complained of, and unless the value of the matter in dispute in such appeal shall amount to the sum of 10,000 Company's rupees at least; and that, from and after the said 31st day of December next, the limitation of 5,000*l.* sterling heretofore existing in respect of appeals from the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal shall wholly cease and determine.

That in all cases in which any of such courts shall admit an appeal to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors in Council, it shall specially certify on the proceedings that the value of the matter in dispute in such appeal amounts to the sum of 10,000 Company's rupees or upwards, which certificate shall be deemed conclusive of the fact, and not be liable to be questioned on such appeal by any party to the suit appealed.

3. Provided nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to take away, diminish, or derogate from the undoubted power and authority of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in Council, upon the petition at any time of any party aggrieved by any judgment, decree, or decretal order of any of the aforesaid courts, to admit an appeal therefrom upon such other terms, and upon and subject to such other limitations, restrictions, and regulations as Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, shall in any such special case think fit to prescribe.

4. That on the arrival of the transcript of proceedings in an appeal to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors in Council, from any of the said Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or any other courts in the East Indies constituted by the East India Company, or any of their governments from which an appeal lies to Her Majesty in Council, such officer of the East India Company as the Court of Directors of the said Company shall from time to time appoint, shall forthwith give notice to the clerk of the Council thereof, stating at the same time the names of the parties to the appeal, and the date of the decree appealed from, and that such notice shall be duly registered in the Council Office.

5. That the said transcripts of proceedings shall be kept at the East India House, or at such other convenient place within the cities of London or Westminster, as the said Court of Directors shall from time to time appoint; the agents respectively conducting and defending such appeals in this country being at liberty to take all the necessary copies and extracts from the said proceedings, and to examine the same from time to time; and it shall be the duty of such officer, by himself or his sufficient deputy, to produce the original transcripts before the Judicial Committee, upon the hearing of such appeal, upon due notice for that purpose previously given, and upon all other occasions when thereunto required by the Privy Council or the Judicial Committee.

6. That in default of the petition of appeal of the appellants being lodged in the Council Office within three calendar months from the registration of the arrival of such transcripts, or in default of the appellant's case being carried in within one year from the time of such registration, the respondent shall be entitled in either case to move to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution; and in the event of the respondent's not bringing in his case within one year from the time of such registration, the appellant shall be entitled to apply to have the case heard ex parte.

APPEALS—SUMMARY.

142. The Zillah Courts are empowered to receive any petitions respecting suits or matters that may be depending, or have been decided in any lower court within their respective jurisdictions; and provided it shall be proved to their satisfaction that the petition was presented, or that due means were used to effect its being presented to the judge, and that he refused or omitted to receive it and proceed on it, or in the last-mentioned case, that undue means were used by any of the officers of the court to prevent the petition being presented, the court are empowered to issue a precept, under the seal of the court, commanding the judge to receive the petition, and to proceed respecting it according to the Regulations.—Reg. II, 1798, sec. vi.

143. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut is empowered to receive any original suit or complaint which may be cognizable in any Zillah or City Court, and to command the judge of such court, by a precept under the seal of the court, and attested by the register, to receive the suit or complaint, and to proceed to hear and determine it, provided proof shall be previously made to their satisfaction that the judge refused or omitted to proceed in it. If the plaintiff shall refuse or neglect to proceed in the suit or complaint for the period of six weeks after the order of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut may be received by the Zillah or City Court, and notified to the complainant, the judge is authorized to dismiss it, notwithstanding the order of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. In such cases the judge within one week after the dismission of the suit or complaint, is to certify to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, under his hand and the seal of the court, that the suit or complaint has been dismissed, and the grounds of the dismission.—Reg. VI, 1793, sec. iv.

144. It shall be competent to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to receive a summary appeal from the orders or decrees of the courts, in all cases in which the latter may have refused to admit an original suit or appeal regularly cognizable by them; or having admitted such suit or appeal, may have dismissed it on the ground of delay, informality or other default, without an investigation of the merits of the case.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 2.

145. On the same principle, it shall be competent to the zillah or city judges to receive a summary appeal from the orders or decrees of a sudder ameen, in cases in which the sudder ameen may have dismissed, on the ground of some default, and without an investigation of the merits of the case, any original suit or appeal regularly referred to them.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 4.

146. It shall be competent to the zillah and city judges to receive a summary appeal from the orders or decrees of the moonsiffs subordinate to them, in cases in which such moonsiffs may have refused to admit any suit regularly cognizable by them, or may have dismissed, on the ground of delay, informality, or other default, without an investigation of the merits of the case, any such suit which they may have admitted, or any suit regularly referred to them.—Act XXII, 1838, sec. i.

147. The provisions contained in paragraphs 149 and 150 apply to the summary appeals preferred under the authority of this Act.—Act XXII, 1838, sec. ii.

148. It shall be competent to the zillah or city judge to receive a summary appeal from the orders of any principal sudder ameen or sudder ameen, rejecting any original suit cognizable by him, and that all rules applicable to summary appeals from orders dismissing original suits on the ground of any default shall be applicable to the summary appeals given by this Act.—Act IX, 1844, sec. iv.

149. In all the preceding cases, the summary appeal shall be preferred within the same limited period as is prescribed for the admission of regular appeals, and subject to the provisions contained in the following paragraphs.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 5.

150. Whenever a party may be desirous of preferring a summary appeal in the cases above-mentioned, he shall appear, either in person or by a vakeel duly authorized, before the court, which, under the preceding rules, may be competent to receive such appeal; and shall present a petition, written on the stamped paper prescribed by Schedule B, Reg. X, 1829, and accompanied by an attested copy of the order or decree passed in the case.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 6.

151. In matters which the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut may be empowered by any Regulation to try in the first instance (excepting as to hearing witnesses and receiving evidence), the court is to proceed in the same manner, and with the like powers and authority, and subject to the same restrictions, limitations, and exceptions, as are prescribed to the Zillah and City Courts.—Reg. VI, 1793, sec. vii.

152. The party presenting such petition shall not be liable to the payment of the stamp duty substituted for the institution fee, nor shall he be required to furnish any security, except such as may be eventually necessary, under the Regulations in force, for staying the execution of the decree from which the appeal may be preferred.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iii. cl. 7.

153. It shall not be requisite to give any notice to the respondent, or to require his attendance on such summary appeal being preferred, unless in any particular instance the court may deem it proper to adopt that measure; nor shall any pleadings or proceedings be holden on such summary appeal, excepting such as may suffice to determine whether the suit was or was not rejected or dismissed by the lower court on sufficient grounds, and in conformity with the Regulations.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 8.

154. If upon such summary proceedings it shall appear to the court that the suit was rejected in the first instance, or after being admitted was dismissed without an investigation of the merits upon insufficient grounds, or in opposition to the Regulations, it shall be competent to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and to the zillah or city judges respectively, to direct the lower court or officer, from whose order or decree the petition of appeal may have been presented, to receive the original suit or appeal, or to revive it if it shall have been received and dismissed, and to try and determine such cause on its merits, according to the Regulations.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iii. cl. 9.

155. If, on the contrary, such summary appeal shall be found to be groundless and litigious, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and the zillah or city judges, are respectively authorized and required to reject the petition for a summary appeal, and to impose such fine on the litigious appellant as may appear to be in each instance proportionable to the condition of the party and to the circumstances of the case; provided that such fine shall in no case exceed the amount of the stamp duty which would have been payable by the appellant on the institution of such case as a regular suit or appeal. All orders imposing fines, or rejecting petitions of summary appeal, which may be passed under the preceding paragraph by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or by the zillah or city judges, shall be final and conclusive.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 10.

156. The above provisions, regarding the admission and hearing of summary appeals, shall be held applicable to original suits and appeals tried by principal sudder ameens.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xix, cl. 1.

157. Summary decisions passed under section v, Regulation VII, 1825 ("PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraph 149), shall be open to a summary appeal under the general rules for such appeals.—Reg. VII, 1825, sec. v, cl. 2.

158. No appeal shall lie against the decision passed in accordance with the provisions of Act XXIX, 1841 (paragraphs 39 to 41), other than a summary appeal on the fact of default.—Act XXIX, 1841, sec. iii.

NOTE.—For procedure in pauper appeals, see "PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraphs 313 to 325.

RULES COMMON TO COURTS OF ORIGINAL AND APPELLATE JURISDICTION

PROCEDURE ON TRIALS.

NOTE.—In the following arrangement, such rules, having effect both in courts of original and appellate jurisdiction, as have been entered in the preceding portions, are here only noted in abstract with reference to the places where they will be found in extenso.

NOTE.—It was enacted by sec. xxvii, Reg. V, 1831, that whenever the Governor-General in Council should introduce the provisions of that Regulation into any Zillah, the authority and jurisdiction of the Provincial Court, in original suits and appeals should cease. It was further declared in the preamble to Reg. II of 1833, as a consequence, that whenever that Regulation should have been extended to all the districts of any division, the further maintenance of the Provincial Court would only be required for the purpose of disposing of the arrears of business pending before it.

The Provincial Courts having now been all abolished, and the system established by Reg. V, 1831, generally introduced, the rules for the distribution of the business of the Provincial Courts to the Zillah Courts, and to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut respectively, may be considered as formally disposed of, and the provision respecting the distribution as extinct, but as the principles involved in those provisions must continue to govern the assignment of many duties to the one or the other of those jurisdictions, it seemed desirable to retain the rules referred to, and to give them in this place.

1. ALL original suits, all miscellaneous business arising out of original suits not of the nature of appeals, and generally all matters connected with its functions as a court of primary jurisdiction, which may be pending in any Provincial Court, shall be transferred to the files of the several Zillah or City Courts, in which, under the provisions of section viii, Regulation III, 1793, the suit would be regularly cognizable, provided that the provisions of Regulation V, 1831, shall have been extended to such Zillah or City Court. The Zillah or City Courts to which under this provision any suits may be transferred, shall proceed with them in all respects as though they had been originally instituted before them under clause 3, section xxvii, Regulation V, 1831.—Reg. II, 1833, sec. iii, cl. 1.

2. All precepts or orders which may have been issued to the Provincial Court by the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, regarding any suit or matter pending before the Superior Court, shall also be transferred to the Zillah or City Court to which the suit or matter has reference, whether the provisions of Regulation V, 1831, may have been extended to such Zillah or City Court, or not, and the court receiving such order shall carry it into effect in the same manner as if it had been addressed to itself.—Reg. II, 1833, sec. iii, cl. 2.

3. All appeals, regular, special, or summary, as well as all petitions for the admission of special appeals, petitions for review of judgment, or other miscellaneous business belonging to its jurisdiction as an Appellate Court, which may be pending before the Provincial Court on the date of its abolition, shall be transferred to the file of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; and the judges of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are hereby empowered and required to dispose of them, under the general powers with which they are vested, in the same manner as though they had been regularly cognizable by, and referred to or instituted before them. All appeals that may be so pending before a Provincial Court on the date of its abolition, of whatever amount, or from whatever authority preferred, are hereby declared cognizable by the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, anything in the existing Regulations to the contrary notwithstanding.—Reg. II, 1833, sec. v.

4. Examination of Evidence.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. x; Act XIX, 1853. (See "PROCEDURE, ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraphs 20 to 67.)

6. Examination of absent witnesses.—Act VII, 1841. (See "PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraphs 68 to 74.)

7. The civil courts are prohibited corresponding, by letter, with parties in suits or process, or matters depending before them or coming within their cognizance. If a party in a suit, or any person amenable to the jurisdiction of the court, shall have any matter to represent to the court, he is either to appear in the court in person, and represent the matter in writing, or to make the representation in writing through an authorised vakeel. The courts are to pass whatever order, upon the representation, may appear to them proper consistently with the Regulations, and to cause a copy of the order to be delivered to the person making the representation, or to his vakeel, under the seal of the court.—Reg. III, 1793, sec. xix; Reg. V, 1793, sec. ix; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. vi.

14. Affirmations substituted for oaths of Hindoos and Mahomedans.—Act V, 1840. (See "PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraphs 256 to 259.)

ALLOWANCES TO CIVIL PRISONERS.

NOTE.—The following rule should have followed those respecting Execution of Decree in Original Suits, and been referred to only in this place.

21. No process of arrest shall issue from a civil court, unless the party applying for the same and entitled thereto, shall deposit in court (independent of the charge for executing the process) a sum sufficient to provide for the subsistence of the individual against whom the process may issue, for a period of thirty days from the date of his commitment to gaol, in execution thereof. On the expiration of thirty days after such commitment, a further deposit shall be made in advance for the next ensuing thirty days, and so on till the defendant's discharge. The amount of deposit shall be fixed by the judge at the time of issuing the process of arrest, subject to future revision, on sufficient grounds shown, and shall be regulated according to the rules heretofore in force; that is, the allowance is not to exceed four annas, nor to be less than one anna per diem, consideration being had to the rank and situation in life of the defendant, and the circumstances of the plaintiff. Provided, however, that if any special circumstances should exist for increasing the rate beyond four annas, it shall be competent to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on a report from the judge, or other sufficient information before them, to order such increase as may appear to that court to be just and proper, not exceeding in any instance one rupee per diem.—Reg. VI, 1830, sec. ii.

22. The allowance required under the foregoing rules is to be made payable as heretofore to the nazir of the court, who is to give monthly receipts for it to the plaintiff, dated on the day on which the money may be paid. If the plaintiff shall neglect or refuse to pay the prescribed allowance on or before the day on which it may become due, the nazir is immediately to report the same in writing, under his signature, to the judge, who is forthwith to order the defendant's discharge; and such defendant shall not again be liable to personal arrest and confinement on the same matter, at the instance of the same party, unless it be proved to the satisfaction of the court that he has been guilty of dishonest conduct in the fraudulent concealment or transfer of any property that would otherwise have been available for the satisfaction of the decree or other demand on account of which he may have been originally confined.—Reg. VI, 1830, sec. iii.

23. The amount paid for the subsistence of persons in confinement under judgments of the civil courts is to be repaid by the party confined on his release, in common with the reimbursement of other costs of suit and process, when any property may be forthcoming from which the amount can be levied. Plaintiffs are not to be required to pay any allowance to defendants who may be committed to custody for disobedience to an order of the court. But when no property can be pointed out for the reimbursement of the subsistence money paid to prisoners, they shall not be detained in confinement for the repayment of such money only.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. viii; and Reg. II, 1806, sec. xii.

24. In the event of any future alterations becoming necessary in the rules relating to the subsistence-allowance of debtors confined in the civil gaols, it shall be competent to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to direct the same, subject to the approval of the Governor-General in Council, without the necessity of a new Regulation being passed for that purpose.—Reg. VI, 1830, sec. v.

INTEREST.

General Rules.

25. If the cause of action shall have arisen on or after the first day of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three, the courts are not to decree any interest on any sum whatever, above the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. iv.

26. Upon all debts or sums certain payable at a certain time or otherwise, the court before which such debts or sums may be recovered, may, if it shall think fit, allow interest to the creditor at a rate not exceeding the current rate of interest from the time when such debts or sums certain were payable, if such debts or sums be payable by virtue of some written instrument at a certain time, or if payable otherwise, then from the time when demand of payment shall have been made in writing, so as such demand shall give notice to the debtor that interest will be claimed from the date of such demand until the term of payment; provided, that interest shall be payable in all cases in which it is now payable by law.—Act XXXII, 1839.

27. Where a lower rate of interest than the authorized rates may have been stipulated between the parties, no higher rate of interest than the rates so stipulated is to be decreed.—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. v; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. iv.

28. If the interest on any debt, calculating according to the rates allowed by this Regulation, shall have accumulated so as to exceed the principal, the courts are not, in any case whatever (excepting the cases specified in paragraph 34), to decree a greater sum for interest than the amount of such principal.—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. vi; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. v.

29. The courts are not to decree any compound interest arising from intermediate adjustments of accounts. This rule, however, is not to extend to cases in which accounts between the parties shall have been adjusted, and the former bonds or agreements cancelled, and new bonds or agreements taken for the aggregate amount of the principal, and the legal interest remaining due upon the adjustment consolidated into principal.—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. vii; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. vi.

30. The courts are not to decree any interest whatever, in any case, where the bond or instrument given for the security and evidence of the debt shall have been granted on or subsequent to the following dates, and shall specify a higher rate of interest than is authorized by this Regulation to have been given and received subsequent to these dates,

Lower Provinces, 28th March, 1780;
Cuttack, 14th October, 1803;
Ceded Provinces, 1st January, 1804;
Conquered Provinces, 1st January, 1806;
Benares, 1st January, 1807.

—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. viii; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. vii; Reg. XII, 1805, sec. ix, cl. 4; Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. xxiii, cl. 2; Reg. XVII, 1806, secs. ii and iv.

31. Nor to decree any interest whatsoever in favour of the plaintiff, in any case where the cause of action shall have arisen on or subsequent to the dates specified in the preceding paragraph, where a greater interest than is authorized by this Regulation shall have been received, or stipulated to be received, if it be proved that any attempt has been made to elude the rules prescribed in it, by any deduction from the loan, or by any device or means whatever; nor to give any other judgment, but for the dismission of the suit with costs to be paid by the plaintiff.—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. ix; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. viii; Reg. XIV, 1805, sec. ix, cl. 5.

32. In cases of mortgages of real property, executed prior to the dates specified above, in which the mortgagee may have had the usufruct of the mortgaged property, whether he shall have held it in his own possession or not, the usufruct is to be allowed to the mortgagee in lieu of interest, agreeably to the former custom of the country (provided it shall have been so stipulated between the parties), until the above-mentioned dates, subsequent to which the same interest is to be allowed on such mortgage bonds, and also on all bonds for the mortgage of real property, which have been entered into on or since those dates, or that may be hereafter executed, as is allowed on other bonds which have been or may be granted on or posterior to such dates, and no more; and all such mortgages are to be considered as virtually and in effect cancelled and redeemed, whenever the principal sum, with the simple interest due upon it, shall have been realized from the usufruct of the mortgaged property subsequent to the dates specified above, or otherwise liquidated by the mortgagor.—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. x; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. ix; Reg. XIV, 1805, sec. ix, cl. 6.

33. For the adjustment of the accounts, in the cases of mortgages specified in the preceding paragraph, where the mortgagee shall have had the usufruct of the mortgaged property, the mortgagee is to be required to deliver in the accounts of his gross receipts from the property mortgaged, and also of his expenditures for the management or preservation of it. The mortgagee is to swear, or to subscribe a solemn declaration that the accounts which he may deliver in are true and authentic. The mortgagor is to be permitted to examine the accounts, and after hearing any objections he may have to offer, or any evidence that either party may have to adduce respecting them, the court is to adjust the account.—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. xi; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. x.

34. The rules contained in the preceding paragraphs are not to be considered to extend to respondentia loans or policies of insurance, the interest on which is to be regulated by the terms of the deeds, and the laws and usages which prevail respecting such transactions.—Reg. XV, 1793, sec. xii; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. xi.

35. To prevent the encouragement of litigious appeals, the courts of appeal, in all cases wherein they may confirm the decree of a lower court, are to adjudge interest, at the rate of one per cent. per mensem, on all sums receivable by the respondent under the decree passed in his favour, from the date of such decree, and are authorized to punish appeals which may appear to them litigious by a fine to Government, proportionate to the condition of the party and the circumstances of the case.—Reg. XIII, 1796, sec. iii.

Ceded Provinces.

36. If the cause of action shall have arisen on or subsequent to the tenth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and one, the courts are not to decree interest on any sum whatever, above the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.—Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. iii.

Conquered Provinces.

37. The 30th of December, 1803, shall be the date to be adopted in the zillahs of Allyghur, Agra, and the northern and southern division of the zillah of Saharunpore; and the 16th of December, 1803, shall be the date to be adopted in the zillah of Bundlecund, in lieu of the date specified in sections ii, iii, and ix, Regulation XXXIV, 1803.—Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. xxiii, cl. 2.

Cuttack.

38. The following rules shall be observed in the zillah of Cuttack, including the pergunnahs of Puttespore, Kummardichour, and Bograe, respecting the payment of interest on money:

If the cause of action shall have arisen on or subsequently to the 14th of October, 1803, the courts are not to decree interest on any sum whatever above the rate of twelve per cent. per annum.—Reg. XIV, 1805, sec. ix, cls. 1 and 3.

Benares.

39. The provisions contained in the several sections of Regulation XV, 1793, are hereby declared to extend to the province of Benares, from the commencement of the ensuing year 1807, A.C., corresponding with the 19th Poos of the Bengal year 1213, and 7th Poos of the Fussily year 1214, subject to the following modifications.—Reg. XVII, 1806, sec. ii.

40. If the cause of action shall have arisen before the period stated in the preceding paragraph, the courts of civil judicature are to decree whatever rate of interest may have been voluntarily stipulated; or if interest be payable in any case wherein a specific rate may not have been stipulated, according to the law and usage of the province; in conformity with the spirit of section ix, Regulation VII, 1795, which directs, with respect to bills of exchange, receipts, or notes of hand, that the custom of the country is to be abided by, and with respect to dealings and money transactions amongst mahajins and shroffs, that the established customs observed and enforced amongst them are to be adhered to by the courts in their inquiries and decisions.—Reg. XVII, 1806, sec. iii.

41. If the cause of action shall arise after the period specified in paragraph 39, the courts are not to decree any interest above the rate of one per cent. per mensem, or twelve per cent. per annum.—Reg. XVII, 1806, sec. iv.

42. The forfeiture of interest for stipulation of a higher rate than what is authorized, enacted by paragraph 30, and the forfeiture of principal and interest, in cases of attempts to elude the prescribed rules, by deductions from the principal or other devices, provided against by paragraph 31, shall not be considered applicable to any loans actually and bonâ fide contracted, or to any bonds or other instruments voluntarily given for the evidence and security of such loans, previously to the period stated in paragraph 39.—Reg. XVII, 1806, sec. v.

43. The rule contained in paragraph 32, for the redemption of mortgaged property, whenever the principal sum lent and the simple interest due thereupon shall have been realized from the usufruct, is to be considered in force throughout the province of Benares from the commencement of the Fussily year 1214 (1806-7); but shall not be applied retrospectively, in opposition to any subsisting engagement voluntarily contracted before the period fixed for the operation of this Regulation.—Reg. XVII, 1806, sec. vi.

CONDITIONAL SALES.

44. It has been long a prevalent practice in the province of Behar to borrow money on the mortgage and conditional sale of landed property, under a stipulation that if the sum borrowed be not repaid (with or without interest) by a fixed period the sale shall become absolute. This species of transfer has, in the above province, been usually denominated bye-bil-wuffa; and the same transaction is common in Bengal, under an instrument termed kut-cubbaleh. It doubtless exists also, under deeds of the above or similar denominations, in Orissa and Benares: and since the promulgation of the rules respecting interest contained in Regulation XV, 1793, it has become more prevalent, particularly in the province of Behar, wherein instances have occurred in which persons lending money on bye-bil-wuffa, in order to render the sale absolute, and thereby possess themselves of the landed property of the borrower, have denied the tender, or evaded receiving payment of the money due to them within the period limited for the discharge of it. In such cases, the proof of the tender falls on the borrower; and if he fail in the proof of it for want of legal evidence, he is liable to lose his estate. It is necessary, therefore, for the security of the borrower, in such transactions, that he should have the means of establishing before a court of judicature his having tendered, or being ready to pay, within the stipulated period, the amount due from him to the lender; who, if he mean to act fairly, will also derive a benefit from a clear rule being laid down, whereby it may be readily ascertained whether the borrower was willing to redeem his property by the payment of the money lent upon it within the period agreed upon between the parties, or whether, from his having omitted to perform the conditions of such redemption, the sale is become absolute, and the property included therein finally transferred to the lender. For the above purpose, and for the prevention of other abuses in the transactions referred to, the Governor-General in Council has passed the following rules, to be considered in force in the provinces of Bengal, Behar, Orissa, and Benares, from the date of the receipt of this Regulation by the several courts respectively.—Reg. I, 1798, sec. i.

45. In all instances of the loan of money on bye-bil-wuffa, or on the conditional sale of landed property, as explained in the preceding paragraph, however denominated, the borrower, who may be desirous to redeem his land by the payment of the money lent upon it, with any interest due thereon, within the stipulated period, is at liberty, on or before the date stipulated, either to tender and pay to the lender the amount due to him, taking such precautions as he may think necessary to establish such tender and payment, if evaded or denied, or without any tender to the lender, to deposit the amount due to him, on or before the stipulated date, in the Dewanny Adawlut of the city or zillah in which the land may be situated; and the judge receiving the same shall furnish the party with a written receipt for the amount, specifying on what date, and for what purpose such deposit may have been made. He shall also, at the same time, cause a written notice of such deposit to be delivered to the lender; and on the application of the latter, and his surrender of the conditional bill of sale, or showing satisfactory cause why it cannot be surrendered, shall pay him the amount deposited, and take his acknowledgment to remain among the records of the court. That there may be no doubt to what amount the deposit in question is to be made, it is required to be as follows:—When the lender has not obtained possession of the lands, the deposit is to be the principal sum lent, with the stipulated interest thereon, not exceeding the legal rate of 12 per cent. per annum; or if interest be payable and no rate has been stipulated, with interest at the established rate of 12 per cent.; but if the lender has held possession of the land, the principal sum borrowed only need be deposited, leaving the interest to be settled on an adjustment of the lender's receipts and disbursements during the period he has been in possession. In either case, a deposit made as above required, shall be considered to preserve to the borrower his full right of redemption; and if the land be in the possession of the lender, shall entitle him to demand the immediate recovery thereof, subject to the adjustment of accounts specified in the following paragraph. Provided, however, that if the borrower in any case shall deposit a less sum than above required, alleging that the sum so deposited is the total amount due to the lender for principal and interest, after deducting the proceeds of the lands in his possession, or otherwise, such deposit shall be received, and notice given to the lender as above directed; and if the amount so deposited be admitted by the lender, or be established, on investigation, to be the total amount due to him, the right of redemption shall be considered to have been fully preserved to the borrower, who will not, however, in such cases, be entitled to the recovery of his lands, until it be admitted or established that he has paid the full amount due from him.—Reg. I, 1798, sec. ii.; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec, xii.

46. In all instances wherein the lender on a bye-bil-wuffa, or similar conditional sale, may have been put in possession of the land, and an adjustment of accounts may consequently become necessary between him and the borrower, the lender is to account to the borrower for the proceeds of the estate whilst in his possession, on the principles prescribed with regard to mortgages and interest in Regulation XV, 1793, as far as the same may be applicable to the nature of the case. But such part of section x. of the above Regulation (paragraph 32), as directs that the mortgages therein referred to are to be considered as cancelled and redeemed, whenever the principal sum, with the simple interest due upon it, shall have been realized from the usufruct of the mortgaged property, or otherwise liquidated by the mortgagee, being inapplicable to the conditional sales referred to in this Regulation, it is hereby declared not to apply thereto.—Reg. I, 1798, sec. iii; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. xiii.

47. A teep for the repayment of money lent on the conditional sales referred to in this Regulation shall not be considered a legal tender, unless accepted as such by the lender; the proof of which acceptance shall be the lender's giving up the bill of sale, or giving a written acknowledgment that he has received back the money lent by him.—Reg. I, 1798, sec. iv; Reg. XXXIV, 1803, sec. xiv.

48. Nothing in this Regulation being intended to alter the terms of contract settled between the parties in the transactions to which it refers (illegal interest excepted), the several provisions in it are to be construed accordingly; and any question of right between the parties is to be regularly brought and determined by the courts of civil justice.—Reg. I, 1798, sec. v; Reg XXXIV, 1803, sec. xv.

49. It is requisite, for the purpose of preventing improvident and injurious transfers of landed property at an inadequate price, by the forfeiture of mortgages accompanied with a condition of sale to the mortgagee if the amount advanced be not repaid within a stated period (which description of mortgage is common throughout the country, under deeds of bye-bil-wuffa, kut-cubaleh, and other similar designations), that an equitable provision should be made for allowing a redemption of the estate within a reasonable and limited period, on payment of the principal sum lent, with interest thereupon, if the mortgagee shall not have been put in possession.—Reg. XVII, 1806, sec. i.

50. When the mortgagee may have obtained possession of the land, on execution of the mortgage deed, or at any time before a final foreclosure of the mortgage, the payment or established tender of the sum lent under any such deed of mortgage and conditional sale, or of the balance due if any part of the principal amount shall have been discharged, or when the mortgagee may not have been put in possession of the mortgaged property, the payment or established tender of the principal sum lent, with any interest due thereupon, shall entitle the mortgagor and owner of such property, or his legal representative, to the redemption of his property, before the mortgage is finally foreclosed in the manner provided for by the following paragraph; that is to say, at any time within one year (Bengal, Fussily, or Willaity, according to the era current where the mortgage may take place), from and after the application of the mortgagee to the Zillah or City Court of Dewanny Adawlut for foreclosing the mortgage and rendering the sale conclusive, in conformity with the following paragraph: Provided that such payment or tender be clearly proved to have been made to the lender and mortgagee or his legal representative; or that the amount due be deposited, within the time above specified, in the Dewanny Adawlut of the zillah or city in which the mortgaged property may be situated, as allowed for the security of the borrower and mortgagor, in such cases, by paragraph 45, the whole of the provisions contained in which paragraph, as applied therein to the stipulated period of redemption, are declared to be equally applicable to the extended period of one year, granted for an equitable right of redemption by this Regulation.—Reg. XVII, 1806, sec. vii.

51. Whenever the receiver or holder of a deed of mortgage and conditional sale, such as is described in the preceding paragraphs, may be desirous of foreclosing the mortgage and rendering the sale conclusive on the expiration of the stipulated period, or at any time subsequent before the sum lent is repaid, he shall, (after demanding payment from the borrower or his representative), apply for that purpose by a written petition, to be presented by himself, or by one of the authorized vakeels of the court, to the judge of the zillah or city in which the mortgaged land or other property may be situated. The judge, on receiving such written application, shall cause the mortgagor or his legal representative to be furnished, as soon as possible, with a copy of it; and shall at the same time notify to him, by a perwanah under his seal and official signature, that if he shall not redeem the property mortgaged in the manner provided for by the foregoing paragraph, within one year from the date of the notification, the mortgage will be finally foreclosed and the conditional sale will become conclusive.—Reg. XVII, 1806, sec. viii.

SUCCESSION TO PROPERTY.

Landed Estates—General.

52. If any zemindar, independent talookdar, or other actual proprietor of land, shall die without a will, or without having declared by a writing or verbally, to whom and in what manner his or her landed property is to devolve after his or her demise, and shall leave two or more heirs, who by the Mahomedan or Hindoo law (according as the parties may be of the former or latter persuasion) may be respectively entitled to succeed to a portion of the landed property of the deceased, such persons shall succeed to the shares to which they may be so entitled.—Reg. XI, 1793, sec. ii.

53. If any zemindar, independent talookdar, or other actual proprietor of land, shall die without a will, or without having declared by a writing, or verbally, to whom and in what manner his or her landed property is to devolve after his or her demise, and shall leave two or more heirs who, by the Mahomedan or Hindoo law (according as the parties may be of the former or latter persuasion) shall be respectively entitled to succeed to a portion of the landed property of the deceased, under the foregoing rule, such persons shall be at liberty, if they shall prefer so doing, to hold the property as a joint undivided estate. If one or more, or all of the sharers, shall be desirous of having separate possession of their respective shares, a division of the estate shall be made in the manner directed in the Regulations, and such sharer or sharers shall have the separate possession of such share or shares accordingly. If there shall be three or more sharers, and any two or more of them shall be desirous of holding their shares as a joint undivided estate, they shall be permitted to keep their shares united accordingly.—Reg. XI, 1793, sec. iii.

54. It is to be understood that if any one or more of such sharers shall apply to have the separate possession of his or their share or shares, the proportion of the public jumma charged upon the whole estate which is to be assessed upon such share or shares is to be adjusted according to the rules prescribed in section x, Regulation I, 1793 ("SETTLEMENT," paragraph 10). If the estate is held khas, or let in farm, the provisions contained in section xi, Regulation I, 1793 ("SETTLEMENT," paragraph 11), regarding estates so circumstanced which may be divided, will be applicable to it.—Reg. XI, 1793, sec. iv.

55. Nothing contained in this Regulation is to be construed to entitle any person to a share of an estate which may be now held entire by any individual, or that may devolve entire to any individual prior to the 1st July, 1794, in exclusion of the other heirs of the last proprietor, under the custom for the future abolition of which this Regulation is enacted.—Reg. XI, 1793, sec. v.

56. Nothing contained in this Regulation is to be construed to prohibit any actual proprietor of land bequeathing or transferring by will, or verbally, his or her landed estate entire to his or her eldest son, or next heir, or other son or heir, in exclusion of all other sons or heirs, or to any person or persons, or to two or more of his or her heirs, in exclusion of all other persons or heirs, in the proportions, and to be held in the manner which such proprietor may think proper; provided that the bequest or transfer be not repugnant to any Regulations that have been or may be passed by the Governor-General in Council, nor contrary to the Hindoo or Mahomedan law; and that the bequest or transfer, whether made by a will or other writing, or verbally, be authenticated by, or made before such witnesses, and in such manner as those laws and Regulations respectively do or may require.—Reg. XI, 1793, sec. vi.

57. The above rules shall not be considered to supersede or affect any established usage which may have obtained in the jungle mehals of Midnapore and other districts, by which the succession to landed estates, the proprietor of which may die intestate, has hitherto been considered to devolve to a single heir, to the exclusion of the other heirs of the deceased. In the mehals in question, the local custom of the country shall be continued in full force as heretofore, and the courts of justice be guided by it in the decision of all claims which may come before them to the inheritance of landed property situated in those mehals.—Reg. X, 1800, sec. ii.

58. In all cases of a Hindoo, Mussulman, or other person subject to the jurisdiction of the Zillah and City Courts, having at his death left a will, and appointed an executor or executors to carry the same into effect, and in which the heir to the deceased may not be a disqualified landholder, subject to the superintendence of the Court of Wards, the executors so appointed are to take charge of the estate of the deceased, and proceed in the execution of their trust according to the will of the deceased, and the laws and usages of the country, without any application to the judge of the Dewanny Adawlut or any other officer of Government, for his sanction; and the courts of justice are prohibited to interfere in such cases, except on a regular complaint against the executors for a breach of trust or otherwise, when they are to take cognizance of such complaint in common with all others of a civil nature, and proceed thereupon according to the Regulations, taking the opinion of their law officers upon any legal exception to the executors, as well as upon the provision to be made for the administration of the estate in the event of the appointed executor being set aside, and generally upon all points of law that may occur; with respect to which the judge is to be guided by the law of the parties as expounded by his law officers, subject to any modifications enacted in any Regulation or Act.—Reg. V, 1799, sec. ii.

59. In case of a Hindoo, Mussulman, or other person subject to the jurisdiction of the Zillah or City Courts, dying intestate, but leaving a son or other heir, who by the laws of the country may be entitled to succeed to the whole estate of the deceased, such heir, if of age and competent to take the possession and management of the estate, or if under age or incompetent, and not under the superintendence of the Court of Wards, his guardian, or nearest of kin, who by special appointment or by the law and usage of the country may be authorized to act for him, is not required to apply to the courts of justice for permission to take possession of the estate of the deceased as far as the same can be done without violence; and the courts of justice are restricted from interference in such cases, except a regular complaint be preferred, when they are to proceed thereupon according to the general Regulations.—Reg. V, 1799, sec. iii.

60. If there be more heirs than one to the estate of a person dying intestate, and they can agree amongst themselves in the appointment of a common manager, they are at liberty to take possession, and the courts of justice are restricted from interference, without a regular complaint, as in the case of a single heir; but if the right of succession of the estate be disputed between several claimants, one or more of whom may have taken possession, the judge, on a regular suit being preferred by the party out of possession, shall take good and sufficient security from the party or parties in possession for his or their compliance with the judgment that may be passed in the suit; or in default of such security being given within a reasonable period, may give possession, until the suit may be determined, to the other claimant or claimants who may be able to give such security, declaring, at the same time, that such possession is not in any degree to affect the right of property at issue between the parties, but to be considered merely as an administration to the estate for the benefit of the heirs, who may, on investigation, be found entitled to succeed thereto. —Reg. V, 1799, sec. iv.

61. In the event of none of the claimants to the estate of a person dying intestate being able to give the security required by the preceding paragraph, and in all cases wherein there may be no person authorized and willing to take charge of the landed estate of a person deceased, the court within whose jurisdiction such estate may be situated (or in which the deceased may have resided, or the principal part of the estate may lie, in the event of its being situated within two or more jurisdictions) is authorized to proceed as directed in the following paragraph, to obtain the appointment of an administrator, for the due care and management of such estate, until, in the former case, the suit depending between the several claimants shall have been determined, or, in the latter case, until the legal heir to the estate, or other person entitled to receive charge thereof as executor, administrator, or otherwise, shall attend and claim the same; when, if the judge be satisfied that the claim is well founded, or if the same be established after any inquiry that may appear necessary, the administrator appointed by the court shall deliver over the estate to him, with a full and just account of all receipts and disbursements during the period of his administration.—Reg. V, 1799, sec. v.

62. Whenever the Zillah and City Courts may deem it just and proper, under the above provisions, to provide for the administration or management of landed property, the court shall issue a precept to the collector of land revenue of the district wherein the estate may be situated, directing him to hold the estate in attachment, and to appoint a person for the due care and management of the estate, under good and adequate security for the faithful discharge of the trust, in a sum proportionate to the extent thereof; provided, however, that if any person holding an interest in the estate shall be dissatisfied with the selection made by the collector of the individual to perform the duty in question, or with the conduct of the manager at any time after his appointment, it shall be competent to such person to represent his objections to the Board of Revenue, and the Board will either confirm the manager chosen, or order the collector to appoint another person, as on consideration of the circumstances of the case may appear reasonable and proper.—Reg. V, 1827, sec. iii.

63. The precept of the Zillah or City Court above mentioned shall state specifically the property to be included in the attachment, and the attachment shall not be withdrawn without a further precept from the court to that effect.—Reg. V, 1827, sec. iv.

64. In all instances of an administrator being appointed under the foregoing provisions, the collector appointing him is authorized to fix for him (subject to the approbation of the Board of Revenue, to whom a report is to be made in such instances) an adequate personal allowance to be paid out of the proceeds of the estate, and to be a percentage thereupon after deducting the expenses of management.—Reg. V, 1799, sec. vi.

65. Nothing in this Regulation is to be understood to limit or alter the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards in the appointment of managers or guardians for the disqualified landholders, described in Regulation X, 1793, or in any case wherein a special power may be vested in the Court of Wards by the above or any other Regulation.—Reg. V, 1799, sec. viii.

66. Inconvenience to the public and injury to private rights having been experienced in certain cases, from disputes subsisting among the proprietors of joint undivided estates, it is hereby enacted, that whenever sufficient cause shall be shown by the revenue authorities, or by any of the individuals holding an interest in such estates, for the interposition of the courts of judicature, it shall be competent to the zillah and city judges to issue a precept to the collector requiring him to appoint a person, duly qualified and under proper security, to manage the estate; that is, to collect the rents and discharge the public revenue, and provide for the cultivation and future improvement of the estate. The court and the collector are to proceed in the appointment of a manager according to the rules provided in paragraphs 62 and 63.—Reg. V, 1812, sec. xxvi; Reg. V, 1827.

67. In all cases of joint undivided estates, when one or more of the proprietors shall die, leaving heirs who are under age, lunatics, or idiots, and without nominating by will a guardian or guardians to the heirs, it shall be the duty of the judge within whose jurisdiction such estate may be situated (or the principal part of it, in the event of its being situated in two or more jurisdictions), on the receipt of a report from the collector, or from any other person or persons interested in the welfare of the family of the deceased, stating the grounds on which he or they may consider the next of kin as unfit to be intrusted with the care of the person or management of the estate of the heir, to investigate the nature of the objections to the nearest of kin, and if satisfied himself that they are well-founded, the judge shall nominate some other person of character and respectability to act as guardian of the heir, reporting the circumstance in every instance to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. I, 1800, sec. i.

68. The minority of proprietors of joint undivided estates is declared to extend to the end of the eighteenth year.—Reg. XXVI, 1793, sec. iii.

69. In the selection of guardians to be appointed under this Regulation, the judge is to attend particularly to their capacity, character, and reponsibility; but the guardianship is in no instance to be intrusted to the legal heir of the ward, or other person interested in outliving him.—Reg. I, 1800, sec. ii.

70. It is expected that some friends of the family of the deceased will gratuitously discharge the trust of guardian; but if, on any occasion, it may become necessary to make a pecuniary compensation to the person appointed to act as guardian, the amount of such compensation is to be fixed by the judge on a due consideration of the circumstances of the case.—Reg. I, 1800, sec. iii.

71. The guardians appointed under this Regulation are to be furnished with a commission under the official seal and signature of the judge; but previously to the delivery of it, they are to give security for their appearance during the continuance of their trust, and to execute the following obligation:

"I, A. B., having voluntarily taken upon myself the guardianship of C., proprietor of a ——— anna share of the estate of D., do hereby solemnly promise and engage to execute the trust committed to me zealously and faithfully to the best of my judgment, and according to the Regulations which have been or may be prescribed for the guidance of guardians by the Governor-General in Council; I will derive no advantage myself, directly or indirectly, from any moneys belonging to my ward, which may come into my hands in the execution of my trust, beyond the compensation granted me for my superintendence, nor will I knowingly suffer any other person to derive therefrom any such undue advantage. I also promise and engage to render a true and just account of whatsoever may be received by me on account of my ward above mentioned, when required to do so by any competent authority; and in the event of its being proved that I have been guilty of any embezzlement, or of any breach of trust injurious to his (or her) property, I hereby bind myself, my heirs and successors, to make good treble the amount of the embezzlement or injury so proved against me."—Reg. I, 1800, sec. iv.

72. Guardians appointed under this Regulation are to have the care of the person, maintenance, and if a minor, the education of the ward. They are also to vote in the election of a manager for the joint undivided estate, and to exercise the same powers of management of the estate of their wards, as could be exercised by the proprietors themselves were they qualified for the direction of their affairs, and the manager is to account to them for such portion of the profits arising from the estate as their wards may be entitled to receive, on a fair distribution thereof amongst all the joint proprietors.—Reg. I, 1800, sec. v; and Reg. XVII, 1805, sec. v.

73. Estates under charge of a manager elected, as stated in the foregoing paragraph, shall be held answerable for the payment of the revenue assessed thereon; and nothing contained in this Regulation shall be considered as exempting the lands from sale, for the realization of any balances which may at any time become due to Government.—Reg. I, 1800, sec. vi.

74. If any person shall think himself aggrieved by any act done by any of the zillah judges in the exercise of the authority vested in them by this Regulation, he is at liberty to state his complaint by petition, either to the judge in person, or to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; and whenever any such complaint shall be made, the judge is to certify a copy of the petition, and of all his proceedings in the case to which it relates, to that court, who are authorized to confirm or rescind his decision as to them shall appear just and proper, and their judgment in all such cases is hereby declared to be final. All proceedings and papers which may be submitted to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut under this paragraph are to be accompanied by true and faithful translations into the English language.—Reg. I, 1800, sec. vii.

Landed Estates—Lower Provinces.

75. The proprietors of joint and undivided estates shall in future be left to manage their estates in such manner as they may think most advisable, under the general Regulations, without any interference on the part of the collector or the Board of Revenue, in the appointment of a manager for the collection of the revenues of the lands from the tenants, farmers, and others.—Reg. XVII, 1805, sec. ii.

76. The estate of joint proprietors will of course be liable to be sold, as at present, for the recovery of any arrears which may at any time become due therefrom to Government, and the proprietors themselves shall be considered jointly and severally responsible for the payment of the public revenue assessed upon such estates, should it at any time be necessary to have recourse to a sale of the separate property of any individual sharers, or to the confinement of their persons for the recovery of the arrears due from their estates to Government.—Reg. XVII, 1805, sec. iii.

77. The payments of revenue shall be carried to the account of the estate at large, and not to the account of any individual proprietor.—Reg. XVII, 1805, sec. iv.

78. In cases in which one or more of the proprietors of a joint undivided estate may be minors, or may be otherwise disqualified for the management of their own concerns in consequence of natural defects or infirmities, the guardians of such persons, whether nominated by the will of their parents or by the zillah judges, under Regulation I, 1800, shall superintend the interests of such disqualified persons, and shall exercise the same powers in the management of the estate of their wards as could be exercised by the proprietors themselves, were they qualified for the direction of their own affairs. —Reg. XVII, 1805, sec. v.

Landed Estates—Ceded and Conquered Provinces.

79. Where more proprietors than one possess an undivided estate, and the whole of them be not within the description of disqualified landholders specified in section iii, Regulation LII, 1803, the settlement shall be made with them jointly; and they are required to elect a serberakar, or manager, who shall have the exclusive management of their lands during the continuance of his appointment. The determination of the majority of the proprietors, or of the majority of those present in the event of the absence of any, shall be binding on the remainder in the choice of a manager; and when the votes of the proprietors are equal, the election of the manager shall be determined by the greater interest of the proprietors in the property. If, in any case, the interest also be equal, the manager shall be appointed by the Board of Revenue.—Reg. LII, 1803, sec. v, cl. 1, C. P., and Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. xxix, Con. P.

80. In instances where part of the proprietors described in the foregoing paragraph may be minors, lunatics, idiots, or others, having guardians, such guardians shall vote for them.—Reg. LII, 1803, sec. v, cl. 2, C. P.; and Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. xxix, Con. P.

81. If the joint proprietors of undivided estates, the whole of whom may not be of the description of disqualified landholders mentioned in section iii, Regulation LII, 1803, shall neglect to elect a serberakar, on the requisition of the collector of the revenue of the zillah in which such estates may be situated, the latter is authorized to nominate a manager for the approbation of the Board of Revenue, which manager, when confirmed by that Board, shall have the exclusive management, as long as it may be deemed advisable to continue him in that trust. The expense attendant on the appointment of the manager shall nevertheless be defrayed by the proprietors, who shall also be responsible for the discharge of the public revenue.—Reg. LII, 1803, sec. v, cl. 3, C. P.; and Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. xxix, Con. P.

82. The determination of the majority of the proprietors present, under the restrictions specified in paragraph 79, shall also be binding on the remainder, in agreeing or disagreeing to the jumma proposed for undivided estates: the sharers, however, if dissatisfied, may obtain a division of their lands, and a proportionate allotment of the revenue assessed thereon, but at their own expense.—Reg. LII, 1803, sec. v, cl. 4, C. P.; and Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. xxix, Con. P.

83. The rules contained in the present Regulation for the management of the persons and estates of disqualified landholders shall not be held applicable to proprietors, managers, and guardians, of the descriptions specified in the foregoing.—Reg. LII, 1803, sec. v, cl. 5, C. P.; and Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. xxix, Con. P.

Landed Estates—Cuttack.

84. All claims to the right of inheritance or succession to any of the under-mentioned tributary estates are to be heard, tried, and determined, in the first instance by the superintendent of the tributary mohauls in Zillah Cuttack.

Reg. XI, 1816, sec. ii.

85. The superintendent in deciding cases of the above nature, shall be generally guided by the established laws and usages of the respective tributary estates. Provided however, that the estates above enumerated shall in no case be considered liable to be divided according to the Hindoo law, but shall descend entire to the person having the most substantial claim according to local and family usage.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. iii.

86. The superintendent is prohibited from taking cognizance of any suit, the cause of action in which shall have arisen antecedent to the 14th day of October, 1803, the date on which the fort and town of Cuttack were surrendered to the British arms.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. iv.

87. The established pleaders of the Zillah Court shall attend the superintendent's court, to be held in the court house of the Zillah Adawlut; and they shall be guided by the same rules as pleaders in the Zillah Courts; subject, of course, to the prescribed rules in the cases of paupers.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. v.

88. The Hindoo law officer of the Zillah Court is to expound the Hindoo law, in all cases wherein it may be requisite for the due determination of causes pending before the superintendent. —Reg. XI, 1816, sec. vi.

89. All processes issued in suits instituted under this Regulation shall bear the official seal and signature of the superintendent; and shall be executed by the officers on his establishment, in like manner as all similar processes issued by the judge of the Zillah Court are executed; and any disobedience and resistance to his process shall be liable to a fine to Government to be fixed by the superintendent, subject to the confirmation of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; or, if the offender be a landholder or sudder farmer, and the case appear to call for it, by a confiscation of his estate or farm, commutable to a fine by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or Governor-General in Council.—Reg. XI. 1816, sec. vii.

90. In the trial of all suits instituted under this Regulation, the superintendent shall be guided by the general rules prescribed for the trial of civil causes before the judges of the Zillah Courts, subject to the special provisions contained in this Regulation, or in points not specially provided for, to any qualification of the general rules which may be found expedient, and may be sanctioned by the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. viii.

91. It shall not be requisite to use stamped paper for the plaints, pleadings, decrees, or any papers relative to suits instituted under this Regulation; nor shall any durkhaust on stamped paper be required for the admission of exhibits, or the issue of summonses to witnesses in such suits when tried in the first instance, or in appeal.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. ix.

92. In all suits decided and orders passed by the superintendent under this Regulation, an appeal from his decisions and orders shall lie to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, provided that the petition of appeal be preferred within three months after the decree or order appealed from shall have been passed.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xi.

93. The petition of appeal shall be presented to the superintendent, and shall contain a full and explicit statement of the appellant's objections to the decree or order from which he is desirous to appeal. The appellant, if not admitted as a pauper, shall at the same time tender good security for the payment of any costs which may be adjudged on the determination of the appeal by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or if unable to give such security shall make oath or subscribe a solemn declaration to his inability, or adduce two creditable persons to prove the same.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xii.

94. On receipt of the petition of appeal, with the prescribed security, or proof of inability required in failure thereof, the superintendent shall cause a copy to be made of the decree or order from which the appeal may be required, and within fifteen days shall certify and transmit the same, with the petition of appeal to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xiii.

95. When the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut may admit the appeal, they will cause a precept to be issued, under the seal of the court, and the signature of the register, addressed to the superintendent, requiring him within such period as may be limited by the precept, to furnish a complete record of all papers received and proceedings held in the case; and also to call upon the respondent or respondents for his or their answer, or to appear in person or by vakeel, within a certain time before the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and deliver his or their answer to that court.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xiv, cl. 1.

96. The superintendent, on receipt of the precept, shall comply with the exigency thereof as required; or in the event of his not being able to carry the same into complete execution within the prescribed period, shall certify the same to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, with notice of the period within which a further return will be made.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xiv, cl. 2.

97. It shall be optional with appellants and respondents, in appeals to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, under this regulation, to attend in person or by vakeel for the prosecution or defence of their appeals before that court; or to deliver their proceedings to the superintendent of the tributary mehals; who, in the latter case shall forward them, as soon as received to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and communicate to the parties any orders which may be issued by that court.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xv.

98. In cases wherein it may appear to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut that the cause in appeal has not been sufficiently investigated, and consequently that further evidence is required for the just determination of it, that court is empowered to refer the cause back for further trial and judgment to the superintendent, or to direct that further evidence be taken and transmitted to the court.—Reg. XI, 1816. sec. xvi.

99. The provisions contained in paragraph 85, by which the decisions passed by the superintendent are to be governed, shall be considered equally applicable to the decisions of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in all appeals under this Regulation.—Reg XI, 1816, sec. xvii.

100. The principles of the several provisions contained in paragraphs 86 to 88, 90 and 91, shall also be considered applicable to all appeals from decisions or orders of the superintendent of the tributary mehals in zillah Cuttack, which may come before the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xviii.

101. In cases of appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut from any decree or order of the superintendent involving a transfer of property, or any change in the actual possession of property, the decree or order appealed from shall not be carried into execution during the appeal to that court, provided the appellant shall give good and sufficient security for the performance of the final decision which may be passed upon the appeal; and in no instance shall the superintendent cause to be carried into execution any such decree or order passed by him, until the period allowed for the appeal may have elapsed.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xix, cl. 1.

102. In the event of the appellant's not giving security for staying the execution of the decree appealed from, and of its being consequently put into execution whilst an appeal is pending, good and sufficient security shall be taken from the respondent for the performance of the final decision which may be passed upon the appeal.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xix, cl. 2.

103. In case neither party shall be able to give the requisite security the estate in dispute shall be attached by order of the superintendent until the security required shall be received, or until the final determination be passed by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut upon the case.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xix, cl. 3.

104. No decree or order, whether of the superintendent of the tributary mehauls, or of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, involving a transfer of the property or an actual change in the possession of any of the estates enumerated in paragraph 84, shall be carried into execution without a previous communication being made by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to Government; in order that sufficient time may be afforded for the adoption of any precautionary measures which may be eventually judged requisite to support and enforce the execution of the decree or order without hazard to the public tranquillity.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xix, cl. 4.

105. The judgments of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall be final and conclusive in all appeals heard and determined by the court under this Regulation, within the limitation of appeals to the Queen in Council, prescribed, viz. 1000*l.* or rupees 10,000.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xx, cl. 1; and Order of Her Majesty in Council, 10th April, 1838, paragraph I.

106. If the amount or value adjudged shall, exclusive of costs of suit, exceed the sum of 1,000*l.*, or rupees 10,000, a further appeal will be open to Her Majesty in Council; and shall be received by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, under the provisions which have been enacted for receiving such appeals in Regulation XVI, 1797.—Reg. XI, 1816, sec. xx, cl. 2; and Order of Her Majesty in Council, 10th April, 1838, paragraph I.

Personal Property.

107. The judges of the Zillah or City Courts, on receiving information that any person within their respective jurisdictions has died intestate, leaving personal property, and that there is no claimant to such property, are to adopt such measures as may be necessary for the temporary care of the property, and to issue an advertisement in the current languages of the country, requiring the heir of the deceased, or any person entitled to receive charge of his effects, to attend for this purpose. Such advertisement to be published on the spot where the property was found, at the Dewanny Adawlut cutcherry of the zillah or city, and if ascertainable, at the dwelling place of the deceased; after which, should any person attend and satisfy the judge of his title to the property, or to receive charge thereof as executor, administrator, or otherwise, the same is to be delivered up to him, on repayment of any necessary expense incurred in the care of it. Should no claim be preferred within the twelve months next ensuing, an inventory of the property and report of the circumstances of the case is to be transmitted to the Governor-General in Council for his orders.—Reg. V, 1799, sec. vii.

108. It being enacted, in Statute XXXIX, Geo. III, chapter 79, section xxi, that whenever any British subject shall die intestate, and neither a creditor nor the next of kin shall apply for letters of administration, the registrar of the Supreme Court shall administer to the estate of the deceased; and it shall be the duty of the zillah and city judges, whenever any British European subject shall die within the limits of their jurisdictions and no will shall be found among the effects of the deceased, to report the circumstance without delay to the registrar of the Supreme Court of Judicature, retaining the property under their charge until letters of administration shall have been obtained by that officer, or by some other person, from the Supreme Court of Judicature, when the property is to be delivered over to the person obtaining such letters; or in the event of a will being subsequently discovered, to the person who obtains probate of the will.*—Reg. XV, 1806, sec. vi.

RULES FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE PROPERTY OF DECEASED PERSONS FROM WRONGFUL POSSESSION.

109. Whenever a person dies leaving property, moveable or immoveable, it shall be lawful for any person claiming a right by succession thereto, or to any portion thereof, to make application to the judge of the court of the district where any part of the property is found or situate for relief, either after actual possession has been taken by another person, or when forcible means of seizing possession are apprehended.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. i.

110. It shall be lawful for any agent, relative, or near friend, or for the Court of Wards in cases within their cognizance, in the event of any minor, disqualified, or absent person being entitled by succession to such property as aforesaid, to make the like application for relief.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. ii.

111. The judge to whom such application shall be made shall, in the first place, inquire by the solemn declaration of the complainant, and by witnesses and documents at his discretion, whether there be strong reasons for believing that the party in possession, or taking forcible means for seizing possession, has no lawful title, and that the applicant, or the person on whose behalf he applies, is really entitled and is likely to be materially prejudiced if left to the ordinary remedy of a regular suit, and that the application is made bonâ fide.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. iii.

112. In case the judge shall be satisfied of the existence of such strong ground of belief, but not otherwise, he shall cite the party complained of, and give notice of vacant or disturbed possession by publication, and after the expiration of a reasonable time shall determine summarily the right to possession (subject to regular suit as hereinafter mentioned) and shall deliver possession accordingly; provided always, that the judge shall have the power to appoint an officer who shall take an inventory of effects, and seal or otherwise secure the same, upon being applied to for the purpose, without delay, whether he shall have concluded the inquiry necessary for citing the party complained of or not.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. iv.

113. In case it shall further appear, upon such application and examination as aforesaid, that danger is to be apprehended of the misappropriation or waste of the property before the summary suit can be determined, and that the delay in obtaining security from the party in possession, or the insufficiency thereof, is likely to expose the party out of possession to considerable risk, provided he be the lawful owner; it shall be lawful for the judge to appoint one or more curators, with the powers hereinafter next mentioned, whose authority shall continue according to the terms of his or their respective appointments, and in no case beyond the determination of the summary suit and the confirmation or delivery of possession in consequence thereof. Provided always, that in the case of land, the judge may delegate to the collector or to his officer the powers of a curator, and also that every appointment of a curator in respect of any property be duly published.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. v.

114. The judge shall have power to authorize such curator, either to take possession of the property generally, or until security be given by the party in possession, or until inventories of the property shall have been made, or for any other purpose necessary for securing the property from misappropriation or waste by the party in possession. Provided always, that it shall be entirely discretionary with the judge, whether he shall allow the party in possession to continue in such possession on giving security, or not, and any continuance in possession shall be subject to such orders as the judge may issue touching inventories, or the securing of deeds or other effects.—Act XIX, 1841, sec vi.

115. The judge shall exact from the curator security for the faithful discharge of his trust, and for rendering satisfactory accounts of the same as hereinafter mentioned, and may authorize him to receive out of the property such remuneration as shall appear reasonable, but in no case exceeding five per centum on the personal property and on the annual profits of the real property. All surplus moneys realized by the curator shall be paid into court, and invested in public securities for the benefit of the persons entitled thereto upon adjudication of the summary suit. Provided always, that although security shall be required from the curator with all reasonable despatch, and, where it is practicable, shall be taken generally to answer all cases for which the person may be afterwards appointed curator, yet no delay in the taking of security shall prevent the judge from immediately investing the curator with the powers of his office.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. vii.

116. Where the estate of the deceased person shall consist wholly or in part of land paying revenue to Government, in all matters regarding the propriety of citing the party in possession, of appointing a curator, and of nominating individuals to that appointment, the judge shall demand a report from the collector, and the collector is hereby required to furnish the same. In cases of urgency, the judge may proceed, in the first instance, without such report, and he shall not be obliged to act in conformity thereto; but, in case of his acting otherwise than according to such report, he shall immediately forward a statement of his reasons to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, if they shall be dissatisfied with such reasons, shall direct the judge to proceed conformably to the report of the collector.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. viii.

117. The curator shall be subject to all orders of the judge regarding the institution or the defence of suits, and that all suits may be instituted or defended in the name of the curator on behalf of the estate. Provided that an express authority shall be requisite in the sunnud of the curator's appointment for the collection of debts or rents; but such express authority shall enable the curator to give a full acquittance for any sums of money received by virtue thereof.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. ix.

118. Pending the custody of the property by the curator, it shall be lawful for the judge to make such allowances to parties having a primâ facie right thereto as, upon a summary investigation of the rights and circumstances of the parties interested, he shall consider that necessity may require, taking, at his discretion, security for the repayment thereof, with interest, in case the party shall, upon the adjudication of the summary suit, appear not to be entitled thereto.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. x.

119. The curator shall file monthly accounts in abstract, and at the period of every three months, if his administration last so long; and upon giving up the possession of the property, file a detailed account of his administration to the satisfaction of the judge.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. xi.

120. The accounts of any such curator as is above described shall be open to the inspection of all parties interested; and it shall be competent for any such interested party to appoint a separate person to keep a duplicate account of all receipts and payments by such curator: and if it be found that the accounts of any such curator are in arrear, or if they shall be erroneous or incomplete, or if the curator shall not produce them whenever he shall be ordered to do so by the judge, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand rupees for every such default. —Act XIX, 1841, sec. xii.

121. After the judge of any district shall have appointed any curator, such appointment shall preclude the judge of any other district within the same presidency from appointing any other curator, provided the first appointment be in respect of the whole of the property of the deceased. But if the appointment be only in respect of a portion of the property of the deceased, this shall not preclude the appointment within the same presidency of another curator in respect of the residue or any portion thereof; provided always, that no judge shall appoint a curator, or entertain a summary suit, in respect of property which is the subject of a summary suit previously instituted under this Act before another judge; and provided further, that if two or more curators be appointed by different judges for several parts of an estate, it shall be lawful for the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut to make such order as it shall think fit for the appointment of one curator of the whole property.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. xiii.

122. This Act shall not be put in force unless the aforesaid application to the judge be made within six months of the decease of the proprietor, whose property is claimed by right in succession. —Act XIX, 1841, sec. xiv.

123. This Act shall not be put in force to contravene any public Act of settlement. Neither in cases in which the deceased proprietor shall have given legal directions for the possession of his property after his decease in the event of minority or otherwise, in opposition to such directions; but, in every such case, so soon as the judge having jurisdiction over the property of a deceased person shall be satisfied of the existence of such directions, he shall give effect thereto.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. xv.

124. This Act shall not be put in force for the purpose of disturbing the possession of the Court of Wards of any presidency; and in case a minor, or other disqualified person whose property shall be subject to the Court of Wards, shall be the party on whose behalf application is made under this Act, the judge if he determine to cite the party in possession and also appoint a curator, shall invest the Court of Wards with the curatorship of the estate pending the suit without taking such security as aforesaid, and in case the minor or other disqualified person shall, upon the adjudication of the summary suit, appear to be entitled to the property, possession shall be delivered to the Court of Wards.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. xvi.

125. Nothing in this Act contained shall be any impediment to the bringing of a regular suit either by the party whose application may have been rejected, before or after citing the party in possession, or by the party who may have been evicted from the possession under this Act.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. xvii.

126. The decision of the judge upon the summary suit under this Act shall have no other effect than that of settling the actual possession; but for this purpose it shall be final, not subject to any appeal or order for review.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. xviii.

127. It shall be lawful for the Governments of the respective presidencies to appoint public curators for any district or number of districts: and the judge having jurisdiction shall nominate such public curator or curators in all cases where the choice of a curator is left discretionary with him under preceding provisions of this Act.—Act XIX, 1841, sec. xix.

128. Whenever a person dies leaving moveable or immoveable property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts, and such court shall be satisfied that danger is to be apprehended of the misappropriation and waste of the property before it can be ascertained who may be legally entitled to the succession to such property, it shall be lawful for the said court to authorize and enjoin the ecclesiastical registrar, or one or more curators, to collect such effects, and hold, or deposit, or invest the same in such manner and place and upon such security, and subject to such orders and directions as the court may deem expedient.—Art. XIX, 1841, sec. xx.

RULES FOR THE COLLECTION OF DEBTS ON SUCCESSION TO DECEASED PERSONS.

129. No debtor of any deceased person shall be compelled in any court of law to pay his debt to any person claiming to be entitled to the effects of any deceased person, or any part thereof, except on the production of a certificate to be obtained in manner hereinafter mentioned, or of a probate or letters of administration, unless the court shall be of opinion that payment of the debt is withheld from fraudulent or vexatious motives, and not from any reasonable doubt as to the party entitled.—Act. XX, 1841, sec. i.

130. The Zillah or District Court within the jurisdiction of which any part of the property of the deceased may be found, shall have authority to grant a certificate under this Act. The applicant in his petition shall set forth his title. The judge shall issue notice of application, inviting claimants, and fixing a day for hearing the petition; and upon the appointed day, or as soon after as may be convenient, shall determine the right to the certificate, and grant the same accordingly.—Act. XX, 1841, sec. ii.

131. The certificate of the district or zillah judge shall be conclusive of the representative title against all debtors to the deceased, and shall afford full indemnity to all debtors paying their debts to the person in whose favour the certificate has been granted.—Act. XX, 1841, sec. iii.

132. XX, 1841, sec. iv.

133. The granting of such certificate may be suspended by an appeal to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which court may declare the party to whom the certificate should be granted or may direct such further proceedings for the investigation of the title as it shall think fit. The court may also, upon petition, after a certificate shall have been granted by the district or zillah judge, grant a fresh certificate in supersession of the certificate granted by the district or zillah judge; and such fresh certificate shall not affect any payments made to the person to whom any former certificate may have been granted without notice that the same has been superseded, but shall entitle the person named therein to receive all moneys that may have been recovered under the first certificate from the person to whom the same may have been granted.—Act XX, 1841, sec. v.

134. Every certificate shall give authority to the person to whom the same is granted throughout the presidency within which the same is granted; and no certificate subsequently granted in respect of the same property shall be valid or effectual, except as hereinafter mentioned. —Act XX. 1841, sec. vi.

135. A person certified as aforesaid, may be empowered to receive interest on Government notes and dividends, or on shares of any bank, or parts thereof, and to negotiate such securities. But these powers shall only arise by express words in the certificate.—Act XX, 1841, sec. vii.

136. Where a certificate shall have been granted, in cases in which such certificate would be valid but for the previous grant of a certificate, all payments made to the person holding the later certificate in ignorance of the grant of the previous certificate, shall be held good against claims under such previous certificate.—Act XX, 1841, sec. viii.

137. With regard to the property of deceased Hindoos, Mahomedans, and other persons not usually designated by the term British subjects, no certificate in respect of any such property shall be valid, if made after a probate or letters of administration granted in respect of the same, provided assets belonging to the deceased were, at the time of his death, within the local jurisdiction of the court granting the probate or letters of administration.—Act XX, 1841, sec. ix.

139. No probate or letters of administration shall be valid for the purpose of the recovery of debts or for the security of debtors, after a certificate granted in respect of the same property for which such probate or letters of administration shall have been granted, provided assets belonging to the deceased were at the time of his death within the jurisdiction of the court granting such certificate.—Act. XX, 1841, sec. xi.

141. Curators appointed under the Act XIX, 1841, shall not exercise any powers which, but for that Act, would lawfully belong to such persons obtaining certificates, executors or administrators, where a certificate, probate or letters of administration, have been actually obtained; but all persons who may have paid debts or rents to a curator, authorized by a judge to receive the same, shall be indemnified, and the curator shall be responsible for the payment of the same to the person who has obtained a certificate, the executor or administrator, as the case may be.—Act XX, 1841, sec. xiii.

142. All probates and letters of administration granted by any of Her Majesty's courts in cases in which any assets belonging to deceased persons were, at the time of their deaths, within the local jurisdiction of the court granting the probate or letters of administration, shall have the effect of probate and letters of administration, granted in respect of the property of British subjects, but for the purpose of the recovery of debts only, and the security of debtors paying the same; except so far as is in this Act provided.—Act XX, 1841, sec. xiv.

143. Nothing in this Act contained shall be held to extend to the property of any person usually designated as a British subject.—Act XX, 1841, sec. xv.

145. If any such disputes, among persons claiming to be proprietors of public securities of the East India Company, are not ended within two years from the date of the certificate of administration granted by any district or zillah judge, the said trustee may apportion the principal sum of the said securities rateably among the parties appearing from the aforesaid certificate to be proprietors thereof, and may apply for and receive new securities from the proper officer appointed to issue the same, in the respective names of the several parties certified to be entitled thereto; provided that such new securities shall be issued only according to the rules in use for the regulation and issue of such public securities; and the receipt of the said trustee for such new securities, by endorsement on the whole securities or otherwise, shall be a legal discharge to the East India Company against the disputing parties claiming to be entitled to the several amounts for which such securities shall be issued: Provided always, that if the amount of any securities in dispute, or any part thereof, shall not be sufficient to admit of their rateable division according to the rules applicable to the issue of such securities, the said trustees may sell and dispose of the disputed securities, or such part as shall be necessary under this provision, and apportion the proceeds thereof among the parties entitled to receive the same.—Act X, 1851, sec. ii.

146. Every such certificate granted to the trustee appointed under this Act, shall be taken to supersede and annul any previous certificate given of a half or any other share in the said personal estate, so far as concerns the said securities.—Act X, 1851, sec. iii.

147. As regards residents in foreign states, out of the jurisdiction of British courts of justice, a certificate of administration to personal estates granted by the British representative accredited to that state, or as regards the residents in any district to which Act XX of 1841 does not extend, such certificate granted by the British officer in that district holding the highest executive authority, shall have the same effect as regards public securities of the East India Company, as a certificate granted to a native subject of Her Majesty under the provisions of Act XX of 1841, as amended by this Act.—Act X, 1851, sec. iv.

148. This Act (X, 1851,) shall be construed with and as part of Act XX, 1841, paragraphs 129 to 143.—Act X, 1851, sec. v.

BENGAL SECRETARIAT LIBRARY

149. Whereas doubts exist as to the limits within which certificates of administration to personal estates granted in pursuance of section iv, Act X, of 1851 (paragraph 147), by the British representative accredited to a foreign state, or by the British officer holding the highest executive authority in a district to which Act XX, of 1841 (paragraphs 129 to 143), does not extend are operative, and it is expedient to remove such doubts, and also to amend the provisions of the said Acts; It is enacted as follows:—Act VIII, 1854. Preamble.

150. Every such certificate of administration as aforesaid, which shall hereafter be granted, shall as regards the public securities of the East India Company, give authority to the person to whom the same shall be granted throughout the territories in the possession and under the Government of the East India Company, and have the same effect throughout the said territories as a certificate granted under the provisions of Act XX, of 1841, as amended by Act X, of 1851, has within the Presidency within which the same is granted.—Act VIII, 1854, sec. i.

151. No certificate granted under the provisions of Act XX, of 1841, as amended by Act X, of 1851, or under the provisions of Act X, of 1851, shall empower the person certified to negotiate any Government note or share of a Bank or any share of such security, or to receive any interest or dividend due thereon, or any share of such interest or dividend, unless the Government note or Bank share shall be specified in such certificate.—Act VIII, 1854, sec. ii.

152. Any judge, British representative or other British officer authorized to grant a certificate may from time to time extend the same to any Government note or Bank share not originally specified therein, and every such extension shall have the same effect as if the Government note or Bank share to which the certificate shall be extended had been originally specified therein.—Act VIII, 1854 ,sec. iii.

153. Upon the extension of a certificate, security may be required in the same manner as upon the original grant of a certificate.—Act VIII, 1854, sec. iv.

REGISTRY OF DEEDS.

Offices where established—who to act as Registers.

NOTE.—The provisions of the following Regulations affecting the validity of instruments executed at different times, under the operation of the rules at such time in force, the whole have been retained, though not all at present operative on instruments executed under the laws actually in force.

154. An office for the registry of deeds shall be established in each zillah, and in the cities of Patna, Dacca, and Moorshedabad. The superintendent of the office shall make and subscribe the following oath or declaration previous to his entering on the execution of the duties of the office.

"I, A. B., solemnly swear (or declare) that I will trully and faithfully execute the office of register of deeds for the zillah or city of ————, and that I will not, directly or indirectly, derive any pecuniary or other benefit whatsoever from the said office, excepting such as is or may be allowed to me by this Regulation, or by any Regulation that may be hereafter passed by the Governor-General in Council: So help me God."—Reg. XXXVI, 1793, sec. ii; Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. ii.

155. In addition to the offices established under the provisions of Regulation XXXVI, 1793, offices for the registry of deeds may be established at any civil stations, and may be placed by the orders of Government under the superintendence of any officers resident at such stations whom Government may nominate for that purpose.—Act XXX, 1838, sec. ii.

156. The registration of deeds at any office of registry authorized by Act XXX, 1838, shall be subject to the payment of the same fees as are prescribed in paragraph 186, for deeds registered at an office established at the station of a Zillah or City Court.—Act XXX, 1838, sec. iii.

157. Section xv, Regulation XXXVI, 1793, (paragraph 158,) and clauses 2 and 3; section vi, Regulation XX, 1812, (paragraphs 194 and 195,) shall not be held applicable to offices and persons established and appointed for the registry of deeds under this Act.—Act XXX, 1838, sec. iv.

158. The several registers are permitted, in cases of absence from their stations, sickness or any other disqualification from personal attendance to the duties of their office, to appoint (with the approbation of the judge, a deputy, being duly qualified, to act for them; and such deputy, so appointed and approved, after taking a similar oath or affirmation to that prescribed for the register, shall be authorized to perform the several acts which the register is hereby empowered to perform. This permission, however, is to be expressly confined to the cases stated; and the registers, when present at their stations, are not to be allowed to employ any deputy, but are to be required to discharge personally the duties of the office committed to them —Reg. XXXVI, 1793, sec. xv.

159. The office for the registry of deeds in the several zillahs and cities, which is provided for by Regulation XXXVI, 1793, shall generally be established at the station of the Zillah or City Court, and shall, as directed by the Regulations above mentioned, be superintended by the register of the Zillah or City Court, or where there may be more registers than one by the register employed at the station of the Zillah or City Court, so long as he may continue to reside at such station; and as already required by the Regulations in force, he shall personally discharge the duties of the office committed to him, whilst present at the station, unless prevented by sickness, or otherwise; in which case, as well as in all cases of temporary absence from the station, he is permitted, as heretofore, with the approbation of the judge of the Zillah or City Court to which he may be attached, to appoint a deputy, being a covenanted servant of the Company, and duly qualified to act for him; who, after taking an oath or declaration similar to that prescribed for the register of deeds, is authorized to perform the several acts which the register is empowered to perform.—Reg. IV, 1824, sec. ii.

160. Whenever a zillah or city register, vested with the superintendence of the registry office may be absent from the station where the office is established, without having appointed a deputy, in pursuance of the foregoing paragraph, the judge of the station is hereby authorized to appoint some duly qualified covenanted servant of the Company to act as deputy register of deeds, and the deputy so appointed, after being duly sworn, or making the required declaration, shall be authorized to perform the prescribed duties of the office.—Reg. IV, 1824, sec. iii.

161. It shall, moreover, be the duty of the zillah or city judge to appoint a qualified person, being a covenanted servant of the Company, to officiate as register of deeds, whenever, from a vacancy in the office of register, the nomination of a deputy cannot take effect agreeably to the preceding paragraph.—Reg. IV, 1824, sec. iv.

162. In the event of there being no covenanted servant at the station, to whom, in the cases mentioned in the two preceding paragraphs, the judge may deem it proper to confide the office of registering deeds, he is himself authorized and required to perform the prescribed duties of the office.—Reg. IV, 1824, sec. v.

NOTE.—The foregoing rules are virtually superseded by the abolition of the office of Register to the Zillah Court, but they are retained here because no other distinct provision is made in the Regulations for the appointment of a Register of Deeds, nor for the substitution of a representation in the event of the Register's absence.

163. Whenever a zillah or city judge may deem the appointment of officers for the registry of deeds advisable, he shall, having previously obtained the consent of the Governor-General in Council to that effect, be competent to make over to the principal sudder ameen at his station the duty of registering deeds, subject to all the existing rules prescribed for that duty, and such principal sudder ameen, while so officiating, shall receive the fees authorized by the Regulations for the performance of that duty.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. iv.

164. In case of the death or absence on leave of any person appointed by Government to register deeds under Act XXX, 1838, it shall be lawful for the zillah judge or other officer specially authorized by Government, to appoint any person whom he may think proper to take temporary charge of the office and to register deeds, in the same manner as if such person had been appointed to the office by the orders of Government.—Reg. XXX, 1838, sec. vi.

XX, 1812, sec. v, cl. 3.

169. The register of deeds for the conveyance of landed property is likewise authorized and required to register engagements contracted by indigo planters, whether European or natives, with the ryots and others for the delivery of the indigo plant.—Reg. XX, 1812, sec. iii, cl. 1.

175. The register shall, on application being made to him, allow all persons to inspect the copies of engagements for the delivery of indigo attested, endorsed, and filed in the manner prescribed in paragraph 172, as well as the register-book in which such engagements may have been entered.—Reg. XX, 1812, sec. iii, cl. 7.

176. In like manner, the register shall, on application being made to him, grant copies of all engagements registered by him to persons whom they may concern; and such copies, in the event of the originals being lost, destroyed, or not forthcoming, shall be received as sufficient evidence of such deeds in all courts of judicature whatever; proof being made by the subscribing witnesses to the original deed that the original was duly executed.—Reg. 200. Persons desirous of registering deeds written in any European language at any office of registry in the territories subject to the presidency of Bengal, shall be required to pay for transcribing the same according to the established rates of section writing, in addition to the fees prescribed by paragraph 186.—Reg. XXX, 1838, sec. v.

201 Deeds may be registered in any registry office, whether such office be in the district where the property or any part thereof to which such deeds relate is situated, or not.—Act IV, 1845, sec. i.

202. Provided always, that when the registry office in which a deed is registered is in a district in which the whole of the property to which such deed relates is not situated, it shall be the duty of the register of the said office to forward to the office of the district or districts in which the whole or any part of such property is situated, a copy of the deed as registered and endorsed in his office, the said copies to be furnished and attested as prescribed in paragraph 187, and the register of any office receiving such copy so forwarded shall duly register the same as if it had been presented to him in the first instance by the party registering.—Act IV, 1845, sec. ii.

203. For every such copy required for transmission to any office as aforesaid the party registering shall pay the usual fee, and the register receiving the same shall duly account for the same to the several registers to whose offices copies may be transmitted for registry.—Act IV, 1845, sec. iii.

204. The register-books of offices established under Act XXX, 1838, shall be deposited, in the Lower Provinces of the presidency of Bengal, among the records of the magistrates or joint magistrates, and in the North Western Provinces of the said presidency, among the records of the collectors of the stations where such offices have been or shall be established.—Act XI, 1851.

205. It shall be left to the option of all persons to register or not, as they may think proper, any of the descriptions of deeds specified in paragraph 165, that have been executed, or which may be executed, prior to the 1st of January, 1796. The not registering such deeds shall in no wise operate to the prejudice of the rights of the parties thereto, which shall remain the same as if this Regulation had never been enacted.—Reg. XXXVI, 1793, sec. iv.

206. It shall also be left to the option of all persons to register or not, as they may think proper, the several descriptions of deeds specified in clauses 4, 5, and 6 of paragraph 165, whether executed previous or subsequent to the first January, 1796. The not registering of the deeds specified in those three clauses shall in no wise operate to the prejudice of the rights of the parties thereto, which shall remain the same as if this Regulation had never been enacted.—Reg. XXXVI, 1793, sec. v.

207. Every deed of sale or gift, of the description specified in clause 2, paragraph 165, executed on or after the 1st January, 1796, and a memorial of which shall be duly registered according to this Regulation, shall, provided its authenticity be established to the satisfaction of the court, invalidate any other deed of sale or gift for the same property, executed subsequent to the said date, which may not have been registered, and whether such second or other deed shall have been executed prior or subsequent to the registered deed.—Reg. XXXVI, 1793, sec. vi, cl. 1.

208. Every deed of mortgage of the description specified in clause 3, paragraph 192, executed on or after the 1st January, 1796, and a memorial of which shall be duly registered according to Regulation XXXVI, 1793, and provided its authenticity be established to the satisfaction of the court, shall be satisfied in preference to any other mortgage on the same property executed subsequent to the said date, which may not have been registered, and whether such second or other mortgage shall have been executed prior or subsequent to the registered mortgage.—Reg. XXXVI, 1793, sec. vi. cl. 2.

209. It being the object, however, of the rules in the two preceding paragraphs, to prevent persons being defrauded by purchasing or receiving in gift, or taking in mortgage, real property which may have been before sold, given, or mortgaged, subsequent to the 1st January, 1796, and as persons can never suffer such imposition when they are apprized of the previous transfer or mortgage of the property, it is to be understood, that if any person shall purchase, receive in gift, or take in mortgage, any real property, knowing such property to have been previously sold, given, or mortgaged to any other person subsequent to the 1st January, 1796, and that the deed of sale, gift, or mortgage has not been registered, and shall register his own deed, in such case the deed of sale, gift or mortgage of such subsequent purchaser, donee, or mortgagee, which may have been registered, shall not from the registry of it invalidate, or be discharged in preference to the unregistered deed of sale, gift, or mortgage, first executed, provided the authenticity of the latter be established to the satisfaction of the court.—Reg. XXXVI, 1793, sec. vi. cl. 3.

NOTE.—This section is inoperative for the future under Acts I and XIX, 1843.

210. Regulation XXXVI, 1793, is in force from the 1st January, 1796, till the 1st of May, 1843.—Reg. XXXVI, 1793, sec. xvi; Act I, 1843.

211. The registry of all deeds which may have been hitherto duly executed by a zillah or city judge, or other covenanted servant, with his sanction in the absence of the register, is declared to be of equal validity, as if it had been executed by the zillah or city register.—Reg. IV, 1824, sec. vi.

212. Whereas clause 3, section vi, Regulation XXXVI, 1793, (paragraph 209), provides that registered conveyances and other instruments affecting titles to land and other interests therein shall not take precedence of unregistered conveyances and instruments in cases where the party registering shall have known of the existence of such unregistered conveyances or other instruments. And whereas a complicated system of law has arisen out of the construction which is to be given to the provisions regarding the knowledge of parties, or notice had by them in such cases; And whereas much perjury has been committed in investigations touching the fact of such notice or knowledge, and much of the time of the courts has been occupied with such investigations; And whereas in consequence of forgéries, perjuries, fraudulent concealments, and other practices, no person purchasing or advancing money on the security of land can safely rely on the conveyances or other instruments affecting the title to such land or other interest therein affording, by means of their being registered, a security against conveyances or instruments being set up, as of previous date, by unregistered claimants.—Act I, 1843. Preamble.

213. It is hereby enacted that all provisions contained in any Regulation or Regulations, touching such knowledge or notice as aforesaid of previous unregistered conveyances or instruments affecting titles to land or other interests therein, shall be repealed from the 1st day of May, 1843,

[and every conveyance or other instrument affecting title to land, or any interest in the same authorised by those codes respectively, to be registered, shall, so far as regards any lands to which the same relate, be void as against any person claiming under any subsequent conveyance or other instrument duly registered, unless the prior conveyance or instrument shall have been duly registered before the registration of the subsequent conveyance or instrument; any alleged notice or knowledge of such prior conveyance or instrument notwithstanding. Provided always, that this Act shall not be construed to extend to any conveyance or other instrument made before the 1st day of May, 1843.]—Act I, 1843.

214. Act I, 1843, is repealed, except in so far as it repeals all provisions contained in any Regulation or Regulations, touching the knowledge or notice had by parties to registered conveyances and other instruments affecting titles to land and other interests therein, of the existence of unregistered conveyances or other instruments affecting such titles or other interests therein.—Act XIX, 1843, sec. i.

215. From the 1st day of May, 1843, every deed of sale, or gift of lands, houses, or other real property, a memorial of which has been or shall be duly registered according to law, shall, provided its authenticity be established to the satisfaction of the court, invalidate any other deed of sale or gift for the same property which may not have been registered, and whether such second or other deed shall have been executed prior or subsequent to the registered deed; andfrom the said day every deed of mortgage on land, houses, and other real property, as well as certificates of the discharge of such incumbrances, a memorial of which has been or shall be duly registered according to law, and provided its authenticity be established to the satisfaction of the court, shall be satisfied in preference to any other mortgage on the same property which may not have been registered, and whether such second or other mortgage shall have been executed prior or subsequent to the registered mortgage, any knowledge or notice of any such unregistered deed or certificate alleged to be had by any party to such registered deed or certificate notwithstanding. Provided always, that nothing in this paragraph contained shall be construed to extend to any deed or certificate made before the said 1st day of May, 1843.—Act XIX, 1843, sec. ii.

216. No conveyance or other instrument affecting title to land, or any interest in the same, whether made before or after the said 1st day of May, 1843, other than such deeds or certificates as aforesaid, are or shall be in any respect void for want of registration, any Act, Regulation, or law to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act XIX, 1843, sec. iii.

217. A memorial of any deed shall be held to be duly registered according to law, in respect to any property which may be situated in any one district, as soon as the original deed or a copy thereof (as the case may be) shall have been registered in the manner provided by secs. i and ii of Act IV, 1845, (paragraphs 201 and 202) in the registry office of such district, whether or not a copy thereof have been registered in all or any of the other districts, in which the property to which the deed relates may be situated.—Act IV, 1845, sec. iv.

218. Whereas instances have occurred of persons exercising the office of register of deeds who have not been duly appointed, and whereas in some cases registration of deeds has been made on other than court days, that is, on days other than those on which the Zillah or City Courts has been open for business, and doubts may therefore arise as to whether the registration of any deed registered by such persons not duly appointed, or registered on other than a court-day, is valid in law, it is enactedas follows.—Act XVIII, 1847, Preamble.

219. Acts which may have been done in that capacity in any zillah, subject to the presidency of Bengal, by persons who have had charge of the office of register of deeds without being duly appointed to the said office, shall be and shall be taken to have always been as valid in law as such acts would have been if the said persons had been duly appointed to have charge of the said office. —Act XVIII, 1847, sec. i.

220. All acts which may have been done on other than court days by the register of deeds, or by the person having charge of the office without being duly appointed, in any zillah subject to the presidency of Bengal, shall be and shall be taken to have always been as valid in law as such acts would have been if they had been done on a court day.—Act XVIII, 1847, sec. ii.

Duties of Cauzies of Towns in respect of Deeds.

221. Cauzies are stationed at the cities of Patna, Dacca, and Moorshedabad, and the principal towns, and in the pergunnahs, for the purpose of preparing and attesting deeds of transfer and other law papers.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793. Preamble.

222. The head cauzy and the cauzies stationed in the cities, pergunnahs, and towns, are to keep copies of all deeds, and law or other papers, which they may draw up or attest, and are to affix thereto their seals and signatures. They are likewise to keep a list of all such papers; and in the event of their death, resignation, or removal, the list and papers are to be delivered complete to their successors.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. vii.

223. The cauzies stationed in the cities, towns, and pergunnahs, are not to exact any fees for drawing up or attesting papers, or for the celebration of marriages, or the performance of any religious duties or ceremonies which it has been customary for them to perform; excepting such as the parties concerned may voluntarily agree to pay, as has been hitherto the practice.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. viii.

TREASURE TROVE.

224. Whenever any hidden treasure, consisting of gold or silver coin, or bullion, or of precious stones, or other valuable property, may be found buried in the earth, or otherwise concealed within any part of the territory subject to this presidency, and after due notification the owner thereof may not be discoverable, such hidden treasure shall become the property of the person or persons who may have found the same, provided it shall not exceed in amount or value the sum of one lac of rupees; and provided the finder or finders shall have conformed to the rules prescribed in this Regulation.—Reg. V, 1817, sec. ii.

225. Whenever any person may find hidden treasure, of the description stated in the foregoing paragraph, he shall give immediate notice thereof to the judge of the zillah or city in which the treasure may have been found, and shall at the same time deposit the treasure in the Zillah or City Court, with an exact inventory thereof.—Reg. V, 1817, sec. iii.

226. The zillah or city judge receiving a deposit as above directed shall return a receipt for the treasure deposited, after causing the same to be carefully compared with the inventory, and shall issue a public notification in the current languages of the country, to be published and affixed in his own cutcherry, and in the cutcherry of the collector of the district, requiring all persons who may have any claim of right to the treasure in deposit, to attend in person, or by vakeel, and prove their title thereto, within six months from the date of the notice.—Reg. V, 1817, sec. iv.

227. It shall be the duty of the collectors of land revenue acting under the instructions of the Boards of Revenue, to bring forward and to support, in conformity with the foregoing provision, any claim of right which Government may appear to possess to such treasure. In the event of any claim of right being preferred, either on the part of individuals or of Government, pursuant to the prescribed notification, the judge shall institute a summary inquiry into the claim preferred, and if the title of Government, or other person so claiming the treasure in deposit, or any part thereof, be clearly established, he shall adjudge the same accordingly, subject to reimbursement of all expense incurred by the finder of the treasure, as well as to such compensation for the discovery of it as may in such case appear just and reasonable.—Reg. V, 1817, sec. v.

228. If no claim of right be preferred either by Government, or by an individual, within the period limited by the notification directed in paragrah 223, or if the claim or claims so preferred shall not on a summary inquiry appear to be well founded, and the amount or value of the hidden treasure found at the same time, or in the same place, shall not exceed one lac of rupees, the zillah or city judge shall adjudge the same to the person or persons who may have discovered the treasure, and deposited it in the Zillah or City Court, as required by paragraph 221, subject only to the actual expense which may have been incurred in adopting the measures prescribed by this Regulation.—Reg. V, 1817, sec. vi.

229. If the amount or value of any hidden treasure found at the same time, or in the same place, shall exceed one lac of rupees, and no claim of right thereto be established, judgment shall be given according to the preceding paragraph, in favour of the person or persons who may have discovered and deposited this treasure, to the amount of one lac of rupees, and the excess above that sum shall be declared at the disposal of Government.—Reg. V, 1817, sec. vii.

230. If any person discovering hidden treasure of the description specified in paragraph 221 shall not, within one month after finding the same, give notice to the judge of the Zillah or City Court, in conformity with paragraph 223, and make the deposit thereby required, he shall be considered to have forfeited all right and title to the treasure, as well as all claim to a reimbursement of expense, compensation or reward, under the provisions of this Regulation, and the treasure so clandestinely withheld from public investigation shall, on a summary suit by any subsequent claimant of right, and proof of a just title thereto, be adjudged to the legal owner with interest and costs, or if no private claim be established, shall, on the application of the vakeel of Government, under instructions from the Boards of Revenue, be liable to confiscation to Government.—Reg. V, 1817, sec. viii.

231. The summary decision of the judges of the Zillah and City Courts, which may be passed under this Regulation, shall be open to a summary appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, provided that court shall, on the face of the decree, or on inspection of any documents exhibited with it, see just and sufficient ground for admitting a second summary appeal to that court; in which case only such further appeal may be admitted and proceeded upon under the general rules in force for summary appeals.—Reg. V., 1817, secs. ix and x.

CIVIL JUDICATURE.

PLEADERS.

---

NOTE.—There being no enactment rescinding or transferring to any other authority the control in respect of the appointment and removal of pleaders assigned to the provincial courts, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut has been substituted in the following rules according to an analogy in secs. iii and v, Reg. II, 1833. (RULES COMMON TO COURTS OF ORIGINAL AND APPELLATE JURISDICTION, paragraphs 1 and 2.)

GENERAL RULES.

1. THE Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and the several Zillah Courts are empowered to appoint to the office of vakeel in their respective courts, such a number of persons, being natives of India, and duly qualified for the situation, as may from time to time appear to them to be necessary.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. iii, cl. 1.

2. The office of pleader in the courts of the East India Company shall be open to all persons of whatever nation or religion, provided that no person shall be admitted a pleader in any of those courts unless he have obtained a certificate, in such manner as shall be directed by the Sudder Courts, that he is of good character and duly qualified for the office, any law or regulation to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act I, 1846, sec. iv.

3. Provided nevertheless, that every barrister of any of Her Majesty's courts of justice in India shall be entitled as such to plead in any of the Sudder Courts of the East India Company; subject, however, to all the rules in force in the said Sudder Courts applicable to pleaders, whether relating to the language in which the court is to be addressed or to any other matter.—Act I, 1846, sec. v.

4. Every attorney on the roll of any of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts of Judicature in India shall be entitled as such to plead in any of the Sudder Courts of the East India Company, subject however to all the rules for the time being in force in the said Sudder Courts respectively, applicable to barristers pleading therein, whether relating to the language in which the court is to be addressed or to any other matter.—Act XX, 1853, sec. iii.

5. That part of paragraph 2, which provides that no person shall be admitted a pleader in any of the Courts of the East India Company, unless he have obtained a certificate in such manner as shall be directed by the Sudder Courts that he is of good character and duly qualified for the office, shall not extend to barristers or attornies of any of the supreme courts; but every such barrister and attorney shall be entitled as such to plead in any of the courts of the East India Company, subordinate to the Sudder Courts, subject to all the rules in force in the said subordinate courts respectively applicable to pleaders therein, so far as such rules relate to the language in which the court is to be addressed or to any other matter connected with pleadings therein.—Act XX, 1853, sec. iv.

6. Persons who may be appointed to the office of vakeel in the Zillah and City Courts, or the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, shall receive a sunnud of appointment duly authenticated by the court to which they may be respectively attached. This sunnud which is not required to be written on stamped paper, shall be drawn up according to the following form.

"In conformity with the provisions of Regulation XXVII, 1814, you, A, B., are hereby appointed to the office of pleader in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or in the Zillah or City Court of ———. You will not be liable to be removed from your situation so long as you may conduct yourself with propriety, and discharge your duty with zeal and integrity, under the rules contained in the Regulations which now are, or may hereafter be in force."—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. iv, cl. 1.

7. Whenever a vakeel may be dismissed from his office, or may die, or may resign his situation, his sunnud of appointment shall be recalled and cancelled by the court to which such vakeel may have been attached.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. iv, cl. 2.

8. Every vakeel previously to being allowed to practise shall make and subscribe before the court to which he may be appointed an oath or a solemn declaration according to the following form.

"I, A. B., solemnly swear (or declare) that I will truly and faithfully execute the duties of pleader of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or the Adawlut of the zillah or city of ———, to the best of my knowledge and judgment."—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. v, cl. 1; Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. ii.

9. Except in the Lower Provinces, pleaders employed in the several Courts of Civil Judicature, shall be liable to dismission from their office whenever they may be guilty of encouraging or promoting litigious suits, of wilfully delaying the suits of their clients for their own advantage, of refusing or omitting, without sufficient cause to be shown to the court, to carry on the suits of their clients after having accepted a vakalutnamah, or of fraudulent practices, neglect, or other misconduct in the discharge of their professional duty, or of gross profligacy or misbehaviour in their private conduct.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. vi, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

10. Except in the Lower Provinces, the vakeels are required to use due precaution to ascertain the real names and the identity of persons who may propose to employ them as pleaders; and any authorised vakeel who shall hereafter receive and file a vakalutnamah from any person under a fictitious name, shall be liable to be dismissed from his office. Provided, however, that the judge upon full inquiry into the circumstances of the cause shall deem him to be deserving of such punishment.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. viii, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

11. The vakeels are enjoined not to file any plaint, answer, or other pleading, without previously ascertaining that such pleading has been duly prepared in conformity with the Regulations; that it contains no unnecessary repetitions of former pleadings, no terms of personal abuse or reproach against the opposite party, his vakeels, witnesses, or other persons, and no groundless imputations on any court of justice or public officer, but that it contains such matter only as is apparently material and relevant to the suit. Every pleading filed by an authorised vakeel shall be signed by him in testimony of his having considered and approved its contents.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. ix, cl. 1.

12. In order that the expense, trouble, and inconvenience frequently experienced by filing irrelevant exhibits, and by summoning useless witnesses may be avoided, the vakeels are hereby further required to examine the documents which their constituents may propose to exhibit in proof of their claims, previously to their being filed in court; and to ascertain from their constituents, previously to summoning any witnesses, the specific points which such witnesses are expected to prove by their testimony.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. ix, cl. 2.

13. Except in the Lower Provinces, the courts will carefully point out to the notice of the vakeels such parts of the pleadings as are evidently irregular, irrelevant, or otherwise objectionable, and shall record their censure of any vakeel whose conduct in opposition to the preceding rules may in any particular instance demand such animadversion. If, notwithstanding such recorded censure, a vakeel shall again be guilty of similar misconduct, he shall be liable in each instance to such fine to Government, not exceeding twenty rupees, as the court may deem it proper to impose. —Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. ix, cl. 3, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

14. Except in the Lower Provinces, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and the several Zillah Courts will, at all times, exercise their discretion in removing from his office any pleader of their respective courts who may be guilty of any of the acts above mentioned, or who may be otherwise deemed unfit for the situation.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. x, cl. 1, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

15. Except in the Lower Provinces, whenever a zillah or city judge shall be of opinion that a vakeel attached to his court, or any of the sudder ameens, is unfit for the situation, in consequence of his having been guilty of any of the acts mentioned in the preceding paragraphs or that he is otherwise disqualified for the office of pleader, the judge shall report the circumstances of the case, together with his own opinion upon it, to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, who will pass such orders on the case as may appear to be proper, or will call for any additional information, or direct any further inquiry that the nature and circumstances of each case may appear to demand. —Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. x, cl. 2, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

16. Except in the Lower Provinces, the zillah and city judges are empowered to suspend from his office any pleader attached to their courts who may be guilty of any gross act of fraud or misconduct; but, in such instances, it shall be the duty of the judge to report the circumstances of the case, with as little delay as possible, for the information and orders of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xi, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

17. Except in the Lower Provinces, every vakeel, or authorized pleader or mooktar, attached to any court of judicature, who shall present for the purpose of being filed or recorded in any court or cutcherry, any paper, petition, or any deed, instrument, or document requiring to be stamped by the rules of Regulation X, 1829, on unstamped paper, or on paper not bearing the proper stamp, and not duly endorsed, or on paper bearing a counterfeit stamp, unless signed and endorsed by a vendor as prescribed, shall forfeit five times the amount of the stamp which ought to have been used, or five times the difference in case of the use of improper stamps, as prescribed in section xiii, Regulation X, 1829. The said fine shall be imposed and levied by the presiding officer of the court in which the said vakeel or mooktar may be practising, and the amount shall be remitted to the collector with copy of the proceedings or order imposing the fine.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. xviii, cl. 1, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

18. Except in the Lower Provinces, it shall further be competent to the collector or other officer exercising similar powers, on discovery of any irregularity of the above description, not noticed on the proceedings of the court, to move the court by petition, to be presented to the judge of the zillah within whose jurisdiction such vakeel or other person so offending may be practising, for infliction of the above fine, when incurred in any court within the zillah or city jurisdiction, or if the vakeel so offending be an officer of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, then the collector shall make application to that court through the vakeels of Government attached thereto, and the case shall be tried and adjudged by the zillah judge, or by the judges of the superior court, and their decision respectively, as to whether the penalty has been incurred or not, shall be final.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. xviii, cl. 2, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

19. The parties in a cause are authorized to prosecute their respective pleaders in the Civil Courts of Judicature for any damages or injury which they may have sustained from any breach of the Regulations on the part of their pleaders, or from any fraudulent conduct or malpractices committed by their pleaders regarding the suit.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 1.

20. Any party in a suit who may be dissatisfied with the conduct of his pleader, shall be at liberty, at any stage of the trial previously to the decision, to withdraw the power delegated to his pleader and to appoint another vakeel to plead the cause. In such cases, the party is to present a petition to the court, notifying that he has withdrawn the management of the suit from such pleader, and is to file a new vakalutnamah in the name of the pleader whom he may appoint to carry on the suit. All acts, however, which may have been done by the first pleader on the part of his client, previously to his having been dismissed are to be held valid.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xii, cl. 2.

21. Except in the Lower Provinces if a pleader employed in any business to be transacted on that day should be unable to attend the court in consequence of indisposition or other sufficient reason, he is to notify the same in writing to the court on unstamped paper, and the hearing of any cause in which such pleader may be employed is to be postponed to a future day, unless the party or his authorized agent shall commit the management of the cause to any other pleader of the court, or unless the party himself shall be present and willing to plead the cause in person. If the management of the cause shall be entrusted to any other pleader of the court, instead of filing a new vakalutnamah, it shall be sufficient for the party or his mokhtar duly authorized, to endorse on the back of the original vakalutnamah a written declaration that he has appointed some other vakeel of the court to conduct the cause, either permanently or during the absence of the pleader first appointed.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xiii; Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i, and Act XX, 1853, sec. ii.

22. Except in the Lower Provinces, if a pleader employed as above shall fail to attend in court on any day fixed for the transaction of civil business, and shall omit to notify in writing to the court his inability to attend, in consequence of indisposition or other sufficient cause, the court is authorised to impose on such pleader a fine for the first offence not exceeding the sum of fifty rupees, and for the second offence not exceeding one hundred rupees. If such pleader shall be guilty of a similar offence a third time, he shall be liable to dismission from his office.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 1, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

23. Except in the Lower Provinces, if any pleader shall be guilty of disrespect to the court, in open court, the court is empowered to impose a fine upon him not exceeding the sum of one hundred rupees.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 2, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

24. Except in the Lower Provinces, all orders imposing fines on pleaders which may be passed by the judges of the Zillah and City Courts, in conformity with this Regulation, shall be final; and the amount of the fines shall be levied either by a deduction from the fees which may become due to the offender, or by the process which is prescribed for the execution of decrees.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xv, cl. 2, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

25. No pleader shall be bound to attend in any of the courts of the East India Company, on any day fixed for the transaction of civil business, or to notify to the court his inability to attend, unless he shall be employed in some cause or business, which according to the practice of the court, may be heard or transacted therein on that day, anything in any law or regulations to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act XX, 1853, sec. ii.

26. Whenever a vakeel attached to a Zillah or City Court may die or may be removed from his office, or may voluntarily resign his situation, the judge of such zillah or city shall notify the same in a publication to be affixed in his own cutcherry, and in the cutcherries of the several courts, and the collector of the district. The publication shall contain a statement of the several depending cases in which such vakeel may have been employed, and a requisition to the parties who have retained such vakeel to attend in person, or to substitute another vakeel in room of the pleader formerly appointed by them, within a reasonable period to be affixed by the court, not being less than six weeks. In such instances, instead of filing a new vakalutnamah, it shall be sufficient for the party or his mookhtar duly authorised to endorse on the back of the original vakalutnamah a written declaration, that he has appointed some other vakeel of the court in lieu of the pleader who may have died or resigned his office, or have been removed from his situation. —Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec xviii, cl. 1.

27. A publication issued in conformity with the preceding rules shall be held and considered to be a good and sufficient notice; and if any party shall not attend or appoint another vakeel within the period limited in the publication, he shall be required to show cause for the omission, and if sufficient cause be not assigned, the court shall proceed as in case of default in conformity with the provisions in force.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xviii, cl. 2.

28. A similar notification shall be issued on the death, resignation, or removal of any pleader attached to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. If the pleader shall have been attached to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the publication shall be affixed in that court, and in such of the Zillah and City Courts, in which it may appear necessary to publish the same, with reference to the depending causes in which the vakeel may have been employed, and the period to be allowed to parties to appear and substitute another vakeel shall not be less than three months.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xviii, cl. 3.

29. The courts are authorized to apply the principle of the preceding rules to cases in which the decision of suits may be materially delayed by the protracted indisposition of a pleader, or by his continued inability to attend the court from any other cause which may be expected to be permanent or of considerable duration.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xviii, cl. 4.

30. The Courts of Civil Judicature are empowered to permit any of the authorized vakeels of their respective courts to be arbitrators in depending suits, subject to the several rules and provisions in force for referring suits to arbitration.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xix.

31. The authorized vakeels of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and of the Zillah and City Courts, are empowered to receive fees for legal opinions under the provisions contained in the following paragraphs.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xx, cl. 1.

32. Any person who may be desirous of obtaining the opinion of an authorized pleader regarding the legal validity and sufficiency of any claim, right, or title which he may suppose himself to possess, and on the consequent expediency of prosecuting or defending either originally or in appeal, such supposed claim, right, or title in the Courts of Civil Judicature, may submit a written statement of his claim, under his seal, signature or mark, to the pleader whose opinion he may wish to obtain.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xx, cl. 2.

33. The pleader to whom such statement may be submitted, after an attentive consideration of the laws, regulations, usages, or precedents which may be applicable to the case, and of the arguments and proofs which may be adduced in support of the claim, shall furnish to the party, under his signature, a written declaration of his opinion, and of the grounds upon which that opinion may be formed.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xx, cl. 3.

34. Provided, however, that it shall not be lawful for any pleader who may have received a vakalutnamah in any suit instituted in a Court of Civil Judicature to receive the fee on account of any legal opinion which he may subsequently furnish to his constituent respecting any subject or question connected with such suit.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xx, cl. 5.

35. Any pleader who under the preceding rules may knowingly furnish an opinion of a nature evidently calculated to promote the institution of unfounded or litigious suits, or to discourage the amicable adjustment of dubious claims, shall be liable to be dismissed from his office.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xx, cl. 6.

36. When a party in a cause may be desirous of retaining a vakeel for the prosecution or defence of any civil suit, he shall not be required to pay to such vakeel the retaining fee of four annas heretofore prescribed, but he shall execute to him a vakalutnamah, constituting him pleader in the cause, and authorising him to prosecute or defend the suit, and further binding himself to abide by and to confirm all acts which such pleader may do or undertake in his behalf in the cause, in the same manner as if such party had been personally present and consenting. The party is to attest the instrument with his seal or signature, or with his mark if he cannot write, in the presence of two credible witnesses, who are likewise to attest it in the same manner, and who are to attend the court and prove the vakalutnamah in all cases in which it may be judged requisite.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxi, cl. 1.

37. Such vakalutnamahs are to be written on the stamped paper prescribed in No. 6, Sched. B, Reg. X, 1829, but shall not be liable to the stamp duty on exhibits under No. 5 of the same Schedule.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxi, cl. 2.

38. When a vakeel to whom a vakalutnamah may have been executed under the last two preceding paragraphs, shall consent to undertake the prosecution or defence of the suit, he shall affix his signature to the back of the vakalutnamah, together with the date on which such signature may be affixed, and shall thenceforward be precluded from being employed in the same cause against the party who may have so retained him.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxii.

39. First. In all regular suits which may be instituted, either originally or in appeal, subsequently to the 1st of February, 1815, in any of the Zillah or City Courts, or the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the vakeels employed by the respective parties are to be allowed for pleading the causes of their clients the rates of fees calculated as follows:—

In suits for money, effects, or for other personal property, or for land or other immoveable property of any description, if the amount or value of the claim estimated according to the provisions of Regulation X, 1829, shall not exceed 5,000 rupees, five per cent.

If the amount or value shall exceed 5,000 rupees, and shall not exceed 20,000 rupees, on 5,000 as above, and on the remainder two per cent.

If the amount or value shall exceed 20,000 rupees, and shall not exceed 50,000 rupees on 20,000 as above, and on the remainder one per cent.

If the amount or value shall exceed 50,000 rupees, and shall not exceed 80,000 rupees, on 50,000 as above, and on the remainder eight annas per cent.

If the amount or value shall exceed 80,000 rupees, the fee to the vakeel shall be 1,000 rupees, and shall in no instance exceed that sum, however great may be the value or amount of the suit in which such vakeel may be employed.

Second. In all the preceding calculations, where the amount or value may be in fractions of rupees, such fractions are to be rejected in calculating the fees thereupon.

Third. The vakeels are to receive the full amount of their fees without any deduction whatsoever; provided nevertheless, that for every sum which may be paid to a vakeel by a civil court on account of his fees, such vakeel shall give a receipt written on the stamped paper prescribed in No. 45, Sched. A, Reg. X, 1829.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxv.

40. The preceding paragraph shall not be enforced except for the purposes specified in the following paragraph.—Act I, 1846, sec. vi.

41. Parties employing authorized pleaders in the said courts shall be at liberty to settle with them by private agreement the remuneration to be paid for their professional services, and it shall not be necessary to specify such agreement in the vakalutnamah; provided that when costs are awarded to a party in any regular suit, original or appeal, decided on the merits, against another party, the amount to be paid on account of fees of pleaders shall be calculated according to the rules contained in paragraph 39; and when costs are awarded in other cases, the amount to be paid on account of such fees shall be one-fourth of what it would have been in a regular suit decided on its merits.—Act I, 1846, sec. vii.

42. Private agreements between parties and their pleaders respecting the remuneration to be paid for professional services shall not be enforced otherwise than by a regular suit.—Act. I, 1846, sec. viii.

43. Persons taking opinions from authorized pleaders, as provided in paragraphs 32 to 35, shall be at liberty to settle with them by private agreement the remuneration to be paid for such opinions.—Act I, 1846, sec. ix.

44. If the decree shall be given against the defendant or respondent, and the whole of the money or property which may be demanded by the appellant or plaintiff shall be decreed to him, a sum equal to the whole of the fees of his pleader shall be adjudged to the plaintiff or appellant, in addition to the other costs which may be awarded to him; but if only a part of the money or property claimed is decreed to the plaintiff or appellant, a sum bearing the same proportion to the money or to the value of the thing decreed, as the fee did to the demand stated in the plaint or appeal, is to be decreed and added to the costs which may be awarded to the plaintiff or appellant. —Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxvi, cl. 1.

45. If the suit of the plaintiff or appellant shall be dismissed, whether upon an investigation of the merits or otherwise, the plaintiff or appellant is to be charged with the fees of his own pleader and with those of the defendant or respondent.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxvi, cl. 2.

46. Provided, however, that if in any instance the payment of the pleader's fees, according to the preceding rules, should not appear to be just and equitable, the courts of civil judicature may exercise their discretion in charging the fees of the pleaders to the parties respectively, in such proportions as may appear equitable and proper, under a consideration of all the circumstances of the case.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxvi, cl. 3.

47. The parties in a suit are respectively permitted to entertain two or more pleaders.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxx, cl. 1.

48. It shall be sufficient in such cases, for the party employing two or more vakeels in the same suit, to file a single vakalutnamah—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxx, cl. 2.

49. The opposite party in the suit shall in no case be required to make good more than the fee of one of those pleaders, or such part of that fee as may be adjudged against him by the court. The fees of the other pleader are to be considered as a separate expense, to be defrayed exclusively by the party entertaining him, and for which he is not to be reimbursed in any case whatever.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxx, cl. 3.

50. If a suit shall be withdrawn or dismissed on default without a determination upon the merits of the case before all the requisite pleadings shall have been filed in court, the respective pleaders of the plaintiff and defendants, or of the appellant and respondent, shall each be entitled to only one-fourth of the fee which they would have received, had the suit been brought to a regular decision by the court. If a suit should be withdrawn or dismissed on default after all the requisite pleadings shall have been filed in court, the respective pleaders are to be entitled to one-half the fees which they would have received if judgment had been given in the cause. The fees in both of the above-mentioned cases are to be charged to the plaintiff or appellant withdrawing the suit, or suffering it to be dismissed on default, together with all the admitted costs incurred by the defendant or respondent.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxi, cl. 1.

51. The same rule shall be considered applicable to cases adjusted by razeenamah; except that the fees of the pleaders and all other costs of the suit shall be paid by the parties, in such manner and proportions as may have been agreed upon and inserted in the razeenamah.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxi, cl. 2.

NOTE.—The two last foregoing rules are subject to the modifications declared in paragraphs 40 and 41.

52. Pleaders are to give written receipts on unstamped paper for all accounts, writings, or documents which may be delivered to them by their clients in the course of any suit or process. If a pleader shall refuse to return such accounts, documents, or writings, the court, upon a petition being presented to them for that purpose by the owners of the papers so withheld, shall cause them to be restored.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxvi.

53. One or more of the authorised pleaders of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and the Zillah and City Courts, shall be appointed for the purpose of conducting the prosecution or defence of any suits in those courts respectively, which may be directed to be carried on at the public expense, by any Regulation or by a special order from the Governor-General in Council, or other authority competent to pass such order. Those pleaders shall be furnished with a sunnud or written authority to that purport, under the signature of the secretary to Government in the judicial department, and the sunnud shall be drawn up according to the following form:—

"In conformity with the provisions of Regulation XXVII, 1814, you, A. B., are hereby appointed to the office of pleader on the part of Government in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or in the Zillah or City Court of ———. You will not be liable to be removed from your office so long as you may conduct yourself with propriety, and discharge your duty with zeal, ability, and integrity, under the Regulations which are now in force or which may hereafter be enacted."—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxvii, cl. 1.

54. On the occasion of vacancies occurring in the office of the vakeels of Government in the courts of justice, those courts shall report to the secretary to Government in the judicial department the death, resignation, or removal of any such vakeels.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxvii, cl. 2; Reg. XIII, 1829, sec. iv, cl. 2.

55. It will rest with Government to ascertain by such inquiries as they may deem necessary, which of the constituted pleaders of the court is best fitted by his qualifications and character to succeed to the vacant office, and to appoint such individual accordingly.—Reg. XIII, 1829, sec. iv, cl. 3.

56. The pleaders for Government are to undertake all causes which they may be directed to plead by orders from Government, or which may be directed by any Regulation to be carried on at the public expense, upon receiving an order for that purpose, either from Government or from any officer or officers empowered by any Regulation to superintend and to furnish instructions for conducting such suits. The order of Government, or of such officer or officers, is to be filed in court as the authority of the pleader to plead the cause, and is to form part of the record of the proceedings.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxvii, cl. 3.

57. The pleaders of Government are prohibited from giving any advice to the parties opposed to Government in any civil suit or proceeding, and from being concerned directly or indirectly on their behalf, in suits which are directed to be carried on at the public expense; but in all other suits the pleaders of Government are to be at liberty to plead for either of the parties, in the same manner as the other authorized pleaders of the court.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxvii, cl. 4.

58. The pleaders for Government are to be paid the same fees in causes directed to be pleaded at the public expense, as pleaders employed in causes between individuals, and under the same rules and restrictions.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxvii, cl. 5.

59. In pleading suits directed to be carried on at the public expense, the pleaders for Government are to be subject to all the rules prescribed for their guidance when pleading on behalf of individuals, except in matters or cases in which it may be otherwise specially directed by any Regulation.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxvii, cl. 6.

60. The Boards of Revenue, or any other authorities intrusted with the management of suits on the part of Government, are empowered to associate with the established vakeel of Government any other authorized pleader in cases in which such aid may, from the importance of the suit, or any other reason, be judged necessary or advisable. Such additional pleader shall be furnished with a vakalutnamah, duly authenticated by the officer or authority employing him, and shall be entitled to receive the same fees, and under the same rules and restrictions, as if he were employed on the part of an individual.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxvii, cl. 7.

61. No part of this Regulation is to be construed to prohibit or prevent any individual from appearing and pleading his own cause in person, in any of the courts of civil judicature, without employing an authorized pleader.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxviii.

62. The provisions of Regulation XXVII, 1814, are to be construed with reference to sections vii, x, and xv, of Regulation XXVIII, 1814 ("PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraphs 302, 303, 305, and 319), in suits where one or both of the parties may be permitted to plead in formâ pauperis, in conformity with the rules contained in that Regulation.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xxxix, cl. 2.

63. That the pleaders in the several courts, as well as all other persons, may have it in their power to render themselves acquainted with the Regulations enacted by the British Government, there shall be kept for public inspection in the several courts of judicature printed copies of all such Regulations, and of the translations in the native languages, bound up with the annual indexes. Until the Regulations which may be passed in each year are so bound up, the separate copies of each Regulation, with the translations which may be printed and circulated to the courts, are to be exposed as above directed. The Regulations are to be deposited upon a table expressly allotted for that purpose in some part of the court-room, and to lie for public inspection every day, Sunday excepted, during the ordinary hours of business, when the pleaders of the courts and all other persons are to be at liberty to refer to the Regulations, or take copies or extracts from them in the court-room. On receipt of the translations of the Regulations in the country languages, the several courts of civil justice shall cause the same to be publicly read in their cutcherries, and shall require the native pleaders of their respective courts to take copies of any of those translations which relate directly or indirectly to the administration of civil justice.—Reg. XXVII, 1814, sec. xl.

64. All causes referred to the sudder ameens shall be pleaded either by the parties in person, or by an authorized vakeel of the Zillah or City Court. The judges of the several zillahs and cities will assign to the court of each sudder ameen such a number of the authorized vakeels as may appear necessary. The whole of the Regulations in force regarding the authorized vakeels of the Zillah and City Courts shall be applicable to the authorized vakeels employed in the courts of the sudder ameens.—Reg. XXIII, 1814, sec. lxxii.

65. It shall be competent to the zillah and city judge to authorize any of the vakeels of his court, or of those attached to the sudder ameens, to practise in the court of the principal sudder ameen.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xviii, cl. 3.

66. Except in the Lower Provinces, whenever a pleader has rendered himself liable to a fine in the court of a principal sudder ameen or sudder ameen, it shall be competent to such principal sudder ameen or sudder ameen to impose such fine; provided that an appeal from all orders imposing such fines shall lie to the zillah or city judge, whose decision thereon shall be final.—Act I, 1846, sec. x.

67. Except in the Lower Provinces the rules applicable to pleaders in the courts of the zillah and city judges shall be applicable, so far as they are capable of application, to pleaders in the moonsiffs' courts.—Act I, 1846, sec. xi.

68. Whenever a pleader has conducted himself in such a manner in the court of a moonsiff as would have rendered him liable to a fine if he had so conducted himself in the court of a zillah or city judge, it shall be competent to such moonsiff to impose such fine; provided that an appeal from all orders imposing such fines shall lie to the zillah or city judge, whose decision thereon shall be final.—Act I, 1846, sec. xii.

RULES OPERATIVE IN THE LOWER PROVINCES ONLY.

69. Any pleader practising in the courts of the East India Company in the Lower Provinces, shall be liable to dismissal or proof of his conviction by a competent court of a criminal offence, or on proof of a declaration or finding by a competent court, in a suit or proceeding to which such pleader was a party, that he has knowingly committed a breach of trust, or for fraudulent or dishonest conduct in the discharge of his professional duty.—Act XVIII, 1852, sec. ii.

70. When a competent court has convicted a pleader of a criminal offence, or has declared or found, in a suit or proceeding to which such pleader was a party, that he has knowingly committed a breach of trust, the court competent to dismiss such pleader may make an order for his dismissal, on the production of an authenticated copy of the judgment or decision containing such conviction, declaration, or finding, and on proof to the satisfaction of the court that such judgment or decision has not been set aside or reversed, and that the pleader is the party to whom such conviction or decision relates.—Act XVIII, 1852, sec. iii.

71. When any pleader is charged with fraudulent or dishonest conduct in the discharge of his professional duty, by any person or court, the court competent to make an order for his dismissal shall serve, or cause to be served, upon such pleader, a copy of the charge or charges brought against him, and also a notice of the day appointed by the said court for the hearing of such charge or charges, and such copy and notice shall be served upon the said pleader at least twenty clear days before the day appointed for such hearing: and on the hearing of the said charge or charges, the court shall receive all such relevant evidence as shall be properly tendered by or on behalf of the court or party bringing the charge or charges, or by the said pleader, and shall proceed to adjudicate on the said charge or charges in a summary way, and shall record its decision, and the reasons on which the same is grounded. Provided always, that the court which is competent to dismiss a pleader shall also be competent to bring a charge or charges and proceed against him as aforesaid, and may also hear and adjudicate upon such charge or charges in manner hereinbefore mentioned. Provided also, that the evidence of witnesses on such hearing shall be taken and made upon oath; and every witness who shall give false evidence at such hearing shall be liable, on conviction, to punishment for perjury, in like manner as witnesses examined in civil or criminal trials. —Act XVIII, 1852, sec. iv.

72. The power of dismissing pleaders practising in the Sudder Court of the said provinces is vested in the judges of that court; the power of dismissing pleaders practising in the courts of the zillah judges, or in courts subordinate to them, in the said provinces, is vested in the zillah judges respectively.—Act XVIII, 1852, sec. v.

73. An appeal from the order of any zillah judge for the dismissal of a pleader may be made to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, according to the rules in force for the admission of appeals.—Act XVIII, 1852, sec. vi.

74. It shall not be lawful for any of the said courts of the Lower Provinces of the said presidency to impose any fine on any pleader practising in the said courts, except such fine as may be imposed under the provisions of Act XXX, of 1841.—Act XVIII, 1852, sec. vii.

GENERAL RULES.

NOTE.—Regulation X, of 1829, rescinded the previous stamp Regulation I of 1814, and all such other existing rules as related to the "imposition, levying, and collecting" of stamp duties; but the Regulations enacted before X of 1829 contain some rules which do not appear to have been repealed, and which have no substitutes in the last mentioned Regulation or in the Schedules annexed thereto. Such rules are here placed before the existing Stamp Regulation. The rules passed after that Regulation follow.

1. ALL pleadings, petitions, and applications, all deeds, documents, and other papers, whether originals or copies, which are required by the Regulations to be written on stamped paper, are to be written in a fair legible manner, and as they have been hitherto usually prepared, as well with regard to the size of the writing, the space between the words, and the number of lines in each page, as to all other matters regarding their engrossment.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. v, cl. 2.

2. If the subject matter of any plaint or petition of appeal cannot, under the rule contained in the preceding paragraph, be conveniently comprised in a single sheet or roll of the stamped paper prescribed for such plaint or petition of appeal, any additional sheets or rolls which may be required for that purpose shall be of the description of stamped paper specified in No. 9, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829. In like manner, if the subject-matter of any answer, reply, rejoinder, or other pleading, cannot be comprised in a single sheet or roll of the stamped paper prescribed for such pleading, any additional sheets or rolls which may be required for that purpose shall be of the description of stamped paper specified in No. 9, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. v, cl. 3.

Except in the Lower Provinces, if a party, or vakeel, or other person, shall hereafter file in a Zillah or City Court, or in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, any plaint or pleading required to be written on stamped paper, which may not have been prepared in conformity with the foregoing paragraphs, the court is authorised to impose on such party, vakeel, or other person, any fine which they may deem proper, provided that such fine shall in no instance exceed three times the amount or value of the additional stamped paper which would have been required had the plaint or pleading been drawn up in conformity with the foregoing provisions.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. v, cl. 4, and Act XVIII, 1852, sec. i.

4. If the subject matter of any miscellaneous petition or application, or of other papers specified in Nos. 6 and 7 Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829, cannot, under the rule contained in paragraph 1, be conveniently comprised in a single sheet or roll of the prescribed stamped paper, any additional sheets or rolls which may be required for that purpose shall be of the value and description specified in the said numbers of the said Schedule; and if any such petition or paper, which may not have been prepared in conformity with the foregoing rule and with the rules contained in paragraph 1, shall be hereafter presented to any of the courts or officers specified in Nos. 6 and 7, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829, such court or officer is hereby authorised to impose a fine on the party or person presenting, under the same limitations as are prescribed in the preceding paragraph.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. v, cl. 5.

5. It is hereby declared, that it is not intended to preclude individuals from making for their private use, and at their own expense, copies of judicial or revenue papers, with the permission of the court, collector, or other public officer having charge thereof, on any paper which they may prefer; but if such copies be not made on stamped paper, they shall not be authenticated by the seal or signature of any court, collector, or other public officer, and shall not be received as evidence in any court of justice or in any public office whatever.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xvi, cl. 4.

XXVI, 1814, sec. xvii, cl. 1.

7. Such penalty shall be recoverable by a summary process in the Courts of Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xvii, cl. 2.

8. XXVI, 1814, sec. xviii.

9. If, during the trial of any regular suit, it shall appear that the plaint has been written on stamped paper of a less value than that which ought to have been used under the provisions of No. 8, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829, and the court shall be of opinion that the error or omission did not arise from any fraudulent motive, or from any design on the part of the plaintiff to evade the provisions of the Regulations, it shall be competent to the court, either to permit or to direct the plaintiff or appellant in the suit to file a duplicate of the plaint on stamped paper of such a value as may be sufficient to complete the full amount of the stamp duty prescribed by the Regulation above mentioned.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. vii, cl. 1.

10. Whenever a party may be desirous of instituting an original suit as a pauper in any civil court, he shall appear in person before such court, and shall present a petition written on the stamped paper prescribed for miscellaneous petitions in No. 7, Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829.—Reg. 11. The stamp duty which has been substituted for the institution fee by Regulation X, 1829, shall not be required from plaintiffs who may be admitted to sue as paupers. The plaint, reply, or other pleadings on the part of the plaintiff, as well as applications on his part for receiving exhibits and summoning witnesses, may be written on unstamped paper. The notice to the defendant, the summons for witnesses, and other processes on the part of the plaintiff, shall be served through the chuprassies on the establishment of the courts without any expense to the plaintiff; and the copy of the decree, as well as copies of orders or proceedings which he may be required to take, shall be furnished to a pauper plaintiff on unstamped paper.—Reg. XIX, 1817, sec. viii.

14. Stamp duties shall be levied, raised, and paid, as heretofore, upon the deeds, instruments, and writings, and according to the rates specified in the Schedule (A) annexed to Regulation X, 1829, from and after the date of the promulgation thereof; and no deed, instrument, or writing executed in any place whatsoever on the continent of India, and relating to the payment or receipt of any sum of money, or to the sale, conveyance, or assignment, or transfer of any property, real or personal, being within any province or place to which this Regulation extends, or of any interest in such property, or relating to any agreement, contract, obligation, engagement, or settlement intended to have effect within any province or place as aforesaid (such deed, instrument, or writing being of a description chargeable with stamp duty, under the rules of this or any other Regulation), shall be pleaded, given, or admitted in evidence, or otherwise received or filed in any court of judicature or other public office, within the provinces subject to the presidency of Fort William, unless the paper, vellum, or other material on which such deed, instrument, or writing may be written, shall be stamped with the stamp prescribed for such deed, instrument, or writing in the said schedule, and the schedule aforesaid shall be deemed and considered to be, to all intents and purposes, part of this Regulation.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. iii, cl. 1.

15. Provided, however, that no exception shall be taken to any deed, instrument, or writing not executed on paper or other material bearing a stamp of the specific denomination prescribed in the schedule hereunto annexed, if such deed, instrument, or writing shall bear a stamp or stamps of an amount exceeding that so prescribed, or if when of a date anterior to the passing and promulgation of this Regulation, the stamp borne by the paper or other material of the deed, instrument, or writing corresponds with the rate of duty chargeable on the same, at the time when such deed or writing was executed.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. iii, cl. 2.

16. When a different stamp may be in use for Calcutta and for the interior, no exception shall be taken to any deed, document, or writing as bearing an undue stamp, because stamped with the Calcutta die when intended to have effect in the interior, provided the deed or document, and the stamp impressed thereon be in other respects correct, and the amount of duty indicated by the stamp correspond with that prescribed in this Regulation.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. iii, cl. 3.

17. In modification of the existing rules in regard to the authentication of stamped paper, by assistants duly appointed for that purpose, it is hereby declared and enacted, that such descriptions of paper only as may be directed by the Governor-General in Council shall be required to bear, in addition to the Government stamps, the authentication of signature by an assistant to the superintendent of stamps. Every collector and vendor of stamps shall be provided with a copy and translation of the order last issued for regulating such authentication, that the same may be exhibited to purchasers, and to the public at large, and no paper, parchment, or other material shall be sold or delivered out from any store or place of vend that may not be conformable thereto. Any vendor selling unauthenticated paper of a description requiring to be authenticated, in violation of this rule, shall, on conviction, forfeit the sum of 100 rupees for each offence.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. iv.

18. The general superintendence of the management of the revenue derived by Government from stamps shall be vested in such Board, Commission, or other authority, as the Governor-General in Council may, from time to time, appoint and direct; and it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to assign the whole of the duties of superintendence to one authority, or to divide and distribute the several duties hereinunder prescribed to be performed, by a Board or other superior authority, amongst several officers and authorities, in such manner as he may determine, giving notice of any change in this respect by publication in the Government Gazette. —Reg. X, 1829, sec. v. cl. 1.

19. A stamp office, at which stamps of the several descriptions provided for by this Regulation shall be prepared, and kept in store, shall be established as heretofore at such house, building, or place, at or near the presidency as the Governor-General in Council may deem suitable for the purpose, and the same shall be under the charge of an officer, to be denominated superintendent of stamps, who shall in all matters connected with the execution and due enforcement of this Regulation, be subject to the orders of the Board, or other authority appointed by the Governor-General in Council, for the control and management of this branch of revenue. The superintendent shall keep an exact account of all stamps impressed or manufactured by the Government officers, as well as of all issues from the depôt, and of the quantity of stamped paper, vellum, or parchment of each description remaining in store. He shall likewise keep a separate account of unstamped water-marked papers, and of the receipts and issues thereof, and shall prepare and submit to the said Board, or other controlling authority, such periodical reports and statements as may be required by that authority.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. v, cl. 2.

20. For every sum charged, or purporting to be charged, as stamp duty on any vellum, parchment, paper, or other material, sold or delivered out for sale, two stamps shall be impressed, each of which shall specify in the English, Persian, and Bengallee characters, the amount of the sum charged; one of the said stamps shall be affixed at the stamp office, and shall bear, besides the value as above, the words "Stamp Office," in the English character, with any further device or legend which the Board or other controlling authority aforesaid may see fit to direct. The other impression shall be a counter-stamp, to be affixed in such place and at such office as the Governor-General in Council shall prescribe, and shall bear, along with the amount of duty levied, either the name of the office where the same may be so affixed in English, or the word "counter-stamp," to designate the nature thereof.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. vi, cl. 1.

21. It shall be the duty of the Board, or other controlling authority appointed as aforesaid, to provide, or cause to be provided, proper and sufficient stamp or dies, for expressing and denoting the several duties and rates specified in the schedule annexed to this Regulation, and it shall be competent to the authority aforesaid, to direct, if so deemed expedient, the employment of two or more stamps, to denote the amount chargeable on any single piece of vellum, parchment, paper, or other material: provided, however, that the stamp impressed with the words "Stamp Office," shall always correspond in number and value with the counter-stamps impressed thereon.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. vi, cl. 2.

22. The said Board or other controlling authority as above provided, shall have the power also of at any time changing or altering the dies, and of regulating the size, shape, and manner, and matter of the impressions at discretion; provided only that the stamp to be affixed at the stamp office shall always contain, in plain and legible characters, the legend prescribed in paragraph 20, and that the counter-stamp do similarly contain its legend. The said Board or other authority aforesaid, shall however in the exercise of the powers and functions vested in them by this Regulation, be guided by such special directions as they may receive from the Governor-General in Council, in the manner heretofore used in all matters and things belonging to the management of this branch of the public revenue.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. vi, cl. 3.

23. The collection and management of the stamp duties in the several districts subject to the presidency of Fort William, shall be vested in the collectors of land revenue, unless the Governor-General in Council shall at any time think proper to transfer the same to any other officer, or to associate, depute, or appoint another officer for the charge thereof. In such case the officer so deputed or appointed, shall exercise the power and authorities vested in collectors of land revenue by this Regulation, unless otherwise specially provided in the order of appointment.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. vii.

24. The collectors or other officers authorized to sell stamps shall be supplied with stamps upon indent, addressed to the superintendent of stamps, to whom they shall grant receipts in duplicate. —Reg. X, 1829, sec. viii, cl. 1.

25. The collectors or other officers authorized to sell stamps shall be answerable to Government for the value of all paper for which they may give receipts as above to the superintendent of stamps, or to their predecessors in office.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. viii, cl. 2.

26. The collector shall appoint such officers for the management of the stamps at the sudder cutcherry as he may deem fit, taking from them such security for his satisfaction as he may deem adequate and necessary; provided, however, that all persons employed in the vend of stamped paper, shall be liable to the rules hereinafter enacted for licensed vendors.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. ix, cl. 1.

27. No person not licensed after the manner hereinafter prescribed, shall be competent to expose stamped paper, parchment, or other material publicly to sale; and any one offending in this respect, shall, on conviction, forfeit to Government, for the first offence, the sum of five hundred rupees; and for the second or any subsequent offence, the sum of one thousand rupees. But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent persons having duly purchased stamp paper or other material from the authorized vendors of Government, or having otherwise obtained such paper from the stamp office, after the manner hereinafter provided, from transferring the same to others.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. ix, cl. 2.

28. Every person who may be appointed by a collector or other covenanted officer to be a vendor of stamps on the part of Government, shall execute a bond with one or more responsible sureties, for the faithful performance of the several duties prescribed for vendors in this or any future Regulation, with such penalty, and after such form as may be required by the Board or other controlling authority; and any failure in fulfilling the conditions of such bond, shall, besides the penalty thereby provided, subject the offender to immediate dismission from the said office of vendor.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 1.

29. All persons licensed to vend stamps shall at all times have their respective licenses, together with a copy of the schedules annexed to this Regulation, or of an abstract thereof duly authenticated by the official signature of the superintendent of stamps, and likewise copy of the orders last issued, in respect to the authentication of stamp paper, as prescribed in paragraph 17, stuck up in a conspicuous place within the shop or building in which they may sell the stamps, and shall further hang up on the outer door of such shop or other building, such notification of their being licensed, as the Board or other controlling authority aforesaid, may direct. Any neglect or failure to observe the above rule, will on conviction before the collector of the district, subject the party offending to a fine of fifty rupees for each offence.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 2.

30. Persons licensed as aforesaid shall keep such accounts of the paper received and delivered by them, as the Board or other controlling authority may direct, and shall furnish the collector or other officer under whom they may serve, with such copies, statements, or extracts of their accounts, and at such periods, as he may from time to time require. The said persons shall regularly pay to the collector or other officer, all money or moneys received by them on the sale of stamps intrusted to them on the account of Government, at such periods as the said collector or other officer may appoint; and shall likewise at all times when required, permit the said officer, or any other person duly authorised by him, to inspect the accounts kept by them, and to examine the store of stamped paper, or other material bearing the prescribed stamp, which they may have in their possession for sale.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 3.

31. Any vendor failing to produce before the collector of the district, or other officer vested with the powers of a collector in respect to the stamp duty, any of the accounts required to be kept by him as above provided, after requisition made in writing by that officer, and failing to account for such omission to the satisfaction of the said collector or officer, or of the board or other controlling authority as above provided, shall forfeit the sum of fifty rupees for each offence, and shall further forfeit a like sum daily for every day beyond the date fixed in such requisition for the production thereof, until the day when the accounts may be produced. Any vendor refusing to permit the collector or other officer vested with similar authority, or any person duly authorized by a writing under the seal and signature of such officer, to inspect the said accounts, and examine the store of stamped paper at the time in the custody of such vendor, immediately upon demand, shall, on conviction, forfeit for every such refusal the sum of one hundred rupees, and shall further be subject to a daily fine of fifty rupees, until he shall comply with the collector's requisition.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 4.

32. No vendor of stamps shall deliver any stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or other material to any person whatsoever, without having previously received the full amount of the duty denoted by the stamp thereupon affixed, save and except in cases in which he may be otherwise specially permitted or directed by perwanna or written order of the collector or other officer exercising similar powers; and any vendor of stamps who may, without authority, permission, or direction in writing from the collector or other officer aforesaid, sell, give out, or deliver stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or other stamped material, without having received the entire amount of duty denominated by the stamp affixed thereto, shall, on conviction, forfeit for each and every piece of paper or other material so given out or delivered by him, the sum of fifty rupees, besides being held responsible, in the first instance, for the value of the paper.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 5.

33. Vendors of stamps shall carefully write on the back of each sheet or piece of paper, vellum, parchment or other material bearing the impress of the Government stamps, on the same being sold or delivered by them, the date of sale and delivery, and also the name of the person to whom the same is delivered, and shall attest such endorsement with their signature, written in the manner commonly used by them; and any vendor of stamps giving out or delivering any stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or other material without writing on the back of each sheet or piece his name and the date of sale and delivery as aforesaid, shall, on conviction, forfeit for each and every piece of stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or other material so wrongfully given out or delivered by him, the sum of fifty rupees, when the value of the stamped paper or other material sold shall not exceed the sum of sixteen rupees; if the value of the stamped paper or other material so sold without due endorsement, shall exceed the sum of sixteen rupees, then the vendor shall, for every offence so committed, forfeit on conviction a sum equal to three times the value of the stamped paper so improperly sold by him.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 6.

34. Any vendor or distributor writing a false date or name at the back of stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or other material given out by him, shall, on conviction, forfeit the sum of one hundred rupees for every such offence, and if the value of the stamp sold exceed sixteen rupees, then he shall, on conviction, forfeit six times the value of such stamped paper, besides being in both cases liable to the penalty of his bond in case of breach of its stipulations.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 7.

35. Any stamp vendor convicted of refusing or of unnecessarily delaying to furnish stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or other material required by a person desiring to purchase, and tendering in lawful currency the full value of the same (he, the stamp vendor, having in his possession for sale stamped paper, vellum, or parchment of the description and value required), shall, besides forfeiting his license, be subject to a fine of one hundred rupees.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 8.

36. Any stamp vendor convicted of taking from a purchaser a higher price than that denoted on the stamps impressed on the paper, vellum, parchment, or other material sold, shall be deemed guilty of extortion, and shall be sentenced to six months' imprisonment on conviction before the collector or other officer qualified to take cognizance of the offence, besides being liable to refund the whole amount proved to have been levied or taken in excess of the proper duty.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 9.

37. It shall be competent to the collectors or other officers exercising similar powers to demand such collateral security, in addition to the bond above prescribed, as they may deem necessary to guard against loss from the misappropriation of the stamps delivered to the vendors, or from embezzlement of the money realised by them, and to require the same to be renewed, or other security to be furnished, at any time that he may deem expedient, and any vendor unable or refusing to give such security when required, shall not be appointed, or if already appointed, shall be liable to have his license immediately withdrawn.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 10.

38. When the license of any vendor may be withdrawn, or when such vendor shall resign the office, all stamped paper remaining in store at the time of such removal or resignation, and all accounts regarding the sale and distribution of stamped paper or the like at any time delivered to him, together with the balance of all money or moneys which may have been realized by the sale and distribution thereof, up to the date of removal or resignation, and which may not have been already paid or accounted for to the collector or other similar officer, and likewise all licenses, orders, or other documents or writings which the said vendor may have received from that officer, shall be forthwith delivered over to the said collector, or to such person or persons as he may appoint, by a writing under his hand and seal, to take charge thereof, receiving for any part of the stamped paper that may have been furnished to him for cash under the provisions of this or any other Regulation, the amount actually paid by him for the same as therein directed. In case any vendor removed or resigning shall refuse or fail to make over the said accounts and stores, and the balance of the accounts in cash, or any part thereof, he shall, on conviction, forfeit for such failure or refusal a sum equal to triple the amount and value of the stamps and money which may appear, from the accounts kept at the collector's office, to be, or which ought to be, in the possession of such vendor, together with a daily fine, not exceeding the sum of fifty rupees, until the papers, accounts, and documents required are furnished.—Reg. X, 1829, sec x, cl. 11.

39. In case of the death of any vendor of stamps, the collector, or other officer vested with similar powers to a collector, shall in like manner demand from the heir or person administering to or in possession of the estate of the deceased, or from any person in charge of his effects, the remainder of any store of stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or other material on which the stamp is impressed, that may be due from such vendor at the time of his decease, together with all accounts of the sale or distribution thereof, as well as all licenses, orders, or other documents or writings as aforesaid, that may be forthcoming amongst the effects of the deceased; and in the event of any refusal on the part of the heir, administrator, or other person in charge of the effects of the deceased to deliver the same, a due official receipt being tendered for the same, or of refusal to allow search to be made whenever the collector or other similar officer may demand to make search for the said stores, writings, or accounts amongst the effects of the deceased, such heir, or administrator or other person in charge of the estate or effects, shall forfeit for every such offence, on conviction, the sum of one hundred rupees, and shall further be subject to a daily fine, not exceeding fifty rupees, until the papers, accounts, documents, and writings required are furnished, or search allowed to be made as required.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 12.

40. Provided also that it shall be competent to the collector in all cases in which a vendor may fail or delay to account for and make good the value of any stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or other material, having a stamp impressed thereon, with which he may have been furnished for sale on account of Government, immediately to call upon the surety or sureties of the said vendor, to make good the balance of money or paper standing against the vendor, and on his or their failure to do so, to proceed against all or any of them for the recovery of the amount by the process in use for recovery of arrears of revenue due by a sudder farmer.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. x, cl. 13.

41. For the convenience of merchants, indigo planters, attorneys, and others who may be desirous of having in their possession papers, parchments, or other material stamped with various impressions, to be used as occasion may require, in drawing up instruments of any of the descriptions required to be executed on materials impressed with a Government stamp, it is hereby provided, that any person desirous of obtaining a supply of stamped paper, or other material, shall, on application to the collector of the district, or such other officer or officers as the Governor-General in Council may, from time to time, appoint, with similar powers, and on payment to the said officer of the amount chargeable on account of the stamps required, receive a certificate or receipt from the collector or officer aforesaid, stating the amount paid, and the number and value of the stamps required, and on the production of that certificate, together with the necessary quantity of plain paper, parchment, or other material, the superintendent of stamps, or other officer in charge of the Stamp Office, shall cause the same to be immediately stamped and counter-stamped with the prescribed stamps of the denominations required.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. xi, cl. 1.

42. No paper, vellum, parchment, or other material shall, on any account, be received by the superintendent of stamps, to be stamped on account of any individual, unless the same be accompanied with the above certificate or receipt, under the signature of the collector or other officer aforesaid for the entire amount of duty which may be required to be impressed and denoted thereon, or unless the same be sent to be stamped by authority of the Board, or other controlling authority, under the powers vested in them by this Regulation. The receipt or certificate of the collector or other officer aforesaid, shall be disposed of by the superintendent in such manner as the Board or other controlling authority aforesaid may direct.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. xi, cl. 2.

43. The superintendent of stamps shall appoint one or more officer or officers of the establishment to receive and compare with the receipt of the collector or other officer aforesaid, all papers and other materials brought or transmitted to be stamped as above provided, and after the stamps shall have been affixed, an officer similarly appointed shall again count and number the whole and sign his name at the back of each separate sheet or piece of paper or other material, and he shall likewise note or cause to be noted on each the date on which the said paper is ready for re-delivery, and further make an entry to that effect, with specification of the quantity of paper or other material impressed with each description of stamp, in a book to be specially kept by him for that purpose. When the paper or other article shall be prepared in the manner above described, it shall be made up into a parcel to be sealed with the superintendent's seal, and shall in that state be forthwith transmitted for delivery to the person who may have sent it to be stamped, or, at the superintendent's option, notice shall be sent of its being ready for delivery when called for.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. xi, cl. 3.

44. Any person purchasing stamped paper and furnishing the material as above provided shall, provided the total value purchased exceed 500 rupees, be entitled to a discount of four per cent., and the amount of such discount shall be charged and entered in the accounts of the collector or other officer through whom the purchase may be made, under the head of disbursements.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. xi, cl. 4.

45. It shall be competent to the Board, or other controlling authority aforesaid, to direct and cause stamps to be furnished in the manner prescribed in this section to any licensed vendors who may be willing to purchase the same. All such persons however shall, in the sale of stamped paper so furnished to them, be subject to the same rules as are prescribed for the sale of stamps supplied to them on account of Government: provided, however, that if a vendor so supplied with stamped paper shall die or resign, or be dismissed, or if his license be otherwise cancelled, the collector shall require and receive from him, if alive, and from his securities and representatives if he has demised, all the stamped paper, vellum, or the like which may have been furnished to him under the provisions of this section, or such portion as may not have been disposed of, and he or his representative shall be entitled to receive a sum equivalent to the price which he may have advanced for the same, viz. the specified amount of the stamped paper or other material aforesaid, with a deduction of the discount that may have been allowed thereon.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. xi, cl. 5.

46. Any native officer or other person wilfully causing or procuring any stamp to be fixed or impressed, or any certificate to be granted in the manner above described, without the perwanna or written order of the collector or other similar officer, or conniving with persons so fixing or impressing any stamp or so granting a certificate, shall be liable for every such offence to a fine of one thousand rupees, commutable to imprisonment for the term of one year, and shall further be held answerable for the amount of the stamps so impressed, or of the duty leviable on the paper mentioned in the certificate.—Reg. X, 1829. sec, xi, cl. 6.

47. Should it so happen that any stamped paper, parchment vellum, or the like, after having been obtained in the regular manner, shall have become soiled, spoiled, or unfit for use, either by consequence of any accident happening to the same, or because of error in the drawing up or copying any instrument thereupon, which being discovered before such instrument may be finally signed, and executed, renders the writing of no avail, or when by reason of the death or refusal of the party or parties whose signature may be necessary to effect the transaction intended by such writing, it remains incomplete and of no avail, or when by the refusal of any office or trust that may be granted by an instrument, it has failed of the purpose intended, or in the case of promissory notes, bills of exchange, or the like, if by non-delivery to the payee or person acting on his behalf, or from other cause, the same are never brought to use, in all such cases, it shall be competent to the Board or other controlling authority, duly appointed as above provided, upon delivery being made of the stamped paper, parchment, vellum, or the like, so soiled or spoiled, or rendered useless, to cause stamps of equivalent value to be delivered as above provided to the owner of the article or articles so soiled or spoiled, or his representative. But this rule shall not extend to bills of exchange drawn in sets, of which any one of the set may have been delivered to the payee.—Reg. X, 1829, sec. xii, cl. 1.

48. 69. The exemptions contained in the foregoing paragraph shall not be held applicable to any original suits or appeals, of whatever amount, which may be instituted in the Zillah or City Courts subsequently to the date fixed for the operation of this Regulation, whether those suits be tried by the zillah or city judges, or be referred by them for trial to the principal sudder ameens or sudder ameens.—Reg. NOTE.—The foregoing clause would seem to limit the effect of the exemptions in the clause preceding it to suits instituted before the promulgation of Reg. V, 1831, which was passed on the 1st November, 1831. The provision contained in the following section of Act XXVI, 1852, however, appears to recognize the dispensing rules above referred to as still in operation.

72. So much of the rule contained in Schedule B, Regulation X, 1829, as prescribes that the pleadings in the courts of the zillah or city judges shall be written on paper of one rupee value, is hereby modified, and the pleadings in the courts of those officers shall be written on paper of the value of four rupees wherever it has been or may be resolved to introduce the provisions of Regulation V, 1831, except in original suits for property not exceeding one thousand rupees in value or amount, and in cases of appeal from the decisions of sudder ameens and moonsiffs. In such cases the pleadings shall continue to be written on stamp paper of only one rupee value.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. iii.

73. Whenever a zillah or city judge shall refer for trial to a sudder ameen or principal sudder ameen, a suit within the competency of a moonsiff to decide, such suit shall be subject to the same rules in regard to stamp duties as the said suit would have been subjected to had it been received by the moonsiff in the first instance.—Act XXV, 1837, sec. v.

74. Whenever a zillah or city judge shall refer for trial to a principal sudder ameen a suit within the competency of a sudder ameen to decide, such suit shall be subject to the same rules in regard to stamp duties as the said suit would have been subjected to had it been referred to and tried by the sudder ameen in the first instance.—Act XXV, 1837, sec. viii.

75. In all suits which in respect to value are cognizable by a sudder ameen, the same stamps shall be sufficient in any other court as would have been sufficient in the court of sudder ameen.—Act IX, 1844, sec. v.

XII, 1826, sec. iv.

83. For every sum charged, or purported to be charged as stamp duty on any vellum, parchment, paper, or other material, two stamps shall be impressed on such material, each of which shall specify in the English, Persian, and Bengalee character, the amount of the sum charged—one of the said stamps shall be affixed at the Stamp Office, and shall bear, besides the value as above, the words "Stamp Office," in the English character, with any further device or legend which the Board of Revenue may see fit to direct. The other impression shall be a counter-stamp, to be impressed at the General Treasury, bearing similarly, along with the amount of duty levied, the words "General Treasury," in English. No stamped paper shall be used for any purpose, for which the same may be required by this Regulation, except such as may bear both impressions as above directed, together with the signature of the vendor, distributor, or other authorized person, as hereinafter prescribed.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. v, cl. 1.

84. It shall be the duty of the Board of Revenue or other authority exercising the power of that Board, to provide or cause to be provided proper and sufficient stamps, or dies, for expressing and denoting the several duties and rates specified in the Schedule annexed to this Regulation; and it shall be competent to the Board of Revenue, or other authority aforesaid, if they shall judge it expedient, to direct the employment of two or more stamps, to denote the amount chargeable on any single piece of vellum, parchment, paper or other material; provided, however, that the stamps impressed at the stamp-office of the superintendent of stamps, or other place appointed in lieu of it, shall always correspond in number and value with the counter-stamps, impressed at the General Treasury, and that all dies shall, besides the words denoting their value, contain the following words, that is to say, those used at the office of the superintendent of stamps, or other place aforesaid, shall contain the words "Stamp-Office," and the counter-stamp impressed at the General Treasury, shall similarly contain the words "General Treasury."—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. v, cl. 2.

85. The said Board, or other authority, shall have the power of at any time changing or altering such dies, and of regulating the size, shape, manner, and matter of the impressions at discretion, provided that the stamp to be affixed at the stamp-office do always contain in plain and legible characters the legend prescribed for it in the preceding paragraph, and that the counter-stamp of the Treasury do similarly contain its legend: provided also, that the Board of Revenue, or other authority aforesaid, shall, in the exercise of the powers and functions vested in them by this Regulation, be guided by such special directions as they may receive from the Governor-General in Council in the manner heretofore used in all matters and things belonging to the management of the public revenue.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. v, cl. 3.

86. An officer, being a civil servant of the Honourable Company, shall be especially appointed by the Governor-General in Council to take charge of the collection of the stamp duty within the city of Calcutta; such officer shall provide for the sale and distribution of the stamps, being answerable to Government for the amount of duty chargeable upon each and every paper, vellum, or parchment received by him for distribution. The collector of the Calcutta stamp duty shall receive such salary or other remuneration as may be appointed by the Governor-General in Council. He shall, in all things connected with the collection of this duty, be subject to the orders of the Board of Revenue, and shall keep such accounts and in such forms as may be prescribed by that authority.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vi, cl. 1.

87. The collector of the stamp duty shall hold his office, either in the same house with the stamp-office, or as near to that office as may be practicable. He shall, at all times, be supplied with stamps upon indent by the superintendent, to whom he shall grant receipts in duplicate.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vi, cl. 2.

88. It shall be the special duty of the collector of stamps to select proper persons resident in different parts of the town, for the purpose of vending and distributing stamps on the part of Government. The appointment and removal of such vendors shall be ordinarily made at his recommendation, by the authority of the Board of Revenue. Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to preclude the Board of Revenue, or the Governor-General in Council, from causing licenses to be granted without any recommendation from the collector, whenever they shall see fit to issue to him directions to that effect, under the general powers exercised by the Board and by Government over all subordinate officers employed in the management or collection of the public revenue.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vi, cl. 3.

89. Every vendor shall be furnished with a license under the seal and signature of the collector; and the appointment of any one to this duty, as well as the withdrawing of any one's license or other discontinuance of his authority to vend, by resignation, death and the like, shall be notified in the Government Gazette, for general information.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vi, cl. 4.

90. No person, not licensed after the manner provided in the preceding paragraph (unless he should be otherwise specially authorized by the Board of Revenue), shall be competent to expose stamped paper, parchment, or other material publicly to sale; and any one offending in this respect shall forfeit to Government, for the first offence, the sum of rupees five hundred, and for the second, or any subsequent offence, the sum of one thousand rupees. But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent persons having duly purchased stamped paper from the authorized vendors of Government, or having otherwise obtained such paper from the stamp-office, after the manner hereinafter provided, from transferring the same to others at a price equal to the amount of duty denominated by the stamp or stamps impressed thereon: provided, however, that every person who may so transfer stamped paper shall endorse the same with his signature, in the presence of one or more creditable persons, and the proof that the paper was purchased as aforesaid shall lie with the person so transferring it. Provided also, that if any individual shall sell or buy any stamped paper, or other material bearing, or purporting to bear the Government stamp, for a less price than the amount of the duty denominated by the stamp or stamps thereon impressed, he shall forfeit for each and every piece of paper, or other material so bought or sold by him, the sum of fifty rupees.—Reg. XII, 1826. sec. vi, cl. 5.

91. For the convenience of merchants and others, who may be desirous of having at all times in their possession papers, parchments or the like, stamped with various impressions, to be used as occasion may require, in the drawing up of instruments of any of the descriptions required to be executed on materials impressed with the Government stamps; it is hereby provided, that any person desirous of obtaining a supply of stamped paper, or other material, shall, on application to the collector of stamps, and the payment into his treasury of the amount chargeable on account of the stamps required, receive a certificate from the collector, stating the amount paid, and the number and value of the stamps required; and on the production of that certificate, together with the necessary quantity of plain paper, parchment, or other material, the superintendent shall cause the same to be immediately stamped at his office, with the stamps specified in the said document, and shall transmit the said papers, parchments, or other materials to the general treasury, to be there impressed with the necessary counter-stamps. Provided, however, that no person shall be entitled to require the collector to grant a certificate in the manner above stated, unless the total value of the stamps for which he may tender payment shall amount to the sum of one hundred rupees. And the number of pieces of paper, vellum, or other material required to be stamped, shall not be less than twenty.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vii, cl. 1.

92. No paper, vellum, parchment, or other material shall on any account be received by the superintendent of stamps, to be stamped on account of any individual, unless the same be accompanied with a receipt in full, under the signature of the collector of stamps, for the entire amount of duty which may be required to be impressed thereon, or unless the same be sent him to be stamped, by authority of the Board of Revenue, under the powers vested in that Board by this Regulation. The receipt of the collector shall, in all cases, specify, as well the aggregate amount paid, as the number and description of the stamps required, and the exact number of sheets or pieces on which the same are to be impressed. All such receipts shall be disposed of by the superintendent in such manner as the Board of Revenue may prescribe.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vii, cl. 2.

93. The superintendent of stamps shall appoint one or more officer or officers of his establishment to receive and compare with the collector's receipt all papers or the like brought to be stamped as above, and after the stamps shall have been affixed, the same officer shall again count the whole and sign his name at the back of each separate sheet, or piece of paper, or other material; and he shall likewise note on each the date on which the said paper is ready for re-delivery, and further make an entry to that effect, with specification of the quantity of paper or the like impressed with each description of stamp, in a book to be specially kept by him for that purpose. When the paper or other article shall be prepared in the manner above described, it shall be made up into a parcel to be sealed with the superintendent's seal, and shall in that state be forthwith transmitted to the person who may have sent it to be stamped, or at the superintendent's option notice shall be sent of its being ready for delivery when called for.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vii, cl. 3.

94. Whenever any person or persons shall desire to send paper or other material to the stamp-office, for the purpose of being stamped, and shall consequently pay the amount of duty in advance in the manner above required, it shall be competent to the collector of stamps, in case the total amount so falling to be paid shall exceed the sum of five hundred rupees in any one payment, to allow to the party making such payment a discount at the rate of four per cent. upon the aggregate amount of duty leviable, or such other rate as may from time to time be appointed by the Governor-General in Council, by notification in the Government Gazette, and the amount of such discount shall be charged and entered on the collector's accounts, under the head of disbursements.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vii, cl. 4.

95. It shall also be competent to the Board of Revenue to direct and cause stamps to be furnished in the manner and on the terms prescribed in this section to any licensed vendors, who may be willing to purchase the same; all such persons however, shall, in the sale of stamped paper so furnished to them, be subject to the same rules as are prescribed for the sale of stamps supplied to them on account of Government. Provided, however, that if such vendor shall resign or be dismissed, or his license be otherwise cancelled, then, and in that case he, his representative or assign shall deliver up to the collector of stamps, or to such person as he may appoint to receive the stamped paper, vellum, or the like, furnished to him under the provisions of this section, or such portion as may not have been disposed of, and shall be entitled to recover a sum equivalent to the price which he may have advanced for the same, viz. the specified amount of the stamped paper or other material aforesaid, with a deduction of the discount that may have been allowed on it.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. vii, cl. 5.

96. If any superintendent or other officer shall fix or impress, or cause to be fixed or impressed, any stamp to or upon any vellum, parchment, paper, or other material which shall be brought to the Stamp Office to be stamped or marked, without a regular certificate from the collector of the amount of duty having been paid, or without special authority in writing from the Board of Revenue, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of one thousand rupees. In like manner, if any collector, or other officer appointed to receive the stamp duty, shall grant a certificate of the above description, before the prescribed duty with a deduction of the authorised discount shall have been actually paid, such officer shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of one thousand rupees, besides being held responsible for the amount of duty unrealized.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. viii, cl. 1.

97. Any native officer or other person causing or procuring any stamp to be fixed or impressed, or any certificate to be granted in the irregular manner aforesaid, or conniving with the officer so fixing or impressing any stamp, or so granting a certificate, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of one thousand rupees, and shall in addition be held answerable for the amount of duty chargeable on the paper mentioned in the certificate.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. viii, cl. 2.

98. The following rules are enacted for the control and superintendence of the vendors and distributors authorised to be appointed by paragraph 88.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 1.

99. Every person who may be appointed to be a vendor or distributor of stamps on the part of Government, shall attend the Board in person, and execute a bond, with one or more responsible sureties, for the faithful performance of the several duties prescribed for such vendors and distributors in this or any future Regulations, with such penalty and after such form as may be required by the said Board; and any failure in fulfilling the conditions of such bond, shall, besides the penalty thereby provided, subject the offender to immediate dismission from the said office of vendor or distributor, by the Board of Revenue.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 2.

100. The following rules shall be observed by all vendors and distributors of stamps, and the bonds executed by those persons on their appointment shall distinctly bind them to a strict observance of those rules, subject in case of failure to the several penalties hereinafter specified. Provided, however, that it shall also be competent to the Board of Revenue to require the vendors and distributors of stamps to come under such further engagements as may appear necessary, and as may be legally required from them.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 3.

101. All persons licensed to vend or distribute stamps shall at all times have their respective licenses, together with a copy of the schedule annexed to this Regulation, duly authenticated by the official signature of the collector of stamps, stuck up in a conspicuous place within the shop or building in which they may sell the stamps, and shall further hang up on the outer door of such shop or other building such notification of their being licensed as the Board of Revenue may direct. Any neglect or failure to observe the above rule will subject the party offending to a fine of rupees fifty.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 4.

102. All persons as aforesaid shall keep such accounts of the paper received and delivered by them as the Board of Revenue may direct, and shall furnish the collector with such copies or extracts of those accounts, and at such periods, as he may from time to time require. The said persons shall regularly pay to the collector all money or moneys received by them on the sale of stamps intrusted to them on the account of Government, at such periods as the said officer may appoint, and shall likewise at all times when required permit the collector, or other person duly authorized by him, to inspect the accounts kept by them, and to examine the store of stamped paper, or the like, which they may have in their possession.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 5.

103. Any vendor or distributor failing to produce before the collector of the stamp duty any of the accounts required by the Board of Revenue to be kept by him, after requisition made in writing by that officer, and failing to account for such omission to the satisfaction of the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall forfeit the sum of fifty rupees, and shall further pay such daily fine for every day beyond the day fixed in such requisition for the production thereof, until the day when the accounts may be produced, as the Board of Revenue may direct. Any vendor or distributor refusing to permit the collector of stamps, or other person duly authorized by a writing under the seal and signature of that officer, to inspect the said accounts and examine the store of stamped paper at the time in the custody of such vendor or distributor immediately upon demand, shall forfeit for every such refusal the sum of one hundred rupees, and shall further be subject to such daily fine, until he complies with the collector's requisition, as the Board of Revenue may direct.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 6.

104. No vendor or distributor of stamps shall deliver any stamped paper or the like without having previously received the full amount of the duty denominated by the stamp thereunto affixed; save and except in cases in which he may be otherwise specially permitted or directed by the collector or Board of Revenue.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec ix, cl. 7.

105. Any vendor or distributor who may, without authority, permission, or direction, in writing from the collector or Board of Revenue, sell, give out, or deliver stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or the like, without having received the entire amount of duty denominated by the stamp affixed thereto, shall forfeit for each and every piece of paper, or other material aforesaid so given out or delivered by him, the sum of fifty rupees, besides being held responsible for the amount which should have been taken, in case of its not being afterwards recovered. Any person taking or receiving stamped paper from any such vendor, without having paid the entire amount of duty as aforesaid, shall forfeit the like sum of fifty rupees for each and every piece of paper, &c. received or taken by him.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec ix, cl. 8.

106. All vendors and distributors of stamps shall carefully write on the back of each sheet, or piece of stamped paper, or the like, sold or delivered by them, the date of sale and delivery, and shall attest each endorsement with his signature written in the manner commonly used by him.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 9.

107. Any vendor or distributor going out or delivering any stamped paper, or the like, without writing at the back of each sheet or piece his name and the date of sale, and delivery as aforesaid, shall forfeit for each and every piece of paper so given out or delivered by him the sum of fifty rupees, provided the value of the paper sold do not exceed the sum of sixteen rupees; but if the value of the paper so sold without signature exceed the sum of sixteen rupees, then the vendor shall for every offence so committed forfeit a sum equal to three times the value of the paper so illegally sold by him.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 10.

108. Any vendor or distributor writing a false date at the back of paper, vellum, or parchment given out by him, shall forfeit the sum of one hundred rupees for every such offence, or if the value of the stamp sold exceed sixteen rupees, then he shall forfeit six times the value of such stamped paper, besides being in both cases liable to the penalty of his bond in case of any breach of its stipulations.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 11.

109. All vendors and distributors of stamps shall comply with all applications made to them for the purchase of stamped paper or the like, with as little delay as possible. Any vendor or distributor being applied to for stamped paper or the like, and having in his possession the description of paper required, shall, in case of refusal or wilful delay to furnish the same to the person applying for it, and tendering the value in coin of the established currency, or in notes authorized by Government to be received in payment of the public revenue, forfeit for every such offence the sum of fifty rupees.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 12.

110. No vendor or distributor of stamps shall, on any plea or pretext whatsoever, take or demand a higher price for the stamps delivered by him than the sum denoted by the stamp or stamps impressed on the paper, parchment, or the like, so delivered; or any fee, reward, or consideration for furnishing stamps to persons applying for them; and any vendor or distributor who, upon furnishing stamped paper, parchment, vellum, or any other article bearing a stamp, to any individual for use, shall, as a consideration for furnishing the article, or on any other pretext, take or demand as the equivalent of the article so furnished, a higher price than the amount that may be denoted by the impression of the stamp or stamps upon such paper, parchment, vellum, or the like, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of rupees one hundred.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix. cl. 13.

111. It shall be competent to the collector of stamps to demand, for his personal satisfaction, such collateral security, in addition to the said bond, as he may deem necessary, to guard against loss from the misappropriation of the stamps delivered to the vendors or distributors, or the embezzlement of the money realized by them, and to require the same to be renewed or other security to be furnished at any time that he may deem the same expedient, and any one unable or refusing to give such security when required, shall not be appointed, or if already appointed shall be liable to have his license immediately withdrawn.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 14.

112. When the license of any vendor or distributor may be withdrawn, or when such vendor or distributor shall resign the office, all stamped paper, or other article remaining in store at the time of such removal or resignation, and all accounts regarding the sale and distribution of stamped paper, or the like, at any time delivered to him, together with the balance of all money or moneys, which may have been realized by the sale and distribution thereof up to the date of the said removal or resignation, and which may not have been already paid or accounted for to the collector of stamp duty, and likewise all licenses, orders, or other documents or writings, which the said vendor or distributor may have received from that officer, shall be forthwith delivered over to the said collector, or to such person or persons as he may appoint by a writing under his hand and seal, to take charge thereof, receiving for such part of the stamp paper, or the like, as may have been furnished to him under the provisions of paragraphs 91 to 95, the amount actually paid by him for the same as therein directed. In case any vendor or distributor so removed or resigning shall refuse or fail to make over the said accounts and stores, and the balance of the accounts in cash, or any part thereof, he shall forfeit for such failure or refusal a sum equal to triple the amount and value of the stamps and money which may appear, from the accounts kept at the collector's office, to be in the possession of such vendor or distributor, together with such daily fine, until the papers, accounts, and documents required are furnished, as the Board or other authority aforesaid may direct.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec ix, cl. 15.

113. In case of the death of any vendor or distributor, the collector of the stamp duty shall in like manner be empowered to demand, from the heir or person administering to the estate of the deceased, or other person in charge of his effects, the remainder of any store of stamped paper, vellum, parchment, or the like, in the possession of such vendor or distributor at the time of his decease, together with all accounts of the sale or distribution thereof, as well as all licenses, orders, or other documents or writings as aforesaid, that may be forthcoming amongst the effects of the deceased; and in the event of any refusal on the part of the heir, administrator, or other person in charge of the effects of the deceased, to deliver the same, or of refusal to allow search to be made whenever the collector of the stamp duty may demand to make search for the said stores or accounts, such heir, or administrator, or other person in charge of the estate, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of fifty rupees, and shall further be subject to such daily fine, until the papers, accounts, documents, and writings required are furnished, as the Board of Revenue may direct.—Reg. XII, 1826. sec. ix, cl. 16.

114. Provided also, that it shall be competent to the collector, in the cases specified in the two preceding paragraphs, as well as in all cases in which a vendor or distributor may fail or delay to account for, and make good the value of any stamped paper, or the like, with which he may have been furnished for sale on account of Government, immediately to call upon the surety or sureties of the said vendor or distributor, to make good the deficiency of money or paper, and on their failure to do so, to proceed against all, or any of them, for the recovery of the amount.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 17.

115. All persons appointed by the Board of Revenue to be vendors or distributors of stamps shall verify by affidavit, or affirmation, their respective accounts, whenever they may be required by the Board to do so; and if any vendor or distributor shall refuse or neglect to verify his accounts within such reasonable time as he shall be called upon so to do by the said Board, or any member thereof, he shall for every offence forfeit the sum of five hundred rupees.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. ix, cl. 18.

116. Should it so happen that any parcel of papers, parchments, vellums, or the like, or any single sheet, or piece thereof that may have been duly stamped, and obtained from a licensed vendor of the stamps direct, or from the Stamp Office, under the rule contained in paragraph 91, shall have been destroyed by fire or other accident, it shall be competent to the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, upon its being proved to the satisfaction of that authority that the said stamps were duly received, and subsequently were destroyed by accident, after the manner asserted, to cause their secretary to grant to the owner of the paper, or other material destroyed, a certificate under his signature, and the seal of the Board, specifying the number and value of the stamps so destroyed, and the said owner shall, upon carrying the said certificate to the Stamp Office, together with such quantity of paper, vellum, or the like, as may be sufficient for the purpose, be entitled, without any fee, charge, or duty whatsoever, to have the paper, vellum, parchment, or the like, so carried to the Stamp Office, stamped or marked for such duties as may be specified in the said certificate; and the superintendent of stamps is hereby enjoined to cause the same to be stamped and delivered in the same manner as if the paper or other material were accompanied with a certificate of the duty having been paid under the hand and seal of the collector of the stamp duty; provided, however, that a separate account shall be kept of all stamps impressed or affixed by warrant of such certificate.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. x, cl. 1.

117. In like manner, in case any stamped paper, parchment, vellum, or the like, after having been obtained in a regular manner, shall have become soiled, spoiled, or unfit for use, either by consequence of any accident happening to the same, or because of error in the drawing up or copying of any instrument thereupon, which being discovered before such instrument may be finally signed and executed, shall render the writing of no avail; or in which, by reason of the death or refusal of the party or parties whose signature may be necessary to effect the transaction intended by such writing, it should be incomplete and of no avail: or in which, by the refusal of any office, or trust that may be granted by such instrument, it shall fail of the purpose intended; or in the case of promissory notes, bills of exchange, or the like, if by non-delivery to the payee, or person acting on his behalf, or other cause, they shall never be brought to use. In all such cases, it shall be competent to the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, upon delivery being made of the stamped paper, parchment, or vellum, or the like, so soiled or spoiled, to cause certificate to be granted after the manner provided, in order that the owner of the article or articles so soiled or spoiled, may have the like, or equivalent stamps, impressed upon other materials to be furnished by him for that purpose. But this rule shall not extend to bills of exchange drawn in sets, of which any one of the set may have been delivered to the payee.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec x, cl. 2.

118. Provided, however, that no such certificate shall be granted by authority of the Board of Revenue, except the total value of stamps proved to have been destroyed or soiled by accident, or the total value of every single stamp in the case of the material having been spoiled by being written upon, shall amount to or exceed the sum of ten rupees. Provided likewise, that no such certificate shall be granted, except after proof exhibited that the accident or act, by reason of which the material may have become soiled, or spoiled, or destroyed, or useless, occurred within the period of three calendar months of the date on which application may be made for the certificate. No exception shall be taken to any deed or instrument, on the ground that the stamp which may have been used is not of a proper denomination or rate of duty, provided the same bear an equal or greater value in the whole than the stamp which ought regularly to have been used. —Reg. XII, 1826, sec. x, cl. 3.

119. If any person or persons shall, after the 1st May, 1827, write or engross, or cause to be written or engrossed on any vellum, parchment, paper, or other material, any of the matters or things on account of which such material would be chargeable with stamp duty, under the rules of this or any other Regulation in force, before the said material shall have been duly stamped; or if any person shall, after the said date, in any manner, make, sign, or execute, or accept, or negotiate, any deed or instrument chargeable with a stamp duty, that may not have been executed on paper, or other material duly stamped, such person or persons shall forfeit for every such offence a sum equivalent to twenty times the value of the stamp paper which ought to have been used.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. xi, cl. 1.

120. Provided, however, that if any person or persons writing or engrossing, or causing to be written or engrossed, any matter or thing chargeable with a stamp duty, upon unstamped paper, vellum, parchment, or the like, or any person or persons accepting or becoming possessed of any deed, instrument, or writing, so written on unstamped paper, or desirous of negotiating or benefiting thereby, shall voluntarily carry the same to the collector of stamps, and shall pay to that officer the entire amount of duty chargeable thereupon, together with the amount hereinafter provided, the collector shall transmit the deed, instrument, or writing, to the superintendent of the stamp-office, for the purpose of being duly stamped, and the person aforesaid shall not be liable to the penalty declared in the preceding paragraph; that is to say, if the deed or instrument originally executed on unstamped paper shall be brought to be stamped in the manner above mentioned, at any time before the money conditioned or directed to be paid, or the act conditioned to be done shall be due, but not later than thirty days from the date of the execution of the deed, instrument, or writing, or (in the case of deeds, instruments, or writings, not conditioning the payment of money, or the performance of any contract within a specific period) at any time within thirty days of the execution of the deed, instrument, or writing, the party shall pay a sum equal to five times the value of the stamped paper which ought to have been used: if the deed or instrument aforesaid shall not be brought in the manner above mentioned, within the period above specified, the party bringing it shall pay a sum equal to ten times the value of the stamped paper which ought to have been used.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. xi. cl. 2.

121. In case any deed or instrument shall have been executed on paper, parchment, vellum, or other material stamped for a rate or amount of duty less than what may be the rate or amount chargeable on account of the matter or thing that may have been engrossed or written thereupon, the like penalties shall attach as have been provided by the two preceding paragraphs; that is to say, a sum equal to twenty times the excess of the proper stamp above the value of that which may have been used shall be forfeited, if the error of the stamp be discovered otherwise than by the voluntary production of the party or parties concerned; and a sum equal to five or ten times the said excess, if the party shall voluntarily bring such deed to have the proper stamp affixed within the periods above stated respectively.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. xi, cl. 3.

122. Provided however, and it is hereby enacted, that in case any deed, or instrument, chargeable with a stamp duty, shall have been executed on unstamped paper or other unstamped material, or on any material bearing a stamp of an amount not equal to the duty chargeable upon such deed or instrument, then if the person executing such deed, or any other party interested, shall establish to the satisfaction of the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, that the irregular execution of the deed or instrument was owing to accident, or inadvertence, or to other unavoidable cause, it shall be competent to the above-mentioned authority, in case they should think proper to do so, to remit part, or the whole of the penalties above enacted, and to cause a proper stamp to be affixed to such unstamped or improperly stamped instrument, on the payment of the actual amount of the duty chargeable thereupon.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. xi, cl. 4.

123. Provided further, that if the stamp or stamps affixed to any instrument, deed, or the like, be detected to be forged or counterfeit, the full penalty of twenty times the value of the stamp on which the same should have been written, shall, in all cases, be exacted, in addition to the entire amount of duty chargeable for such deed, before the same shall be impressed with the genuine stamps of Government, unless the material on which the same may be executed shall bear the endorsement required by paragraph 93, or paragraph 106, as the case may be, and unless the party having executed, or being at the time in possession of such deed, shall be able to prove to the satisfaction of the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, that the material stamped with a forged stamp was purchased or obtained on the date specified on the back of it, and from the individual whose name may be there signed. If the required matter shall be duly endorsed on the back of any material stamped with a forged impression, and the proof adduced to the fact and date of purchase be deemed by the Board of Revenue to be sufficient, the regular and genuine stamps shall be caused to be affixed on payment of one half the established duty chargeable on account of the matter of the instrument or deed in question, and certificate to that effect shall be given by the Board of Revenue.—Reg. XII, 1826, sec. xi, cl. 5.

124. ## APPENDIX.

LOCAL ENACTMENTS.

1. The City Court and Zillah Courts are prohibited hearing, trying, or determining the merits of any suit whatever against any person or persons, to regain the possession of lands or grounds, if the cause of action shall have arisen previous to the 1st of July, 1775, or any suit whatever against any person or persons, if the cause of action shall have arisen twelve years before any suit shall have been commenced on account of it; unless the complainant can show, by clear and positive proof, that he demanded the money or matter in question, and that the defendant admitted the truth of the demand, or promised to pay the money, or that he directly preferred the claim within that period for the matter in dispute to a court of competent jurisdiction, or to the Hakim ul Wukt, or person having authority, whether local or otherwise, for the time being, to hear such complaints, to try the demand, and assign satisfactory reasons to the court why he did not proceed in the suit, or show that, either from minority or other good and sufficient cause, he was precluded from obtaining redress. But from this rule are excepted all claims founded on bonds which shall have been in a course of payment by instalments, or of which any proportion shall have been paid within twelve years previous to the institution of the suit; and also all claims on mortgages, the period for rendering which obsolete and unactionable is to be determined by the law of the religion of the defendant.—Reg. VII, 1795, sec. viii.

2. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut is vested with a discretionary power, similar to that formerly exercised by the resident, as judge of the Court of Appeal, which existed in the province of Benares previous to the abolition of the residency, of dispensing with that part of the preceding rule which prohibits the courts from taking cognizance of any claims, where the cause of action shall have arisen twelve years before any suit shall have been commenced on account of it, and to issue a precept to the proper court to take cognizance of the suit. The court are to record their reasons for every exercise of this power.—Reg. X, 1795, sec. x.

Note.—This power is, no doubt, no longer exercised, but the enactment does not appear to have been rescinded

3. The City Court and Zillah Courts are prohibited decreeing the payment or satisfaction of any sum due on a tamassook or bond, which may have been entered into after the 1st of July, 1795, unless the bond shall be proved to have been executed in the presence of two credible witnesses, or the payment of the sum demanded on the bond, or some other valuable consideration for it having been received, shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court. But the restriction contained in this paragraph is not to extend to any bills of exchange, receipts, or notes of hand, in the determination on which the custom of the country is to be abided by; nor to the dealings and money transactions amongst mehajuns and shroffs, in which the established customs observed and in force amongst them are to be adhered to by the courts in their inquiries and decisions.—Reg. VII, 1795, sec. ix.

4. The City Court and Zillah Courts are prohibited entertaining any cause which, from the production of a former decrée, or the records of the court, shall appear to have been heard and determined by any former resident, acting resident, or native hakim or superintendent of a court having competent jurisdiction. If any doubt should arise respecting the competency of the former jurisdiction, the judge is to report the circumstances to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and wait the instructions of that court.—Reg. VII, 1795, sec. x.

5. Peons deputed to serve summonses or execute process are to receive two annas per day each. —Reg. VIII, 1795, sec. iv, cl. 3.

6. On a written complaint being preferred, in the manner specified in section v, Regulation IV, 1793 ("Procedure on the trial of Original Suits," paragraph 17), either against the Rajah of Benares, or against any of the principal mehajuns of the city of Benares, being such as are known under the denomination of Nowputty, or against any of the baboos (being persons of the rajah's blood and family), the security required from defendants in the said section shall not be demanded of them; but the court is merely to issue a notice to such defendants, containing a short account of the nature of the demand, and fixing a day for him or them to appear, either in person or by vakeel duly authorized, to answer to the claim; and in case of his or their failing to appear as required, or to conform to all the subsequent established process in the cause, such defendant or defendants shall forfeit the honorary privilege hereby reserved to them, and be dealt with in all respects as other unprivileged defendants. This privilege, however, is to be construed to extend only to the cases above specified, in which such persons may be defendants in the City Court or the Zillah Courts, and to suits which may be directed to be tried in the first instance in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, pursuant to orders from the Governor-General in Council, or in the Zillah Court, in conformity to directions from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and not to any cases of appeal in which, whether the appeal be lodged in the Zillah Court or the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the said persons are to give the same securities as other persons concerned in appeals in those courts.—Reg. VIII, 1795, sec. x.

7. An office shall be established in the city of Benares, and in the zillahs of Mirzapoor, Ghazeepoor, and Juanpoor, for the registry of wills and deeds for the transfer or mortgage of real property, under the rules prescribed in Regulation XXXVI, 1793, for establishing similar offices in the cities and zillahs in the provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa.—Reg. XXVIII, 1795, sec. ii.

CEDED PROVINCES.

8. The following article, being the sixth article of a treaty concluded with the Nawaub of Furruckabad on the 4th of June, 1802, is hereby enacted into a rule, for the guidance of the Zillah Court of Furruckabad.

"Article VI. The authority of the Court of Adawlut shall not extend to the person of the Nawaub; but as his connections and dependants are undefined, and as it is the object of the British Government to introduce a fair and impartial administration of justice throughout the province of Furruckabad, it is agreed, that whatever complaint may be preferred against any of the Nawaub's dependants, shall in the first instance be referred to the Nawaub; and in the event of the complainant not receiving speedy justice, or being dissatisfied with the Nawaub's decision, the complaint shall be decided in the Adawlut.—Reg. II, 1803, sec. viii.

9. If the holder of a decree passed by the Nawaub of Furruckabad, under the provisions of the preceding paragraph, shall be unable to obtain execution of the said decree by the Nawaub for a period of six weeks (which period of six weeks shall be calculated from the said 1st day of June, if the decree were passed before the said 1st day of June, 1836, and from the time of passing the decree, if the decree were passed on or after the said 1st day of June, 1836), the said holder shall be at liberty to sue out execution of the said decree in the Zillah Court of Furruckabad, and the judge of that court, on application made to that effect, shall execute the decree in the same manner in which a decree of the said Zillah Court is executed.—Act XII, 1836.

10. The Zillah Courts are prohibited from entertaining any cause which, from the production of a former decree or the records of the court or other instrument, shall appear to have been heard and determined by any former judge, superintendent of a court, collector, or other public officer, having competent jurisdiction or authority. If any doubt should arise respecting the competency of the former jurisdiction or authority, the judges are to report the circumstances to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and wait the instructions of that court.—Reg. II, 1803, sec. x.

11. [The first part of the section contains the general limitation of twelve years.] Provided however, that it shall not be competent to the Zillah Courts, under the powers vested in them, to hear, try, or determine the merits of any civil suit whatever, if the cause of action shall have arisen previous to the 10th day of November, 1801, the date of the cession of the provinces ceded by the Nawaub Vizier to the Honourable the English East India Company.—Reg. II, 1803, sec. xviii, cl. 3.

CONQUERED PROVINCES.

12. In lieu of the date prescribed by section xviii, Regulation II, 1803, the 30th December, 1803, in the provinces constituting the zillah of Allyghur, the northern and southern divisions of the zillah of Saharunpore, and the zillah of Agra; and the 16th of December, 1803, in the territory constituting the zillah of Bundlecund (being the dates on which the said provinces and territories were respectively ceded to the Honourable the English East India Company), shall be considered the periods of limitation for taking cognizance of suits, subject to the several provisions contained in section xviii, Regulation II, 1803, and in sections ii and iii, Regulation II, 1805 (CIVIL COURTS—CONSTITUTION AND JURISDICTION," paragraphs 73 to 78).—Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. vi; cl. 2.

CUTTACK.

13. [The first part of the section contains the general limitation of twelve years.] Provided, however, that it shall not be competent to the Zillah Courts, under the powers vested in them by this clause, to hear, try, or determine the merits of any civil suit whatever, if the cause of action shall have arisen previous to the 14th day of October, 1803.—Reg. XIV, 1805, sec. viii.

14. The jurisdiction of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta, is extended to the zillah of Cuttack.—Reg. XIV, 1805, sec. x.

15. The laws and Regulations which now are, or which may be hereafter established in the provinces of Bengal and Behar, and in that part of Orissa heretofore subject to the British Government, for the guidance of the zillah judges, of the judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, for the administration of justice in civil cases, including the Regulations for the manufacture of salt, and generally regarding all cases and matters subject to the cognizance of the Courts of Civil Judicature in the said provinces, which are not already extended to the zillah of Cuttack, and which are not repugnant to, or inconsistent with, any of the provisions above stated, or with any of the provisions contained in Regulations XII and XIII, 1805, are hereby declared to be in force in that zillah, and in the pergunnahs of Puttespore, Kummardichour, and Bograe; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be construed, for the present, to be applicable to the estates of certain hill or jungle rajahs or zemindars, of whom a list is inserted in section xxxvi, Regulation XII, 1805; and provided, likewise, that in cases in which the Bengal language and character are directed to be used in the province of Bengal, the Ooriya language and character shall be used in the zillah of Cuttack and in the above-mentioned pergunnahs.—Reg. XIV, 1805, sec. xi.

16. Whereas certain jungle or hill zemindaries in the zillah of Cuttack, enumerated in section xxxvi of Regulation XII, 1805, of the Bengal code, and the territory of Mohurbunge, in the same zillah, were temporarily exempted by the said Regulation from the Regulations relating to the settlement and collection of the public revenue, and by Regulation XIII, 1805, of the Bengal code, were temporarily exempted from the laws and Regulations for the maintenance of the police, and for the administration of justice in criminal cases, and whereas doubts have been entertained how disputes as to the boundaries of the said zemindaries are to be determined, it is enacted as follows:

Every case in which the boundaries between any of the said zemindaries, or the killahs of Boad and Atmullick, and an estate subject to the Regulations of the Bengal code, shall be in dispute, shall be heard, tried, and determined in the first instance by the superintendent of the tributary mehauls in zillah Cuttack, according to such instructions as he shall from time to time receive from the Governor of Bengal, and his award, when confirmed by the Governor of Bengal, shall be final and conclusive, and shall be carried into execution by the superintendent of tributary mehauls by giving possession of the land in dispute to the parties entitled under his award.—Act XX, 1850.

BHAUGULPORE.

17. The magistrate of Bhaugulpore is authorized to try summarily, and adjudge all claims for money or personal property arising between the hill people, residing within the limits of the hill divisions, provided the amount or value of the same do not exceed one hundred rupees, and provided the cause of action shall not have been of more than one year's standing.—Reg. I, 1827, sec. iii, cl. 1.

18. Under the same limitation of time, the magistrate is likewise authorized to try and adjudge all claims regarding the situation of manjee, and the right of possession in any hills, and likewise any disputes respecting the limits of the same.—Reg. I, 1827, sec. iii, cl. 2.

19. The magistrate is further authorized to decide summarily on all claims for money and personal property (not exceeding in amount or value the sum of one hundred rupees) which may arise in the Bhaugulpore district (subject to the above specified limitation in point of time) between the hill people and the inhabitants of the low lands.—Reg. I, 1827, sec. iii, cl. 3.

20. In the discharge of the above duties, the magistrate shall observe the rules of process and forms of proceeding prescribed and practised in the investigation and decision of cases of assault and the like; all petitions connected with cases cognizable under these rules shall be written on paper bearing the usual stamp for petitions presented in the Magistrate's Court, and in the summoning and examination of witnesses, as well as in all cases of resistance, contempt, or evasion of process, during the investigation of the cases in question, the provisions of the existing Regulations applicable to cases arising in the court of the magistrates shall apply and regulate the course of proceeding. Provided, however, that upon award being made by the magistrate adjudging any sum to be due, or determining the right of any party in a hill tenure, or other interest or possession, the award shall take effect and be executed as a decree of a civil court, and the final proceeding of the magistrate in the case shall similarly determine in what manner and by whom the costs, if any, shall be defrayed.—Reg. I, 1827, sec. iii, cl. 4.

21. It shall be competent to the magistrate, whenever in a case of doubt, or for any other reason he may so judge fit, to refer a claim brought before him under these rules to the arbitration of any given number of hill chiefs he may deem proper to appoint; not being less than three.—Reg. I, 1827, sec. iii, cl. 5.

22. Any party deeming himself aggrieved by the award of a magistrate passed under the preceding rules shall be competent to bring the matter by petition, bearing the usual stamp for petitions presented to the Sessions Court, before the Sessions judge holding the next ensuing sessions of jail delivery for the district. The judge so holding the sessions shall, on receipt of such petition, call for the papers and proceedings, and hold such further investigation as he may deem necessary to satisfy himself as to the merits of the award made by the magistrate. Should he deem the same erroneous, or should the proceedings of the magistrate be found irregular or improper in any respect, a report of the case, with the whole proceedings annexed, shall be submitted to the Nizamut Adawlut, who shall be competent to reverse, alter, or amend the award in any manner that may be deemed proper, and to issue any orders upon the subject that may appear expedient.—Reg. I, 1827, sec. iii, cl. 6.

23. It shall be the duty of the magistrate to submit monthly statements to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of the number of claims instituted and disposed of by him under these rules. —Reg. I, 1827, sec. iii, cl. 7.

24. The above provisions shall not be held applicable to the pergunnah of Bheel Putta, and the inhabitants of that pergunnah shall be considered subject to the rules contained in the general code, both in matters of civil and criminal jurisdiction.—Reg. I, 1827, sec. iv.

NOTE.—See "CRIMINAL JUDICATURE."

COURT OF SMALL CAUSES IN CALCUTTA.

NOTE.—The Act IX, 1850, establishing the Court of Small Causes at Calcutta, is limited in its operation to Calcutta, and subjects it to the general authority of the Supreme Court of Judicature. The entire Act is not given in this collection, on the principle which has excluded other enactments which only relate to the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Courts; but there are a few sections by which the judicial officers of the East India Company's Courts are called upon to act, and those sections are here given.

25. The Court of Requests for the recovery of small debts in the town of Calcutta shall be holden according to the provisions of Act IX, 1850, from and after such day as shall be declared within the said town by proclamation, to be made and published in due form of law by the Governor in Council.—Act IX, 1850, sec. i.

26. The Court shall not have jurisdiction in any matter concerning the revenue, or concerning any act ordered or done by the Governor or Governor-General, or any member of the Council of India, in his public capacity, or done by any person by order of the Governor-General or Governor in Council, or concerning any act ordered or done by any judge or judicial officer in the execution of his office, or by any person in pursuance of any judgment or order of any court, or any such judge or judicial officer, or in any suit for libel or slander.—Act IX, 1850, sec. xxv.

27. Any summons or other process of any court, service of which is needed out of the district of the court, may be exhibited in any court of law, or before any magistrate, and shall be thereupon endorsed by the magistrate or judge of such court, and when so endorsed may be served in like manner as any order or process from such court or magistrate; and such service shall be as valid as if the same had been made by the bailiff of the court out of which such summons or other process shall have issued within the jurisdiction of the court for which he acts. —Act IX, 1850, sec. xxix.

28. Service of any summons or other process of the court, which shall require to be served out of the district of the court, may be proved by affidavit, or solemn affirmation, purporting to be sworn or made before any judge or magistrate; and, in every case of the unavoidable absence of the bailiff by whom any summons or other process of the court has been served, the service of such summons or other process may be proved, if the judges think fit, in the same manner as a summons served out of the district of the court.—Act IX, 1850, sec. xxx.

29. Whenever any defendant, against whom judgment shall have been given in the Court of Small Causes, shall go, before execution thereof, out of the jurisdiction of the court, the judge of any zillah or town where he shall be found, upon receiving from the plaintiff, either in person or by vakeel, an application in writing setting forth these facts, with a duly authenticated copy of the judgment of the court, shall execute the said judgment, in the manner prescribed by law for execution of his own decrees; unless the defendant shall allege any reasonable cause why the judgment should not be executed, and shall give security, to such amount as the judge of such zillah or town shall deem reasonable, that he will, within such time as shall be allowed him for that purpose, either satisfy the judgment or produce a duly authenticated copy of an order of the judges of the Court of Small Causes, discharging their former judgment.—Act IX, 1850, sec. lxxviii.

30. All penalties, fines, and forfeitures by this Act inflicted or authorized to be imposed (the manner of recovering and applying whereof is not otherwise particularly directed), upon proof before any justice of the peace or magistrate having jurisdiction where the offender shall reside or be, or the offence shall be committed, either by the confession of the party offending, or by the oath or affirmation of any credible witness, shall be levied, with the costs attending the summons and conviction, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party offending, by warrant under the hand of any such justice or magistrate, and the overplus (if any) after such penalties, fines, and forfeitures, and the charges of such distress and sale are deducted, shall be returned upon demand unto the owner of such goods and chattels.—Act IX, 1850, sec. ciii.

31. If any such penalties, fines, and forfeitures respectively, shall not be paid forthwith upon conviction, it shall be lawful for such justice or magistrate to order the offender so convicted to be detained in safe custody until return can conveniently be made to such warrant of distress, unless such offender shall give sufficient security to the satisfaction of such justice or magistrate for his appearance before him on such day as shall be appointed for the return of such warrant of distress, such day not being more than eight days from the time of taking any such security, which security the justice or magistrate shall be empowered to take by way of recognizance or otherwise, as to him shall seem fit.—Act IX, 1850, sec. civ.

32. If upon return of such warrant it shall appear that no sufficient distress can be had thereupon, or in case it shall appear to the satisfaction of the justice or magistrate, either by confession of the offender or otherwise, that he hath not within the jurisdiction of such justice or magistrate, sufficient goods and chattels whereon to levy all such penalties, forfeitures, costs and charges, the justice or magistrate may, at his discretion, without issuing any warrant of distress, commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction for any time not exceeding three calendar months, unless such penalties, forfeitures and fines, and all reasonable charges attending the recovery thereof, shall be sooner paid and satisfied.—Act IX, 1850, sec. cv.

33. In all cases in which by this Act any penalty or forfeiture is made recoverable before a justice or magistrate, he may summon before him the party complained against, and on such summons may hear and determine the matter of such complaint; and, on proof of the offence, may convict the offender and adjudge him to pay the penalty or forfeiture incurred, and proceed to recover the same, although no information in writing shall have been exhibited before him; and all such proceedings by summons, without information in writing, shall be as valid and effectual to all intents and purposes as if an information in writing had been exhibited.—Act IX, 1850, sec. cvii.

34. In all cases where any conviction shall be had for any offence committed against this Act, the form of conviction may be in the words or to the effect following: (that is to say), "Be it remembered that on this day of in the year A. B. is convicted before , a magistrate for the (or before a judge appointed under Act IX, 1850), of having (state the offence); and I (or we) the said do adjudge the said to forfeit and pay for the same the sum of [or to be committed to for the space of ]. Given under hand ( ) and seal ( ) the day and year aforesaid."—Act IX, 1850, sec. cviii.

35. No order, verdict, or judgment, or other proceeding, made concerning any of the matters aforesaid, shall be quashed or vacated for want of form.—Act IX, 1850, sec. cix.

36. Where any distress shall be made for any sum of money to be levied by virtue of this Act, the distress itself shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the information, summons, conviction, warrant of distress, or other proceeding relating thereto, nor shall the party distraining be deemed a trespasser from the beginning, on account of any irregularity which shall afterwards be committed by the party so distraining, but the person aggrieved by such irregularity may recover full satisfaction for the special damage in an action upon the case.—Act IX, 1850, sec. cx.

37. All actions and prosecutions to be commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance of this Act, shall be commenced within three calendar months after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and notice in writing of such action, and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant one calendar month at least before the commencement of the action; and no plaintiff shall recover in any such action if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made before such action is brought, or if after action brought a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court, with costs, by or on behalf of the defendant.—Act IX, 1850, sec. cxi.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE CRIMINAL SECTION.

THE course pursued in the present arrangement and consolidation of the Criminal portion of the Laws in force in the Bengal territories has been, to commence with the general rules of procedure in the prosecution of offenders before the Magistrate and before the Court of Sessions, and then to arrange the rules for the guidance of the Nizamut Adawlut in cases referred to them by the Session Judges.

Next follow the rules applicable to the prosecution and punishment of specific offences: this portion exhibits the amount of punishment to be adjudged according to the degree of each offence, and the modifications of the Mahomedan Law applicable to those cases which are still to be dealt with on the modified principles of that system.

The abstract propositions of Mahomedan Law not applied to specific offences, but laid down in the code as general directions, are collected under the next head; and then follow some general rules respecting punishments and their administration.

The rules relating to jails and prison discipline, and those which regulate the operations of the police, with a few rules of general application in the Criminal Courts which could not well find a place under the foregoing divisions, finish the series.

The Table prefixed to each head or division will show where any part of a regulation which comes under that division will be found.

An APPENDIX is added, of rules having operation only in particular Provinces or Districts.

CRIMINAL JUDICATURE.

MAGISTRATES.

APPOINTMENT AND OATH.

1. Whenever it is considered expedient to appoint a person, not being the judge of the Civil Court of any zillah or city, to hold the office of magistrate in such zillah or city, or in any part thereof, the Governor-General in Council will make such distinct appointment to the office of magistrate, and direct whether the judge of the Civil Court shall, or shall not, exercise a concurrent authority as joint magistrate.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. ii., cl. 2.

2. The foregoing provision shall be considered applicable to the superintendents of police, whenever the Governor-General in Council may deem it advisable to invest those officers with the office of magistrate in any zillah or city, or in part thereof.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. ii., cl. 3.

3. Every magistrate, or joint magistrate, previously to entering upon the discharge of the duties of his office, shall take and subscribe, before any person whom the Governor-General in Council may commission to administer it, an oath or affirmation according to the following form:—

"I, A. B., appointed magistrate of the zillah (or city) of ———, solemnly swear, that I will, to the best of my ability, preserve the peace of the zillah (or city) over which my authority extends; that I will act with impartiality and integrity, and will not exact or receive, nor knowingly allow any other person to exact or receive, directly or indirectly, any fee, reward, or emolument whatsoever, in the execution of, or on account of any matter relating to the duties of my office, excepting such as the orders of the Governor-General in Council do or may expressly authorize; and that I will perform the duties of my office according to the best of my knowledge, abilities, and judgment, conformably to the Regulations that have been or may be passed by the Governor-General in Council: So help me God."—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. ii.; Reg. III., 1829, sec. iii.; Reg. XXI., 1837, sec. iii.

4. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to authorize a collector of revenue, or other officer employed in the management or superintendence of any branch of the territorial revenues, to exercise the whole or any portion of the powers and duties vested by the Regulations in the magistrates or joint magistrates; such officer so appointed shall, previously to entering upon the execution of such office, take and subscribe the oath prescribed by sec. ii., Reg. IX., 1793, with such verbal alterations only as may be consonant to the nature of the appointment.—Reg. IV., 1821, sec. ii. and sec. iii., cl. 2.

5. Every magistrate, or joint magistrate, or assistant to a magistrate, who may be employed in the collection of the revenue, and every collector or other officer employed in the management or collection of the territorial revenues, who may be authorized to exercise the powers of a magistrate, or joint magistrate, shall be careful to preserve the records of their judicial and revenue offices separate and distinct from each other.—Reg. IV., 1821, sec. v.

6. Every magistrate or joint magistrate shall be guided in the execution of his duties by the Regulations and Acts in force for the guidance of those officers, and, in conformity with the provisions of those enactments, by the orders of the Superior Court of Criminal Judicature and of the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. IV., 1821, sec. iv., cl. 2.

7. In all Acts passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, the term "Magistrate" shall extend to all "Joint Magistrates," "persons lawfully exercising the powers of a Magistrate," and "Justices of the Peace."—Reg. II., 1839, sec. iv.

JURISDICTION.

8. The special jurisdiction of the magistrates of the several zillahs is to extend throughout the districts included in the zillahs in which they are respectively stationed. The special jurisdiction of the magistrates of cities is to extend throughout those cities respectively, and the places adjacent, that now are or may be subjected to their immediate authority. Provided, however, that the magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs be not considered to have any jurisdiction or authority whatever in the town of Calcutta, or any places adjacent within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Judicature.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. iii.

9. A concurrent jurisdiction is vested in the magistrates of the several zillahs and cities for the apprehension of offenders. It is to be understood, however, that this concurrent authority is to extend only to cases in which the crime or misdemeanor shall have been committed within their respective jurisdictions, or (in the event of the crime having been committed in any other jurisdiction), where the offender was actually within their jurisdiction when the charge against him was preferred to them. And it shall not be lawful for the magistrate of one zillah or jurisdiction to issue a warrant for the apprehension of any offender being or residing in another zillah or jurisdiction at the time of the complaint being preferred to them, for any crime or misdemeanor not committed within the limits of their respective jurisdictions. In such case, the complainant must apply in the first instance to the magistrate of the zillah in which the crime or misdemeanor shall have been committed, or in which the offender may reside or be found. Provided, however, that it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council, whenever he may deem it advisable, to invest the magistrate of any zillah or city with a general concurrent authority as joint magistrate, in any contiguous or other jurisdiction or jurisdictions, or in any part thereof.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xvi.; Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. iii.

10. No magistrate shall be empowered to try and pass sentence, or to commit for trial at the sessions of jail delivery for his district, any person or persons charged with an offence not perpetrated within its limits, except under special authority of the Governor-General in Council, or of the Nizamut Adawlut. Should, therefore, proceedings have been instituted by any magistrate against any person or persons residing within his jurisdiction, on account of an offence perpetrated beyond its limits, or should it appear in the course of the investigation of any case, that the act charged was not perpetrated within the limit of the zillah or city, but in some other jurisdiction, it shall be the duty of the magistrate who may have commenced proceedings, or who may be conducting the investigation, to send over the parties and witnesses, together with all the proceedings he may have held thereon, to the magistrate of the district within which the crime may appear to have been committed, in order that the parties may be there dealt with according to law; provided, however, that in case the immediate adoption of this course should be attended with very great inconvenience to the parties and witnesses, or in case there should be other circumstances to make it desirable, in his opinion, that the trial should be brought on or completed at the station at which the proceedings may have been instituted, it shall be competent to the magistrate to suspend the transfer above prescribed, and to report the circumstances for the orders of the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. VIII., 1822, sec. ii.

11. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council, whenever he shall see sufficient reason for ordering the trial of any person or persons, charged with a criminal offence, to be conducted in a different zillah or city from that in which the act may have been perpetrated, to issue his instructions to that effect, and the magistrate of the zillah or city in which the trial is to be conducted, as well as the magistrate of the district from which the case is to be transferred, shall be bound, on the receipt of orders for the purpose under the official signature of a secretary to Government, to proceed to bring the party to trial at the place fixed therein, in the same manner as if the offence charged had been committed within that jurisdiction. Notice of every such order shall be immediately given to the Nizamut Adawlut, and to the Sessions Court for the division within which it is intended that the trial shall take place, and those courts shall be bound to proceed under the existing Regulations, in the same manner as if the trial had been brought on in its proper district.—Reg. VIII., 1822, sec. iii., cl. 1.

12. In like manner, it shall be competent to the Nizamut Adawlut to order a trial to be brought on at the station or jail delivery of any zillah or city magistrate, other than that of the district within which the crime may have been perpetrated, whenever, either from the magistrate's representation, or from other information, it shall appear to the court, on substantial grounds, to be recorded on their proceedings, that such measure will promote the ends of justice, or tend to the general convenience of the parties and witnesses without hinderance thereto. An order under the official signature of the register of the court shall be sufficient authority for the magistrate and Sessions Court to proceed to the trial, any thing in the existing Regulations to the contrary notwithstanding.—Reg. VIII., 1822, sec. iii., cl. 2.

13. When a trial shall be removed from one zillah to be conducted or completed in another, in consequence of an order of Government, or of the Nizamut Adawlut, or when a trial shall be ordered to be carried on in the district where the proceedings may have been instituted, the magistrates and all other officers exercising the function of magistrate of the several districts having relation to the case shall be bound to conform to any instructions they may receive from the authority issuing the orders.—Reg. VIII., 1822, secs. iv. and v.

14. In case of an officer being vested with magisterial powers, and deputed permanently or temporarily to exercise them within a portion of a district, or of an officer's being placed in charge of a tract of country comprising portions of several jurisdictions, it shall in such case be competent to the Governor-General in Council, at the time of creating such an authority, or at any time subsequently, to determine and prescribe, by an order under the official signature of a secretary to Government, at what station and in what manner prisoners committed to take their trial before the Sessions Court for offences perpetrated within the limits assigned to such officer shall be brought to trial for the same. Notice of every such determination will of course be given to the Nizamut Adawlut, and that court shall be bound to take the necessary steps to carry the same into execution.—Reg. VIII., 1822, sec. vi.

PROCEDURE ON CHARGES PREFERRED, AND ISSUE OF PROCESS THEREON.

15. It shall be the duty of the magistrate to apprehend murderers, robbers, thieves, house-breakers, all disturbers of the peace, and persons charged before him with crimes or misdemeanors. —Reg. IX., 1793, sec. iv.

16. Upon a complaint being preferred in writing to a zillah or city magistrate against any person subject to his jurisdiction, for treason, murder, robbery, house-breaking, theft, setting fire to a village, house, or other building, counterfeiting the coin, or any other crime declared not to be bailable, or though not so expressly declared, involving such dangerous breach of the peace, or degree of criminality, as from the facts deposed to before the magistrate may appear to require the immediate apprehension of the accused, and to render the admission of bail unsafe and improper, the magistrate, on the truth of the charge being deposed to by the complainant, or in the manner required by the following section, shall issue a warrant under his official seal and signature, specifying the crime charged, and directing the officer intrusted with the execution of it to apprehend the person accused.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. iii., cl. 1.

17. If the magistrate shall, in any bailable case, judge it proper to authorize the officer to whom the warrant is committed to receive bail for appearance (with or without security for keeping the peace), it shall be so specified in the warrant, with the extent of the bail (and security) required.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. iii., cl. 3.

18. No warrant for apprehension shall be issued at the instance of a complainant, unless the truth of the charge be deposed to on oath (or under a solemn declaration) either by the complainant himself or by some other credible person. This shall not, however, be construed to restrict a magistrate from issuing process to apprehend a person suspected of having committed a heinous crime, or for whose apprehension sufficient cause may appear, upon the report of a police officer or upon any other credible information.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. iv.

19. If the magistrate see cause to distrust the truth of a complaint preferred to him, whether from the nature of the charge as manifestly improbable, exaggerated, or vexatious, or from the circumstances deposed to before him, considered with the known situation and character of the person accused, and if the immediate arrest of the party complained against appear unnecessary and objectionable, the magistrate is authorized to postpone issuing his warrant for apprehension, and to cause a previous inquiry to be made, either by means of the local police officers, or in such other mode as he shall judge most proper for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complainant's allegations. If the result of such inquiry induce the magistrate to believe the charge well founded, and the offence committed be of the nature described in para. 16, he shall issue his warrant for apprehending the accused, as therein directed. But if the accusation appear groundless, or, though well-founded, if the offence be of a bailable nature, he is empowered, in the former case, to dismiss the complaint, or in the latter case, to direct bail to be taken from the accused, for appearance, in person or by vakeel, to answer the charge, as provided by the following paragraph. —Reg. IX., 1807, sec. v.

20. If the charge be for manslaughter, or any species of illegal homicide not involving the crime of murder, the magistrate is authorized to proceed, in the first instance, either by warrant for taking into custody, or by summons requiring bail, as he may judge proper, on consideration of the circumstances of the case and of the condition and character of the party accused.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. ix.

21. Upon a complaint in writing being preferred to a zillah or city magistrate against a person subject to his jurisdiction, for any bailable crime or misdemeanor which may not appear to require the immediate apprehension of the accused, the magistrate, upon the party complaining making an oath or solemn declaration to the truth of the complaint, or without such oath or declaration if satisfactory reason be assigned by the complainant for not attending to make the same, and the truth of the charge be deposed to by some other credible person or persons, shall issue a summons under his official seal and signature, to be served through the foujdarry nazir, by a single chuprassy or peon. If the defendant have an accredited agent at the place where the court is held, duly empowered to receive, on behalf of his constituent, notices or other judicial processes, and if such agent be desirous of giving such acknowledgment in preference to the notice being served on his principal by an officer of the court, and the service of such agent be deemed expedient, the summons may be tendered to such agent, to be communicated by him to his principal; or if the party complained against be employed in the salt or opium department, then the summons shall be served in the mode directed by the rules in force for serving warrants on charges of bailable offences against persons employed in those departments.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. vi., cl. 1.; Reg. II, 1806, sec. ii., cl. 2.

22. The summons in all such instances shall specify the offence with which the accused is charged, and shall, according to the circumstances of the case, contain a requisition to attend, either in person or by vakeel, to answer to the charge, on or before a certain day, to be stated in the summons.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. vi., cl. 2.

23. If an accused person on whom a summons shall have been served, shall not attend in person or by vakeel, and give bail (if required) according to the exigence of the summons within the period limited by it, the magistrate shall issue a warrant, under his official seal and signature, for the apprehension of the accused.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. vii.

24. Whenever in any criminal case a summons to the defendant is by law the first process, it shall be lawful for any court which has issued a summons, to issue a warrant for the apprehension of the defendant in such case, upon proof that due diligence has been used to serve such summons upon the defendant, and that the officer or other person whose duty it may be to serve such summons upon the defendant has been unable to serve such summons.—Act X., 1845.

25. In cases of a trivial nature, such as abusive language, slight trespasses, and inconsiderable assaults or affrays, in which there may be no reason to apprehend that the party complained against will abscond, bail for appearance shall not be required in the first instance, but may, at any time during the investigation of the charge, be called for by the magistrate, if any circumstances should occur to render it necessary. The officer intrusted with the service of the summons in such cases, as well as in all other cases wherein bail may not be required, shall demand only an acknowledgment of the receipt of it; and in the absence of the party, the summons may be served on the principal person in his house or family, if such person be willing to receive the same, and to return an acknowledgment for the party. The officer serving the summons in such instances, as well as in all cases wherein the magistrate may deem it proper to admit the private adjustment of the parties, shall be further instructed, on the tender of a razeenamah expressing the plaintiff's desire to withdraw his complaint, the defendant's acquiescence in the complaint's being withdrawn, to receive such razeenamah as a sufficient return to the process committed to him. But excepting the trivial cases noticed in this paragraph, no razeenamah shall be received without the special sanction of the magistrate; nor shall any private compromise be admitted by the magistrate in crimes of a heinous nature, such as on conviction may require exemplary punishment for the ends of public justice.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. viii.

INVESTIGATION OF CHARGES.

26. All complaints or charges, with the orders upon them, are to be recorded in the office of the magistrate in English, and in such other languages as the Government shall prescribe.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xxiii.; Act XXIX., 1837, sec. i.

27. Upon the prisoner being brought before the magistrate, he shall inquire into all the circumstances of the charge likely to lead to the ascertainment of the truth, and shall examine the prisoner and the complainant, and also such other persons as are stated to have any knowledge of the crime or misdemeanor alleged against the prisoner, and commit their respective depositions to writing. He shall likewise be competent to exercise his discretion in taking evidence on behalf of the person accused, with the view to afford him an opportunity of establishing his innocence, before proceeding to commit him to take his trial before the Sessions Court.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. v.; Reg. VIII., 1830, sec. ii., cl. 1.

28. The magistrates, upon receiving any charge, are to be careful to ascertain from the complainant, and to record upon their proceedings, on what day of the month, in what year, and at what time of the day or night, the act complained of was committed. And when a prisoner confesses before them the crime or misdemeanor with which he may have been accused, or confirms any former confession that he may have made of his having committed such crime or misdemeanor, the magistrates are to be careful to have such confession, or confirmation of a former confession, witnessed by as many of their officers, or other creditable persons who may be present at the time it may be made, as the Mahomedan law requires to give it validity, and to cause such witnesses to be in attendance at the Sessions Court. But the magistrates are strictly enjoined to satisfy themselves that all confessions made by prisoners are free and voluntary; and notwithstanding such confessions, they are invariably to summon, and bind over to attend at the trial before the Sessions Court, the witnesses to the commission of the crime or misdemeanor alleged against the prisoner, that they may be examined before the Sessions Court, in the same manner as if the prisoner had denied the charge The magistrates are further required to take special care that persons upon being apprehended are not made to suffer corporal punishment, or otherwise ill-treated, under the pretence of compelling them to answer truly to questions that may be put to them, or under any other pretext whatever —Reg IX , 1793, sec vi

29 The complainant and the witnesses shall be examined upon oath or declaration, but the prisoner shall not be required to swear or declare to the truth of his deposition, and no person shall, by reason of any conviction for any offence whatever, be incompetent to be a witness — Reg IX , 1793, sec v , Act XIX , 1837

30 All examinations taken before the magistrate are to be written on separate papers, signed by the deponents, attested by the signature of the magistrate, and arranged according to their respective dates —Reg IX , 1793, sec xv

31 After inquiry, if it shall appear to the magistrate that the crime or misdemeanor charged against the prisoner was never committed, or that there is no ground to suspect him to have been concerned in the committing of it, the magistrate shall cause him to be forthwith discharged, recording his reasons for releasing him, and submitting them to the Sessions Court, with the calendar ordered to be prepared On the contrary, if it shall appear to the magistrate that the crime or misdemeanor was actually committed, and that there are grounds for suspecting the prisoner to have been concerned in the perpetration of it, the magistrate shall cause him to be committed to prison or held to bail (according as the offence may be bailable or not), to take his trial before the Sessions Court, and shall bind over the complainant to appear and carry on the prosecution, and the witnesses to attend and give their evidence further, that the magistrates shall be competent, of their own authority, notwithstanding the existence of grounds of suspicion, to release any person or persons charged before them with any crime or misdemeanor, whenever from the whole of the evidence adduced in support of the charge, and that adduced on behalf of the party charged, there may not appear to be a reasonable probability of a conviction under a committal for trial before the Sessions Court —Reg IX , 1793, sec v , and Reg VIII , 1830, sec ii , cl 2.

32 The magistrates may allow any prosecution to be conducted by an authorized agent, subject to such rules as shall from time to time be made for their guidance by the Nizamut Adawlut —Act XXXVIII , 1850, sec ii

33 The magistrates are strictly prohibited from issuing any process on charges of calumny, abusive language, trespasses and assaults, which ordinarily prove to be unfounded, misrepresented, or greatly exaggerated as well as charges for more heinous offences, without previously examining the prosecutor as to the specific facts of the cases, and satisfying themselves that adequate grounds exist for proceeding against the accused party In cases, likewise, in which the magistrate shall see grounds to distrust the truth of a charge, he shall, previously to issuing process against the accused, summon the witnesses named by the prosecutor, or as many of them as he may judge proper, and examine them as to their knowledge of the facts and circumstances which are the subject of the complaint On occasions on which the magistrate may judge it necessary to make the previous inquiry above noticed, the rules regarding the payment of the subsistence of witnesses shall be duly enforced —Reg III , 1812, sec ii , cl. 6 *

COMMITTAL AND BAIL

34 Persons accused of the following crimes, and against whom there shall appear sufficient grounds for committing them for trial, shall not be admitted to bail, viz. murder, robbery, house-breaking, theft, setting fire to any house, village, or town, or counterfeiting the coin , also persons charged with perjury, subornation of perjury, or forgery, unless specially authorized by the court under whose directions they are committed for trial, shall not be admitted to bail, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to preclude the magistrate from admitting to bail persons committed by him for trial on charges of perjury preferred originally before him, in cases cognizable by him under the Regulations, without any order from a civil or criminal court for the commitment of such persons for trial before the Sessions Court —Reg IX , 1793, sec xii , Reg III , 1804, sec vii , Reg II , 1807, sec v.*

35 After the inquiry directed, if the magistrate shall be of opinion that the facts and circumstances in evidence do not establish the crime of murder, but that there is sufficient ground for bringing the person complained against to trial before the Sessions Court on a charge of manslaughter or other culpable homicide, the party shall be held to bail for appearance before the Sessions Court, but the magistrate is authorized to release the accused, if the homicide in which he may appear to have been concerned shall, from the whole of the evidence, be clearly shown to have been accidental or justifiable, under the Mahomedan law and the Regulations.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. ix., cl. 1.

* NOTE —The parts in this section which relate to adultery and fornication will be found under the head ' Offences against Women "

36. The principle of the preceding clause is also declared applicable to persons appearing, from the magistrate's inquiry, to have been only privy, or incidentally accessory to crimes of a heinous nature, without being concerned therein, either as principals or as aiding and abetting, procuring or instigating the perpetration thereof; and in all cases, whether of trial before the magistrate or before the Sessions Court, if the admission of bail have not been prohibited by the Regulations, and the bail tendered shall appear sufficient for securing the appearance of the party accused, he shall be admitted to bail until sentence be passed upon the charge against him.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. ix., cl. 2.

37. In special instances, wherein the Sessions Court, on a report from the magistrate, or on other satisfactory information before them, may deem it just and proper to admit to bail a person charged with an offence not bailable under the general provisions contained in the Regulations, that court is declared competent to instruct the magistrate to accept sufficient bail, instead of keeping the accused in confinement whilst the charge against him is under trial. The Sessions Court may, likewise, in all bailable cases wherein the bail required by the magistrate shall appear excessive, direct the magistrate to receive such bail as may be deemed sufficient to answer the purpose intended by it. The judges of the Sessions Court are further declared competent to hold to bail, or to direct the magistrates to admit to bail, any prisoner or prisoners whose trials may be referrible to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, in consequence of the sessions judge not concurring in the futwa of the law officer for the conviction of the prisoner. When the prisoner may not be able to find bail, in such cases the sessions judge shall, with the least possible delay, transmit the proceedings held upon the trial, with a letter stating the grounds on which he may not concur in the futwa of the law officers, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. ix., cl. 2; Reg. XIV., 1810, sec. vii.

38. All bail-bonds for prisoners released upon bail, and the recognizances required to be taken from prosecutors and witnesses, shall be for a specific sum, the amount of which shall be determined by the magistrate upon a due consideration of the case and the circumstances and situation in life of the parties, and shall contain a clause declaring the amount forfeited to Government in the event of the condition of it not being performed.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. v.

39. When a person charged with a criminal offence may have been committed or held to bail by a zillah or city magistrate, or by any public officer authorized to officiate as a magistrate, to stand his trial before a Sessions Court, it shall not be competent to the sessions judge to annul the magistrate's order, and to prevent the regular trial of the person so committed or held to bail.—Reg. VI., 1818, sec. iii., cl. 2.

40. In such cases, however, the sessions judge may instruct the magistrate to admit to bail any person whom he may have committed to close confinement, until they can be brought to trial, if the offence charged shall appear to be of a bailable nature, or though not within the description of offences declared bailable by the Regulations, if the sessions judge shall be of opinion that there is special reason for admitting the prisoner to bail, and sufficient bail be tendered by him for his appearance to stand his trial at the next session of jail delivery.—Reg. VI., 1818, sec. iii., cl. 3.

41. Whenever a person held to bail for his appearance before a Sessions Court shall neglect to attend at the appointed time, the magistrate shall call upon his surety or sureties to produce him, and on their failure, shall report the case, with any reasons assigned by the surety or sureties for the non-fulfilment of their engagement, to the judge holding the session of jail delivery, who will determine and instruct the magistrate, whether the penalty of the security bond shall be immediately enforced, or whether a further time shall be allowed to the surety or sureties to produce the person for whom they are responsible.—Reg. VI., 1818, sec. iv., cl. 1.

42. When the sessions judge, on consideration of the magistrate's report, shall direct the enforcement of the security bond, the magistrate shall proceed to recover the amount of the penalty from the surety or sureties, by the attachment and sale of any property belonging to them, in the mode prescribed for the attachment and sale of property, in satisfaction of decrees of the Civil Courts; or if the amount demandable from the surety or sureties be not paid, and cannot be realized from any property belonging to them, they shall be liable to confinement by order of the magistrate, in the civil jail of the station, during a period not exceeding six months.—Reg. VI., 1818, sec. iv., cl. 2.

43. In all cases of a prisoner being committed, or held to bail, for trial before any Sessions Court, the magistrate who may order him to be so committed or held to bail, shall, immediately after passing such order, question the prisoner whether he wishes to have any witness or witnesses examined in his defence before the Sessions Court; and in the event of his answering in the affirmative, shall issue the customary process to cause such witnesses to attend at the time fixed for the trial of the persons in whose behalf they may be summoned, and shall cause a list of the witnesses named by the prisoner, specifying their designations and places of abode, to be taken down and recorded upon his proceedings; or in the event of the prisoner's replying in the negative, shall cause his reply to that effect to be recorded on his proceedings, for the information of the Sessions Court.—Reg. IX., 1796, sec. ii.; Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xii.

44. An observance of the foregoing rule will leave all prisoners committed or held to bail for trial before the Sessions Court without any just ground of complaint, that they have not been allowed to bring witnesses in support of their innocence; but as it may happen that, from want of recollection or other cause, a prisoner at the time of his commitment may omit to name a witness whose evidence he may afterwards be desirous to adduce upon his trial, if any person, whether committed or held to bail for trial before the Sessions Court, shall, at any time before the sitting of the Court, desire the examination of any witness or witnesses upon his trial, although the same may not have been named by him at the time of his being committed or held to bail, the magistrates are to be careful to cause the attendance of such witnesses, as well as of those before named, at the time fixed for the trial of the party who may desire their examination.—Reg. IX., 1796, sec. iii.

45. If the magistrate shall commit any zemindar, independent talookdar, or other actual proprietor of land, to be tried before the Sessions Court, he is to notify the commitment to the collector of the zillah, that, if necessary, he may take measures to prevent any delay in the payment of the public revenue assessed upon the lands of the offender.—Reg. IX. 1793, sec. xviii.

46. In all cases of wounding, manifesting a deliberate intention to commit murder, it shall be the duty of the magistrate to commit the prisoner to be tried on that specific charge.—Reg. XII., 1829, sec. ii., cl. 1.

POWERS TO PUNISH.

47. The magistrates are empowered to hear and determine, without any reference to the Sessions Court, all complaints or prosecutions brought before them for petty offences, such as abusive language, calumny, inconsiderable assaults or affrays, and to punish the offender, when convicted, by committing him to prison for a term not exceeding fifteen days, or by imposing a fine upon him; but the fine in no case to exceed the sum of fifty rupees, unless the offender be a zemindar, independent talookdar, or other actual proprietor of land, paying an annual revenue to Government of more than ten thousand rupees, or a proprietor of ayma land paying a quit revenue to Government exceeding five hundred rupees per annum, or of la-khiraj land, the annual produce of which may be above one thousand rupees; in which cases, such offender shall be liable to a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees. The magistrate is to fix the amount of the fine, under the limitations prescribed upon a due consideration of the nature of the case and the situation and circumstances in life of the offender.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. viii.

48. The magistrates are authorized to hear and determine, without any reference to the Sessions Court, all complaints or prosecutions brought before them for petty thefts, when they shall not have been attended with any aggravating circumstances, or committed by persons of notorious bad characters; and on conviction in cases in which the property stolen shall not exceed in value the sum of fifty rupees, to sentence the person convicted to corporal punishment not exceeding thirty stripes with a rattan, or commit them to prison for a term not longer than one month, according as they may think proper upon a consideration of the circumstances of the case.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. ix.; Act III., 1844, sec. i.

49. Where in cases of petty offences or petty thefts the complaints shall appear to the magistrate to be litigious, vexatious, or groundless, he is authorized to punish the complainant, by fine or imprisonment, under the limitations and restrictions prescribed for the punishment of the offences specified in Section VIII., Reg. IX., 1793.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. x.

50. And whereas it is also expedient, that offenders of tender age should be punished rather in the way of school discipline than of ordinary criminal justice:

It shall be competent to a magistrate, and he is required, on conviction in cases of theft of property not exceeding in value the sum of fifty rupees, if the person convicted shall appear to him, by inspection or other evidence, to be of such tender years as to require punishment rather in the way of school discipline than of ordinary criminal justice, to sentence such person to corporal punishment with a light rattan, not exceeding ten stripes.—Act III., 1844, sec. ii.

51. The zillah and city magistrates are further empowered, in all cases of conviction before them of any criminal offence punishable under the Mahomedan law and the Regulations for which the penalties authorized by sections VIII. and IX., Reg. IX., 1793, may appear insufficient, or to which the rules referred to may not be expressly applicable, and for which a more severe punishment than six months' imprisonment with thirty rattans, or a fine of two hundred rupees, may not have been specifically prescribed (in which case the prisoner, if there appear grounds for it, must be brought to trial before the Sessions Court), to pass sentence of imprisonment not exceeding six months, with corporal punishment not exceeding thirty rattans, in cases of theft; or in other cases, with a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, commutable if not paid, to a further period of imprisonment not exceeding six months; so that the entire period of imprisonment under the sentence of a magistrate shall in no instance exceed one year.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. xix. (NOTE—the corporal punishment commutable to additional imprisonment.)

52. Whenever any charge preferred before a magistrate shall upon investigation prove manifestly malicious, vexatious, or unfounded, the magistrate is empowered, in extension of the punishment prescribed by Section X., Regulation IX., 1793, to sentence the party by whom the charge shall have been preferred, to such period of imprisonment as, on consideration of the apparent motives and tendency of the said charge, shall appear proper; not exceeding, however, the period of six months.—Reg. VII., 1811, sec. v.

53. Whenever the Regulations enacted before the passing of Reg. II. of 1834 authorize a sentence of corporal punishment in addition to a limited period of imprisonment, it shall be competent to the magistrate to pass an additional sentence of imprisonment for one year.—Reg. II., 1834, sec. ii.

54. In all cases of fines by which offenders are or may be punishable by any magistrate, according to the provisions of any Act heretofore passed or which shall hereafter be passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, it shall be lawful, in case of non-payment, if no other means for enforcing the payment are or shall be provided by such Act or otherwise, for the magistrate, by warrant under his hand, to levy the amount of such fine by distress and sale of any goods and chattels of the offender which may be found within the jurisdiction of such magistrate; and if no such property shall be found within such jurisdiction, then it shall be lawful for every such magistrate, by warrant under his hand, to commit the offender to prison, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, according to the discretion of such magistrate, for any term not exceeding two calendar months, where the amount of the fine shall not exceed fifty rupees, and for any term not exceeding four calendar months where the amount shall not exceed one hundred rupees, and for any term not exceeding six calendar months in any other case, the commitment to be determinable in each of the cases aforesaid upon payment of the amount.—Act II., 1839, sec. i.

55. In all cases in which offenders are or may be punishable by any magistrate with fine or imprisonment, or both, according to the provisions of any Act heretofore passed or which shall hereafter be passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, and where the extreme amount of the fine or imprisonment is not specified, it shall not be lawful for the magistrate to impose any fine exceeding two hundred rupees, or to imprison the offender for any term exceeding six months. —Act II., 1839, sec. ii.

56. In all cases in which offenders are or may be punishable by fine before a magistrate, according to the provisions of any Act heretofore passed or which hereafter shall be passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, it shall be lawful for the magistrate, and he is required to receive proof of the commission of the offence upon oath, or upon solemn affirmation in cases where a solemn affirmation is receivable by law instead of an oath.—Act II., 1839, sec. iii.

57. In all Acts passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, the terms "fine" and "fines" shall extend to all "penalties" and "forfeitures," and the term "magistrate" shall extend to all "joint magistrates," "persons lawfully exercising the powers of a magistrate," and "justices of the peace"—Act II., 1839, sec. iv.

POWERS FOR THE PREVENTION OF AFFRAYS CONCERNING LAND AND IN CASES OF FORCIBLE DISPOSSESSION.

58. Whenever any magistrate, or other officer exercising the powers of a magistrate, or any assistant magistrate vested with special powers, may be certified that a dispute likely to induce a breach of the peace exists concerning any land, premises, water, fisheries, crops, or other produce of land, within the limits of his jurisdiction, he shall record a proceeding, stating the grounds of his being so certified, and shall call on all parties concerned in such dispute (whether proprietors, dependent talookdars, farmers, under-farmers, ryots, or other persons) to attend his court in person, or by agent, within a reasonable time, and to give in a written statement of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute; and the magistrate or other officer as aforesaid shall, without reference to the merits of the claims of any party to a right of possession, proceed to inquire what party was in possession of the subject of dispute when the dispute arose, and after satisfying himself upon that point, shall record a proceeding, declaring the party whom he may decide to have been in such possession to be entitled to retain possession until ousted by due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of possession until such time; and, if necessary, the magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, shall put such party into possession, and maintain him in possession, until the rights of the parties disputing be determined by a competent court.—Act IV., 1840, sec. ii., and Act XXVII., 1845.

MAGISTRATES—POWERS FOR THE PREVENTION OF AFFRAYS.

59. If the magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, shall, in the cases mentioned in the preceding paragraph, be unable to satisfy himself as to what party was in possession of the subject of dispute when the dispute arose, he may attach the subject of dispute until the rights of the parties be determined by a competent court, giving the collector information of the attachment; and if the subject of dispute be land, the provisions of Regulation V. of 1827, regarding attachment by order of a Zillah or City Court shall apply to attachments by order of a magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, made under this section.—Act IV., 1840, sec. iii.

60. If any party shall complain to a magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, that he has been, without authority of law, forcibly dispossessed of any land, premises, water, fisheries, crops, or other produce of land, within the jurisdiction of such magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, whether the same were possessed by such party as proprietor, dependent talookdar, farmer, under-farmer, ryot, or otherwise, the magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, shall require the party or parties complained against, and any other parties concerned, to appear and make defence in person, or by agent, within a reasonable time; and if, after the examination of the necessary witnesses and documents, the complaint appears to him to be substantiated, he shall record a proceeding, ordering the party complaining to be put again into possession of the subject of dispute, and maintained in possession until the right to possession be determined by a competent court; provided that no such order shall be passed unless the party complaining of having been so dispossessed prefer his claim within one month from the time of such dispossession; or if the party complaining of having been dispossessed is a native officer or soldier, unless such party prefer his claim within such period as may be considered by the magistrate reasonable, with reference to the distance of the party and the difficulty of communication.—Act IV., 1840, sec. iv.; Act XV., 1845, sec. vii.

61. If, in cases instituted under this Act, the subject of dispute be newly-formed land, whereof it shall appear to the magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, that no party has ever had possession, the magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, shall award possession to the party to whom the right of possession belongs according to law or custom, and shall maintain that party in possession until the right to possession be determined by a competent court.—Act IV., 1840, sec. v.

62. If a dispute arises concerning the right of use of any land or water, the magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, within whose jurisdiction the subject of dispute lies, may inquire into the matter, and if it shall appear to him that the subject of dispute was open to the use of the public, or of any person, or of any class of persons, the said magistrate, or other officer, may order that possession thereof shall not be taken or retained by any party to the exclusion of the public, or of such person, or of such class of persons, as the case may be, until the party claiming such possession shall obtain the decision of a competent court adjudging him to be entitled to such exclusive possession: provided that the magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, shall not pass any such order as aforesaid, if the matter be such that the right of use is capable of being exercised at all times of the year, unless that right shall have been ordinarily exercised within three months from the date of the institution of the inquiry, or in cases where the right of use exists at particular seasons, unless such right has been exercised without discontinuance before the dispossession of which complaint is made.—Act IV., 1840, sec. vi.

63. Any person opposing by force the execution of an order for possession or use, given under this Act, or refusing obedience thereto, or knowingly contravening the same, as long as it shall remain in legal force, shall, together with all persons aiding and abetting, be liable, on conviction before a magistrate, or other officer with the powers of a magistrate, to be sentenced to simple imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, commutable if not paid to a period of simple imprisonment not exceeding six months, or to both imprisonment and fine as aforesaid.—Act IV., 1840, sec. vii.

64. All orders passed under this Act shall be appealable in the usual manner, under the Regulations and laws that are or may be in force relating to appeals from the order of magistrates, or other officers exercising the powers of magistrates.—Act IV., 1840, sec. viii.

65. In cases instituted under this Act, the magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid, is authorized, with the consent of all the parties, to refer the matter in dispute, so far as it is cognizable under this Act, to an arbitrator or arbitrators for decision, whose award shall be executed as if it were the award of such magistrate, or other officer as aforesaid.—Act IV., 1840, sec. ix.

66. Nothing in this Act contained shall affect the legal exercise of any right of attachment or seizure vested by law in any parties.—Act IV., 1840, sec. x.

67. This Act shall not extend to any place beyond the limits of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, or to the settlements of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore, or Malacca, or to any place situated within the local limits of the jurisdiction of her Majesty's Supreme Court at Calcutta.—Act IV., 1840, sec. xi.

68. In the territories subject to the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, assistant magistrates, vested with special powers, shall be competent to decide cases under the provisions of Act IV. of 1840, when such cases are referred to them by the magistrates to whom they are subordinate, and such assistants shall deal with such cases in the same way as magistrates are competent to deal with them under the said Act.—Act XXVII., 1845, sec. i.

69. Provided always, that the magistrates may at all times recall from such assistants any depending cases which may have been referred to them under this Act, and which, for the more speedy administration of justice, or for any other reason, the magistrates may deem it proper to determine themselves in the first instance.—Act XXVII., 1845, sec. ii.

70. Magistrates are prohibited from taking cognizance, under Act IV. of 1840, of boundary disputes of the nature for which provision is made, under Act I. of 1847; but whenever they have reason to apprehend any breach of the peace in consequence of a disputed boundary, they shall certify the circumstances to the collector of land revenue, who shall be bound immediately to mark off the boundary in the mode indicated in the said Act, and to uphold the possession of the parties according to the demarcation.—Act I., 1847, sec. vi.

POWERS IN CASES OF BREACH OF DOMESTIC DUTIES, AND WORKMEN ABANDONING WORK.

71. If any person, amenable to the jurisdiction of the Zillah and City Courts, shall be convicted before a zillah or city magistrate, or joint magistrate, of the offence of enticing and taking away, or causing to be enticed and taken away, a married woman living under the protection of her husband, or of any person having the care of her in his behalf; or of enticing and taking away, or causing to be enticed and taken away, an unmarried female, under the age of maturity, viz. fifteen years, and living with her parents or other legal guardians, or any persons acting in their behalf, for the purpose of rendering such married woman, or unmarried female minor, a prostitute or concubine, or otherwise disposing of her in an unlawful manner, without the consent of the husband, parent, or other guardian of the woman or minor thus disposed of, the person so convicted shall be liable to a sentence of fine and imprisonment, to such extent as may appear adequate to the circumstances of the case, and may not exceed the powers vested in the magistrates by Section XIX., Regulation IX., 1807, viz., imprisonment for six months, and a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, commutable, if not paid, to a further period of imprisonment, not exceeding six months. If in any instance the offender shall appear to merit a more severe punishment, he shall be committed for trial before the Sessions Court; and the provisions of Section VI., Regulation XVII., 1817, are hereby declared applicable to all such commitments.—(See "Offences against Women," under "Specific Offences.")—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. ii.

72. Any person amenable to the jurisdiction of the Zillah and City Courts, who may possess the means of supporting his wife and children, and shall, notwithstanding, desert them, and wilfully neglect to provide for their support, on proof thereof to the satisfaction of the magistrate, or joint magistrate, of the zillah or city in which the party so deserting and neglecting his family may reside, shall be required to provide for the maintenance of his family in a suitable manner, according to his situation and circumstances in life; and on his failing so to do, shall be considered guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one month. He shall also be liable to a repetition of the sentence, upon any subsequent conviction of a similar misdemeanor, after having been required to provide for the support of his family; provided, however, that nothing in this section shall render a husband liable to punishment for not maintaining his wife, if it be clearly shown that the latter has forfeited all just claim to support from her husband, by living in adultery with another person, or by other acts implying wilful abandonment of his protection.—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. iii.

73. The above paragraph shall be held applicable to illegitimate as well as to legitimate children; and may also be applied, at the discretion of the magistrate, to secure a proper maintenance for the mothers of illegitimate offspring, whilst in a state of pregnancy, or having the care of an infant child.—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. iv.

74. All persons who may voluntarily engage to serve as workmen, of any description, for a stipulated term, or who may voluntarily contract for the performance of any specific work, and who, without good and sufficient cause, shall wilfully quit the service so engaged for, before the expiration of the term agreed upon, or shall wilfully neglect to perform the work so contracted for, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction before a magistrate or joint magistrate, shall be liable to a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month. The magistrate or joint magistrate may likewise require the persons so convicted to complete their stipulated term of service, or to perform the work contracted for, if it appear just and proper to require the same; and any subsequent conviction of wilful neglect to comply with such requisition shall be punishable by a further sentence of imprisonment, not exceeding two months.—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. v.

75. The provisions of the foregoing paragraph are also declared applicable to domestic servants, who may engage to serve for any fixed term, or during the performance of any specific service, or though no such engagement have been entered into, may be employed from month to month, and without good and sufficient cause shall wilfully quit the service of their employers before the expiration of the fixed term, or before the completion of the stipulated service, or with respect to monthly servants, without giving previous notice for a period not less than fifteen days. —Reg. VII., 1819, sec. vi., cl. 1.

76. In like manner no master, or other person, employing a servant for a fixed term, or for a specific service, or from month to month, shall be at liberty, without good and sufficient cause, to discharge such servant, against his will, before the expiration of the fixed term, or the completion of the specified service, or with respect to servants employed from month to month, without giving previous warning of the intended discharge for a period of at least fifteen days, or paying his wages for that period.—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. vi., cl. 2.

77. It shall be the duty of the magistrates and joint magistrates, on applications made to them upon the stamped paper prescribed (viz., bearing a stamp of eight annas), to enforce the provisions of the above paragraph, by causing payment to any servant who may be discharged in opposition thereto, of a sum equal to half a month's wages, in addition to any arrear of wages which may be due to him at the time of his discharge; or if the servant have been engaged for a fixed term, or for a specific service, by causing payment to be made to him of such sum as may appear fully adequate to any loss sustained by him from being discharged before the time agreed upon.—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. vi., cl. 3.

78. Provided, however, that no servant shall be entitled to recover more than his arrear of wages, when he may be discharged for any misconduct proved to the satisfaction of the magistrate or joint magistrate, and appearing sufficient to warrant his discharge. Nor shall any workman or servant be liable to punishment under the provisions of this Regulation, when it may be proved, to the satisfaction of the magistrate and joint magistrate, that his quitting the service of his employer, without previous notice, or before the expiration of a stipulated term, or without having completed the performance of any work contracted for, was occasioned by gross mal-treatment, or by non-payment of wages due, or by any other cause which may appear to the magistrate or joint magistrate sufficient to justify or excuse the act complained of.—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. vi., cl. 4.

79. The whole of the sentences which may be passed by a magistrate or joint magistrate, under any part of this Regulation, will of course be open to the regular control of the Sessions Court, according to the general rules in force upon this subject.—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. vii.

POWERS IN RESPECT OF THE SUPPRESSION OF LOTTERIES.

80. In the territories subject to the Government of the East-India Company, all lotteries not authorized by Government shall be deemed, and are declared, common and public nuisances and against law.—Act V., 1844, sec. i.

81. No person shall, in the said territories, publicly or privately, keep any office or place for the purpose of drawing any lottery not authorized by Government, or shall have any such lottery drawn, or shall knowingly suffer any such lottery to be drawn in his or her house; and any person so offending shall, for every such offence, upon conviction before a justice of the peace, or magistrate, be punished by fine not exceeding five thousand rupees.—Act V., 1844, sec. ii.

82. No person shall, under any pretence, device, or description whatsoever, agree to pay any sum, or deliver any goods, or to do or forbear doing anything for the benefit of any person, whether with or without consideration, on any event or contingency relative or applicable to the drawing of any ticket, lot, number, or figure in any such lottery, or shall publish any proposal for any of the purposes aforesaid. and any person offending in any of the matters mentioned in this paragraph, shall, for every such offence, upon conviction before a justice of the peace, or magistrate, be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand rupees.—Act V., 1844, sec. iii.

83. Every fine which shall be incurred under the provisions of this Act shall be applied one half to the use of Government and the other half to the use of the informer or informers.—Act V., 1844, sec. iv.

OFFER OF CONDITIONAL PARDON.

84. In cases of murder, gang robbery, highway robbery, murder by Thugs, coining and forgery, as well as in cases of burglary and theft, attended with circumstances of aggravation, the zillah and city magistrates and joint magistrates are empowered, without reference to any other authority, and under the general responsibility to the Superior Courts and Government for the sound exercise of the discretion vested in them, to tender a pardon to one or more persons (not being principals), supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in or privy to the offence, on condition of their making a full, true, and fair disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within their knowledge relative to the crime committed, and the persons concerned in the perpetration thereof, or of their pointing out (in cases of robbery, burglary, and theft,) the mode in which the stolen property may have been disposed of.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. iii., cl. 1; Reg. I., 1829, sec. vii.

85. Persons to whom pardons may be tendered under the provisions contained in the preceding paragraph shall be examined without oath.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. iii., cl. 2.

86. In any case in which a magistrate or joint magistrate may exercise the powers vested in him by the provisions of this section, it shall be incumbent on such magistrate or joint magistrate to record on his proceedings the considerations which may have induced him to deem such course of procedure advisable.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. iii., cl. 3.

87. In such cases the individual in question shall, in the first instance, be examined by the magistrate or joint magistrate, without putting him on his oath.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. iii. cl. 5.

88. The magistrates and joint magistrates will be cautious not to tender pardons to principal offenders, and in no case to make the offer to accomplices or accessaries without a reasonable prospect of recovering the property plundered through the means of the person or persons to whom a conditional tender of pardon may be made, or of thereby securing the apprehension and conviction of the principal offenders by whom the crime may have been perpetrated, or of the receivers of the stolen property.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. iv., cl. 1.

89. It shall be competent to a sessions judge, at the time of holding the sessions, or to the Nizamut Adawlut, if the final sentence shall be passed by the latter Court, to direct the commitment of any person to whom a pardon may have been offered under the provisions of this Regulation, should it appear on evidence that such person has not conformed to the condition under which the pardon was tendered, either by wilfully concealing any thing essential, or by giving false evidence or information with a view to the conviction of an innocent person or persons.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. v., cl. 1.

90. In like manner it shall be competent to a sessions judge, or to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, at the time of trial, to instruct the magistrate or joint magistrate to tender a pardon to any accomplice, or accessary, with the view of obtaining his evidence on oath as a witness on the trial.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. v., cl. 2.

91. It shall be competent to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut to revise the proceedings of the magistrates and joint magistrates, in any case in which a pardon may have been tendered to an accomplice or accessary, and to annul the orders passed on such proceedings, should it appear to the Superior Court that a pardon has been granted on insufficient grounds.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. v., cl. 3.

92. The powers granted by this Regulation to magistrates and joint magistrates are not to extend to the assistants to the magistrates.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. vi.

NOTE.—The whole of the foregoing rules are amended so as to conform to the modifications declared in sec. vii., Reg. I., 1829.

CALENDARS TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE SESSIONS COURT, AND PROCEDURE THEREON.

93. The magistrates are required to lay before the Sessions Court, together with their proceedings on each trial referred by them to the said Court, a calendar with the following vouchers, or as many of them as, from the nature and circumstances of the case, may be requisite and procurable, with such other papers and documents as the magistrate may have in his possession, or judge necessary to be obtained for the information of the Sessions Court.

An attested copy of the complaint or charge.

An attested copy of the plaintiff's oath or affirmation to the truth of the charge, in which is to be inserted, in cases of robbery and theft, the inventory of the money or property stolen or plundered, with the amount, or computed value of it.

The prosecutor's recognizance to appear and prosecute the charge.

A copy of the process issued on the charge being preferred: or in case the charge should have been preferred in the first instance to any of the darogahs of the police jurisdictions or wards, a copy of such darogah's proceedings.

The name or names of the person or persons apprehended.

The examination of the person or persons apprehended.

The further examination of the prosecutor on oath or affirmation, in cases where any such examination may have been taken.

A list of the witnesses summoned by the desire of the prosecutor, particularizing the names of such as may be in attendance and those who are absent, with the cause of the non-attendance of the latter.

The recognizances of the prosecutor's witnesses.

The depositions of the witnesses who may have been in attendance, and the names of the witnesses summoned at the requisition of the prisoner, specifying those who are in attendance, and such as are absent, and the cause of the non-attendance of the latter.—Reg. IX., 1793, secs. xiii. and xiv.

MAGISTRATES.—CALENDARS TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE SESSIONS COURT.

94. In order to furnish the Sessions Court with the fullest and most accurate information on the non-attendance of any absent witness, it is further directed that the above lists be accompanied with the original returns made to the magistrate by the persons deputed to serve the summons on any witness who may not be in attendance; and that the persons so deputed on his part be kept in attendance on the Sessions Court, to answer any interrogatories which that Court may judge it necessary to put to them. By this means, the Sessions Court will be enabled to ascertain the real causes of the non-attendance of witnesses by their own inquiry; and it is expected they will, in every instance, make such inquiry as far as may be necessary to satisfy themselves and the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, in cases referable to that court, that all due measures have been taken to cause the attendance of the whole of the witnesses, both on the part of the prosecutor and the prisoner.—Reg. IX., 1796, sec. iv.

95. The magistrates shall also lay before the Sessions Court two separate calendars, the first containing a list of all persons whom they may have apprehended and discharged for want of sufficient evidence to warrant the committing them to prison or holding them to bail, to take their trial for the crime or misdemeanor charged against them, and accompanied with their reasons for having released them. The second, comprising a list of the persons whom they have apprehended for crimes or misdemeanors cognizable by them, the crime or misdemeanor with which the prisoners may have been charged, and the sentence passed upon them. These calendars are to be accompanied with all the original papers and proceedings in each case. The above calendars shall include all persons discharged or punished under sentences passed by their assistants, as well as under judgments given by themselves; and whenever any case so brought before a Sessions Court may appear not to have been sufficiently investigated, and a further inquiry may be practicable and requisite for the ends of justice, the judge shall direct such additional inquiry to be made by the magistrate and reported to the Court.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xvii.; Reg. IX., 1807, sec. xxii.

96. The magistrates shall also submit to the Sessions Court separate lists of all persons who may have been sentenced by them, under the provisions of Regulation XII. of 1818, to a longer imprisonment than six months, showing the names of the prisoners, the crimes with which they have been charged, and the sentences passed upon them. They shall likewise submit monthly statements of such sentences to the Sessions Court, in such form and manner as the Nizamut Adawlut, may direct.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. vi., cl. 1; Reg. IV., 1820, sec. iii., cl. 1.

97. The magistrates shall also submit to the Sessions Court a calendar of persons in confinement on criminal charges still under examination, containing the following particulars, viz., the name of each prisoner; the date of his apprehension; the charge against him; by whom preferred, and what proceedings have been held in the case; with an explanation of the cause of delay in passing a final order, if the prisoner have been more than a month in confinement. The sessions judge, on inspection of this calendar, will call for the magistrate's proceedings in any case that may appear to require it; and if, on perusal of them, he shall be of opinion that there is not sufficient reason for postponing the trial, he is empowered to instruct the magistrate to close his proceedings, and either to pass a final order, if the case be determinable by the magistrate, or to bring it before the Sessions Court in a supplementary calendar, if there appear to be sufficient grounds for committing the prisoner to stand his trial before that court.—Reg. VI., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 1.

98. In exercising the power vested in the sessions judges by the above paragraph, for the purpose of preventing the long confinement of prisoners charged with criminal offences during the magistrate's investigation of such charges, without strong and sufficient cause for their detention, the sessions judges are required to give due attention to the reasons assigned by the magistrates for not passing a final order respecting the prisoner or prisoners in each instance, and to be careful that their instructions to the magistrates, in such cases, are consistent with the objects of public justice, as well as with a just and humane consideration of the prisoner's actual condition and the period of his confinement.—Reg. VI., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 2.

99. The zillah and city magistrates are further directed to transmit to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, in the month of January of each year, an abstract statement of the number of robberies and other crimes of a heinous nature ascertained by the police officers, or otherwise, to have been committed within their respective jurisdictions in the preceding English year, the number of persons known or supposed to have been concerned in the commission of such crimes, and the number apprehended and convicted, or committed for trial before the Sessions Court.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. xxvi., cl. 1.

100. To enable the magistrates to furnish the above statement, they shall require from their police officers a monthly report of heinous crimes committed within their respective jurisdictions, the number of persons known or supposed to have been concerned in the commission of them, and when any have been apprehended, the number and names of the persons apprehended.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. xxvi., cl. 2.

101. The Court of Nizamut Adawlut will, from time to time, prescribe the forms to be used and observed, and fix the periods of transmission and mode of preparation of all calendars and other reports and statements; but until the said Court shall prescribe any alteration or discontinuance of any calendar or other report, those prescribed by the foregoing rule shall be prepared and transmitted as heretofore.—Reg. VII., 1829, sec. iii.

102. The magistrates, upon receiving notice from the judges of the Sessions Courts of the time at which they expect to sit, shall cause public notice to be given by a written publication, requiring all persons discharged upon bail, and all prosecutors and witnesses who may have been bound over to appear, to attend by the date fixed in such notice under the penalty of forfeiting their recognizances in the event of their not attending. The magistrates shall send a copy of this publication to the cauzy of each pergunnah, and cause a copy of it to be fixed up in some public place in the principal town or village in each pergunnah in their respective zillahs.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xi. (NOTE.—Modified from the original framed for the Court of Circuit.)

DEPUTATION OF EUROPEAN OFFICERS FOR LOCAL INVESTIGATION.

103. Whenever it may appear advisable to a magistrate to depute his assistant, or any European officer acting under his authority, being a covenanted servant of the Company, to make a local investigation within the limits of his jurisdiction, for the purpose of speedily and satisfactorily determining a boundary dispute, or contested right of possession, or for the prompt and impartial adjustment of any matter or subject of inquiry in the Foujdarry Court, which, from the circumstances of the case, may appear to require the deputation of an European officer instead of a native police officer, it shall be competent to the magistrate to order such deputation, and to furnish the officer so deputed with such instructions as may appear necessary for his guidance in making the local investigation committed to him. Provided that such instructions be not in any respect inconsistent with the general Regulations in force.—Reg. XI., 1824, sec. ii.

104. Whenever the deputation of an European officer, as authorized by the preceding paragraph, may be ordered for the purpose of inquiring into any local question relative to a case depending in the Foujdarry Court, it shall be at the discretion of the magistrate, by whom the deputation may be ordered, or who may determine the case to which it relates, to declare the whole or any part of the usual deputation allowance receivable by the officer so deputed, as well as every other authorized and necessary expense attending the local inquiry, to be payable by the party against whom the case may be adjudged; or proportionally by each of the parties, if this appear just on due consideration of all the circumstances of the case. Provided that if in any instance the magistrate shall be of opinion that it would not be proper, from indigence or other cause, to render the parties, or either of them, answerable for the whole or any part of the deputation allowance receivable by the European officer deputed, he shall be authorized to discharge the same (subject to the usual audit) on the part of Government.—Reg. XI., 1824, sec. iii.

105. All deputations of an assistant, or other European officer, which may be so ordered by any magistrate, shall be immediately reported, with a statement of the circumstances of the case, to the secretary to Government in the judicial department, to whom also the return of the officer so deputed shall be reported immediately on his return to his station.—Reg. XI., 1824, sec. iv.

106. A report of the deputation of any European officer under the provisions of this Regulation shall also, in every instance, be made without delay to the Nizamut Adawlut, together with a copy of the proceeding of the magistrate directing the deputation; and if in any instance the reasons stated for the deputation shall not appear sufficient, and the Nizamut Adawlut (after calling for any further information that may be required) shall deem the deputation unnecessary or inexpedient, it shall be competent to the Nizamut Adawlut to revoke the same, and to issue such final orders in the case as they may deem just and proper.—Reg. XI., 1824, sec. v.

ALLOWANCES TO PRISONERS AND WITNESSES.

107. The magistrates are to pay to all persons who may be released from gaol, after an imprisonment of six months or upwards, calculating from the date of their sentence, and who shall appear to be in actual need of such assistance, a sum sufficient to maintain them for one month. The sum to be paid to each individual is to be regulated by his situation in life, but it is in no case to exceed five rupees, and in every instance is to be confined as much within that amount as may be consistent with the purpose for which the allowance is granted.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xxv.

108. When the prisoners are European British subjects, amenable to the Supreme Court of Judicature, a similar allowance under the same restrictions is to be made to the prosecutors and witnesses, including the actual period to and from Calcutta, or sufficient time for their return after their discharge from the court in cases wherein it may appear they may have voluntarily protracted their return beyond what is necessary.—Reg. II., 1796, sec. iii.

109. The magistrates are to pay the customary daily subsistence money to all prisoners, from the time of their apprehension to the date of their discharge.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xxvii.

110. No process shall be issued for the attendance of witnesses on any charge of adultery, fornication, calumny, abusive language, slight trespass, or inconsiderable assault, unless the person by whom such charge shall be preferred shall deposit in the hands of the nazir a sufficient sum for the maintenance of the witnesses who may be summoned on his application (being persons residing at a greater distance than five coss from the magistrate's cutcherry), the amount of such diet money to be regulated by the magistrate, with reference to the probable period such witnesses may have to be in attendance; and, in the event of the prolonged detention of witnesses, to direct the deposit of any further sum which to the said magistrate may seem requisite.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ii., cl. 1; Act VII., 1846.

111. The foregoing provisions are not intended to apply to cases of maihem, actual affrays, or tumultuary assemblies of the people, requiring the immediate interposition of the police for the maintenance of the public tranquillity. In such cases, as well as in charges for heinous crimes, the subsistence of indigent prosecutors and witnesses will be defrayed by Government. If, however, a prosecutor shall in any instance, by an exaggerated and perverted representation of the case, procure process to be issued against any person for any such crime or public misdemeanor, and it shall on inquiry appear that the case was nothing more than a slight trespass, inconsiderable assault, or other trifling offence, such prosecutor shall be held accountable for whatever sum may appear to be due from him for the subsistence of his witnesses.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ii., cl. 4.

112. It shall be the duty of the nazir to keep an accurate and particular account of all sums received and disbursed by him on account of the subsistence of witnesses under this Regulation, which shall be inspected monthly by the magistrate or his assistant.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ii., cl. 5.

JOINT AND ASSISTANT MAGISTRATES.

113. Whenever it may appear necessary for the despatch of public business, or for any purpose of police or otherwise, to appoint an assistant magistrate in any zillah or city, or in any part thereof, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to make such appointment. —Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. iv.

114. All persons appointed by the Government to perform the duties of assistant magistrate shall, previously to entering upon the execution of such duties, take and subscribe the oath prescribed by the Regulations in force for the office of magistrate (with such verbal alterations only as may be consonant to the nature of the appointment) before the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, or any court or officer whom the Governor-General in Council may commission to administer it.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. v., and Reg. III., 1829, sec. iii.

115. Persons appointed to the office of joint magistrate, or that of assistant magistrate, shall be guided by the general Regulations, as far as the same may be applicable to their respective duties; and for the due execution of such duties, are declared to be invested with the same powers as by the Regulations are vested in the zillah and city magistrates.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. vi.

116. The special duties to be performed by joint and assistant magistrates, under the powers vested in them by the Regulations, will be determined by the orders of Government on their respective appointments. But in all matters relating to practice and form, as well as in all points not specifically provided for by this or any other Regulation, the joint and assistant magistrates shall be guided by the instructions of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. vii.

117. All process issued by a joint or assistant magistrate shall be under his official seal and signature, and shall be executed by the officers employed under the joint or assistant magistrate, or by those of the zillah or city magistrate, as circumstances may direct, and may appear most conducive to the public service. The several zillah and city magistrates, their police officers, and all other persons acting under them, are required to aid and support the joint and assistant magistrates in the execution of any process issued by them under their official seals and signatures; and resistance to any process so issued is declared to be punishable, in like manner as provided by the Regulations for resistance to the process of a zillah or city magistrate.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. viii.

118. Assistant magistrates (when not acting as magistrates in the absence of the zillah or city magistrate) shall be considered subordinate to the latter in the general discharge of their official duties, as far as may be consistent with the provisions of the Regulation. In all cases of a difference of opinion between the zillah or city magistrate, and an assistant magistrate, the latter shall conform to the directions of the former, until a reference can be made to the Sessions Court, Court of Nizamut Adawlut, or Governor-General in Council (according to the circumstance of the case) for a determination upon the subject.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. ix.

119. Assistant magistrates, when not stationed at the same place with the zillah or city magistrate, are authorized, in all cases requiring despatch, to correspond directly with the Governor-General in Council, the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, the Sessions Court, or other public authorities. But all monthly and other periodical reports or accounts, which may be required from an assistant magistrate by the Regulations or by the orders of Government or Court of Nizamut Adawlut, and generally all official communications which an assistant magistrate may have to make to any superior authority, and which may not require immediate despatch, without passing through the zillah or city magistrate, shall be transmitted through the channel of the latter, provided he be not absent from his jurisdiction.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. x.

120. The Governor-General in Council is empowered to place any part of the police or other public establishments under the immediate control of a joint or assistant magistrate, when it may appear to him expedient to do so.—Reg. XVI., 1810, part of sec. xi.

121. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to direct the sessions for any joint magistracy to be held generally at any station within the jurisdiction of the commissioner of circuit to whom the joint magistrate is subordinate, so long as the orders to that effect may remain unrescinded.—Reg. II., 1831, sec. iv.

ASSISTANTS TO THE MAGISTRATES.

THEIR POWERS, ORDINARY AND SPECIAL.

122. The zillah and city magistrates are authorized to employ their assistants in the execution of such part of their prescribed duties as, from the extent of their general business or other cause, they may be unable to give due attention to themselves; provided that, previous to any such assistant's entering upon the exercise of judicial authority, he shall take and subscribe before the magistrate the following oath prescribed:—

"I, A. B., assistant to the magistrate of the zillah (or city) of ———, solemnly swear, that I will, to the best of my ability, assist the said magistrate in preserving the peace of the zillah (or city) over which his authority extends; that I will act with impartiality and integrity, and will not exact or receive, nor knowingly allow any other person to exact or receive, directly or indirectly, any fee, emolument, or reward whatsoever, in the execution of any matter relating to the duties of my office, excepting such as the orders of the Governor-General in Council do or may expressly authorize; and that I will perform the duties of my office according to the best of my knowledge, abilities, and judgment, conformable to the Regulations that have been or may be passed by the Governor-General in Council: So help me God."—Reg. XIII., 1797, sec. ii.

123. The assistants to the city and zillah magistrates who may have taken and subscribed the foregoing oath are authorized to exercise the judicial powers vested in the magistrates by the Regulations, as far as may be necessary to enable them to perform the duties committed to them respectively by the magistrates with whom they are stationed, under the provision to that effect in the foregoing paragraph; but no assistant to a magistrate shall exercise judicial powers except such as are authorized by the Regulations to be delegated to them.—Reg. XIII., 1797, sec. iii.; Reg. IV., 1796, sec. vi.

124. In all instances wherein the assistants to the zillah and city magistrates may exercise any judicial powers, they are to be guided in every respect by such Regulations as have been or may be hereafter enacted for the guidance of the magistrates, as far as the same may be applicable to the duties committed to them respectively.—Reg. XIII., 1797, sec. iv.

125. Whenever a complaint or charge of a criminal nature may be referred by a zillah or city magistrate to his assistant for examination, the order of reference shall be recorded on the magistrate's proceedings, with instructions whether to submit the proceedings held upon the examination for the magistrate's decision, or whether the determination upon the charge is to be passed by the assistant, if it be such as he is authorized to determine under the Regulations.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. xxi.

126. In execution of the duties committed to them, assistant magistrates are empowered to sentence persons convicted of offences such as abusive language, calumny, inconsiderable assaults or affrays, or of petty thefts, to the same punishments to which magistrates are empowered to sentence for those offences, under Secs. VIII. and IX., Reg. IX., 1793, except that in cases wherein it may appear proper to impose the fine authorized by Sec. VIII., in addition to fifteen days' imprisonment, both the fine and imprisonment may be adjudged with an eventual commutation of the fine, if not paid, to further imprisonment for a period of fifteen days, making the entire term of imprisonment, if the fine be not paid, a month of thirty days. In any case referred to the assistant of a zillah or city magistrate, under the foregoing rules, wherein the offence proved against the prisoner may appear to require a more severe punishment than he is authorized to adjudge, he shall not pass any sentence, but shall submit his proceedings to the magistrate, who, after holding any further proceedings he may deem necessary, will, if satisfied of the guilt of the prisoner, either pass sentence on him under the general Regulations in force, or will commit or hold him to bail for trial before the Sessions Court, according to the nature and circumstances of the case —Reg IX, 1807, sec xx, with explanatory words from secs viii and ix, Reg IX, 1793

127 It is not competent to the assistants to the magistrates to exercise the powers vested in magistrates, to tender conditional pardon to accomplices or accessories in crimes —Reg X, 1824, sec vi

128 Whenever the accumulation of business may render it impracticable for a magistrate to discharge it with sufficient despatch, and the Court of Nizamut Adawlut may be of opinion, either in consequence of a report from the magistrate of such zillah or city, or from any other information before them, that the assistant of such magistrate is duly qualified, by his experience, industry, and abilities, to be intrusted with the special powers described in the third clause of this section, the Nizamut Adawlut shall report accordingly to Government.—Reg III, 1821, sec ii, cl 1

129 On the receipt of such report from the Nizamut Adawlut, or upon any other information before Government, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to invest such assistants with the special powers described in the following clause, and information shall be communicated, in every instance in which such powers may be vested in an assistant, to the Nizamut Adawlut, to the Sessions Court, and to the zillah or city magistrate —Reg III, 1821, sec ii, cl 2

130 The assistants to the zillah and city magistrates may be specially empowered in all cases referred to them, in which an individual may be convicted of any criminal offence punishable under the Mahomedan law and the Regulations for which the penalties authorized may appear insufficient, and for which a more severe punishment than six months' imprisonment with one additional month in commutation of corporal punishment, or a fine of two hundred rupees, may not have been specially prescribed, to pass sentence of imprisonment not exceeding six months, with one additional month in commutation of corporal punishment, or in other cases, with a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, commutable, if not paid, to a further period of imprisonment not exceeding six months, so that the entire period of imprisonment, under the sentence of an assistant, shall in no instance exceed one year —Reg III, 1821, sec ii, cl 3

131 In any case referred to the assistant of a zillah or city magistrate, under the Regulations in force, in which the offence proved against the prisoner may appear to require a more severe punishment than he is by the foregoing clause authorized to adjudge, he shall not pass any sentence, but shall submit his proceedings to the magistrate, who, after holding any further proceedings he may deem necessary, will, if satisfied of the guilt of the prisoner, either pass sentence on him, under Regulation XII, 1818, and the general Regulations in force, or will commit or hold him to bail for trial before the Sessions Court, according to the nature and circumstances of the case —Reg III, 1821, sec ii, cl 4

132 The magistrates are, moreover, at all times authorized to recall from their assistants any depending cases which may have been referred to them under the present or former Regulations, and which, for the more speedy administration of justice, or for any other reason, the magistrates may deem it proper to determine themselves in the first instance —Reg III, 1821, sec ii, cl 6

133 Upon the death, removal, or resignation of any assistant, who may have been invested with special powers under the provisions of this Regulation, the person succeeding to the office of assistant shall in no case be entitled to exercise such special powers, without the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, and it shall at all times be competent to the Governor-General in Council to revoke the special powers which may have been intrusted to the assistant of a zillah or city magistrate under this section, for any cause which, in the opinion of the Governor-General in Council, may render the adoption of that measure expedient.—Reg III, 1821, sec ii, cl 7

134 Assistant magistrates, vested with special powers, shall be competent to decide cases, under the provisions of Act IV of 1840, for the prevention of affrays concerning the possession of land and for providing relief in cases of forcible dispossession, when such cases are referred to them by the magistrates to whom they are subordinate, and such assistants shall deal with such cases in the same way as magistrates are competent to deal with them —Act XXVII, 1845, sec i

135 Provided always, that the magistrates may at all times recall from such assistants any such cases which may have been referred to them, and which, for the more speedy administration of justice, or for any other reason, the magistrates may deem it proper to determine themselves in the first instance —Act XXVII., 1845, sec ii.

DEPUTY MAGISTRATES.

136. It shall be competent to the local Governments of both divisions of the Bengal presidency to appoint in any zillah or district one or more uncovenanted deputy magistrates with the powers hereinafter specified.—Act XV., 1843, sec. i.

137. Every person appointed to the office of deputy magistrate shall, previously to entering upon the execution of the duties of his office, make and subscribe, before the magistrate of the district to which he may be appointed, a declaration in substitution for the oath of office.—Act XV., 1843, sec. ii.

138. A deputy magistrate shall be capable of being employed as a judicial officer or as an officer of police, or both, at the discretion of the local Government. As a judicial officer he shall exercise the powers of a covenanted assistant, or the full powers of a magistrate, according to such orders as may, from time to time, be issued in that respect by the local Government, and in such cases he shall be subject to such authority in regard to appeals from his decisions and judicial orders, as is provided for the decisions and orders of a covenanted assistant, or of a magistrate respectively. As an officer of police he shall be in all respects subordinate to the magistrate under whom he may be placed; he shall exercise such powers as the Government, or the magistrate with the sanction of Government, may commit to him, and shall obey all orders that may be issued, and perform all duties that may be assigned to him by that functionary, who shall be at all times competent, subject to such orders as he may receive from the local Government, to extend, limit, or resume the powers committed to such deputy.—Act XV., 1843, sec. iii.

139. Any uncovenanted officer in the revenue and judicial department may hold at the same time with any other office, the office of deputy magistrate.—Act XV., 1843, sec. iv.

140. A deputy magistrate appointed under this Act shall not be dismissed from office for misconduct, without the sanction of the local Government. Whenever there may be reason to believe that a deputy magistrate is disqualified by neglect, incapacity, or corruption, for continuance in office, a report shall be submitted by the local magistrate for the consideration and orders of the local Government, which shall be competent to suspend him and order a further inquiry into his conduct, or to direct his immediate dismissal, as may appear just and proper.—Act XV., 1843, sec. v.

ASSISTANTS TO MAGISTRATES AND DEPUTY MAGISTRATES.

141. It shall be competent to the local Government of each of the divisions of the Bengal presidency, to empower assistants to magistrates and also deputy magistrates appointed as aforesaid, to receive and try without reference by the magistrate, all or any of such charges as they are now competent to try upon reference by the magistrate, subject to appeal from their decisions according to the provisions of Section II., Act XXXI. of 1841.—Act X., 1854, sec. i.

142. Deputy magistrates vested with special powers shall, in each of the said divisions of the Bengal presidency, have the same powers to decide cases under Act IV. of 1840, as by Act XXVII. of 1845 are vested in assistant magistrates with special powers.—Act X., 1854, sec. ii.

143. Magistrates or joint magistrates may at any time call from any of the assistants, or from any deputy magistrate subordinate to them, any case pending before such assistant or any such deputy magistrate under the provisions of this Act, which for any reason the magistrate or joint magistrate may deem it proper to determine himself in the first instance.—Act X., 1854, sec. iii.

LAW OFFICERS, PRINCIPAL SUDDER AMEENS, AND SUDDER AMEENS.

THEIR POWERS IN CRIMINAL CASES.

144. Magistrates and joint magistrates are authorized to refer for trial to the Hindoo and Mahomedan law officers of the Zillah and City Courts, or to the Sudder Ameens or Principal Sudder Ameens, all complaints or charges brought before them for petty offences, such as abusive language, calumny, inconsiderable assaults or affrays, and all charges of petty thefts, when unattended with any aggravating circumstances, and generally, any criminal cases which they are authorized by the Regulations and Acts to refer to their assistants; and in the mode of making the reference, and in the subsequent stages of the proceeding, the magistrates and the law officers, Sudder Ameens, Principal Sudder Ameens, shall be guided by the provisions hitherto in force relative to such cases.—Reg. III., 1821, sec. iii., cls. 1 and 2, and sec. iv; Reg. II., 1832, sec. iii.

145. The law officers, Sudder and Principal Sudder Ameens, in the decision of criminal cases so referred to them, are authorized to exercise the same powers as those vested in the assistants to the magistrates, that is, in cases referred to them for trial, they shall not sentence a person convicted of abusive language or calumny, or inconsiderable assault or affray, to a more severe sentence than fifteen days' imprisonment and a fine of fifty rupees, with an eventual commutation, if the fine be not paid, to further confinement for fifteen days more, making the entire term of imprisonment, if the fine be not paid, one month of thirty days, nor shall they sentence a person convicted of petty theft to a more severe corporal punishment than thirty rattans and imprisonment for a period of one month Persons sentenced to imprisonment by the law officers shall not, during their imprisonment, be confined in irons or in fetters, except in cases in which the misconduct of such individual, during his imprisonment, shall appear to the magistrate to render such measure necessary for his safe custody —Reg. III., 1821, sec iii., cl 3; Reg II., 1832, sec. iii.

146 The law officers of the Zillah and City Courts, and the Principal Sudder Ameens and Sudder Ameens, shall forward to the magistrates, on the fifth day of each month, a statement showing the manner in which the cases referred to them may have been disposed of, in order that the same, after having been carefully inspected by the magistrates, with the view of noticing and eventually correcting any irregularities, may be incorporated in the periodical reports required to be submitted to the superior courts —Reg III, 1821, sec. iii., cl 4

147 It shall be competent to the magistrate to refer to a Sudder Ameen or Principal Sudder Ameen, not being a Muhomedan law officer, any criminal case for investigation, though such case may not be finally cognizable by such Sudder Ameen; provided, however, that no commitment be made by those officers, and that their powers of awarding punishment in criminal matters, under the existing Regulations and Acts, be not exceeded.—Reg. V., 1831, sec. xviii., cl. 6.

THEIR APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND JURISDICTION.

148 All persons appointed to the station of zillah or city magistrate are required to take the oath of qualification to act as justice of the peace within six months from the date of their appointment unless, in any particular instance, it should be necessary or convenient to defer the same to a later period; in which case the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, on application being made to them, are authorized to grant such extension as they may judge proper, so that in no instance, without the sanction of the Governor-General in Council in cases of emergency, the taking the oath, in the manner prescribed in the Act of Parliament aforesaid, shall be deferred beyond a twelvemonth from the date of appointment of any zillah or city magistrate required to take the same —Reg II, 1796, sec. iv.

149. All persons who are or shall be nominated and appointed in any commission of the peace shall be capable of acting as justices of the peace in every respect, according to the tenour of such commission, upon taking and subscribing in any Civil or Criminal Court of Justice, within the places in and for which any such commission shall have issued, before the officer presiding in such court, whether such officer be a justice of the peace or not, the oaths appointed to be taken by justices of the peace, and the subscription of such persons to the said oaths shall be deposited and kept with the records of the Courts of Justice in which the said oaths shall have been administered.—Act XVI, 1841, sec. i.

150. Every justice of the peace who, before the passing of this Act, shall have had administered to him the oaths of qualification by any other justice of the peace, shall be deemed to have been duly qualified to act as a justice of the peace from the time of taking such oath, and shall continue so qualified notwithstanding such oath may not have been taken in a Court of Justice as required by any previous law, or by this Act.—Act XVI., 1841, sec. ii.

151 The Supreme Court of Judicature shall and may, from time to time, upon the order or warrant of the Executive Government, issue separate commissions to any persons not named in the general commission of the peace last issued, who by law are capable of being appointed to the office of justice of the peace, and who shall be nominated and appointed by such Executive Government to act as justices of the peace within and for the presidency and the places subordinate thereto, or within and for the presidency town And all such commissions shall be issued in the name of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, under the seal of the Supreme Court, and tested in the name of the chief justice of such court, and shall be filed of record in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, as supplementary to the general commission of the peace last issued, which shall remain in full force —Act VI, 1845

152 In all Acts passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, the term "magistrates" shall extend to all "joint magistrates," "persons lawfully exercising the powers of a magistrate," and "justices of the peace"—Act II, 1839, sec iv

153 The declaration in Section IV, Act V, 1840, that the provisions of that Act substituting an affirmation for the oath previously required from Hindoos or Mahomedans should not extend to her Majesty's courts of justice, does not mean or extend to the courts of the justices of the peace Act V, 1840, sec iv, Act II., 1847.

PROCEDURE AGAINST EUROPEANS

154 All Europeans, not British subjects, are amenable to the authority of the magistrates and Sessions Courts within whose jurisdictions they may be apprehended and brought to trial, in common with the natives of the country But European British subjects, for all acts of a criminal nature, are amenable only to the Supreme Court of Judicature at Calcutta, and in the event of any charges being preferred against them which may render them liable to a criminal prosecution in that court, the following process is to be observed for their apprehension and trial.—Reg II, 1796, sec ii, cl 1

155 If the zillah or city magistrate, before whom the charge against such European British subject may be preferred, shall have taken the oaths of qualification as a justice of the peace, and thereby have become vested with the full power and authority of a justice of the peace, under the provision made for that purpose by the Act of 21 Geo III, cap 65, the magistrate, upon the charge or information being lodged before him upon oath, is to proceed to the apprehension of the party accused, and provided the evidence against him be sufficient to warrant the same, to his commitment for trial, as he is authorized and required to do by virtue of his commission as justice of the peace, and if there appear to him sufficient grounds for committing such British subject for trial, he is to issue a warrant, under his signature and official seal, directed to the sheriff of Calcutta, and commanding him to receive the prisoner into his custody for trial at the ensuing sessions He is likewise to bind over the prosecutor to repair to Calcutta before the session next ensuing, and is to take recognizances from the witnesses for their appearance at the trial —Reg II, 1796, sec. ii, cl 2

156 If the zillah or city magistrate, before whom an European British subject may be charged as aforesaid, shall not have taken the oath of qualification, and be therefore unqualified to act as justice of the peace under the Act of Parliament above recited, upon the charge or information being lodged before him upon oath, he is to make a summary inquiry into the circumstances of the charge without delay, and if there appear to be sufficient grounds for committing such British subject for trial, he is to be apprehended and immediately conveyed under safe custody to Calcutta. Two witnesses to the facts alleged against the prisoner (if so many be procurable) are also to be sent with him to Calcutta, or bound to appear and give evidence for the purpose of his commitment at the time of his arrival, and a list of such witnesses is, in all cases, to accompany the letter sent with the prisoner to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut. The magistrate is further to bind over the prosecutor to repair to Calcutta before the session next ensuing, and is to take penal recognizances from the witnesses for their appearance at the trial —Reg II, 1796, sec ii, cl 3

157 Whenever a zillah or city magistrate who shall have taken the oaths of qualification as a justice of the peace shall hold any British European subject to bail, or shall deem it necessary to commit any such person to the gaol of Calcutta, to take his trial before the Supreme Court of Judicature for any offence of a criminal nature, the magistrate shall transmit the original depositions taken on the occasion (together with translations of any papers not being in the English language) to the clerk of the Crown The magistrate shall likewise transmit copies of the said depositions (together with translations of any papers not being in the English language) to the secretary to the Government in the judicial department, for the information of the Governor-General in Council, who, in cases in which he shall consider it to be necessary, from the aggravated nature of the offence charged against the person accused, or on any other substantial ground, will order the prosecution to be conducted by the law officers of Government, and at the public expense —Reg XV, 1806, sec ii

158. Whenever an European British subject shall be charged before a zillah or city magistrate, who has not taken the oaths of qualification as a justice of the peace, with a criminal offence which according to the law of England may not be bailable, and the magistrate, after making the necessary inquiry on the subject, shall be of opinion that there are grounds for bringing the person accused to trial before the Supreme Court of Judicature, the magistrate shall send the person accused under safe custody to his Majesty's justices of the peace at the police office in Calcutta, accompanied by the witnesses against the prisoner, with a letter stating the nature of the case, and requesting that the justices at Calcutta will take the necessary measures for bringing the person accused to trial before the Supreme Court of Judicature. The magistrate by whom the prisoner may be sent to Calcutta shall, at the same time, transmit a copy of all the proceedings held on the occasion (together with translations of any papers not being in the English language) to the secretary to the Government in the judicial department, to enable the Governor-General in Council to determine whether the prosecution should be undertaken by the law officers of Government and at the public expense, or otherwise.—Reg. XV., 1806, sec. iii.

159. Whenever any person shall charge an European British subject before a magistrate, who has not taken the oaths of qualification as a justice of the peace, with a bailable offence, it shall be the duty of the magistrate to explain to the complainant the course which he should pursue for the purpose of obtaining redress; that is, by application to the justices of the peace at Calcutta or to the grand jury. It shall likewise be the duty of the magistrate, after calling upon the person accused for his reply to the complaint, to report the case to the Governor-General in Council; at the same time stating, on a consideration of the distance at which the parties may reside from the presidency, of the poverty of the complainant or of other circumstances, whether it would, in the opinion of the magistrate, be proper that the expense of the prosecution should be defrayed by Government. The Governor-General in Council, on receipt of such report, will pass such orders on the subject as may appear to him to be advisable; and will at the same time direct, in cases which may appear to require it, that the prosecution shall be conducted by the law officers of the Company.—Reg. XV., 1806, sec. v.

160. An appeal shall lie from all sentences passed by any justice of the peace acting without the local limits of any of her Majesty's Supreme Courts upon convictions had before him for any offence, and from all sentences passed by any magistrate upon convictions had before him exercising such jurisdiction as aforesaid to the same authority and subject to the same rules as are provided by the Regulations and Acts of the Government in the case of sentences passed by magistrates in the exercise of their ordinary jurisdiction. And cases so made the subject of appeal shall not be afterwards liable to revision by means of a writ of certiorari.—Act IV., 1843, sec. i.

161. Nothing in this Act contained shall be held to take away the power of quashing any conviction by means of a writ of certiorari, in any other case than where there has been such appeal as aforesaid.—Act IV., 1843, sec. ii.

162. The provisions of the Act of the fifty-third George the Third and of Act IV., 1843, so far as the said provisions extend to cases of assault, forcible entries, or other injuries accompanied with force, not being felonies, against the person or property of any native of India, are extended to the case of any assault, forcible entry, or other injury accompanied with force, not being felony, which may at any time hereafter be committed in any part of the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, not being within the town of Calcutta, by any British subject or other person, against the person or property of any person whatever.—Act VII., 1853, sec. i.

163. The powers in such cases given to the magistrate of the zillah or district may be lawfully exercised by any joint magistrate or other person lawfully exercising the powers of a magistrate, in the case of any such offence as aforesaid, which may hereafter be committed within the district over which his authority extends.—Act VII., 1853, sec. ii.

164. All powers whatever in criminal cases, which by virtue of any law now in force may be exercised by two justices of the peace within and for the provinces, districts, and countries of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, and within and for the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, and places thereto subordinate, may be exercised by one such justice.—Act XXXII., 1838, sec. i.

PROCEDURE AGAINST EUROPEAN OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS.

165. If any European British subject, who shall be apprehended by or brought before a magistrate on a charge of murder, rape, robbery, theft, or other criminal offence, shall be found, on his apprehension, to have been, at the time when the offence laid to his charge may have been committed, a commissioned or non-commissioned officer or soldier, serving with any body of troops in the service of his Majesty, or of the honourable East-India Company, at any place not within the territories subject to the presidency of Fort William, or at any place within such territories which may be situated above one hundred and twenty miles from the aforesaid presidency, or to have been, when the offence was committed, a person attached to such body of troops in any of the capacities specified in Sections xl. and xli. of Statute 3 & 4 William IV., cap. 37, it shall be the duty of the magistrate by whom such person so accused may be apprehended, instead of proceeding to hear evidence to the charge as directed in such cases in the Regulations above mentioned, to deliver over such person so charged, together with a statement of the charge brought against him, to the commanding officer of the regiment, corps, or detachment to which such accused person shall belong, or to the commanding officer of the nearest military station, for the purpose of his being brought to trial before a court-martial under the provisions of the said Act of Parliament.—Reg. XX., 1825, sec. ii., cl. 1.

166. It shall further be the duty of every magistrate, on a written application being made to him for that purpose by the commanding officer of any regiment, corps, or detachment stationed or employed as specified in the preceding clause, to use his utmost endeavour for the apprehension of any British officer, non-commissioned officer, soldier, or other person of the description therein alluded to, who may have been charged with the crime of murder, rape, robbery, theft, or other criminal offence, and also to give his assistance, and that of the officers under his control, in securing the person so accused.—Reg. XX., 1825, sec. ii., cl. 2.

167. It shall be competent to the judge-advocate-general or deputy judge-advocate, or other person appointed to conduct the proceedings of any court-martial assembled for the trial of offences under the provisions of the said Act of Parliament, to transmit to the magistrate of the zillah or city, within whose jurisdiction persons whose attendance before such court-martial is required may reside, any warrant, summons, or other process, for the attendance of such person; and it shall be the duty of such magistrate, who may be so applied to, to give his assistance and that of the officers under him in the due execution of such process, and generally to aid and assist in the execution of all processes issued by such courts-martial.—Reg. XX., 1825, sec. ii., cl. 3.

168. The several zillah and city magistrates are hereby prohibited from receiving and inquiring into any criminal charge of the nature described in Sec. ii. of Statute 3 & 4 Victoria, cap. 37, which may be preferred to them against any British commissioned or non-commissioned officer, soldier, or other person attached to the army, who may have been regularly brought to trial under the provisions of the said Act, and acquitted or convicted by the sentence of a court-martial of such offence; provided, however, that in any case wherein it may be ascertained by the magistrate, on due inquiry, that any person accused of such criminal offence, who may be subject to trial by court-martial, has not been brought to trial for such offence before a court-martial, and that no effectual proceedings have been taken, or have been ordered to be taken, against him, then and in that case it shall be the duty of the magistrate to report the circumstance for the information and orders of the Governor-General in Council, who, if it appear to him proper so to do, will direct the case to be proceeded upon in the ordinary course of law; and the magistrate, if so authorized, shall be competent to proceed against the offender under the provisions of the Regulations hitherto in force.—Reg. XX., 1825, sec. ii., cl. 4.

169. Provided always, that nothing contained in the foregoing clauses shall be held to restrict the magistrates of districts, either in their ordinary capacity of magistrates, or as his Majesty's justices of the peace duly qualified, from proceeding under the rules heretofore in force against all British subjects charged with criminal offences, who may not be attached to the army, or subject to be tried for such offences by a court-martial.—Reg. XX., 1825, sec. ii., cl. 5.

170. The provisions of this Regulation, as far as the same relate to criminal offences committed by any commissioned or non-commissioned officer, soldier, or other person attached to the army, being British subjects, shall not be held to apply or be in force when such offences shall be committed by persons of the above description, attached to any body of troops which may be stationed in the garrison of Fort William, or at Barrackpore, Midnapore, Dum-Dum, or at any other place within the territories under the presidency of Fort William, which may not be situated at a greater distance than one hundred and twenty miles from the said presidency; and in all such places, the powers and authorities vested by law in the magistrates and justices of the peace shall continue to be and remain in full force and effect.—Reg. XX., 1825, sec. ii., cl. 6.

171. Whenever a witness in attendance before a general court-martial, or other military court duly authorized to administer an oath, shall refuse to be sworn, and the court shall be of opinion that the testimony of such witness is essential, and that there is no sufficient reason to exempt him from taking the oath, the judge-advocate-general, or other officer conducting the proceedings of the court, shall be authorized to forward such witness, with a written statement, to the zillah or city magistrate, or joint magistrate, within whose jurisdiction the court may be held; and the magistrate or joint magistrate is directed to make such inquiries into the case as may satisfy him that the witness ought or ought not to be exempted from taking an oath, under the provisions of Regulation L., 1803 If the magistrate or joint magistrate shall be of opinion that no sufficient grounds exist for exempting the witness from taking the prescribed oath, he shall proceed in the same manner as if the refusal to give evidence on oath had taken place in his own court: on the other hand, if he shall be of opinion that the witness ought not to be compelled to take the oath, he shall certify the same to the judge-advocate-general, or other officer above referred to, and shall not impose any penalty on such witness.—Reg. XX., 1825, sec. iv.

PENAL RECOGNIZANCES, AND SECURITY TO KEEP THE PEACE.

172. It shall be lawful for the zillah and city magistrates and joint magistrates to take mochulkas or penal recognizances in the form annexed to this Act, as well from British subjects as from other persons, in all cases wherein it may appear just and necessary to require the same for the maintenance of the peace in their respective jurisdictions, although the party to be bound in such recognizances may not have been convicted of any specific offence, provided that the amount of the recognizance in all such cases shall be proportionate to the condition in life of the said party and to the circumstances of the case.—Act V., 1848, sec. ii.

173. In cases of an aggravated nature, wherein it may appear necessary to require security for keeping the peace in addition to the recognizance of the party, it shall be lawful for such magistrates to direct the same, and to fix a reasonable amount for the security bond to be executed in the form annexed to this Act by the surety or sureties.—Act V., 1848, sec. iii.

174. Whenever it shall appear to the magistrate that the period for which the party should be bound to keep the peace, with or without additional security, need not exceed one year, it shall be lawful for him, without reference to superior authority, to give directions accordingly, and in default of such recognizance or additional security, to commit the party to prison in the civil jail until he shall do what has been required of him.—Act V., 1848, sec. iv.

175. Whenever it shall appear to the magistrate that the period for which the party should be bound to keep the peace, with or without additional security, ought to exceed the period of one year, the magistrate shall record his opinion to that effect, with an order specifying the amount of recognizance and security, as well as the number of sureties which should in his judgment be required, and the period for which the recognizance and security should be required, which, however, shall in no case exceed three years. If the party shall not furnish the recognizance and security so required, the proceedings shall be laid before the sessions judge, who, after examining them and calling for any further information which he may think necessary, shall pass orders on the case confirming, modifying, or annulling the orders of the magistrate, and if the orders so passed by the sessions judge confirm to any extent the requisition for recognizance or securities, the sessions judge shall direct the magistrate to commit the party to prison in the civil jail until he shall do what has been required of him.—Act V., 1848, sec. v.

176. Provided always, that no party shall be kept in prison under the foregoing provisions of this Act for a longer period than that for which the recognizance and securities have been required from him.—Act V., 1848, sec. vi.

177. The provisions contained in Sections V., VI., and VII. of Regulation VIII., 1818, shall be applicable to all persons confined on requisition of security, under Act XXIV. of 1825, and of Act V., 1848, and to all sureties who shall give a security under these Acts respectively.—Act V., 1848, sec. vii.

178. Whenever it may be proved before the magistrate that any such recognizance has been forfeited, he shall proceed to enforce the penalty of such recognizance in the mode prescribed for the satisfaction of decrees of the civil court.—Act V., 1848, sec. viii.

179. Whenever it may be proved before the magistrate that any such recognizance has been forfeited, if a security bond shall have been taken and the magistrate shall think that proceedings should be had upon such bond, he shall give notice to the surety or sureties to pay the penalty, or to show cause why it should not be paid, and if no sufficient cause shall be shown, the magistrate shall proceed to recover the penalty from such surety or sureties by the attachment and sale of any of his or their property in the mode prescribed for the attachment and sale of property in satisfaction of decrees of the civil court; and if the penalty be not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, such surety or sureties shall be liable to confinement, by order of the magistrate in the civil jail of the station during a period not exceeding six months.—Act V., 1848, sec. ix.

180. All sentences and orders passed under this Act shall be appealable, subject to the general provisions which regulate appeals.—Act V., 1848, sec. x.

181. All mochulkas and security bonds, which by force of any Act or Regulation may be taken by criminal courts of the East-India Company, or by zillah or city magistrates or joint magistrates, for keeping the peace or for good behaviour, may be enforced in the manner prescribed by Sections VIII. and IX. of this Act.—Act V., 1848, sec. xi.

182. In every instance in which security for good behaviour may be hereafter required, whether by the magistrates, the Sessions Court, or the Nizamut Adawlut, the amount of the security, the number of sureties (to be fixed at the discretion of the magistrate or of the court requiring the security), and the period of time for which the sureties are to be responsible for the good conduct of the prisoner, shall be fixed and determined.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. iii.

183. The period of time during which such prisoners may be made liable to detention in custody, on failure to furnish the security required from them, shall hereafter be specifically fixed in every instance, except in those cases in which the prisoner may appear to be a notorious robber, of a character so dangerous as to render his release, without security, evidently unsafe and objectionable.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. iv.

184. The magistrates are empowered at all times to exercise their discretion in releasing, without reference to any other authority, prisoners confined under requisition of security for their good behaviour, whether by their own orders or by those of any other person discharging the functions of a magistrate; provided the magistrates shall, from whatever cause, be of opinion that such prisoners can be released without hazard to the community.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. v., cl. 1.

185. In cases in which a magistrate may, for whatever reason, be of opinion that any prisoner confined under requisition of security for good behaviour, by order of a Sessions Court, or of the Nizamut Adawlut, can be safely released without such security, the magistrate shall either bring the case before the Sessions Court, or shall make an immediate report of the case, with his sentiments, for the orders of the Court, which may have required the prisoner to furnish security previously to his release.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. v., cl. 2.

186. No prisoner detained under requisition of security in the zillah or city in which he has been accustomed to reside, or in which he may have been apprehended, shall be removed to the jail of a different zillah, unless the Nizamut Adawlut or the Governor-General in Council shall sanction the removal in compliance with the prisoner's own request, and with a view to enable him the more easily to furnish the security required.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. vi., cl. 1; Act VII., 1850, sec. ii.

187. The foregoing rule, however, shall not be construed to preclude the removal of such prisoners from one station to another, in cases in which a due regard to the health of the prisoners or to their safe custody, or other emergent circumstances, may in the judgment of the Nizamut Adawlut or the Governor-General in Council render that measure necessary or advisable.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. vi., cl. 2; Act VII., 1850, sec. iii.

188. Individuals who may become sureties for the good behaviour of prisoners, may at all times obtain a discharge from their future responsibility by delivering up, or causing to be delivered up, the persons for whom they may have become responsible, to the proper magistrate or police-officer, and they will not be made responsible for the amount of the security bond, in cases in which they may give timely information to the magistrate, that the individuals for whom they may have become sureties have taken to bad courses, and may use every exertion in their power, to the satisfaction of the magistrate, for the apprehension and surrender of such individuals. —Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. vii.

189. Whenever the magistrates, under the authority vested in them by the existing Regulations, may require security for the good behaviour of a prisoner, they shall (in all cases in which they may judge it safe to do so) provide in their order for the release of the prisoner at the end of a definite period, not exceeding twelve months. The period to be fixed for the responsibility of the sureties in such cases shall correspond with the time limited by the magistrate's order for the prisoner's detention in the event of his not furnishing the required security.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. viii., cl. 1; Reg. IV., 1825, sec. v.

190. It shall not be necessary for the judge holding the sessions to revise the proceedings of the magistrate in such cases, except on petitions presented by the prisoners, when the judge holding the sessions is directed and empowered to call for the proceedings, and, on his own authority, to annul, modify, or confirm the orders of the magistrate.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. viii. cl. 2.

191. In all other cases in which the magistrate may be of opinion, from the evidence to general character adduced before him, that the prisoner is by habit a robber, burglar, or thief, or a vender, or receiver of stolen property, knowing the same to have been stolen; of a character so desperate, dangerous, or irreclaimable, as to render his release, without security, at the expiration of the limited period of twelve months above specified, hazardous to the community, the magistrate shall record his opinion to that effect, with an order, specifying the amount of security which should in his judgment be required from the prisoner, as well as the number of sureties, and the period for which the sureties should be responsible for the prisoner's good behaviour.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. ix., cl. 1.

192. If the prisoner shall not furnish the security so required before the next sessions of the Sessions Court, the whole of the proceedings shall be laid before the judge of that Court, who, after examining them and requiring any further evidence which he may judge necessary, shall be competent, from his own authority, to pass orders on the case, either confirming, modifying, or annulling the orders of the magistrate, as he may judge proper and equitable.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. ix., cl. 2.

193. In all such cases, if the sessions judge shall not think it safe to direct the immediate discharge of the prisoner, he shall fix a limited period for the provisional detention of the prisoner (in the event of his not giving the security required from him), which period shall never exceed three years, except in the cases specified in the following section.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. ix., cl. 3.

194. In cases in which the sessions judge shall, from the proceedings before him, consider the prisoner to be a notorious gang-robber, dukyt, or a notorious robber of any other denomination, of dangerous character, whom it would be unsafe to set at liberty, without substantial security for his future good behaviour, he shall order that, in default of giving security, he shall be confined indefinitely.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. x., cl. 1; Reg. III., 1819, sec. ii.

195. In these cases, however, the sessions judge shall nevertheless fix the amount of the security to be required from the prisoner, and shall provide in his order, that, if the prisoner shall not be able to furnish the security required within the period of three years from the date of such order, he shall be again brought up before the sessions judge, at the expiration of the period of three years above specified, whose duty it will be, after examining the proceedings and making any further inquiries he may judge necessary, to determine whether the prisoner shall then be released, or whether he shall be again remanded, either on the same terms as before, or on any modified terms favourable to the prisoner.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. x., cl. 2.

196. With a view to encourage respectable individuals to become sureties for prisoners of the description alluded to in the foregoing clauses of this section, the period for which the sureties are to be responsible for the good behaviour of the individuals shall be, in all cases, limited to three years; subject, however, to the condition that the sureties, at the expiration of that period, shall be bound to deliver up the individuals to the magistrate.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. x., cl. 3.

197. When individuals shall be surrendered by their sureties, under the foregoing rule, the magistrate shall ascertain whether the former surety is willing again to become responsible for the future good behaviour of the prisoner for a further period not exceeding three years; and in the event of the surety being willing to become again responsible for the conduct of the prisoner, the magistrate shall accept the security and release the prisoner on the same terms as before.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. x., cl. 4.

198. If the former surety shall decline to become again responsible for the prisoner, and the prisoner shall be unable to furnish any other sufficient security, the magistrate shall detain him in custody, and bring him before the sessions judge at the ensuing sessions for such further orders as he may consider it proper to pass in the case.—Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. x., cl. 5.

199. Whenever a person, charged with a serious affray, assault, or other violent breach of the peace, or with causing, aiding, or abetting the same, or with assembling armed men, or taking other unlawful measures, with the evident intention of committing the same, shall be convicted of such charge, before any Criminal Court by which the offence may be cognizable; and the court, by which a final sentence or order in the case may be passed, shall be of opinion that it is just and necessary to require a mochulka, or penal recognizance, for keeping the peace, with or without security for the same purpose, from the person so convicted, it shall be competent to the court, passing the final sentence, or order, in such cases, to direct that the person so convicted be required to execute a mochulka, or formal engagement, in a sum proportionate to the party's condition in life, and the circumstances of the case, for keeping the peace, during such period as it may appear proper to fix in each instance; not exceeding one year from the time of the prisoner's discharge, if the sentence or order be passed by a magistrate, joint magistrate, or other officer exercising the functions of a magistrate; or three years if the sentence or final order be passed by a Sessions Court, or the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. IV., 1825, sec. ii., cl. 1.

200. In cases of an aggravated nature, wherein it may appear necessary to require security for keeping the peace in addition to the mochulka of the party, it shall also be competent to the court passing the final sentence, or order, to direct the same; and to fix the amount of the security bond (which should never be excessive, and should in all cases be such as it would be proper to enforce, in the event of a breach of the engagement), to be executed by the surety or sureties; with a provision, that if the same be not given, the party required to find the security shall be kept in custody for any time not exceeding the period specified in the preceding paragraph, according as the order may be passed by a magistrate, or Sessions Court, or by the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. IV., sec. ii., cl. 2.

201. The provisions contained in Secs. V., VI. and VII. of Regulation VIII., 1818, shall be considered applicable to all prisoners confined on requisition of security for keeping the peace, under the present Regulation, and to the sureties for such persons.—Reg. IV., 1825, sec. iii.

202. Whenever a prisoner acquitted of the charge on which he had been tried shall appear to the sessions judge, on the evidence before him, to be a prisoner of notoriously bad or dangerous character, it shall be competent to him to direct the magistrate to detain the prisoner in custody until he shall have given sufficient security for his future good behaviour and appearance when required.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 6; Reg. VIII., 1818, sec. ii.

203. Whenever either of the Courts of Sessions or of Nizamut Adawlut shall have directed a magistrate to detain a prisoner in custody until he give security for his future good behaviour, if the prisoner shall have remained in confinement for a year or any longer period, under inability to give the security required, and the execution of a mochulka (penal engagement) by the prisoner for his future good conduct, without security, may, on consideration of the circumstances of the case and the prisoner's behaviour during his confinement, appear to the magistrate sufficient to provide for the object intended, he shall report the same to the Sessions Court, who thereupon shall call the prisoner before them, and examine the proceedings held upon his trial, as far as may be necessary to ascertain the grounds on which the prisoner may have been required to find security; after which, and duly considering the circumstances stated in the magistrate's report, of the nature of the crime of which the prisoner may have been convicted or suspected, his general character as far as ascertainable, and the consequent risk to be apprehended from his being released without security for his future good conduct, if he shall concur with the magistrate in opinion that the prisoner ought to be released on his mochulka without security, they are to direct the same accordingly.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. xi., cls. 1 to 3.

PROCEDURE RESPECTING OFFENCES COMMITTED IN FOREIGN STATES.

204. All subjects of the British Government, and also all persons in the civil or military service of the said Government, while actually in such service, and for six months afterwards, and also all persons who shall have dwelt for six months within the British territories under the government of the East-India Company, subject to the laws of the said territories, who shall be apprehended within the said territories, or delivered into the custody of a magistrate within the said territories, wherever apprehended, shall be amenable to the law for all offences committed by them within the territory of any foreign prince or state; and may be bailed or committed for trial, as hereafter provided, on the like evidence as would warrant their being held to bail or committed for the same offence if it had been committed within the British territories.—Act I., 1849, sec. ii.

205. The committing magistrate, immediately, and before the trial, shall report every such case to the Government, and shall obey the orders which he shall receive thereon.—Act I., 1849, sec. iii.

206. The Government may order the trial to be had before one of the established courts of criminal judicature, which would be competent to try the person charged for the offence if it had been committed within the British territories.—Act I., 1849, sec. iv.

207. When the offence is charged to have been committed in the territory of any foreign prince or state, administered by officers acting under the authority of the East-India Company, in which territory a Court, competent to try the person charged for the offence, is established by authority of the Governor-General of India in Council, the Government may order such person to be conveyed in custody, out of the British territories, for the purpose of delivering him up for trial before such Court.—Act I., 1849, sec. v.

208. When the person charged is committed, the form of the warrant shall specify the commitment to be until the orders of Government can be received and acted on; when he is bailed, the form of the bail-bond shall be, in the first instance, to appear before the magistrate on a certain day assigned, allowing reasonable time for receipt of the orders of Government, and on such subsequent days as the magistrate from time to time shall require; and if Government shall order the person charged to be tried within the presidency, the magistrate may cause the bail-bond to be renewed in the usual form, to appear and take his trial at the Court appointed for the purpose.—Act I., 1849, sec. vi.

209. In either case, the special order of the Government shall be deemed full authority, either for the trial and punishment of the person charged, within the British territories, or for conveying him in custody out of the British territories, as aforesaid.—Act I., 1849, sec. vii.

210. The word "Government" as used in the third and following sections of this Act, means the Governor, or Governor in Council, or other person or persons having supreme executive authority in the presidency or place to which the committing magistrate belongs.—Act I., 1849, sec. viii.

211. The authority hereinbefore given to the Government may be also exercised by any commissioner or other person acting in the civil service of the East-India Company, to whom the Governor-General in Council shall have delegated authority to receive reports and give orders in cases within this Act.—Act I., 1849, sec. ix.

212. If requisition be made by, or by the authority of, the person or persons for the time being administering the executive Government of any part of the dominions of her Majesty, to the Government of any part of the British territories in India, to deliver up to justice any person accused of having been guilty of any heinous offence in any part of her Majesty's dominions subject to the Government making the requisition, and who shall be, or shall be supposed to be, in any part of the British territories in India subject to the Government to which the requisition shall be made, or if a similar requisition be made by any foreign prince or state, or by any duly authorized minister or officer thereof, in respect of a person accused of having been guilty of any heinous offence in any part of the territories of such foreign prince or state, it shall be lawful for the Government to which the requisition shall be made, if it shall see fit so to do, to issue an order in writing for inquiry into the truth of the charge; and such order shall be sufficient proof of the requisition having been duly made, and a sufficient justification for all acts done in pursuance thereof.—Act VII., 1854, sec. i.

213. The order shall be signed by one of the secretaries to the Government; it shall be directed to all magistrates and justices of the peace of the Presidency or place under the control of such Government; it shall signify that the requisition has been made, shall state the nature of the offence charged, the name or other designation, if the name be not known, of the person accused, and any other description of him that may be thought necessary, and it shall require the magistrates and justices to whom it shall be directed or any of them to inquire into the truth of the charge, and to proceed in pursuance of this Act.—Act VII., 1854. sec. ii.

214. Upon the production of the order to any such magistrate or justice of the peace, he shall have the same powers as if the offence charged had been committed within his jurisdiction.—Act VII., 1854, sec. iii.

215. If the evidence adduced shall, in the judgment of the magistrate or justice of the peace, be sufficient to justify the apprehension of the person accused of the offence, the magistrate or justice of the peace shall issue his warrant for the apprehension of such person. The warrant shall be issued in the same manner as a warrant for an offence committed within the jurisdiction of the magistrate or justice of the peace issuing it, and shall contain a memorandum stating that the warrant is issued under this Act, and if the warrant be issued under an order of Government, shall also state the fact and specify the Government. The memorandum may be to the following effect:—

This warrant is issued under Act No. VII. of 1854, and is issued under an order of the Government of Act VII., 1854, sec. iv.

216. The warrant of any magistrate or justice of the peace having jurisdiction in any part of the territories under the Government of the East-India Company for the arrest of any person charged with having committed any offence, whether such warrant be issued under the provisions of this Act or not, may be executed within the jurisdiction of any other magistrate or justice of the peace having jurisdiction in any part of the said territories, whether in the same Presidency or not, upon having a written authority under the hand and seal of the magistrate or justice of the peace within whose jurisdiction it may be executed, previously endorsed thereon, and which endorsement may be to the following effect:—

To the Nazir [or other officer as the case may be] of the Zillah of

"This warrant may be executed in the zillah or district of [describing the zillah or district of the indorsing magistrate or justice of the peace] by any of the officers to whom the same is directed or by [describing by his name of office the officer to whom a similar warrant, issued by the indorsing magistrate or justice of the peace would be directed].—Act VII., 1854, sec. v.

217. The magistrate indorsing a warrant in pursuance of the provisions of the foregoing paragraph, shall not be liable to any action or other proceeding in consequence of any illegality in the issuing of the warrant; but any magistrate illegally or improperly issuing the same shall be liable for an arrest in pursuance of the indorsement, in the same manner and to the same extent only as if the warrant had been executed within his own jurisdiction.—Act VII., 1854, sec. vi.

218. Upon the apprehension of the supposed offender, if the offence be alleged to have been committed in any part of the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, he shall be carried before the magistrate within whose jurisdiction the offence shall be alleged to have been committed, and shall be by him dealt with according to law, unless by the warrant the officer be authorized to take bail or security, and such bail or security be given for the appearance of the person accused before the magistrate or justice of the peace of the zillah or district in which the offence shall be alleged to have been committed. If the offence be charged to have been committed in any place not within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, the person arrested shall be forthwith carried before a magistrate or justice of the peace of the zillah or district in which he shall be arrested. The magistrate or justice of the peace, before whom the supposed offender shall be carried in pursuance of the last mentioned directions, may proceed in the same manner as in cases in which he has power to commit for trial, or to hold to bail for an offence committed within his own jurisdiction. If after making as full an inquiry into all the circumstances of the case as the evidence obtainable by the magistrate or justice of the peace within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company will enable him to make, the evidence adduced shall be sufficient in his judgment to warrant a committal, he shal commit the accused to some place of confinement within his zillah or district, which in the judgment of the magistrate or justice of the peace shall be fit for receiving the prisoner, or if there be no such place, to the gaol of the Presidency, there to remain until he shall be delivered up or discharged by orders of Government If after making such inquiry the circumstances shall not in the judgment of the magistrate or justice of the peace be sufficient to warrant either the committal or the holding to bail of the prisoner, he shall be discharged —Act VII, 1854, sec vii

219 If the offence charged be one committed out of the British territories in India, which if committed within the jurisdiction of the magistrate would be bailable, the magistrate or justice of the peace may proceed accordingly, and may discharge the prisoner upon his giving the necessary bail The recognizance or bail-bond in such case shall be for the appearance of the accused before the magistrate or justice of the peace for the time being of the zillah or district in which the recognizance shall be taken, on a certain day to be named therein, allowing reasonable time for receiving the orders of Government, and on such subsequent days as the magistrate or justice of the peace for the time being shall from time to time appoint —Act VII, 1854, sec viii

220 If any person shall in pursuance of this Act be carried before a magistrate or justice of the peace other than the one who issued the warrant, or a magistrate or justice of the peace for the time being of the same zillah or district, the depositions and documents upon which the warrant was issued, or copies thereof, to be certified under the hand and seal of the magistrate or justice of the peace of the zillah or district in which the warrant was issued, shall, upon the requisition of the magistrate or justice of the peace before whom such person shall be carried, be forwarded to such magistrate or justice of the peace, and if the warrant be issued under an order of Government, and executed in a Presidency or place not under the Government issuing the order, notice of the arrest shall be forthwith communicated to such Government, who shall forward the requisition and any documents relating thereto in their possession to the Government having jurisdiction over the place of arrest, and such last mentioned Government shall have the same powers as the Government who made the order —Act VII, 1854, sec ix

221 If the person accused of the offence mentioned in any such order of Government be proved to have been convicted and sentenced for the offence charged by a court of justice in any part of her Majesty's dominions in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, and to have escaped before such sentence was carried into execution, the magistrate or justice of the peace, upon proof of such conviction and sentence, may issue a warrant for the apprehension of the person accused, and he may be arrested and committed in manner aforesaid without further proof, unless such person shall prove that the conviction or sentence has been reversed or annulled —Act VII, 1854, sec x

222 If it appear to the magistrate or justice of the peace before whom any prisoner shall be carried under this Act for an offence alleged to have been committed in any territories not under the government of the East-India Company, that particular circumstances exist which render it advisable that the case should be investigated by the magistrate or justice of the peace of a zillah or district nearer to such territories, he shall forthwith report the case and the particular circumstances to the Government, who shall either order such magistrate or justice of the peace to proceed with the case himself, or to send the case to be investigated by the magistrate or justice of the peace of any other district to be named by the Government In the latter case the prisoner shall be sent, or if the offence be bailable, shall give bail to appear before such last-mentioned magistrate or justice of the peace, who shall have power to deal with the case as if he had issued the warrant under which the prisoner shall be arrested, and all the depositions and documents shall be forwarded to such magistrate or justice of the peace. The order of Government shall be a sufficient justification for all persons acting in pursuance thereof —Act VII, 1854, sec xi

223 The Government by whom any order under Section I of this Act shall be made, may, if they think fit so to do, direct that copies of any depositions or exhibits which shall have been laid before them and shall have been certified to their satisfaction to be true copies of depositions or exhibits made or produced before a competent judicial officer of the territories in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, may be received in evidence of the criminality of the person accused, and such direction shall be sufficient authority for receiving the same in evidence.—Act VII, 1854, sec xii

224 The magistrate or justice of the peace, after committing the accused or holding him to bail as aforesaid for any offence committed out of the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, shall forthwith report the result of his proceedings to the Government to which he is subordinate, together with any remarks which he may deem necessary or proper to make upon the whole case He shall also forward with such report a copy of all depositions and documents used before him —Act VII, 1854, sec xiii

225 Upon receipt of the report, and after examining the case, the Government may, by order in writing to be signed by the secretary to the Government, order the accused either to be discharged or to be held to bail to appear in such court or place, and at such time or times, as the Government may think fit, or to be delivered up to some person authorized by the Government or officer making the requisition to receive and take charge of him. In cases falling within the provisions of Act I of 1849, the Government may order the person accused to be tried under that Act.—Act VII., 1854, sec xiv

226. If ordered to be delivered up, the person to whom the accused shall be ordered to be delivered shall not have the custody or charge of him so long as he shall remain in any part of the territories under the government of the East-India Company, but the accused shall be conveyed in custody through such last-mentioned territories towards the territories in which the offence shall be alleged to have been committed, in the same manner as a prisoner sent from the station of one district to that of another, and as soon as he shall have been conveyed to the frontiers of the territories under the government of the East-India Company, he shall be delivered over to some person authorized by the Government making the requisition to receive and take charge of him If no such person shall attend to receive the prisoner, the latter shall be taken before the nearest magistrate, who may order him to be discharged out of custody, and may provide him with such means of returning to the place where he was apprehended, or so near thereto as he may desire, as such magistrate may think necessary and suitable to his station in life—Act VII, 1854, sec xv.

227. Any magistrate or justice of the peace acting under the provisions of this Act shall issue all necessary warrants, orders, and directions for carrying this Act, and also any order made under it by the Government, into effect, under his signature and seal, or seal of office, if he shall have a seal of office, and all magistrates and officers acting in pursuance of this Act shall have and exercise the same powers as if the offence charged had been committed within the zillah or district subject to their jurisdiction, and in cases where the accused may have been held to bail, the magistrate may order the bail-bond to be renewed in such form as may be necessary to carry any order of Government into effect, and if such bail-bond shall not be renewed accordingly, may commit the person accused to prison for such period as may be necessary to carry such order into effect.—Act VII, 1854, sec xvi.

228. In case any person arrested under this Act shall escape out of custody, he may be retaken in any part of the territories under the government of the East India Company, in the same manner as if he had escaped from custody under process for an offence committed in that part of such territories in which he shall be found—Act VII., 1854, sec xvii

229 If a warrant be issued in any part of her Majesty's dominions not under the government of the East-India Company, for the arrest of any person for any heinous offence alleged to have been committed therein, or for the arrest of any person for any heinous offence of which he may have been convicted by a court of competent jurisdiction, in any such part of her Majesty's dominions, any magistrate or justice of the peace within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, may upon the production of such warrant and proof of the signature of the officer signing it, and of his authority to issue the same, and without any further proof and without any order of Government, issue his warrant for the apprehension of the person accused, and after his apprehension may proceed to commit or hold him to bail in manner aforesaid, and to take such other proceedings as aforesaid as the case may require, but the person accused shall not be delivered over as aforesaid without an order of Government. The Government in such case shall have the same powers as if the proceedings had been taken in pursuance of an order of Government issued under this Act—Act VII., 1854, sec. xviii

230 In cases in which the immediate apprehension within the British territories in India of any person accused of having committed any heinous offence mentioned in Section XXI of this Act out of such territories shall, in the judgment of a magistrate or justice of the peace having jurisdiction in any part of such territories in which the person accused shall be found, be necessary for the ends of justice, the person accused may, without an order of Government, be apprehended or proceeded against in the same manner as for an offence charged to have been committed in the place where the person accused shall be found; and after his apprehension he may be committed or held to bail in manner aforesaid, and such other proceedings as aforesaid may be taken as the case may require, but the person accused shall not be delivered up without an order of Government. The Government in such case shall have the same powers as if the proceedings had been taken in pursuance of an order of Government issued under this Act—Act VII, 1854, sec xix.

231. If any person imprisoned under this Act shall not either be delivered up or discharged or brought to trial within two calendar months after his committal, it shall be lawful for the principal court of original jurisdiction in criminal cases in the district in which he shall be imprisoned, upon application by or on behalf of the prisoner, to order him to be discharged out of custody, either upon giving such bail as the court may order, or without bail, unless sufficient cause shall be shown to the court why such discharge ought not to be ordered. Provided that no such order shall be made until after notice of the application or of the intention to make the same shall have been given to Government or to the secretary or one of the secretaries thereof.—Act VII, 1854, sec. xx

232. The words "heinous offence" in this Act shall be deemed to include treason against her Majesty committed in any part of her Majesty's dominions, murder, attempting to murder, rape, great personal violence, maiming, dacoity, thuggee, robbery, burglary, knowingly receiving property obtained by dacoity, robbery or burglary, cattle-stealing, breaking and entering a dwelling-house and stealing therein, arson, setting fire to a village, house, or town, forgery or uttering forged documents, counterfeiting current coin, knowingly uttering base or counterfeit coin, perjury, subornation of perjury, embezzlement—whether by public officers or other persons, and being an accessory to any of the above-mentioned offences.—Act VII., 1854, sec. xxi.

233. The words "heinous offence" in this Act shall also be deemed to include any offence for which by any treaty in force between her Majesty or the East-India Company, and any foreign prince or state, her Majesty or the East-India Company, shall, at the time of making any requisition as aforesaid, be bound to deliver up offenders to the foreign prince or state making the same, and any other offence which, in the judgment of the Government to whom the requisition shall be made, shall be serious or aggravated, and for which the person accused cannot be tried within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company under the provisions of Act No. I., 1849.—Act VII., 1854, sec. xxii.

234. If by any such treaty her Majesty or the East-India Company shall be bound to deliver up to any foreign prince or state any person liable to be proceeded against by the laws of such foreign prince or state, in any case not expressly provided for by this Act, or in any manner other than that provided by this Act, it shall be lawful for the Government of any part of the territories under the government of the East-India Company, in which such person may be found, upon requisition made by or on the part of such foreign prince or state, to adopt such proceedings for carrying such treaty into effect, and for the surrender of such person, and for making any preliminary inquiry into the charge contained in the requisition, as it shall think fit, and any such order of the Government in writing, under the hand of one of the secretaries of such Government, shall be a sufficient authority and justification for all acts to be done in execution thereof.—Act VII., 1854, sec. xxiii.

SESSIONS COURT.

CONSTITUTION AND JURISDICTION.

1. It is competent to the governors of the presidencies of Fort William in Bengal, and of Agra respectively, by an order in council, to invest the judges of the zillahs or cities with full powers to conduct the duties of the sessions, and to transfer, by such order in council, any part or the whole of the duties connected with criminal justice to any session judge, and to define the powers which shall be exercised by the commissioners of circuit, and by the session judge respectively.—Reg. VII., 1831, sec. ii.; and Act VII., 1835.

2. Session judges so appointed shall take the following oath before such person as the Governor-General in Council may direct, and shall be guided in the conduct of their duties by all the rules applicable to the offices of session judges:—

"I, A.B., solemnly swear that I will truly and faithfully execute the duties of judge of the Sessions Court of ———; that I will administer justice according to the Regulations that have been or may be enacted by the Governor-General in Council, to the best of my ability, knowledge, and judgment, without fear, favour, promise, or hope of reward; and that I will not receive, directly or indirectly, any present or nuzzer, either in money or in effects of any kind, from any party in any suit or prosecution, or from any person whomsoever, on account of any suit or prosecution to be instituted, or which may be depending, or have been decided in the Sessions Court of which I am judge; nor will I knowingly permit any person or persons under my authority, or in my immediate service, to receive, directly or indirectly, any present or nuzzer, either in money or in effects of any kind, from any party in any suit or prosecution, or from any person whomsoever, on account of any suit or prosecution to be instituted, or which may be depending or have been decided in the said Court; nor will I, directly or indirectly, derive any advantage or emolument from my station, excepting such as the orders of Government do or may authorize; So help me God."—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xxxiv.; and Reg. VII., 1831, sec. iii.

3. The session judges shall possess all the powers formerly confided to judges of circuit or to commissioners of circuit holding sessions, as the same have been from time to time modified and amended by the Regulations and Acts still in force.—Reg. VII., 1831, sec. v. (adapted).

4. The session judges shall try every commitment that may be made by the magistrates of their respective jurisdictions as soon after it is made as may be convenient, and jail deliveries for each district shall be held at least once in every month.—Reg. VII., 1831, sec. iv.

5. Whenever the judge of any zillah or city may have been invested with the powers of session judge, and any magistrates or joint magistrates, having jurisdiction limited to that district, or extending to other districts, may be stationed at any place within the jurisdiction of the judge, all cases committed for trial by such magistrates or joint magistrates shall be submitted to the judge through the magistrate at the sudder station as soon after commitment as practicable, and the judge is authorized and required to try all such cases under the same rules as if committed by the magistrate at the sudder station.—Reg. VII., 1831, sec. xii., cl. 1.

6. Provided that if, on account of distance or other cause, it be deemed expedient to limit the jurisdiction of the judge to cases originating within the limits of his own district, or to exclude from his jurisdiction all the commitments made by such magistrates or joint magistrates, and to transfer them for trial to the judge of another zillah or city, or to leave them to be decided by the commissioner of the division at the station of those magistrates or joint magistrates, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to direct the same by an order in council.—Reg. VII., 1831, sec. xii., cl. 2.

7. No session judge, whether fully appointed or officiating, shall on any account preside at the trial of any case in which the prisoner or prisoners may have been committed for trial by himself, in his capacity of superintendent of police, magistrate, joint magistrate, or assistant magistrate. In all such cases, the trial shall be postponed until a report of the case shall be made to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, who will determine what provision shall be made for the trial of the case.—Reg. IV., 1823, sec. vi.

8. It shall be at all times competent to the Governor-General in Council to direct any commissioner or other judge, not being the magistrate by whom the commitments were made, to hold the sessions of jail delivery for any city or zillah, with the powers and authority of a Sessions Judge, whenever the arrangement may appear to be necessary for the prompt and efficient administration of justice.—Reg. I., 1829, sec. v., cl. 2.

9. Whenever a commissioner of circuit shall have received authority, either from Government or the Nizamut Adawlut, to hold the trial of any commitments made by a joint magistrate at any other than the station of such joint magistrate, he shall transmit to that officer an authenticated copy of the letter containing such authority, with the necessary instructions for his guidance; and all joint magistrates are strictly prohibited from removing any prisoners under commitment for trial, or the proceedings relating thereto, until they have been furnished with a copy of the authority aforesaid.—Reg. II., 1831, sec. iii., cl. 1.

10. The commissioners of circuit are also required in the cases above adverted to, as well as in all cases in which they may have been specially authorized to hold a trial out of the ordinary course prescribed by the Regulations, to record on the proceedings of such trial an authenticated copy of the authority under which the same may have been held.—Reg. II., 1831, sec. iii., cl. 2.

11. The several commissioners of circuit appointed under the provisions of Regulation I., 1829, are authorized and required, without making any previous reference for sanction either to Government or to the Nizamut Adawlut, to hold jail deliveries as often as may be convenient for any of the districts within their divisions, whenever, owing to absence, indisposition, or other cause, the judge of the zillah or city, who may have been nominated to the office of session judge, shall have been unable, for a period exceeding one month, to perform that duty, or whenever such judge may be prevented from trying any case or cases by reason of his having made the commitment or commitments in his capacity of magistrate or joint magistrate, or from any other cause.—Reg. VII., 1831, sec. xiii., cl. 2.

12. The session judges are to submit to the Nizamut Adawlut such rules as may appear to them calculated for the better regulation of the trials of prisoners, or the administration of justice. —Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lxv.

PROCEDURE ON TRIALS, AND REFERENCE TO THE NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

13. The proceedings on the trial of prisoners are to be conducted in the following manner: The charge against the prisoner, his confession (which is always to be received with circumspection and tenderness) if he plead "guilty," or, if he plead "not guilty," the evidence on the part of the prosecutor, the prisoner's defence, and any evidence which he may have to adduce, being all heard before him, the cauzy and mufty (who are to be present during the whole of the trial except in cases in which the attendance and futwah of the law officers shall be dispensed with under the provisions of the Regulations in that behalf) are to write at the end of the record of the proceedings the futwah or law as applicable to the circumstances of the case, and to attest it with their seals and signatures. The Court shall attentively consider such futwah, and if it shall appear to them consonant to natural justice, and also conformable to the Mahomedan law, they are to pass sentence in the terms of the futwah (except in cases in which they are expressly directed not to pass sentence), and to issue their warrant to the magistrate for the execution of it, without further reference or delay. Provided, however, that in all cases where a prisoner may be condemned by such sentence to suffer death or imprisonment for life, the Court shall transmit a copy of the sentence, and of all the papers and proceedings read or recorded during the trial, to the Nizamut Adawlut, and shall not execute such sentence, but shall wait the final sentence of that Court.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xlvii.

14. Every person on trial for the commission of any offence shall be admitted to defend himself, either personally or by his authorized agent, and after the close of the case for the prosecution, to make full answer and defence thereto, either personally or by his authorized agent. —Act XXXVIII., 1850, sec. i.

15. Prosecutors shall generally attend in person to conduct their prosecutions before the Sessions Court; but the Court, subject to such rules as shall from time to time be made for their guidance by the Nizamut Adawlut, may allow any prosecution to be conducted by an authorized agent.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xlviii.; Act XXXVIII., 1850, sec. ii.

16. In those courts in which any person now has by law the right of employing whomsoever he can employ as counsel or pleader, nothing herein provided shall be deemed to restrict that right: in all other cases, those persons only shall be deemed authorized agents who are either advocates of one of the Supreme Courts of Justice established by royal charter, or authorized pleaders of the Civil Courts of the East-India Company, or by leave of the Court, magistrate, or other person before whom the prisoner is on trial, any other person who is employed by the prosecutor or prisoner as his agent.—Act XXXVIII., 1850, sec. iii.

17. The foregoing rules shall not be deemed to dispense with the presence of any prosecutor or accused person, when the presence of such prosecutor or accused person is now by law required. —Act XXXVIII., 1850, sec. iv.

18. If the prosecutor be a Mahomedan or Hindoo woman of a rank or situation in life which, according to the customs of the country, would render it improper to compel them to appear in a court of justice, and if the case be of such a nature as to admit of its being taken by commission, the judge shall not require the attendance of such woman, but shall depute persons to take their evidence in the manner prescribed by the Mahomedan law.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xlviii.

NOTE.—In respect of procuring the attendance and evidence of witnesses, and the committing to custody and fining witnesses who refuse to attend or give evidence, the Sessions Court are to be guided by the rules of sec. vi., Reg. IV., 1793, as applied to the procedure in those respects of the zillah and city magistrates, the Sessions Courts, and the Courts of Nizamut Adawlut, by sec. ii., Reg. L., 1803, and by the rules of sec. vii., Reg. IV., 1797, enacted for the guidance of the Sessions Courts and the magistrates in the examination of witnesses.—See "RULES OF PROCEDURE COMMON TO ALL THE CRIMINAL COURTS."

19. If the attendance of any witness on the part of the prosecutor or the prisoner, whose evidence the law may not allow to be taken by commission, cannot be procured, or if any witness cannot be found, the judges may postpone the trial until the next sitting of the Court, provided there shall appear to them sufficient cause for so doing. If the attendance of such witness cannot then be procured, or if he shall not have been found, the judges may, in like manner, postpone the trial a second time. But if the judges and their law officers shall be of opinion that the evidence of any witness or witnesses who may be absent is not necessary, they shall complete the trial without the evidence of such witness or witnesses.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xlix.

20. The magistrates are to pay to all prosecutors and witnesses who may appear to be actually in need of such assistance, a daily allowance of two annas each, during their attendance on the Sessions Court; and the same allowance for as many days as, in their opinion, may be sufficient for such prosecutors and witnesses to come from and return to their respective homes.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xxvi.

21. The judges of the Sessions Court are to refer to the cauzy and mufty of their respective courts all questions on points of law that may arise during the course of any trial, and respecting which no specific rules shall have been enacted by the Governor-General in Council, and shall regulate their proceedings by the opinions which may be delivered by those officers. If such opinions shall appear to the judges contrary to the principles of natural justice or of the Mahomedan law, they are, nevertheless, to be guided by them, and after completing the trial, and obtaining the futwah of the law officers upon the case, they shall, without passing sentence upon it, transmit the proceedings and futwah to the Nizamut Adawlut, with a separate letter stating their objections to such opinions or futwah, and wait the sentence of that court.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. liv.

22. On the conclusion of the trial or trials, the session judge shall proceed to pass sentence of conviction or acquittal, or to refer the trial to the Nizamut Adawlut if required to do so under the existing rules.—Reg. VII., 1831, sec. vi.

23. Whenever a criminal trial may be referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut, by reason of the session judge differing in opinion with his law officer as to the conviction or acquittal of one or more prisoners included in the same trial, the sentence in which, in regard to the other prisoners, may be within his competence under the Regulations in force, the session judges are required to pass such sentence as they may deem just and proper, and within their competence, in regard to those prisoners whom they may convict or acquit, in concurrence with the futwah of their law officers, and in their reference to the Nizamut Adawlut regarding any other prisoners included in the same trial, they are enjoined to state specifically their opinion on the guilt or innocence of the prisoners; with the grounds of their differing from the futwah; as also to point out, in their report accompanying the trial, those parts of the proceedings and evidence which may affect the prisoners in respect to whom the case is referred, for the consideration and sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut. —Reg. IX., 1831, sec. iv., cl. 3.

24. In the several cases following, the judge of sessions, after the trial shall have been completed, shall not pass sentence, but shall transmit the proceedings to the Nizamut Adawlut, and wait the sentence of that Court:—

In all trials in which any of the prisoners convicted are liable to a sentence of death, or of imprisonment, and transportation for life.

In all cases in which the session judge shall disapprove of any part of the proceedings held on the trial, or of the futwah delivered by the law officers, as well in cases in which any opinion given by the law officer on any point of law that may have arisen, and had been referred to them during the course of any trial, and respecting which no specific rules shall have been enacted by the Governor-General in Council, shall appear to the judge to be contrary to the principles of natural justice or to the Mahomedan law, or otherwise objectionable.

In all cases in which the evidence given on a trial shall be deemed incompetent by the Mahomedan law, solely on the ground of the persons giving such evidence not professing the Mahomedan religion, and in cases in which the conviction of the prisoner depends exclusively or principally on evidence objected to by the Mahomedan law officer, on the ground of the witness being a police officer or an officer of Government of any description, or any other ground of exception in the Mahomedan rules, of evidence which may appear to the session judge unreasonable or insufficient.

In all cases in which the Sessions Court are directed not to pass sentence, the judges are to acompany the record of the trial ordered to be transmitted to the Nizamut Adawlut, with a letter containing their opinion on the merits of the case.

In trials referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut, if the prisoner or prisoners convicted, or any of the prisoners convicted on the same trial, be liable to a sentence of death, the judge shall not pass any sentence (except for the acquittal and discharge of any prisoners not convicted), but shall transmit the trial, with his opinion thereupon, for the sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut. If none of them be liable to a sentence of death, the session judge shall pass sentence on the prisoner or prisoners so convicted. But such sentences, in all trials referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut, shall not be deemed final, nor shall any warrant be issued for carrying the same into execution, until they be confirmed by the Court of Nizamut Adawlut. Moreover, whenever the trial of a principal in any crime may be referred for the sentence or confirmation of the Nizamut Adawlut, and an accomplice in the same crime shall have been brought to trial and convicted at the same time with the principal, the Sessions Court shall not carry into execution their sentence upon the accomplice so convicted, but shall wait the confirmation or final sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut, as well respecting the accomplice as the principal. Provided, however, that this restriction be not understood to prevent the judges of the Sessions Court from passing a final sentence of acquittal upon any prisoners charged as accomplices, whom they may acquit of such charge in concurrence with their law officers; or from directing the release of any prisoners so acquitted, notwithstanding the reference of the trial of the principal to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. IX., 1793, secs. xlvii., liii., liv., lvi., and lvii.; Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. vi., cls. 1 & 2; Reg. I., 1811, sec. v.; Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. v.

25. Whenever the session judges may refer to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut the trial of a prisoner or prisoners whom they may consider proper objects of capital punishment, of imprisonment and transportation for life, or of a mitigation of punishment, or of an extension, mitigation, or remission of punishment in any case whatever, they shall be careful to notice the same in their letters accompanying the trials referred; and shall state at large the grounds of their judgment, whether for or against the prisoner, with such of the facts and circumstances in evidence upon the trial as may be necessary to explain the case of the prisoner, whose punishment is proposed to be extended, mitigated, or remitted.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. vi., cl. 3.

26. In all cases in which a person charged with a criminal offence, and brought to trial before a Sessions Court, shall be acquitted of the charge by the futwah of the Mahomedan law officer present at the trial, and the judge before whom the trial may be held, on full consideration of the evidence, and of all the circumstances of the case, shall be of opinion that the proof against the prisoner, whether founded on his free and voluntary confession, or on the testimony of credible witnesses, or on circumstances of strong presumption, is sufficient to convict the prisoner of the whole, or any part of the charge, so as to render him a proper object of punishment, the judge shall not pass any sentence; but shall transmit without delay the whole of the proceedings on the commitment and trial with the futwah of the law officer, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut; and shall state in a letter to that court the specific crime or crimes which the judge may consider to be established against the prisoner.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. ii.

27. In all trials in which recourse may be had to trial by punchayet, assessors, or jury, and the futwa of a Mahomedan law officer is dispensed with, if the crime of which the prisoner is convicted be one which the judge is not specifically empowered by the Regulations to punish, he shall not proceed to pass sentence, but shall refer the case for the consideration of the Nizamut Adawlut, stating at length in the proceedings the opinion of the punchayet, assessors, or jury, and his own opinion as to the crime proved, and the nature and extent of the punishment which should be awarded.—Reg. VI., 1832, sec. iv. cl. 1.

28. It shall be competent to a session judge to refer to the Nizamut Adawlut any trial in which he may consider the sentence he is empowered to pass inadequate to the guilt of the prisoner, any thing in the existing Regulations to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act XXXI., 1841, sec. vi.

29. The Sessions Court are to examine the lists of trials held on the preceding session, which may have been referred by them to the Nizamut Adawlut; and in the event of their not having received the orders or sentence of that Court on any trial so referred, they are to report the same to the Court, that in the event of the proceedings not having been received by the Court, duplicates of such proceedings, or of the sentences or orders passed thereon, which may have miscarried, may be forwarded or issued before the commencement of the ensuing session, that the sentence or orders of the Nizamut Adawlut on such trials may be forthwith passed or executed.—Reg. XXXVI., 1795, sec. vi.

30. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council and to the Nizamut Adawlut to order a trial to be brought on at the station or jail delivery of any city or zillah other than that within which the crime may have been perpetrated, whenever there shall appear sufficient reason for so ordering, whether such measure may promote the ends of justice or tend to the general convenience of the parties and witnesses without hindrance thereto; and the trial held and sentence passed in consequence shall be of the same legal effect as if the whole had been conducted at the station of the district within which the crime was perpetrated.—Reg. VIII., 1822, secs. iii. and iv.

31. The Sessions Court are to transmit to the Nizamut Adawlut the proceedings on the trial of all prisoners whom they may sentence to suffer death or who may, in their opinion, be deserving of capital punishment, within ten days after the trial is completed, or as much earlier as from the state of business may be practicable; and in the transmission of trials to the Nizamut Adawlut, they shall, as far as practicable, give a preference to those in which the prisoners may have been sentenced to or be liable to suffer death.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lviii.; Reg. IV., 1797, sec. xiii.

32. The session judges shall, as soon as possible after the close of any trial referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut, and with no further delay than may be necessary to transcribe the proceedings held thereupon, transmit to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut a complete and exact counterpart of the original record of all proceedings held and papers received relative to such trial, with an English letter, stating their opinion on the evidence and on the guilt or innocence of the prisoners. The record to be so transmitted is to be authenticated by the signature of the judge and seal of the law officer before whom the trial may have been held, and is to include the whole of the proceedings held before the Sessions Court, with every examination, exhibit, or material paper, of whatever denomination, taken by or delivered to that Court. The whole of the proceedings and papers received from the magistrate upon the case referred, are also to be annexed to and transmitted with the proceedings of the Sessions Court; but any variations between the depositions of the witnesses before the magistrates and Sessions Courts are to be carefully noticed on the proceedings of the latter; and any confessions of the prisoners before the magistrate, any inquest taken in cases of homicide, or any other evidence appearing on the proceedings of the magistrates, are to be entered with the necessary proofs on the proceedings of the Sessions Court.—Reg. X., 1799, sec. ii.

33. The Sessions Court, in the transmission of their proceedings to the Nizamut Adawlut, are to be guided by such forms and instructions as they may receive from that Court.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. xiv.

MISCELLANEOUS DUTIES.

34. The Sessions Court are to report to the Nizamut Adawlut every instance in which it shall appear to them that the magistrates have been guilty of neglect or misconduct in the discharge of their duty. The Courts are also to acquaint the Nizamut Adawlut whenever the magistrates omit or refuse to obey their orders.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lxiii.

35. The session judges are to transmit to the Nizamut Adawlut a report containing such observations as they may have made, regarding the effect of the existing system for administering the criminal laws, in the prevention and punishment of crimes; as well as respecting the state of the jails, the treatment and employment of the prisoners, and such other matters as they may think deserving the notice of the Court.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. xii.

36. The session judges shall not be required to furnish to the Nizamut Adawlut any other statements than those of convictions and acquittals, which were furnished by the commissioners of circuit, which statements shall be furnished monthly. All other periodical reports and statements, whether on the subject of the jails or other matters, which the latter authorities have been required to furnish under the Regulations or circular orders, shall still be furnished by them, including the half-yearly reports on the state of the police, and subjects of a general nature; and the several commissioners are required as heretofore to visit periodically the sudder stations of the several districts within their respective divisions at least twice in each year, and at intervals of not less than three months.—Reg. VII., 1831, sec. vii.

37. The Sessions Courts may order the removal of any public native officer who may be convicted of a criminal offence, if the conduct of such officer appear from any proceedings before the said Court to be such as to require his removal from the public situation held by him; and on the same being notified to the European public officer, under whom such native officer may have been employed, it shall be the duty of such European officer to take measures for the appointment of a successor to the vacant office, in conformity with the Regulations.—Reg. XXV., 1814, sec. xv.; Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. vii., cl. 8.

NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

GENERAL POWERS AND RULES FOR DEALING WITH CASES REFERRED BY THE SESSION JUDGES.

NOTE.—The constitution of the Nizamut Adawlut is framed in conjunction with the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and will be found under the head "SUDDER COURT." Their powers and duties in the punishment of offenders will be found under the head "SPECIFIC OFFENCES."

1. The court shall meet once in every week, or as often as the state of business may require, and a regular diary shall be kept of their proceedings.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lxviii.

2. The court is empowered and directed to take cognizance of all matters relating to the administration of justice in criminal cases and the police of the country, and to submit to the Governor-General and Council such regulations regarding them as it may deem advisable.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lxxii.

3. The sentences of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut shall be regulated by the Mahomedan law, excepting in cases in which a deviation from it may be expressly directed by any Regulation.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lxxiv.

4. The head cauzy and the mufties shall assemble at the office of the register three times in every week, or oftener if necessary, and the register shall lay before them Persian copies of the proceedings in the trials that may be referred by the Sessions Courts for the final sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut whenever the court shall so direct. In such cases, after duly considering the proceedings, and previous to leaving the office of the register, they shall state in writing, at the foot of the record of each trial, whether the futwah of the law officers is consistent with the evidence and conformable to the Mahomedan law. If it be not, they shall state what futwah ought in their opinion to have been delivered, and subscribe their names, and affix their seals to their respective opinions. The register shall submit the proceedings, in the cases so revised by the head cauzy and the mufties, to the Nizamut Adawlut at their next meeting, when the court, after perusing the proceedings of the Sessions Court, the futwah of the law officers of that court, and the futwah of the head cauzy and the mufties of the Nizamut Adawlut, shall pass the final sentence. Provided, however, that it shall not be necessary that a futwah be filed by the law officers in every case that may be referred for the final sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut. The judge or judges by whom the proceedings shall be reviewed, shall exercise their discretion in requiring a futwah or otherwise, except in cases in which exemption from the futwah is prescribed.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lxxvii.; Reg. VI., 1832, sec. vi.

5. The Mahomedan law officers of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut shall continue to deliver their joint futwah upon the trials referred to that court, as far as may be practicable. But, whenever, from the number of trials in reference, it may be requisite for their speedy decision that they should be divided amongst the law officers for revision, it shall be competent to any one of the law officers to deliver a futwah thereupon. Provided that, if any one of the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut, on revising the proceedings held upon the trial, shall not concur with the law officer of the Sessions Court before whom the trial may have been held, as to the conviction of the prisoner, he shall not write the futwah until one or more of the other law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut can deliver the same in concert with him, after perusal of the proceedings.—Reg. VIII., 1808, sec. vii.

6. In cases referred to the Nizamut Adawlut on the ground that the evidence given on the trial was deemed incompetent by the Mahomedan law, solely on account of the persons giving such evidence not professing the Mahomedan religion, or on the ground of the witness being a police-officer, or an officer of Government of any description, the Nizamut Adawlut, provided they approve of the proceedings held on the trial, shall pass such sentence as they would have passed had the witness who had been so deemed incompetent, been of the Mahomedan persuasion.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lvi., and Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. v.

7. In all criminal trials before the Court of Nizamut Adawlut (except for crimes against the State, in which cases the proceedings held upon the trial are required to be submitted with the sentence of the court, for the orders of Government), if the futwah of the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut, or the sentence of an assembly of hill chiefs in zillah Boglepore (held under the provisions of Regulation I., 1827), shall declare a prisoner or prisoners liable to a more severe punishment than on due consideration of the evidence and all the circumstances of the case may appear to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut to be just, or if a prisoner or prisoners (not charged with a crime against the State) shall in any case before the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, under the provisions of the laws and Regulations in force, be liable to a more severe punishment than may appear to the court equitable, though not specifically declared by the futwah of the law officers or sentence of the hill chiefs in zillah Boglepore, it shall be competent to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut to grant such remission or mitigation of punishment as may appear just and proper according to the evidence and circumstances of the case, and to pass sentence accordingly, provided that, in all such cases, the Court of Nizamut Adawlut shall record the grounds upon which a remission or mitigation of punishment may be adjudged under the discretion vested in the court, and shall communicate the same to the Sessions Court (or magistrate of zillah Boglepore) before whom the trial may have been held, with directions to cause the same to be made known in open court to the prisoner or prisoners concerned —Reg XIV, 1810, sec iii

8 Nothing contained in this or any other Regulation shall be understood to preclude the Governor-General in Council from the exercise of the power reserved to the chief executive authority, in all cases when it may appear proper to pardon any person charged with or convicted of a criminal offence In all such cases, a letter from the Secretary to the Government in the judicial department, addressed to the register of the Nizamut Adawlut, or to any zillah or city magistrate, or to any other local authority, shall be deemed a sufficient voucher of the pardon thereby notified, and shall be observed accordingly —Reg XIV, 1810, sec vi

9 In cases in which the accused had been acquitted by the futwah of the law officers of the Sessions Court, but the judge being of opinion that the evidence was sufficient to convict the prisoner had referred the trial to the Nizamut Adawlut, the Mahomedan law officers of that court shall write their futwah thereupon, as in other trials referred under the general Regulations — Reg XVII, 1817, secs ii and iii

10. In the foregoing cases and in all trials referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, when the futwah of one or more of the law officers of that court may acquit a prisoner of the whole or any part of the charge preferred against him, and two or more judges of that court, on a deliberate consideration of the evidence and circumstances of the case, shall concur in opinion that the proof against the prisoner so acquitted, whether founded on his free and voluntary confession, or on the testimony of credible witnesses, or on circumstances of strong presumption, is sufficient to convict him of the whole, or any part of the charge, and that he is in every respect a proper object of punishment, the judges so concurring in opinion are declared competent to convict and pass sentence of punishment upon the prisoner, according to the nature and degree of his offence, and the provisions applicable thereto, in the laws and Regulations in force, in like manner as if he had been declared convicted by the futwah of the law officers —Reg XVII, 1817, sec iv

11 The foregoing rule shall be considered to extend to any case in which the futwah of the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut may declare the legal penalty or punishment generally barred, by reason of a doubt as to the prisoner's sanity when he committed the act charged, provided two or more judges of the Nizamut Adawlut, on due consideration of the evidence in such case, shall be satisfied that there is no sufficient ground to believe that the prisoner was insane when he committed the act so charged, and that he is a proper object of punishment—Reg IV, 1822 sec vii

12 Whenever two or more judges of the Nizamut Adawlut, on a deliberate consideration of any futwah of their law officers, convicting a prisoner, may consider such prisoner to have been convicted on insufficient or unsatisfactory evidence, it shall be competent to the said judges to acquit the prisoner.—Reg. IV, 1822, sec ii

13 Whenever a criminal trial may be referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut by reason of the session judge differing in opinion with his law officer as to the conviction or acquittal of one or more prisoners included in the same trial, the sentence in which, in regard to the other prisoners, may be within his competence under the Regulations in force, it shall be necessary for the Nizamut Adawlut, or for a single judge of that Court, to revise only such parts of the proceedings on the trial as relate to the prisoner or prisoners in respect to whom the reference may be made — Reg IX, 1831, sec iv, cl 3

14 The register, within three days after the passing of the final sentence, or sooner if practicable, shall transmit a copy of it, under the seal of the Nizamut Adawlut, and attested with his official signature, to the judge of the Sessions Court, who shall immediately issue a warrant to the proper magistrate to cause the sentence to be carried into execution The magistrate, upon the receipt of the warrant, shall cause the sentence to be executed without delay, and return the warrant to the Sessions Court, with an endorsement attested with his official seal and signature, certifying the manner in which the sentence has been executed All warrants so returned are to remain with the Sessions Court, excepting warrants for the infliction of capital punishment, which are to be forwarded by the judges to the Nizamut Adawlut —Reg. IX, 1793, sec lxxviii

POWERS OF SINGLE JUDGES.

15. The sittings of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut shall be held before two or more judges, whenever the number of trials and other business depending before the Court may admit of it. But whenever the number of depending trials may render it necessary for their speedy determination that the judges should hold separate sittings, it shall be competent to any one judge to hold a sitting of the court, and to pass orders or sentence, in conformity with the Regulations, upon any trial under reference to it, as well as upon miscellaneous references to or from the Sessions Court and magistrates upon petitions receivable by the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, and generally upon all matters appertaining to the cognizance of that Court under the Regulations in force. Provided, however, that if the single judge so sitting shall not concur with the session judge before whom the trial was held, with respect to the conviction of the prisoner, or if he be of opinion that the decision or order of a Sessions Court, magistrate, or other public officer, should be reversed or altered, he is not to pass a sentence or final order without the concurrence of one or more of the other judges of the court: nor is he in any case, by his single authority, to reverse or alter a former decision or order of one or more of the judges of the court.—Reg. VIII., 1808, sec. vi.; Reg. XXV., 1814, sec. xvii.

16. The foregoing provision, which includes all instances of a difference of opinion upon the guilt or innocence of a prisoner, is now extended to all cases in which the session judge, before whom the trial shall have been held, may recommend a mitigation of punishment, upon grounds which a single judge of the Nizamut Adawlut, holding the sitting of that court, may deem insufficient. In such cases, the opinion of a second judge of the Nizamut Adawlut shall be taken upon the mitigation proposed by the session judge; and in giving such opinion he will examine the proceedings upon the trial as far as may be necessary to enable him to form a judgment upon the stated grounds of mitigation.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xvii.

17. When the judge of a Sessions Court, referring a criminal trial to the Nizamut Adawlut, shall state circumstances of extenuation, or other special grounds for a mitigation of punishment, in behalf of any prisoner or prisoners, and a single judge of the Nizamut Adawlut holding the sitting of that court, shall concur in the mitigation of punishment recommended by the session judge, it shall be competent to the judge so concurring to grant the proposed mitigation, and to pass sentence accordingly; in like manner as two judges of the Nizamut Adawlut are declared competent to grant a mitigation, or remission of punishment, whenever it may appear just and proper, under the provisions contained in Section III., Regulation XIV., 1810.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xviii., cl. 1.

18. A single judge of the Nizamut Adawlut, holding the sitting of that court on a criminal trial under Section VI., Regulation VIII., 1808, is further declared competent to mitigate or remit any part of the prescribed punishment, if it appear to him just and proper on the grounds stated in Section III., Regulation XIV., 1810, although a mitigation or remission may not be proposed by the session judge referring the trial; but in such cases the grounds on which a mitigation or remission of punishment may be granted shall be recorded and communicated to the Sessions Court, for the information of the prisoner or prisoners, as required by the above-mentioned section of Regulation XIV., 1810.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xviii., cl. 2.

19. In trials referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, which may include one or more prisoners liable to a sentence of death, it shall not be competent to a single judge of the Nizamut Adawlut to pass the final sentence, which in all such cases shall be passed by at least two concurring judges of the court.—Reg. XII., 1825, sec. viii.

20. If a single judge of the Nizamut Adawlut concur in opinion with the session judge, whether for conviction or acquittal, it shall be competent to such single judge to pass a final sentence, whatever may be the futwah of the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut, except for capital punishment, which as heretofore shall, in all cases, require the concurrent opinion of two judges of the court.—Reg. IX., 1831, sec. iv., cl. 4.

21. Provided, however, that it shall not be competent to a single judge to convict and sentence to punishment any prisoner in opposition to the opinion of the session judge, if the latter be for acquittal, or otherwise in favour of the prisoner.—Reg. IX., 1831, sec. iv., cl. 5.

22. In the cases above referred to, the session judges will, as heretofore, suspend execution of any sentence of punishment they pass in concurrence with the law officer, until the final sentence or orders of the Nizamut Adawlut shall have been received upon the trial referred to that court; nothing in this Regulation being intended to preclude the Nizamut Adawlut from revising the whole proceedings in the cases in question, if there shall appear sufficient grounds for so doing.—Reg. IX., 1831, sec. iv., cl. 6.

NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.—POWERS OF SINGLE JUDGES.

23. Nothing in the foregoing paragraphs shall be understood to prohibit a single judge in any case of difficulty or importance, in which he may deem it expedient and proper that the matter at issue should be decided by two or more judges of the court, from recording his own opinion thereon, and referring the case to another judge.—Reg. IX., 1831, sec. ii., cl. 6, and sec. iv., cl. 7.

24. Whenever any offender shall have been sentenced in the first instance by a session judge to imprisonment for life, or whenever a session judge shall have recommended that sentence of imprisonment for life be passed upon any offender, it shall be competent to a single judge of the Sudder Court to sentence such offender at the same time to transportation beyond sea for life, and such single judge is directed to sentence such offender at the same time to transportation beyond sea for life unless there should be special reasons inducing him to think such offender not a proper subject for transportation, which special reasons he is further directed to record.—Act XIV., 1844, sec. ii.

CRIMINAL JUDICATURE.

SPECIFIC OFFENCES.

MURDER AND HOMICIDE.

1. In trials for murder before the Sessions Court, the law officer who had been present during the trial shall be required by the judge to declare whether the prisoner is convicted of the charge against him, and shall subscribe his answer on the record of the court's proceedings. If the law officer shall declare the prisoner to be not guilty, the judge shall pass an immediate sentence of acquittal and order him to be discharged; unless he shall see cause to disapprove such verdict, in which case he is to refer the proceedings on the trial for the sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut. If the answer of the law officer shall declare the prisoner to be convicted of wilful murder (kutl-amd), the judge, without making any reference to the heir or heirs of the slain, shall require the law officer to declare the punishment to which the prisoner convicted would be liable according to the Mahomedan law, supposing all the heirs of the slain entitled to prosecute the prisoner for kissaas to have attended and prosecuted him, at an age competent to demand kissaas, and to have demanded kissaas. The futwah of the law officer upon this reference shall be also subscribed on the record of the court's proceedings, and whether the futwah declare the prisoner liable to suffer death, as must be the case in most instances of conviction of wilful murder under the supposed demand of kissaas by the heirs of the slain, or whether it declare the prisoner not liable to capital punishment, from the heirs of the slain not being legally entitled to demand kissaas, or the failure of retaliation from the parties standing in the relation of parent and child, or master and slave, or otherwise, the judge is, in either case, to refer the proceedings for the sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut. Should the answer of the law officer to the first reference acquit the prisoner of wilful murder, but convict him of homicide, of any one of the four denominations distinguished in the Mahomedan law (viz. shibeh-amd, kutl-khota, kutl-kayeem-mokam-ba-khota, and kutl-ba-subbub), the law officer is to declare the prescribed penalty for the same according to the Mahomedan law; and if his futwah should declare the deyut, or price of blood, to be the whole or part of the legal punishment, the Sessions Court is to commute the fine to imprisonment with hard labour, for such period, not exceeding seven years, as it may consider adequate to the offence; and its sentences in such instances, as in all others according to the existing Regulations, are to be carried into execution without reference to the Nizamut Adawlut if for temporary imprisonment, or referred to that court if for imprisonment for life; subject to the general provision for referring to the Nizamut Adawlut all trials whereon the Sessions Court may disapprove of the futwahs of their law officers.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. iii.; Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. vii.

2. In all cases so referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, the law officers of that court, provided they shall be of opinion that the prisoner is duly convicted of murder, shall write their futwah upon the case referred to the law officer of the Sessions Court, assuming always that all the heirs of the slain entitled to prosecute for kissaas attended and prosecuted at an age which rendered them competent to demand kissaas, and that they demanded kissaas. But if they shall be of opinion that the prisoner is not duly convicted of wilful murder, they are to state their reasons for such opinion, and whether they consider the prisoner altogether innocent, or convicted of homicide under any of the four denominations distinguished by the Mahomedan law, adding, in the latter case, the legal penalty to which the prisoner is liable: and the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, after considering their futwah so given, with the whole of the proceedings on the case, are either to require further evidence if they see occasion, or to pass such final sentence as may appear consonant to justice and conformable to the Mahomedan law; with the exceptions and modifications which have been, or may be, authorized by the Regulations, and subject to the several provisions therein contained. If in any case not provided for by the Regulations, the Mahomedan law appear to the Court repugnant to justice, they are notwithstanding to adhere thereto, if in favour of the prisoner, in the case before them.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. iv.

3. If any person or persons of the Sutar caste, or of any other caste or persuasion, within the Company's provinces or the province of Benares, shall hereafter put any person to death on the ground of his or her being versed in and practising sorcery, or on any other ground, such person or persons, on being convicted of the crime, shall be held guilty of murder, and be invariably punished accordingly; and if any persons shall either actually form themselves into an assembly for the purpose of trying any man or woman on a charge of witchcraft, or on any other charge, or shall cause such assemblies to be held, and any person or persons shall, in consequence, be put to death, they shall be considered as accomplices in the murder, and be dealt with accordingly.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. vi.

4. In trials for murder, the law officers of the Sessions Court and of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut respectively, shall deliver their futwahs or opinions upon the case according to the doctrines of Yusuf and Mahomed. The distinctions, however, made by those imaums and by Hunneefah, as to the mode of committing murder, shall not be adhered to by the Nizamut Adawlut, but the intention of the criminal, either evidently or fairly inferrible from the nature and circumstances of the case, and not the manner or instrument of perpetration (except as evidence of the intent), shall constitute the rule for determining the punishment. Wilful homicide by poisoning or by drowning, when the intention of poisoning or drowning is evident, is included in the above rule; and in all such cases the Nizamut Adawlut, whatever may be the futwah of their law officers, are to sentence the prisoner to suffer death, provided they judge him fully convicted of wilful murder, and do not consider him a proper object of mercy.—Reg. IX., 1793, secs. l. & lxxv.; and Reg. VIII., 1799, sec. v.

5. In every case of wilful murder, wherein the crime may appear to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut to have been fully established against the prisoner, but the futwah of the law officers of that Court shall declare the prisoner not liable, under the Mahomedan law, to suffer death by kissaas, solely on the ground of the prisoner's being father or mother, grandfather or grandmother, or other ancestor of the slain, or of the heir of the slain; or one of the heirs of the slain, being the child or grandchild, or other descendant of the prisoner; or of the slain having been the slave of the prisoner or of any other person, or a slave appropriated for the service of the public; or on any similar ground of personal distinction, and exception from the general rules of equal justice, the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, provided they see no circumstances in the case which may render the prisoner a proper object of mercy, shall sentence him to suffer death, as if the futwah of their law officers had declared him liable to kissaas; or to suffer death by seeasut, as authorized by the Mahomedan law in all cases of wilful murder, under the discretion vested in the magistrate with regard to this principle of punishment for the ends of public justice.—Reg. VIII., 1799, sec. ii.

6. It shall not justify any prisoner convicted of wilful homicide, that he or she was desired by the party slain to put him or her to death; and in the event of the prisoner being convicted of the fact to the satisfaction of the Nizamut Adawlut, and of their seeing no circumstances in the case which may render him or her a proper object of mercy, they shall sentence him or her to suffer death, whatever may be the futwah of their law officers under the Mahomedan law; which in this instance also, although it withholds kissaas, gives a full latitude to the magistrate in the discretionary punishment of tazeer or seeasut: and experience has shown the necessity of inflicting the punishment for murder in such cases, to preserve the lives of many from the effects of passion or revenge, aided (especially in the province of Benares) by the erroneous prejudices of superstition.—Reg. VIII., 1799, sec. iii.

7. If the futwah of the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut declare any person convicted of wilful murder not liable to suffer death under the Mahomedan law, on the ground of one or more of his accomplices being exempted from kissaas under any of the circumstances recited in paragraphs 5 and 6, or on any similar ground of exemption, the Court of Nizamut Adawlut shall, notwithstanding such futwah, sentence the prisoner to suffer death, if in their judgment he be duly convicted and be not a proper object of mercy: and in all cases, if the accomplice in a wilful murder, though not the principal perpetrator of the murder, shall appear to the Nizamut Adawlut fully convicted and deserving of death, they are authorized, under the discretion given by the Mahomedan law in such cases, to sentence the prisoner to suffer death, whether the futwah of their law officers declare the same or otherwise.—Reg. VIII., 1799, sec. iv.

8. If any person or persons shall wilfully, and with the intention of taking away life, throw or cause to be thrown into the sea or into the river Ganges, or into any other river or water, any infant or person not arrived at the age of maturity, with or without his or her consent, in consequence whereof such person, so thrown into water, shall be drowned, or shall be destroyed by sharks or by alligators, or shall otherwise perish, the person or persons so offending shall be held guilty of wilful murder, and on conviction shall be liable to the punishment of death; and all persons aiding or abetting the commission of such act shall be deemed accomplices in the murder, and shall be subject to punishment accordingly. The trials of prisoners convicted as principals or accomplices of the crimes specified in this section shall be referred to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, which is to pass sentence thereupon according to Section LXXV., Regulation IX., 1793, whatever may be the futwah of the law officers of that court.—Reg. VI., 1802, sec. ii.

9. If a child, or any person not arrived at maturity, be thrown into water, as stated in the preceding paragraph, and be rescued from destruction, or by any means escape from it, the persons who shall have been active in exposing him or her to danger of life, and all aiders and abettors of such act, shall be held guilty of a high misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be liable to such punishment as the Sessions Court, under the futwah of their law officers, may judge adequate to the nature and circumstances of the case.—Reg. VI., 1802, sec. iii.

10. The magistrates of districts wherein the sacrificing of children may have been hitherto practised, are required to be vigilant to prevent the continuance of the practice, and shall cause the provisions of this Regulation to be from time to time proclaimed at the places, and in the season where and when such sacrifices have hitherto been effected.—Reg. VI., 1802, sec. iv.

11. If any Rajkoomar shall designedly prove the cause of the death of his female child by prohibiting its receiving nourishment or in any other manner, he shall be tried in the manner directed in other cases of murder.—Reg. III., 1804, sec. xi.

12. In all cases of murder, mutilation, or severe personal injury, in which the heir of the slain, or the person injured, may refuse to prosecute, the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut shall be called on to declare what the futwah would have been in the event of their having prosecuted; and the judge or judges sitting on such trial shall pass sentence under the general Regulations, and on a consideration of all the circumstances of the case, the same as if the parties had come forward to prosecute.—Reg. IV., 1822, sec. iii.

13. It having been found that in certain cases of murder, the justificatory plea, that the person murdered was the mistress or relation of the prisoner, and detected in criminal intercourse with another man, or that the murdered man was found in criminal intercourse with the prisoner's mistress or relation, or, generally speaking, detected in fornication, has been upheld by the law officers in bar of capital or discretionary punishment, and has been declared to subject such prisoner to deyut only, it is enacted, that the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut shall be called on to declare in such cases what the futwah would have been if such plea had not existed, and the judge or judges sitting on the trial shall pass sentence under the general Regulations, and on consideration of all the circumstances of the case, the same as if no such plea had existed.—Reg. IV., 1822, sec. v.

14. Any person who may be convicted of having deliberately and maliciously intended to murder one individual, and of having, in the prosecution of such intention, accidentally killed another individual, shall, on account of the murderous intention and actual homicide, be liable to the punishment of murder, in like manner as if he had killed the person intended to be murdered. In all such cases, the law officers of the Sessions Courts and of the Nizamut Adawlut (to which Court all trials of this description are to be referred) shall be required to state what punishment the prisoner would have been liable to if he had committed the murder intended by him; and if their futwah shall declare him in such case liable to suffer death, or if, under the futwah so given, and the modifications of the Mahomedan law contained in the Regulations, the prisoner be liable to suffer death, the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, provided it be established to their satisfaction that the prisoner intended to commit the crime of deliberate and malicious murder, and that the homicide charged against him was actually committed by him in the prosecution of such murderous intention, shall sentence the prisoner to suffer death, unless they shall see any circumstances which may in their judgment render him a proper object of mercy.—Reg. VIII., 1801, sec. ii.

15. The rule contained in the preceding paragraph is to be considered equally applicable to any other cases of homicide which may be declared by the law officers of the Sessions Courts or Nizamut Adawlut to be within the Mahomedan law of kutl-khota, kutl-kaeem-mokam-ba-khota, or other legal denominations of accidental homicide; but in which the prisoner shall be clearly convicted of having committed the homicide proved against him with a murderous intention, such as if carried into effect would have subjected him to a sentence of death; or with a deliberate intention to commit any crime that, if committed in pursuance of the prisoner's criminal design, would have rendered him liable to a sentence of death.—Reg. VIII., 1801, sec. iii.

16. Such part of Section III., Regulation IV., 1797, as authorizes the Sessions Courts in cases of kutl-khota, and other cases of accidental homicide, when the prisoner may be declared liable to the deyut, or price of blood, to commute such price to imprisonment, is not to be considered applicable to any of the cases noticed in paragraphs 14 and 15, but is to be in force, as heretofore, with regard to cases of homicide not otherwise provided for by the above paragraphs. The Sessions Courts, however, are not to sentence the prisoner to suffer any imprisonment or other punishment in the cases of accidental homicide mentioned in Section III., Regulation IV., 1797, although the deyut should be declared by their law officers to be payable under the Mahomedan law, if the homicide shall clearly appear to have been committed by misadventure in the prosecution of a lawful act, and without any malignant intention.—Reg. VIII., 1801, sec. vi.

WOUNDING AND MAIMING.

17. Any person who may be convicted of having unlawfully and maliciously intended to wound, maim, or otherwise do corporal injury to one individual, and of having, in the prosecution of such intention, accidentally wounded, maimed, or otherwise corporally injured another individual, shall be held punishable for the act committed by him with such unlawful and malicious intention, in like manner as if such act had been perpetrated on the person intended to have been wounded, maimed, or otherwise injured. The law officers of the Sessions Courts, in such cases, shall be required to state the punishment to which the prisoner would have been liable if he had committed the act of which he is convicted, upon the person intended to have been wounded, maimed, or otherwise injured by him; and the Sessions Courts shall pass sentence accordingly, or refer the trial to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, as the case may be referrible to that Court, or otherwise, under the general Regulations.—Reg. VIII., 1801, sec. iv.

18. In trials referred under the preceding paragraph to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, the law officers of that Court shall also declare in their futwah to what punishment the prisoner would have been liable, if the act of which he is convicted had been committed as intended by him; and the Court, after considering such futwah with the whole of the proceedings in the case, are to pass such sentence on the prisoner, short of death, as they may judge adequate to his offence.—Reg. VIII., 1801, sec. v.

19. In many cases of corporal injury, extending even to mayhem, it has been found that the law officers, on the full conviction of the prisoners, declare them liable to hukoomuti adul only, or a just reward, which is construed by them to mean, payment by the prisoner of the expenses incurred for medicines and medical attendance by the party injured; and such reparation being considered wholly inadequate, it is enacted, that the session judges shall, under such futwah, be competent to pass sentence of imprisonment for any period not exceeding seven years, with power to refer the record to the Nizamut Adawlut, in any case in which they may deem that degree of punishment inadequate; and on the receipt thereof, the Nizamut Adawlut, after requiring a further futwah from their law officers, shall pass sentence of imprisonment for such limited period of time as under all the circumstances of the case may be equitable and just.—Reg. IV., 1822, sec. vi.

20. In all cases of wounding, manifesting a deliberate intention to commit murder, the law officer sitting on the trial shall declare whether the intention to commit murder be established.—Reg. XII., 1829, sec. ii., cls. 1 & 2.

21. If the law officer find the intent to commit murder, and the judge holding the trial concur therein, it shall be competent to him to pass such sentence of imprisonment as he may deem adequate to the crime, not exceeding the period of fourteen years' imprisonment.—Reg. XII., 1829, sec. ii., cl. 3.

22. In any case in which a judge may dissent from the futwah of the law officer, regarding the intent to commit murder, it shall be competent to such judge to make a reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, as, under the like circumstances, is, in all other cases, authorized by the general Regulations.—Reg. XII., 1829, sec. iii.

THUGGEE.

23. The offence denominated "Thuggee" is declared to be the committing, or attempting to commit, in gangs or companies, the crime of murder, or child-stealing, or robbery not amounting to dacoity. A "Thug" is declared to be a person who is or has at any time been habitually associated with any other or others for the purpose of committing any of the above offences, by means intended or known by such person to be likely to cause the death of any person; and "murder by Thuggee" is declared to mean murder when employed as the means of committing such child-stealing or such robbery by a Thug.—Act III., 1848.

24. Any person charged with murder by Thuggee, or with having belonged to any gang of Thugs, or of unlawfully and knowingly receiving or buying property stolen or plundered by Thuggee, either within or without the territories of the East-India Company, may be committed by any magistrate or joint magistrate within the territories of the East-India Company, and may be tried by any Criminal Court competent to try such person on such charge, if the offence had been committed within the zillah where that Court sits.—Act XXX., 1836, secs. i. & ii.; Act XVIII., 1837; and Act XVIII., 1839.

25. Any person proved to have belonged to any gang of Thugs shall be punished with imprisonment for life, with hard labour, and to transportation beyond sea, unless there should be special reasons inducing the Court to think such prisoner not a proper subject for transportation, which reason the Court is to record.—Act XXX., 1836, sec. i.; and Act X., 1847.

26. On the trial of any person for having belonged to a gang of Thugs, no Court shall require any futwah from any law officer.—Act XXX., 1836, sec. iii.

27. Any person or persons who shall, in the day or in the night, go forth with any offensive weapon, or in a gang with or without an offensive weapon, with the criminal intent of committing robbery, and shall, by force or intimidation, rob, or attempt to rob, any person or persons on or near a highway, or on a river, lake, or other water, or in or near a city, town or village, or in any other place whatever, or shall attack by open violence, and rob, or attempt to rob, any dwelling-house, or other house or building, or any tent, boat, or other receptacle of persons or property, in which there may be any person or property at the time of such robbery, or of such attempt to rob, shall be deemed guilty of the crime of robbery by open violence (denominated in the Mahomedan law suruca-i-kubra, and more commonly shub-khoone, or dukytee); and on due conviction thereof, whether by free and voluntary confession, or by the testimony of credible witnesses, or by strong circumstantial evidence, shall be adjudged to suffer such of the penalties declared in the next section as may be applicable to the case, viz. according as the robbery may be, with or without homicide, wounding, maiming, or other personal injuries, or with or without other circumstances of aggravation.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. iii., cl. 1.

28. In such cases of robbery by open violence, the punishment of the offenders shall not depend upon the amount, value, or description of the property plundered. Nor shall any of the circumstances noticed in the preamble to this Regulation, as barring a sentence of hud under the Mahomedan law in cases of highway robbery, nor any other provision in that law, be hereafter allowed to operate against the punishment of persons convicted of highway robbery, or of any robbery by open violence, as defined in the preceding paragraph; or of murder, or other acts of criminality committed in the prosecution of such robbery; or of an intent to rob; provided, as in all other cases of criminal conviction and punishment, that the party convicted be adult and of sound understanding, so as to render him a proper object of punishment.—Reg. LIII., 1803 sec. iii., cl. 2.

29. All persons convicted of being the heads or leaders of a gang of robbers by whom a murder may have been committed, or of having been actively concerned in the perpetration of such murder, or of any murder committed in the prosecution of robbery or an intent to rob, or of having been present, aiding and abetting, when such murder was committed, or, though not present, of having procured and caused by hire, counsel, or command, the perpetration of such murder, in pursuance of a preconcerted plan to commit the same, or to commit robbery, shall be adjudged to suffer death.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. iv., cl. 1.

30. All persons convicted of being the heads or leaders of a gang of robbers by whom any person may have been wounded, maimed, burnt, or subjected to other personal injury, torture, or cruelty, not occasioning homicide, or by whom a dwelling-house or houses may have been set on fire, or any other criminal and aggravating act committed, in the prosecution of a robbery or intent to rob, as well as persons convicted of having been actively concerned in any of the acts aforesaid, done in prosecution of a robbery or intent to rob, or of having been present aiding and abetting, when any such acts were committed, or, though not present, of having procured and caused by hire, counsel, or command, the perpetration of any such acts in pursuance of a preconcerted plan to commit the same or to commit robbery, shall be adjudged to suffer imprisonment and transportation for life. Moreover, any leaders of gangs, or other heinous offenders, convicted of a repetition of the crime described in this clause, or without such repetition, of a degree of cruelty, violence, or other aggravating criminality, which, under the discretion allowed by the Mahomedan law in cases of seeasut, may be punishable with death, and which may appear to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut to render such heinous offenders deserving of capital punishment, shall be liable to a sentence of death.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. iv., cl. 2.

31. Persons convicted of going forth with a gang of robbers for the purpose of committing robbery, but apprehended before they have committed such, or have made any violent attempt for the purpose, shall be adjudged to suffer imprisonment and hard labour for such period, not exceeding seven years, and two years' additional imprisonment in commutation of corporal punishment, as the circumstances of the case may appear to merit.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. iv., cl. 4; Reg. III., 1805, sec. iii.; and Reg. II., 1834.

32. Provided, with respect to all the crimes and degrees of punishment specified in the several clauses of this section, if from any extenuating circumstances which may appear on the trial before the Sessions Courts or Court of Nizamut Adawlut, the stated punishment shall, in any particular instance, appear too severe, or if, on consideration of the number of prisoners convicted of the same crime, and of any discriminative circumstances with respect to one or more of them, the example shall appear sufficient for the ends of justice, without extending the full degree of the prescribed punishment to the whole of the prisoners convicted, it shall be competent to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, or to the Sessions Courts, if the trial be not referrible, under the Regulations, to the Nizamut Adawlut, to mitigate the sentence, in such cases as may be deemed just and expedient.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. iv., cl. 5.

33. The Sessions Courts are also to report to the Nizamut Adawlut the case of any prisoner or prisoners who may appear proper objects of mercy and pardon: or if the punishment to which they are sentenced shall not have been adjudged under any of the provisions of the Mahomedan law, or the Regulations expressly requiring the same, the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, as already authorized, may remit the punishment, and order the discharge of the prisoner.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. iv., cl. 6.

34. All persons convicted of being concerned as principals or accomplices in the crime of robbery by open violence, as defined in Section III., Regulation LIII., 1803, and who may not, under the Regulations in force, be liable to a sentence of death, shall be adjudged by the Sessions Court and by the Court of Nizamut Adawlut to be imprisoned and transported for life; unless from any extenuating circumstances appearing on the trial, the stated punishment shall appear too severe; in which case the Court of Nizamut Adawlut is authorized to mitigate the sentence or remit the punishment, if the prisoner appear a proper object of mercy and pardon.—Reg. VIII., 1808, sec. iii.; and Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. iv., cls. 5 & 6.

35. In case of conviction before a Sessions Court of the crime of robbery by open violence, as defined in Section III., Regulation LIII., 1803; or of an attempt to commit the same, if the robbery shall not have been accompanied with murder, or with an attempt to commit murder, whether by wounding, burning, strangling, poisoning, drowning, throwing into a well, orby any other means; nor have been accompanied with wounding, burning, or other corporal injury to any person or persons in such a degree as to endanger life; nor have been attended with any other aggravating act of criminality, such as may appear to the sessions judge, before whom the trial is held, to merit and call for a more severe punishment than imprisonment with hard labour for fourteen years in banishment from the district where the prisoner may have resided, and two years additional in commutation for corporal punishment, the sessions judge is authorized and directed to pass such sentence as he may deem adequate to the offence, on due consideration of all the circumstances of the case, not exceeding the term of imprisonment with hard labour in banishment above specified.—Reg. XVI., 1825, sec. iii., cl. 1.

36. Whosoever shall be proved to have belonged, either before or after the passing of this Act, to any gang of dacoits, either within or without the territories of the East-India Company, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment for any less term, with hard labour.—Act XXIV., 1843, sec. i.

37. Any person accused of the offence of dacoity, with or without murder, or of having belonged to a gang of dacoits, or of the offence of unlawfully and knowingly receiving or buying property stolen or plundered by dacoity, may be committed by any magistrate within the territories of the East-India Company, and may be tried by any Court which would have been competent to try him if his offence had been committed within the zillah where that Court sits.—Act XXIV., 1843, sec. ii.

38. No Court shall, on trial of the offences specified in this Act, require any futwah from any law officer.—Act XXIV., 1843, sec. iii.

39. If any pyke, chokeedar, pasban, dosaad, nigabaan, or other village watchman or guard, of whatever denomination, entertained or employed by a landholder or by any other person for the protection of villages, houses, persons, or property, and consequently required by the Regulations to assist the police officers in preventing robbery and other crimes and in apprehending offenders; or if any police officer of whatever description (whether a police darogah or tehseeldar intrusted with the charge of the police, a city or town cutwal, or a jemadar, mohurir, burkundoss, piadah, or other person employed under the zillah and city magistrates, the police darogahs and tehseeldars, or under any other officers of the police, for the protection of the inhabitants of the country and their property from robbery, or for apprehending robbers and other criminals, or generally for the performance of any duty of police connected with the prevention of public offences) shall be convicted of the crime of robbery by open violence, as defined in Clause First of Section III., Regulation LIII., 1803, whether such conviction be founded upon the free and voluntary confession of the prisoner, or upon the testimony of credible witnesses, or upon strong circumstantial evidence; and the party so convicted shall not be liable to suffer death, as an accomplice in murder as well as robbery, he shall be held to come within the provisions of clauses 2 & 3 of sec. iv. of Reg. LIII., 1803, whereby the Nizamut Adawlut are authorized to pass sentence of death in cases of aggravated criminality which may appear to deserve it, although the robbery may not have been attended with actual homicide—or where the robbery may have been without any personal injury or other act of aggravation, to extend the sentence of that Court from imprisonment and hard labour for fourteen years, to imprisonment and transportation for life, if on consideration of any circumstances appearing upon the trial to aggravate the guilt of any particular prisoner, the infliction of such more severe punishment shall appear just and necessary. Under this declaration, any watchman, guard, or police officer, as described in the present paragraph, who may be convicted of having been present, aiding and abetting, at a robbery by open violence, or at an attempt to commit such robbery; or though not present, of having procured and caused by hire, counsel, or command, the perpetration of such robbery or attempt to rob, will be liable to suffer death, on the sentence of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, according to the Regulations, if in the prosecution of such robbery or attempt to rob, any person shall be murdered, wounded, maimed, burnt, or subjected to other personal injury, torture, or cruelty, or any dwelling-house shall be set on fire, or other criminal and aggravating act committed; or will be liable to a sentence of imprisonment and transportation for life, by the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, if the prosecution of such robbery, or attempt to rob, shall not have been attended with homicide, personal injury, or any of the other aggravating acts above specified. It is further declared, that any clear and direct connivance on the part of a watchman, guard, or police officer, as described in this paragraph, whereby a gang of robbers may have been enabled to commit any of the crimes above stated, shall, if duly established, subject the offender to the same penalty as he would have been liable to if actually present, aiding and abetting; or, though not present, if he had procured and caused the perpetration of the offence by hire, counsel, or command.—Reg. III., 1805, sec. iv.

40. If any watchman, guard, or police officer, as described in the preceding section, shall be convicted of going forth with a gang of robbers for the purpose of committing robbery, or of conniving at the going forth of a gang of robbers for such purpose, but he or they may be apprehended before they have committed robbery or made any violent attempt for the purpose, the watchman, guard, or police officer so convicted shall be liable to imprisonment, with hard labour, for such period, not exceeding fourteen years, as the circumstances of the case may, in the judgment of the Sessions Court before whom he is convicted, appear to merit; or if that Court shall, in any particular case, deem the prisoner deserving of more exemplary punishment, they shall refer the trial to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, who are authorized, if sufficient ground appear, to extend the sentence to imprisonment, with transportation for life.—Reg III., 1805, sec. v.

GANG-ROBBERY, NOT DACOITY.

41. Whosoever shall be proved to have belonged, either before or after the passing of this Act, to any wandering gang of persons, associated for the purposes of theft or robbery, not being a gang of thugs or dacoits, shall be punished with imprisonment, with hard labour, for any term not exceeding seven years.—Act XI., 1848, sec. i.

42. Any person accused of the offence of belonging to any such gang as aforesaid, or of the offence of unlawfully and knowingly receiving or buying property stolen or plundered by any such gang, may be committed by any magistrate within the territories of the East-India Company, and may be tried by any Court which would have been competent to try him if his offence had been committed within the zillah where that Court sits.—Act XI., 1848, sec. ii.

43. No Court shall, on the trial of any offence under this Act, require any futwah from any law officer.—Act XI., 1848, sec. iii.

THUGGEE AND DACOITY.

44. It shall be lawful for the local Government of any part of the territories subject to the Government of the East-India Company to authorize the reception and detention in any part of those territories, for the periods specified in their respective sentences, of persons sentenced to imprisonment or transportation for the offences of thuggee, dacoity, or the offences of belonging to any gang of thugs or dacoits, within the territories of any native prince or state in alliance with the said Company. Provided always, that such sentences shall have been pronounced after trial before a tribunal, in which a covenanted servant of the East-India Company, duly authorized in that behalf by such prince or state, shall be one of the presiding judges. Every servant of the East-India Company, so authorized as aforesaid, shall forward with every prisoner a certificate of his conviction, and a copy of the proceedings held at the trial, the same to be forthcoming for reference at the place where the sentence of imprisonment may be carried into effect.—Act XVIII., 1843.

HOUSEBREAKING.

45. The zillah and city magistrates shall be guided by the following rules, whenever individuals may be apprehended and brought before them, on a charge of having committed the offence of breaking into, or attempting to break into a dwelling-house, tent, boat, or other place of habitation, by night or by day, with an intent to steal (but without open violence, such as to constitute the crime of robbery by open violence), or with the offence of breaking into, or attempting to break into any warehouse, storehouse, or other building or place used for the custody or preservation of property, either by night or by day, with an intent to steal (but without open violence); or of being present, aiding and abetting in the commission of any of the offences above specified; or although not present, of having procured or caused the perpetration of any of those offences by hire, counsel, or command; or of having in any manner confederated with the actual perpetrators of them, in pursuance of a preconcerted plan.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 1.

46. If the perpetration of any of the offences enumerated in the preceding paragraph, not amounting to the crime of robbery by open violence, shall be accompanied with murder, or with an attempt to commit murder, or with wounding, burning, corporal injury, or other aggravating act of personal violence; or if the prisoners, or any of the prisoners, concerned in the offences described in the preceding paragraph, shall appear to have been before convicted of burglary, robbery, or other heinous crime; or if the prisoners, or any of them, shall appear to be persons of notoriously bad character, or shall be charged with having committed the offence while employed in the office of watchmen, guards, or police officers, as described in Section IV., Regulation III., 1805 (paragraph 39); or if the value or amount of the property stolen shall exceed the sum of one hundred rupees; or if there exist any circumstances of aggravation, though not of the nature specified above, such as to render the prisoner deserving of a more severe punishment than the magistrates are competent to inflict; in all such cases, it shall be the duty of the magistrate to commit the whole of the prisoners who may appear from the evidence adduced to have been concerned in the offence, to take their trial before the Sessions Court at the ensuing session.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 2; Reg. VI., 1824, sec. iii.

47. In cases of conviction before the Sessions Court of individuals charged with any of the offences above specified, the session judge shall be guided by the rules contained in Section VIII., Regulation XVII., 1817, referring such cases as may come within the provisions of Clause Fourth of that section, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, and in all other cases not coming within the provisions of that clause, sentencing the prisoners to suffer such degree of punishment as, on a consideration of all the circumstances of the case, may appear adequate to the offence; not exceeding, however, in any instance, imprisonment with hard labour for fourteen years, and two additional years in commutation for corporal punishment, with or without banishment from the district in which the prisoner may have resided.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 3.; and Reg. II., 1834.

48. If, from the investigation held by the magistrate, there shall appear reason to believe that a prisoner apprehended and brought before him has been guilty of any of the offences described in the first clause of this section (paragraph 45), but that such offence has not been attended with any of the circumstances of aggravation specified in the second clause of this section, the magistrate shall, in addition to the evidence which may be adduced on the part of the prosecution, take the defence of the prisoners and the evidence of the witnesses who may be designated by the prisoners in support of their defence, and after a full and deliberate investigation, shall proceed, without reference to the Sessions Court, to pass sentence of acquittal or conviction.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 4.

49. If the prisoners be convicted, the magistrate is empowered to sentence them to imprisonment with hard labour for a period not exceeding two years, and one additional year in commutation of corporal punishment, and to carry such sentence into immediate execution.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 5; and Reg. II., 1834.

50. Should the prisoner be convicted of two or more distinct offences above described, as within the competence of the magistrate to punish, for neither of which he had been before brought to trial, the magistrate shall not pass sentence until he has completed his proceedings in both cases, and he is authorized to reduce the punishment, so as not to exceed in the aggregate imprisonment for the term of two years, if he shall be of opinion that such punishment is sufficient; otherwise he shall commit the prisoner to take his trial before the Sessions Court.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 4; Reg. VI., 1824, preamble, and sec. ii., cls. 1 & 2.

51. Provided that a previous conviction of petty theft, not exceeding ten rupees, when unattended with any aggravating circumstances, shall not be deemed a previous conviction of a heinous crime, such as precludes the magistrate's judicial cognizance of a charge of burglary, and requires that the prisoner be committed for trial before the Sessions Court.—Reg. VI., 1824, sec. v.

52. When a prisoner may be convicted before a Sessions Court of breaking into, or attempting to break into, a dwelling-house, tent, boat, or other place of habitation, by night or by day, with an intent to steal, but without open violence, such as to constitute the crime of robbery by open violence; or of breaking into, or attempting to break into, any warehouse, storehouse, or other building or place used for the custody and preservation of property, either by night or day, with an intent to steal, but without open violence; or of being present, aiding and abetting in the commission of any of the offences above specified, or although not present, of having procured or caused the perpetration thereof by hire, counsel, or command, or having in any manner confederated with the perpetrators in pursuance of a preconcerted plan, whether in pursuance of the intent to commit such robbery, any property shall be carried away, or otherwise, the session judge, provided he shall concur in the futwah of the law officer convicting the offender, whether such conviction be founded on a free and voluntary confession, or on the testimony of credible witnesses, or on strong circumstantial evidence, shall pass sentence upon the prisoner as follows:—Reg. XI., 1814, sec. ii., cl. 2.

53. Any person or persons who may be convicted before the Sessions Courts of breaking, with intent to rob, into any dwelling-house, whether constructed of stone, brick, mud, bamboo, grass, or other materials, or into a tent, boat, or other place of habitation, whether such entry be effected by cutting through or under the wall, or by any other means, attended with breaking, if the offence be committed between sunset and sunrise, shall be sentenced to imprisonment in banishment during the term of fourteen years, and two years' additional imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. ii., cl. 2, and sec. iii., cl. 1; and Reg. II., 1834.

54. Any person or persons who shall be convicted of the crime above defined, committed between sunrise and sunset, shall be sentenced to imprisonment in banishment for seven years, and two years' additional imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. iii., cl. 3; and Reg. II., 1834.

55. Any person who may hereafter be convicted of the offence of breaking into any warehouse, storehouse, or other building or place used for the custody and preservation of property, either by day or by night, with the intent to rob, shall be sentenced to imprisonment for the term of seven years, and two years' imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment, whether, in pursuance of the intent to commit such robbery, any property shall have been actually carried away or otherwise. Provided, however, that nothing contained in any part of this Regulation shall be construed to supersede the provisions contained in any Regulation regarding the punishment of persons convicted of the crime of dacoity or robbery by open violence.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. ii., cl. 3; and Reg. II., 1834.

56. Should any person in the commission, or in the attempt to commit, any of the species of the crime stated in the preceding clauses, kill another, the offender shall be adjudged to suffer death.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. iii., cl. 4.

57. But if, from any circumstances of extenuation, such as the tender age of the prisoner, or his not having been armed, or the offence not having been committed by two or more persons, the session judge shall be of opinion that the punishment stated in Section III., Regulation I., 1811, would be too severe, he is authorized to mitigate the sentences therein prescribed, under the following restrictions:—Reg. XI., 1814, sec. ii., cl. 2, latter part.

58. The sentence of imprisonment in banishment from the district during fourteen years, with two years' additional imprisonment in commutation of corporal punishment, for the offence of breaking into a house or other place of habitation, with an intent to steal, between sunset and sunrise, or the attempt to commit the said offence, may be mitigated, in cases of extenuation, to such period of imprisonment, with or without banishment, as the session judge may consider sufficient, not being less than seven years.—Reg. XI., 1814, sec. ii., cl. 3.

59. The sentence of imprisonment in banishment for seven years, with two years' additional imprisonment in commutation of corporal punishment, prescribed for the offence of breaking into a house or other place of habitation, with an intent to steal, between sunrise and sunset, as well as for the offence of breaking into a warehouse, storehouse, or other building or place used for the custody and preservation of property, with an intent to steal, either by night or by day, or the attempt to commit either of the said offences, may be mitigated, in cases of extenuation, to such period of imprisonment, with or without banishment, as the session judge may consider sufficient, not being less than three years.—Reg. XI., 1814, sec. ii., cl. 4.

60. The session judges shall, in all cases wherein they may exercise the discretionary power vested in them by the preceding clauses, record their reasons for the mitigated sentence passed by them; and if in any instance a just consideration of all the circumstances of the case shall appear to them to call for a further mitigation or remission of punishment, they shall (provided they concur with their law officers in the conviction of the prisoner) pass sentence according to the preceding clauses, and refer the trial, with a full report of their sentiments, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut for the final sentence or order of that Court, in pursuance of Section III., Regulation XIV., 1810. —Reg. XI., 1814, sec. ii., cl. 5.

61. In all cases of burglary and theft, or of theft without burglary, whether in a house, or from the person of another, as well as in all cases of robbery, not within the provisions of the Regulations in force for the punishment of robbery by open violence, if the robbery, burglary, or theft, or an attempt to commit the same, be accompanied with an attempt to commit wilful murder, whether by wounding, burning, strangling, poisoning, drowning, throwing into a well, or by any other means, or be accompanied with wounding, burning, or corporal injury to any person or persons, in such degree as to endanger life, the offender or offenders, who may be convicted, to the satisfaction of the Nizamut Adawlut, of having been concerned as principals or accomplices in a robbery, burglary, or theft, or in an attempt to commit the same, attended with such aggravated criminality, shall be liable to transportation for life. The trial in all such cases shall be referred by the Sessions Courts to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut; and the session judge, before whom the trial may be held, shall proceed as directed in the Regulations in force respecting prisoners who are liable to a sentence of imprisonment and transportation for life. If the session judge be of opinion that there are grounds for a mitigation of the prescribed punishment, he shall state the same for the consideration of the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 4.

62. In cases of conviction before the Sessions Courts of any of the offences specified in the preceding paragraph, wherein the robbery, burglary, or theft, or an attempt to commit the same, may not have been accompanied with an attempt to commit murder, nor with wounding, burning, or other corporal injury, in such degree as to endanger life, but may have been attended with wounding, or other corporal injury, in a less degree, the session judge, provided he concur in the conviction of the offender, shall, without reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, adjudge him to suffer such punishment as may appear adequate to the offence, not exceeding imprisonment for fourteen years in banishment from the district where the prisoner may have resided, with two years' additional imprisonment in commutation of corporal punishment.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 5.

63. Nothing in the preceding paragraph shall be construed to authorize an enhancement of the penalties declared by the Regulations in force for burglary, or theft, when not accompanied with wounding, or other corporal injury, nor with an attempt to commit murder by strangling, or other means, as described in the fourth clause of this section.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 6.

64. Any person or persons upon whom the instrument denominated a seend katee, used for the known purpose of nuccubzunnee, may hereafter be found, shall be detained by the magistrate in safe custody, and employed to work on the public roads until he shall give security for his future good conduct, or until the Sessions Court (before whom a list of persons so detained is required to be laid by the magistrate at each sessions of gaol delivery) shall, on revision of the proceedings held by the magistrate, direct the discharge of the prisoner on a mochulka.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. vi.

65. In cases of secret theft or larceny, without open violence, whether accompanied with burglary or simple theft from the person or house, unaccompanied with any aggravating circumstance, the sentences of the Superior Courts and the Nizamut Adawlut shall be governed by the Mahomedan Law as modified by the Regulations and by the rules respecting offenders liable to discretionary punishment. Provided, however, that the Sessions Court shall not be thereby precluded from adjusting imprisonment not exceeding seven years, with two additional years in commutation for stripes, when, in aggravated cases, such punishment for theft may appear just and proper.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. v.; Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 7; and Reg. II., 1834, sec. ii.

66. Under the existing Regulations, the magistrates are empowered to sentence prisoners convicted before them of theft, to imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months, with corporal punishment, not exceeding thirty rattans; and in cases appearing to them to demand a more severe punishment, they are required to commit the prisoners for trial before the Sessions Court. The following rules are now enacted, for extending the powers of the magistrates in the punishment of prisoners convicted of theft, and for defining the cases which are to be cognizable respectively by the magistrates and by the Sessions Courts.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. iii., cl. 1.

67. In all cases of theft, whether in a house, warehouse, or other place, or from the person of another (not coming within the provisions of the Regulations in force for the punishment of robbery by open violence, or of housebreaking under the provisions of Clause First, Section II., Regulation XII., 1818), if the theft, or the attempt to commit the same, shall have been accompanied with murder, or with an attempt to commit murder, or with wounding, burning, severe corporal injury, or other aggravating act of personal violence, or if the value of the property stolen shall exceed 300 rupees, it shall be the duty of the magistrate to commit the whole of the prisoners who may appear from the evidence adduced to have been concerned either as principals or accomplices in the offence, to take their trial before the Sessions Court at the ensuing session. The magistrate shall also exercise his discretion in committing for trial before the Sessions Court any prisoners charged with theft (although not attended with the aggravating circumstances above mentioned), who, from their notoriously bad character, or from their having been before convicted of a heinous offence, or from any other peculiar circumstances of the case, may appear to him deserving of a severer punishment than the magistrate is authorized to inflict under the following clauses of this section. Provided that a previous conviction of petty theft, not exceeding ten rupees, when unattended with any aggravating circumstance, shall not be deemed a previous conviction of a heinous crime, such as precludes the magistrates judicial cognizance of a charge of theft, and requires that the prisoner be committed for trial before the Sessions Court Such persons, if convicted on trial before the Sessions Court, will be liable to the penalties prescribed for the offences in question by the several Regulations and Acts in force —Reg XII, 1818, sec iii, cl 2, Reg IV., 1820, sec iv, Reg VI., 1824, sec v

68 With exception to the cases above mentioned, the magistrates shall hear and determine, without reference to the Sessions Courts, all other cases of theft, and after having duly considered the evidence which may be adduced on the part of the prosecution and of the prisoner, shall pass sentence of acquittal or conviction —Reg XII, 1818, sec iii., cl 3

69 In cases of theft cognizable by the magistrate under the foregoing rules, if the amount or value of the property stolen shall exceed fifty rupees, or if the persons committing the theft shall have been before convicted of theft, burglary, robbery, or other heinous offence, or if the prisoner shall have committed the offence while employed in the office of watchman, guard, or police-officer, as described in Section IV, Regulation III, 1805 (paragraph 39), or be a servant of the person from whom the property may have been stolen, or a servant employed in the house in which the theft may have been committed, as well as in all cases of cattle-stealing, the magistrate shall be empowered, on proof of the guilt of the prisoner, to sentence him to imprisonment, with hard labour, for such period as may appear proper, not exceeding two years, and one year's additional imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment —Reg XII, 1818, sec iii, cl 4, and Reg II, 1834

70 In other cases of theft, not included in the foregoing provisions, the magistrate shall either refer the case for decision to his assistant, under the powers vested in the assistant to the magistrate by the Regulations in force, or shall proceed to investigate them himself and to pass sentence on the prisoners under the powers vested in him by Section XIX, Regulation IX, 1807 —Reg XII, 1818, sec iii, cl 5

71 If any police-officer, or any guard, or watchman bound to assist the officers of police, shall be convicted of larceny or theft, though without any act of open violence, or of connivance at the perpetration of such crime, he shall be liable to suffer such aggravation of punishment as the Court shall deem adequate to his offence, if by the Sessions Court, such punishment not to exceed seven years' imprisonment, with hard labour, and two years' additional labour in commutation for corporal punishment, or if the case be referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, such punishment, short of capital, as that Court shall consider adequate —Reg III, 1805, sec vi

RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS

72 Prisoners who shall appear to the magistrate to have committed the offence of buying or receiving stolen property, of whatever description, shall be committed by him for trial before the Sessions Court, if the person charged shall have known, at the time of his purchasing or receiving the same, that such property had been obtained in the perpetration of robbery by open violence, or of theft accompanied with any of the following aggravating circumstances, namely, murder, or the attempt to commit murder, or with wounding, burning, or any other act of corporal injury or personal violence, or if the stolen property exceed 300 rupees in value, or if the persons charged had been before convicted of the offence of buying or receiving stolen property, or of burglary, robbery, theft, or other heinous crime, or was an habitual and professional receiver of stolen goods, or a person of notoriously bad character, or if he shall be charged with having committed the offence while employed in the office of watchman, guard, or police-officer, or if the person charged appear to the magistrate, from any other previous circumstances of the case, deserving of a severer punishment than the magistrate is authorized to inflict. All such persons, if convicted before the Sessions Court, shall be sentenced to such period of imprisonment as may appear proper, according to the circumstances of the case, in no instance exceeding fourteen years, and two additional years in commutation of corporal punishment Provided that a previous conviction of petty theft, not exceeding ten rupees, when unattended with any aggravating circumstance, shall not be deemed a previous conviction of a heinous crime, such as precludes the magistrate from taking judicial cognizance of a charge of buying or receiving stolen goods, and requires that the prisoner be committed for trial before the Sessions Court —Reg XII, 1818, sec. iv., cls 2 & 3, Reg IV, 1820, sec iv, Reg. VI, 1824, secs iv & v

73 With exception to the cases above mentioned, the magistrate shall hear and determine, without reference to the Sessions Courts, all other cases in which individuals may be charged with the offence of buying or receiving stolen property of whatever description, knowing it at the time to have been stolen, or with the offence of having in their possession property obtained by theft or robbery, and knowing at a period of time subsequently to its first coming into their possession, that such property had been so obtained, notwithstanding which they may have kept the stolen property in their possession without restoring it to the owner, or giving information to the local police-officer or magistrate. In such cases the magistrate, after having duly considered the evidence in support of the prosecution, the defence of the prisoners, and the evidence of the witnesses designated by the prisoners, shall proceed to pass sentence of conviction or acquittal: if the prisoners be convicted, the magistrate is empowered to sentence them to imprisonment with hard labour for a period not exceeding in any case two years, and to one year's additional imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. iv., cl. 4.

74. Persons charged with the offences specified in the preceding clauses of this section may be brought to trial and sentenced to punishment, although the actual perpetrators of the theft or robbery may not have been convicted; provided, however, that the fact of the theft or robbery having been committed be established, and it be proved that the purchaser or receiver knew that the property in question had been obtained by theft or robbery.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. iv., cl. 5.

75. Any person accused of unlawfully and knowingly receiving or buying property stolen or plundered by dacoits, or by thuggee, or by any wandering gang of persons associated for the purposes of theft or robbery, though not being a gang of thugs or dacoits, may be committed by any magistrate within the territories of the East-India Company, and may be tried by any Court competent to try him, if his offence had been committed within the zillah where the Court sits.—Act XVIII., 1839; Act XXIV., 1843, sec. ii.; Act XI., 1848, sec. ii.

76. Every person who receives any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, knowing the same to have been feloniously or unlawfully stolen, taken, obtained, or converted, whether charged as an accessory after the fact to the felony, or with a substantive felony, or with a misdemeanour only, may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished in any place in which he shall have, or shall have had, any such property in his possession, or in any place in which the party guilty of the principal felony or misdemeanour may by law be tried, or in the place where he actually received such property.—Act XVI., 1851, sec. i.

RULES APPLICABLE TO ALL CASES OF ROBBERY, THEFT, RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS, AND OTHER WRONGFUL APPROPRIATION OF PROPERTY.

77. All criminal Courts may add to the punishment competent to them to inflict upon persons convicted before them of robbery, theft, embezzlement, knowingly receiving stolen goods, cheating, or other wrongful appropriation of property, or of being accessory or privy to any such offence, the punishment of fine, not exceeding the loss appearing to be caused to the several persons who have suffered by such wrong: and may pay and distribute the proceeds of the said fine, or any part thereof, to or for the benefit of the said several persons, according to the discretion of the Court.—Act XVI., 1850, sec. i.

78. Payment of every such fine may be enforced by distress and sale, under the order of the Court, of the goods of the offender.—Act XVI., 1850, sec. ii.

PERJURY, FORGERY, DEBASING THE COIN, &c.

Definitions.

79. The crime of wilful perjury is declared to be giving, intentionally and deliberately, before a Court of Judicature, magistrate, or any public officer authorized to take the same, a false deposition upon oath or under a solemn declaration, relative to some judicial proceeding, civil or criminal, upon a point material to the issue thereof, or though not relating to any judicial proceeding, on a point material to the case in which the depositions may have been taken.—Reg. II., 1807, sec. iv., cl. 1; Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 1.

80. Subornation of perjury is declared to be the procuring or causing another person to commit the offence above described as wilful perjury.—Reg. II., 1807, sec. iv., cl. 2; Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 2.

81. The term forgery is meant to include all fraudulent and injurious fabrications or alterations of written deeds, or of written or printed papers, of whatever descriptions; as well as all counterfeit seals or signatures thereto, and the illicit imitation of any public stamp, or stamped paper, established by Government. Persons convicted of procuring or causing any such forgery will be liable to the same punishment as those convicted of having actually committed the forgery at the instigation of others.—Reg. II., 1807, sec. iv., cl. 3.

82. The offence of fraudulently issuing and publishing as true, or otherwise fraudulently giving effect, or attempting to give effect, to fabricated deeds and papers, knowing the same to be false and fabricated, or the offence of using, issuing, selling or otherwise disposing of, or attempting to dispose of, counterfeit stamped paper, bearing the imitation of a public stamp, knowing the same to be counterfeit, or the offence of paying, or tendering in payment, counterfeited coin, bank notes, promissory notes, or other securities for money, knowing the same to be counterfeit, are declared punishable under the provisions hereinafter set forth.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. x., cl. 1.

83. The offences of clipping, filing, drilling, defacing or debasing the gold or silver coin of the British Governments in India, or any coin usually received as money within the British possessions in India, are already made cognizable by the Criminal Courts, and declared punishable as the law may direct, and are declared punishable under the provisions of Regulation II., 1807.—Reg. XXXV., 1793, sec. xii.; and Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. x., cl. 3.

Committal and Trial.

84. If a witness, or any person, shall be guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury in any cause or matter depending in court, the judge is immediately to commit the offender to close custody, to take his trial before the Sessions Court.—Reg IV., 1793, sec. xiv.

85. The zillah and city magistrates shall not receive any charges of perjury which may be preferred by parties in civil suits, either against their own witnesses, or against the witnesses of the adverse party, or charges of subornation of perjury against the adverse parties in such suits; and all individuals whose attendance is required in the civil courts, either as plaintiffs, defendants, or witnesses, are declared not liable to any prosecution of this description unless committed to take their trial by the zillah or city judge.—Reg. III., 1801, sec. ii.

86. Persons charged with the crime of perjury, subornation of perjury, or forgery, and appearing to the Civil or Criminal Courts by whom they may be ordered to be brought to trial before the Sessions Court to have been guilty of the charge, shall not be admitted to bail (notwithstanding anything declared to the contrary in any existing Regulation), unless specially authorized by the Court under whose directions they are committed for trial. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to preclude the magistrate from admitting to bail persons committed by him for trial on charges preferred originally before him, in cases cognizable by him under the Regulations, without any order from a Civil or Criminal Court for the commitment of such persons for trial before the Sessions Court.—Reg. II., 1807, sec. v.

87. Whenever a witness giving evidence before a Sessions Court may be considered by the session judge to be guilty of wilful perjury, or whenever a person attending a Sessions Court may be considered by the judge of that Court to be guilty of subornation of perjury, or of forgery, in any trial or matter depending before the Court, and the whole of the witnesses required for the proof of the charge and for the defence of the accused may be also in attendance, it shall be competent to the session judge to direct the zillah or city magistrates to commit the person so charged for immediate trial before the Sessions Court. Provided that nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the conviction or punishment of any person charged with the crimes specified, until he shall have been regularly put upon his trial, or until any material evidence which he may have to offer in his defence shall have been received and duly considered.—Reg. II., 1807, sec. vi.

88. The above rules (with this qualification, that the zillah or city judge may commit to prison or admit to bail, as he shall think proper, under the discretion given by Section V., Regulation II., 1807), shall be considered applicable to all allegations of perjury, or subornation of perjury, against parties or witnesses in any civil suit, or any civil proceedings whatever, before the judge of a Zillah or City Court; or before a Principal Sudder Ameen, a Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff, or an arbitrator or arbitrators appointed to investigate such suits: or an officer employed by a Zillah or City Civil Court in any local or other inquiry, or in the execution of any civil process. In all such cases, the proceedings on which the charge of perjury or subornation of perjury may be grounded, if not held before the zillah or city judge in the first instance, shall be referred to him by the officer before whom the proceedings may have been held, with the sentiments of such officer upon the case; and if the judge be of opinion that there are sufficient grounds for bringing the accused party to trial before the Sessions Court on a charge of perjury, or subornation of perjury, he shall record his opinion to that effect; and at the same time direct whether the accused shall be admitted to bail or kept in custody. An authenticated copy of the order passed by him, with the whole of the original papers relative to the case, shall then be transferred to the cutcherry of the magistrate, that the order of the judge may be carried into effect, and the case brought before the Sessions Court, in the same manner as if the charge had been instituted and proceeded upon in the Court of the magistrate.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 2; and Act I., 1848, sec. iii.

89. If the judges of either of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or any single judge of those Courts, in cases within the competency of a single judge, shall be of opinion that there are sufficient grounds, on any civil proceeding before them, for bringing a party or witness to trial on a charge of perjury, or subornation of perjury, they shall record their sentiments to that effect; and at the same time direct whether the party accused shall be admitted to bail or kept in custody: an authenticated copy of the order so passed, with the whole of the original papers relative to the case, shall then be transmitted to the proper zillah or city magistrate, for the purpose of being proceeded upon as stated in the preceding clause.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 3.

90. The restrictions against prosecutions for perjury and subornation of perjury of witnesses and parties in the Civil Courts, unless the officers presiding in these Courts shall be of opinion that there are grounds for such prosecutions, are extended to all charges of perjury, or subornation of perjury, against witnesses and prosecutors in the Criminal Courts, or before any public officer authorized to hold inquiries respecting offences of a criminal nature. Provision is already made by Section VI., Regulation II., 1807, (paragraph 87), for such cases, when persons attending the sitting of a Sessions Court may appear to the judge of that Court to have been guilty of perjury, or subornation of perjury. The judges of the Sessions Courts, and the judges of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, or a single judge thereof, in cases within the competency of a single judge, are further declared empowered to direct the proper zillah or city magistrate to commit to custody, or hold to bail, and to bring to trial before the Sessions Court any person who, from proceedings before the above Courts, may appear to have been guilty of the crime of perjury, or subornation of perjury; and the zillah and city magistrates themselves are vested by the Regulations with full authority to commit, or hold to bail, for trial before the Sessions Court, all persons who, on their own proceedings, or those of their assistants, may be considered guilty of either of the crimes above mentioned. The magistrates of the several zillahs and cities are therefore prohibited from receiving and acting upon any charges of perjury, or subornation of perjury, alleged to have been committed in the course of any trial or inquiry of a criminal nature, excepting such as may come before them in the manner provided for by this section.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 4.

91. The zillah and city magistrates are further restricted from receiving and acting upon charges of perjury, or subornation of perjury, alleged to have been committed before a collector or other public officer, unless such officer shall transmit the proceedings held before him, with his opinion that there are grounds for believing such charge to be well founded. In that case, and if the magistrate, on inspection of the proceedings, or after making such further inquiry as he may deem necessary, shall be of opinion that there are grounds for bringing the party accused to trial before the Sessions Court, he shall pass an order to that effect; and shall at the same time direct whether the accused shall be held to bail, or kept in custody till the session of the Sessions Court. —Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 5.

92. In all cases provided for by this section, if there be no private prosecutor to whom the magistrate may judge it proper to leave the prosecution of the case before the Sessions Court, he shall appoint the vakeel of Government, or some other qualified person, to conduct the prosecution before the Sessions Court, and shall furnish him with the requisite information and instructions for that purpose.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xiv. cl. 6.

93. Within the territories subject to the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, except the local limits of the Courts established by her Majesty's charter, the magistrates of the several zillahs and cities shall not receive any charge of forgery, or of procuring or causing forgery, or of fraudulently issuing and publishing as true, or otherwise fraudulently giving effect to, or attempting to give effect to false and fabricated deeds and papers, knowing the same to be false and fabricated, which may be preferred by parties to civil or criminal cases, in respect to deeds and papers offered in evidence in such cases, against the adverse parties to such cases, or other persons, except as provided in the next following paragraph.—Act I., 1848, sec. i.

94. In cases pending before any civil or criminal Court (except the Court of the magistrate, or of any officer exercising the committing powers of a magistrate), in which there may appear to the Court sufficient grounds for sending for investigation to the magistrate a charge of any of the offences specified in the foregoing paragraph, the Court shall send the party or parties accused in custody to the magistrate, together with the evidence and documents relevant to the charge, and shall take a recognizance from each of the witnesses, who have given such evidence to appear before the magistrate, who shall thereupon receive such charge and proceed with it in the usual course. Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the powers vested in session judges in cases of forgery, by Section VI., Regulation II., of 1807, (paragraph 87). —Act I., 1848, sec. ii.

95. It shall be competent to the session judges to try persons committed by themselves as civil judges, under the provisions of Clause Second, Section XIV., Regulation XVII., 1817, (paragraph 87), for perjury, or subornation of perjury, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.—Act I., 1848, sec. iv.

96. For the purposes of this Act, the expression "Civil Courts" shall be held to include all revenue officers acting judicially.—Act I., 1848, sec. v.

Penalties.

97. If any person amenable to the jurisdiction of a Sessions Court, shall be convicted before that Court, whether by his free and voluntary confession, or by the testimony of credible witnesses, or by strong circumstantial evidence, of the crime of wilful perjury, or of subornation of perjury, or of forgery, as defined in the Regulations, and shall in consequence, by the futwah of the Mahomedan law officer of the Sessions Court, be declared liable to discretionary punishment (tazeer, acoobut, or seeasut), the session judge, before whom the trial may be held, provided he concur in the conviction of the prisoner, shall sentence the offender to be imprisoned, in banishment from the district, for a period of seven years, with two additional years in commutation for corporal punishment, or for the term of fourteen years, if the prisoner be convicted of having forged, or procured to be forged, any counterfeit coin in imitation of any of the gold, silver, or copper coins of the British Governments in India, or of any coin usually received as money in the British possessions in India, or of having forged, or procured to be forged, any counterfeit stamp, or stamped paper, in imitation of any public stamp established by the British Governments in India, or any counterfeit note, or other security for money, in imitation of any of the public securities of the British Governments in India, or of the bank-notes issued by any public bank in the British possessions in India, unless the session judge, on consideration of all the circumstances of the case, shall be of opinion, that any part of the prescribed punishment is too severe; in which case he is authorized to mitigate the sentence to imprisonment, for any period not less than seven years, in the above-mentioned cases of forgery of counterfeit coin, public stamps, securities, or bank notes, and procuration of such forgery, and to imprisonment, for any period not less than three years, in all other cases within the provisions of Regulation II., 1807, and Regulation XVII., 1817. In cases of reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, that Court shall, if the prisoner be convicted, sentence him to any punishment deemed proper, not exceeding that above specified.—Reg. II., 1807, sec. iii.; Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 2.; Reg. VI., 1832, sec. vi.; and Reg. II., 1834.

98. If in any instance the session judge shall be of opinion that a further mitigation or remission of punishment is necessary, he shall, provided he concur in the conviction of the prisoner, pass sentence on the prisoner, and refer the trial, with his sentiments at large, for the final sentence or order of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 3.

99. If any person shall be convicted before a Sessions Court, or the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, of any of the offences specified in Clause 1, Section x., Regulation XVII., 1817, (paragraph 82), he shall be sentenced to imprisonment for such period, not exceeding seven years, as the session judge may deem adequate to the nature and circumstances of the case. In every instance of a repetition of the offence, after a previous conviction and discharge, the session judge may further, at his discretion, sentence the offender to two years' imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment. If a person twice convicted and discharged, be again found guilty of any of the offences specified in the preceding clause above referred to, (paragraph 82), and the session judge shall be of opinion that he ought to be imprisoned for a longer period than seven years, he shall refer the trial, with his sentiments, for the sentence of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. x., cl. 2., and Reg. II., 1834.

100. If any person, subject to the jurisdiction of a zillah or city magistrate, shall be convicted of having in his or her possession, without lawful or satisfactory excuse, any counterfeited coin, or stamped paper, bearing an imitation of any current coin, or public stamp, and shall not show good and sufficient cause for having such counterfeit coin, or stamped paper, in his or her possession, the persons so convicted shall be sentenced by the magistrate to pay a fine equal to four times the nominal value of such counterfeit coin, or stamped paper, in his or her possession, one moiety of which fine shall, on receipt of it, be given to any informer or informers who may have given information of the offence, and established the truth of it. In the event of such fine not being paid, the person convicted shall be confined for such period as the magistrate may direct, not exceeding six months. The counterfeit coin or stamped paper shall also in every instance be forwarded to the mint master or superintendent of stamps respectively.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xi.

SUTTEE.

101. The practice of suttee, or burning, or burying alive the widows of Hindoos, is declared illegal, and punishable by the criminal courts.—Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. ii.

102. All zemindars, talookdars, or other proprietors of land, whether malguzarry or la-khiraj; all sudder farmers and under-renters of land of every description; all dependent talookdars; all naibs and other local agents; all native officers employed in the collection of the revenue and rents of lands on the part of Government, or the Court of Wards; and all munduls or other head men of villages, are declared especially accountable for the immediate communication to the officers of the nearest police station of any intended sacrifice of the nature described in the foregoing paragraph; and any zemindar, or other description of persons above noticed, to whom such responsibility is declared to attach, who may be convicted of wilfully neglecting or delaying to furnish the information above required, shall be liable to be fined by the magistrate or joint magistrate in any sum not exceeding two hundred rupees, and in default of payment, to be confined for any period of imprisonment not exceeding six months.—Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. iii., cl. 1.

103. Immediately on receiving intelligence that the sacrifice declared illegal by this Regulation is likely to occur, the police darogah shall either repair in person to the spot, or depute his mohurrir or jemadar, accompanied by one or more burkundauzes of the Hindoo religion, and it shall be the duty of the police officers to announce to the persons assembled for the performance of the ceremony, that it is illegal, and to endeavour to prevail on them to disperse, explaining to them that, in the event of their persisting in it, they will involve themselves in a crime, and become subject to punishment by the Criminal Courts. Should the parties assembled proceed in defiance of these remonstrances to carry the ceremony into effect, it shall be the duty of the police officers to use all lawful means in their power to prevent the sacrifice from taking place, and to apprehend the principal person aiding and abetting in the performance of it; and in the event of the police officers being unable to apprehend them, they shall endeavour to ascertain their names and places of abode, and shall immediately communicate the whole of the particulars to the magistrate or joint magistrate for his orders.—Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. iii. cl. 2.

104. Should intelligence of a sacrifice declared illegal by this Regulation, not reach the police officers until after it shall have actually taken place, or should the sacrifice have been carried into effect before their arrival at the spot, they will nevertheless institute a full inquiry into the circumstances of the case, in like manner as on all other occasions of unnatural death, and report them for the information and orders of the magistrate or joint magistrate to whom they may be subordinate. —Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. iii., cl. 3.

105. On the receipt of reports of any act or intended act of suttee, or burning, or burying alive the widows of Hindoos, the magistrate or joint magistrate of the jurisdiction shall inquire into the circumstances of the case, and shall adopt the necessary measures for bringing the parties concerned in promoting it to trial before the Sessions Court.—Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. iv., cl. 1.

106. After the promulgation of this Regulation, all persons convicted of aiding and abetting in the sacrifice of a Hindoo widow, by burning or burying her alive, whether the sacrifice be voluntary on her part or not, shall be deemed guilty of culpable homicide, and shall be liable to punishment by fine or by imprisonment, or by both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the Sessions Court, according to the nature and circumstances of the case and the degree of guilt established against the offender; nor shall it be held to be any plea of justification that he or she was desired by the party sacrificed to assist in putting her to death.—Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. iv., cl. 2.

107. Persons committed to take their trial before the Sessions Court for the offence above mentioned, shall be admitted to bail or not at the discretion of the magistrate or joint magistrate, subject to the general rules in force in regard to the admission of bail.—Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. iv., cl. 3.

108. Nothing contained in this Regulation shall be construed to preclude the Court of Nizamut Adawlut from passing sentence of death on persons convicted of using violence or compulsion, or of having assisted in burning or burying alive a Hindoo widow, while labouring under a state of intoxication, or stupefaction, or other cause impeding the exercise of her free will, when, from the aggravated nature of the offence proved against the prisoner, the Court may see no circumstances to render him or her a proper object of mercy.—Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. v.

DHURNA.

109. The offence denominated dhurna implies, in its received acceptation, the practice of illegal duress by individuals, for the extortion of money, or for the recovery of debts without authority from the civil magistrate; and also, without such authority, for retaining or recovering the possession of land, or for carrying any other point of real, imaginary, or pretended interest or right.—Reg. VII., 1820, sec. i.

110. On a complaint in writing being presented to a magistrate against any Brahmin or Brahmins, or against any other person or persons of whatever description, for sitting dhurna, the magistrate, upon oath or affirmation being made to the truth of the information, shall issue a warrant or summons (as the case may require), under his seal and signature, for the apprehension or appearance before him, of the person or persons thus complained against. On the accused being brought before the magistrate, he shall inquire into the circumstances of the charge, and examine the accused and the complainant; and also such other persons (whose depositions are to be taken on oath or affirmation) as are stated to have any knowledge of the misdemeanor alleged, and commit their respective depositions to writing; and after this inquiry, if it shall appear to the magistrate that the misdemeanor charged was never committed, or that there is no ground to believe the accused to have been concerned in committing it, the magistrate shall cause him (or them) to be forthwith discharged, recording his reasons for the same. On the contrary, if it shall appear to the magistrate that the misdemeanor was actually committed, and that there are grounds for believing the accused to have been concerned in the commission of it, the magistrate shall (except in the cases mentioned in Section VII., paragraph 114), cause the accused to be committed to prison, or held to bail (according as in his discretion he shall judge proper) for trial at the next session of the Sessions Court; and shall bind over the complainant to appear and carry on the prosecution, and the witnesses to attend and give their evidence.—Reg. VII., 1820, sec. iii.

111. The trial of persons charged with dhurna shall take place before the Sessions Court, in the same mode as is prescribed for other trials by the existing Regulations; and in lieu of the bebusta taken from the pundit of the Provincial Court, the Mahomedan law officer of the Sessions Court shall write his futwah, declaring whether the offence charged is established or not, against the accused.—Reg. VII., 1820, sec. iv.

112. On conviction of the offence of dhurna before a Sessions Court, the penalties adjudicable shall be as follow: namely, imprisonment in the civil jail for a term not exceeding one year, and fine not exceeding one thousand rupees; commutable, if not paid, to further imprisonment, for a term not exceeding one year.—Reg. VII., 1820, sec. v.

113. Trials held before a Sessions Court in cases of dhurna shall be referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut, or not, according to the rules applicable in other trials.—Reg. VII., 1820, sec. vi.

It shall be competent to the magistrates, in charges for the offence of dhurna, which they may be of opinion, from the circumstances, do not require commitment to the Sessions Court, to hear the evidence against and for the accused; and if they consider the accused to be convicted, to pass sentence of fine not exceeding two hundred rupees; commutable, if not paid, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a period not exceeding six months.—Reg. VII., 1820, sec. vii.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE.

Trial of State Offenders.

115. It shall be competent to the ordinary tribunals to try charges of treason, rebellion, or other crime against the state.—Act V., 1841, sec. i.

116. It shall be competent for the Government of any presidency to issue a commission for the trial of any offences of treason, rebellion, or crime against the state, by one or more judges, together with such law officers as shall be required, or without any such officer, according as it may be deemed expedient.—Act V., 1841, sec. ii.

117. The Courts convened under such commissions are to try the prisoners brought before them in the same manner as in trials before the ordinary Courts; and shall exercise all powers and authorities vested in such Courts, except that their sentence, whether of acquittal or punishment, shall in every instance be reported with their proceedings to the Nizamut Adawlut, previous to carrying the same into execution; and they are to be guided as to the place where they are to assemble, the persons to be tried by them, and all other particulars not provided by any Regulation of the respective presidencies, or by any Act of the Governor-General of India in Council, by the special orders which they may receive from the Executive Government, or from the Nizamut Adawlut.—Act V., 1841, sec. iii.

118. In case of the death or of the absence, from indisposition or other cause, of any of the judges or law officers of the Courts which may be appointed to try offenders under this Regulation, the remaining judge or judges, or law officer or officers, shall be competent to form a Court, and proceed with the trial or trials, until provision can be made by the Government for supplying the place of such judge or judges, or law officer or officers, if any such provision shall be deemed necessary; or if no such provision be made, the powers and proceedings of the said Courts shall not be affected by the death or absence of such judge or judges, or law officer or officers.—Act V., 1841, sec. iv.

119. The Nizamut Adawlut, on the receipt of any trials referred to them under this Act, are to proceed thereupon according to the rules in force with respect to other trials referred to them; except that they are in every instance to report their sentences to the executive Government; and are to wait the orders of Government for the period of three calendar months before they direct their sentence to be carried into execution.—Act V., 1841, sec. v.

120. The magistrates of the several zillahs and cities, where any person or persons shall be charged with the crimes mentioned in this Act, shall give immediate notice thereof to the Government of the presidency to which their several districts or cities belong, and shall pay immediate and strict attention to all orders which may be transmitted to them by their respective Governments for the apprehension of persons charged as aforesaid, or for making any inquiry respecting such persons, or for committing them to take their trials before the ordinary Courts, or before the special Courts described in this Act.—Act V., 1841, sec. vi.

Proclamation of martial law.

121. The Governor-General in Council is empowered to suspend, or to direct any public authority or officer to order the suspension of, wholly or partially, the functions of the ordinary Criminal Courts of Judicature, within any zillah, district, city, or other place, within any part of the British territories, subject to the government of the presidency of Fort William, and to establish martial law therein, for any period of time while the British Government in India shall be engaged in war with any native or other power, as well as during the existence of open rebellion against the authority of the Government, in any part of the territories aforesaid; and also to direct the immediate trial, by courts martial, of all persons owing allegiance to the British Government, either in consequence of their having been born, or of their being residents within its territories and under its protection, who shall be taken in arms in open hostility to the British Government, or in the act of opposing by force of arms the authority of the same, or in the actual commission of any overt act of rebellion against the state, or in the act of openly aiding and abetting the enemies of the British Government within any part of the said territories.—Reg. X., 1804, sec. ii.

122. Any person born or residing under the protection of the British Government within the territories aforesaid, and consequently owing allegiance to the said Government, who, in violation of the obligations of such allegiance, shall be guilty of any of the crimes specified in the preceding paragraph, and who shall be convicted thereof by the sentence of a court martial, during the suspension of the functions of the ordinary Criminal Courts of Judicature and the establishment of the martial law, shall be liable to the immediate punishment of death, and shall suffer the same accordingly, by being hung by the neck till he is dead. All persons who shall, in such cases, be adjudged by a court martial to be guilty of any of the crimes specified in this Regulation, shall also forfeit to the British Government all property and effects, real and personal, which they shall have possessed within its territories at the time when the crime of which they may be convicted shall have been committed.—Reg. X., 1804, sec. iii.

123. The Governor-General in Council shall not be precluded by this Regulation from causing persons charged with any of the offences described in the present Regulation to be brought to trial, at any time, before the ordinary Courts of Judicature, or before any special Court appointed for the trial of such offences, under Act V., 1841, instead of causing such persons to be tried by courts martial, in any cases wherein the latter mode of trial shall not appear to be indispensably necessary. —Reg. X., 1804, sec. iv.

Proceedings against persons endangering public safety.

124. Whenever reasons of state embracing the due maintenance of the alliances formed by the British Government with foreign powers, the preservation of tranquillity in the territories of native princes, entitled to its protection, and the security of the British dominions from foreign hostility and from internal commotion, may seem to the Governor-General in Council to require that an individual should be placed under personal restraint, without any immediate view to ulterior proceedings of a judicial nature, a warrant of commitment under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, and under the hand of the chief secretary, or one of the secretaries to Government, shall be issued to the officer in whose custody such person is to be placed.—Reg III., 1818, secs. i. & ii., cl. 1.

125. The warrant of commitment shall be in the following form :—

To the [here insert the officer's designation.]

"Whereas the Governor-General in Council, for good and sufficient reasons, has seen fit to determine that [here insert the state prisoner's name] shall be placed under personal restraint at [here insert the name of the place], you are hereby required and commanded, in pursuance of that determination, to receive the person above named into your custody, and to deal with him in conformity to the orders of the Governor-General in Council, and the provisions of Regulation III., of 1818.

"Fort William, the

"By order of the Governor-General in Council,

"A. B., Chief Sec. to Gov."

—Reg. III., 1818, sec. ii., cl. 2.

126. The warrant of commitment may be directed to the sheriff of the gaol of any of the Supreme Courts of Judicature established by royal charter in the said territories, or to the commandant of any fortress, or to the officer in charge of any gaol or other place in which it is deemed expedient that such state prisoner be confined, in any part of the said territories; and such warrant shall be sufficient authority for the detention of such state prisoner in the fortress, gaol, or other place mentioned in the warrant; and the following rules are declared applicable to every sheriff, commandant, or officer having any state prisoner in custody.—Act. XXXIV., 1850, secs. i. & ii.

127. Every officer in whose custody any state prisoner may be placed, shall, on the 1st of January and 1st of July of each year, submit a report to the Governor-General in Council, through the secretary to Government in the political department, on the conduct, the health, and the comfort of such state prisoner, in order that the Governor-General in Council may determine whether the orders for his detention shall continue in force or shall be modified.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. iii.

128. When any state prisoner is in the custody of a zillah or city magistrate, the session judges are to visit such state prisoner, and they are to issue any orders concerning the treatment of the state prisoner which may appear to them advisable, provided they be not inconsistent with the orders of the Governor-General in Council issued on that head.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. iv., cl. 1.

129. When any state prisoner is placed in the custody of any officer not being a zillah or city magistrate, the Governor-General in Council will instruct the magistrate, or the session judge, or any other officer, not being the person in whose custody the prisoner may be placed, to visit such prisoner at stated periods, and to submit a report to Government regarding the health and treatment of such prisoner.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. iv., cl. 2.

130. The officer in whose custody any state prisoner may be placed, is to forward, with such observations as may appear necessary, every representation which such state prisoner may from time to time be desirous of submitting to the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. v.

131. Every officer in whose custody any state prisoner may be placed, shall, as soon after taking such prisoner into his custody as may be practicable, report to the Governor-General in Council, whether the degree of confinement to which he may be subjected appears liable to injure his health, and whether the allowance fixed for his support be adequate to the supply of his own wants and those of his family, according to their rank in life.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. vi.

132. Every officer, in whose custody any state prisoner may be placed, shall take care that the allowance fixed for the support of such state prisoner is duly appropriated to that object.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. vii.

133. The provisions contained in the preceding paragraphs 127 to 132 are declared to be applicable to all persons who are now confined as state prisoners under the authority of Government, within the territories subject to the presidency of Fort William.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. viii.

134. Whenever the Governor-General in Council, for the reasons before declared, shall judge it necessary to attach the estates or lands of any zemindar, jageerdar, talookdar, or other person, without any previous decision of a court of justice, or other judicial proceeding, the grounds on which the resolution of Government may have been adopted, and such other information connected with the case as may appear essential, shall be communicated, under the hand of one of the secretaries to Government, to the judge and magistrate of the district in which the lands or estates may be situated, to the Sessions Court, and to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. ix.

135. The lands or estates which may be so temporarily attached shall be held under the management of the officers of Government in the revenue department, and the collections shall be made and adjudged on the same principles as those of other estates held under khas management —Reg. III., 1818, sec. x., cl. 1.

136. Such lands or estates shall not be liable to be sold in execution of decrees of the Civil Courts, or for the realization of fines or otherwise, during the period in which they may be so held under attachment.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. x., cl. 2.

SPECIFIC OFFENCES.—OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE.

137. In the cases mentioned in the preceding paragraph, the Government will make such arrangement as may be fair and equitable for the satisfaction of the decrees of the Civil Courts.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. x., cl. 3.

138. Whenever the Governor-General in Council shall be of opinion that the circumstances which rendered the attachment of such estate necessary have ceased to operate, and that the management of the estate can be committed to the hands of the proprietor without public hazard or inconvenience, the revenue authorities will be directed to release the estate from attachment, to adjust the accounts of the collections during the period in which they may have been superintended by the officers of Government, and to pay over to the proprietor the profits from the estate which may have accumulated during the attachment.—Reg. III., 1818, sec. xi.

139. Any state prisoner now confined under any such warrant within the jurisdiction of any of the said Supreme Courts, under the warrant of the Governor-General in Council, shall be deemed to have been lawfully committed thereunto.—Act XXXIV., 1850, sec. iii.

Immigrants from foreign States dangerous to the public Peace.

140. Whenever the Governor-General in Council, upon due investigation, shall be satisfied that the emigrants from Arracan, or emigrants from any other state, who may have sought an asylum in the British territories, or the descendants of any of the said emigrants, shall have abused the protection afforded to them, by attempts to excite disturbances in the state from which they or their ancestors may have emigrated, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to order the removal of those persons to such other part or parts of the country as may be judged most convenient for their future residence. In like manner, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to order such removal whenever he may have grounds to be satisfied that the residence of any body of aliens, or their descendants, in the vicinity of the frontier of the country from which they or their ancestors may have emigrated, is likely to cause any serious misunderstanding between that state and the British Government.—Reg. XI., 1812, sec. ii.

141. Whenever any body of emigrants, or any individuals belonging to such body, shall be ordered to be removed from the part of the country in which they may have been established, they shall be allowed to dispose of any property which they may have acquired in such manner as they may judge proper; provided, however, that if they shall nevertheless retain the right to any real property at the period of their actual removal, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to order such property to be sold by public auction, under the superintendence of the collector of the district. In that case, the net proceeds of the sale shall be duly paid to the person or persons to whom the said property belonged.—Reg. XI., 1812, sec. iii.

142. In cases in which the Governor-General in Council may, on due inquiry and mature deliberation, be satisfied that either the preservation of the tranquillity of the British territories, or of the dominions of the allies of the British Government, or the maintenance of the relations of amity subsisting between the British Government and other states, requires that any of the leaders or other persons of the above description, who may have committed the offences mentioned in paragraph 140, should be placed and detained under restraint, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to order any such persons having committed any of the said offences, but not otherwise, to be apprehended and committed to confinement at such place, and under the custody of such public officer, and detained in confinement for such time as may be deemed by the Governor-General in Council necessary for the public good.—Reg. XI., 1812, sec iv.

143. Any persons of the above description, or their descendants, who, while living under the protection of the British Government, shall enter the country from which they or their ancestors may have emigrated, or any other foreign country, and shall excite, or attempt to excite, disturbances in the said countries, shall be liable to be brought to trial for that offence before the Sessions Court, and if convicted, shall be sentenced to suffer imprisonment for the period of seven years.—Reg. XI., 1812, sec. v., cl. 1.

144. Any persons, whether native British subjects or aliens, who shall furnish emigrants from foreign countries with any assistance, either of men, money, or arms, in prosecution of their attempts to excite disturbances in the country from which they may have emigrated, or in any other country, or shall otherwise aid such aliens in the prosecution of their criminal design, shall be liable to be brought to trial for that offence before the Sessions Court, and if convicted, shall be sentenced to suffer imprisonment for the term of seven years; provided, however, that if the session judge by whom the case may be tried shall be of opinion that the punishment established by this and the preceding paragraph should in any instance be mitigated, he shall submit the proceedings held on the trial to the Nizamut Adawlut, who will recommend to the Governor-General in Council such alleviation of the prescribed punishment as they may judge proper; provided, moreover, that no sentence or order which may be passed on the trial of any persons under the foregoing provisions shall be competent, or shall be construed to preclude the Governor-General in Council from the exercise of the power vested in the Government by paragraph 142 —Reg. XI., 1812, sec. v., cl. 2.

Tampering with the Army or Navy.

145. Every person who maliciously and advisedly endeavours to seduce any person or persons serving or engaged to serve in the military or naval forces of the East-India Company from his or their allegiance to her Majesty, or duty to the said Company, or who endeavours to stir up any person or persons belonging to either of the said services to commit any act of mutiny, or to make or endeavour to make any mutinous assembly, or to commit any traitorous or mutinous practice whatsoever, shall, on conviction, suffer transportation for life, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not longer than seven years, as the Court shall adjudge —Act XIV., 1849, sec. i.

146. Any person charged with any offence, punishable under this Act, may be committed by any magistrate within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, and shall be tried by the Court of Sessions, or if the offender be not within the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court of Sessions, by the Supreme Court of Judicature established by royal charter —Act XIV., 1849, sec ii.

147. No Court shall, on the trial of any offence under this Act, require any futwah from any law officer —Act XIV., 1849, sec iii.

148 This Act shall not exempt any person governed by the Articles of War from being tried by a court-martial, and punished according to the Articles of War, nor any person belonging to the Indian navy from being tried by a court-martial, and punished according to the laws for the observance of discipline in the Indian navy, but no person shall be tried for the same offence under the said Articles or Laws, and also under this Act.—Act XIV., 1849, sec. iv.

OFFENCES AGAINST WOMEN.

Rape, Adultery, and Fornication

149 All complaints or prosecutions for adultery, rape, or fornication shall be preferred in the first instance at the cutcherry of the magistrate within the limits of whose jurisdiction the offence may have been committed, and the magistrates are prohibited from referring such cases for investigation or report to their police darogahs or other native authorities invested with the charge of the police. All investigations for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of such charges shall be invariably conducted by the magistrate or his assistant, aided (so far as may be authorized by the Regulations and Acts) by the native officers attached to his Sudder Cutcherry —Reg VII, 1811, secs ii., iii, vi.

150. With the view of further restraining the institution of prosecutions for adultery and fornication, which ordinarily prove to be unfounded, misrepresented, or greatly exaggerated, the magistrates are strictly prohibited from issuing any process on these charges without previously examining the prosecutor as to the specific facts of the case, and satisfying themselves that adequate grounds exist for proceeding against the accused party. In cases, likewise, in which the magistrate shall see grounds to distrust the truth of a charge, he shall, previously to issuing process against the accused, summon the witnesses named by the prosecutor, or as many of them as he may judge proper, and examine them as to their knowledge of the facts and circumstances which are the subject of the complaint On occasions on which the magistrate may judge it necessary to make the previous inquiry above noticed, the rules regarding the payment of the subsistence of witnesses shall be duly enforced —Reg III, 1812, sec. ii, cl 6.

151. In trials before the Sessions Court for adultery, rape, or any other offence within the provisions of the Mahomedan law for cases of zinâ and fiâl-i-shuneea, the futwah of the law officer of the Sessions Court, before whom the trial may be held, shall declare only whether the prisoner is legally convicted, or if not, whether there be strong ground of presumption arising from his free confession, or from credible testimony, or from circumstantial evidence, that he is guilty of the crime charged against him.—Reg XVII, 1817, sec vi, cl 1.

152 If the futwah so given shall declare the prisoner legally convicted, or that there is strong presumption of his guilt, and the session judge, before whom the trial may be held, shall concur in the conviction of the prisoner, or in the presumption of his guilt, so as to render him a proper object of punishment, and the circumstances of the case shall not appear to call for a more severe punishment, the judge shall sentence the prisoner to suffer such punishment as may be deemed adequate to his guilt and the nature of the offence, not exceeding imprisonment with hard labour for the term of seven years, and two additional years' imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. vi., cl. 2; and Reg. II., 1834.

153. If the prisoner be convicted, or presumed guilty of the heinous crime of rape, the session judge shall not pass any sentence, but shall refer the trial to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, for the sentence of that Court, under the general Regulations in force.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. vi., cl. 3.

154. In cases of adultery it shall be requisite for the conviction and punishment of a married woman that she be prosecuted by her husband; and no other person shall be deemed competent to prosecute, or prefer the charge against her, in such cases.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. vi., cl. 4.

155. If any person shall be convicted before a zillah or city magistrate, or joint magistrate, of the offence of enticing and taking away, or causing to be enticed and taken away, a married woman living under the protection of her husband, or of any person having the care of her in his behalf; or of enticing and taking away, or causing to be enticed and taken away, an unmarried female, under the age of maturity, viz. fifteen years, and living with her parents or other legal guardians, or any persons acting in their behalf, for the purpose of rendering such married woman, or unmarried female minor, a prostitute or concubine, or otherwise disposing of her in an unlawful manner, without the consent of the husband, parent, or other guardian of the woman or minor thus disposed of, the person so convicted shall be liable to a sentence of fine and imprisonment, to such extent as may appear adequate to the circumstances of the case, and may not exceed imprisonment for six months, and a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, commutable, if not paid, to a further period of imprisonment, not exceeding six months. If in any instance the offender shall appear to merit a more severe punishment, he shall be committed for trial before the Sessions Court; and the provisions of Section VI., Regulation XVII., 1817, are declared applicable to all such commitments.—Reg. VII., 1819, sec. ii.

AFFRAYS.

156. Persons charged with the commission of affrays respecting the possession of land or crops, who shall be convicted of the offence, provided the affray was unattended with homicide, severe wounding, or other aggravating circumstances, may be punished by the magistrate, or joint magistrate, with imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, and fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, to be commuted, if not paid, to a further period of imprisonment with or without labour in irons for a period not exceeding one year, so that the whole period of imprisonment shall in no case exceed two years.—Reg. I., 1822, sec. iii.; Reg. VIII., 1828, sec. iii.

157. The magistrate shall not refer any such case for examination and decision to his assistant, unless such assistant shall be invested with special powers, under Section II., Regulation III., 1821.—Reg. I., 1822, sec. iv.

158. In all cases of affray attended with homicide, severe wounding, or other aggravating circumstances, the magistrate or joint magistrate shall bring the offenders to trial before the Sessions Court, committing them to prison, or enlarging them upon bail, as the circumstances of each case may appear to require.—Reg. I., 1822, sec. v.

159. Whenever any person shall be tried before the Sessions Court on a charge of affray, attended with homicide, if both parties shall be found guilty of having had resort by premeditation to that mode of adjusting their differences, it shall not be competent to the session judge to sentence the person or persons so convicted to a less term of imprisonment than five years with or without hard labour.—Reg. II., 1823, sec. ii.; Reg. VI., 1828, sec. ii.

160. Whenever, with regard to any person or persons so convicted, the session judge shall be of opinion that the punishment above stated is more than adequate to the offence, he shall issue no sentence in the trial, but shall refer the case for the sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut, setting forth at large, in his letter of reference, the grounds on which he may apply for a mitigation.—Reg. II., 1823, sec. iii.

161. The minimum of punishment declared in paragraph 159 shall not be deemed applicable to cases arising out of a sudden quarrel, in which no premeditated purpose of affray may be established, nor in cases of assaults or other aggressions in which the assailed party may not be shown, by their previous preparation, or in any other way, to have been ready and intent to meet their adversaries in the field of combat; nor shall it be construed to apply to cases of affray, attended with homicide, in which persons guarding and protecting crops, grain, or property, in a legal manner, may be attacked by persons trespassing, or others, or who, in legal and just defence of the property under their charge, may resist aggression in self-defence; in all which cases, the session judges, agreeing with the futwahs of their law officers, shall pass such legal sentence as may be suitable to the offence of the several parties.—Reg. VI., 1828, sec. ii.

162. Nothing in this Regulation shall be construed to alter the existing rules by which a session judge is competent, in such cases, to pass a sentence of seven years' imprisonment, with or without labour, and two years' additional imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment, or those by which, where he may consider even that punishment to be inadequate to the offence, he is authorized to refer the trial, for a still heavier punishment, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut. —Reg. II., 1823, sec. iv.

IMPORTATION OF SLAVES.

163 The importation of slaves, whether by land or by sea, into the places immediately dependent on the presidency of Fort William, is strictly prohibited; and any person infringing this prohibition shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished for the offence by the Courts of Criminal Judicature.—Reg. X., 1811., sec. ii.

164. Any person who may be convicted of the offence of importing slaves into the British territories shall be sentenced to imprisonment for the period of six months, and to pay a fine to Government according to his circumstances in life, not exceeding, however, the sum of rupees two hundred, commutable, if not duly discharged, to imprisonment for the further period of six months on the expiration of the former part of the sentence.—Reg. X., 1811, sec. iii.

165. Persons imported as slaves into the British territories shall be liable to be discharged or sent back to their friends and connections in the country from which they may have been imported, according as may appear most advisable to the magistrate by whom the decision on the case may be passed.—Reg. X., 1811, sec. iv.

166. For the more effectual prevention of the importation of slaves at the port of Calcutta, captains or supercargoes of vessels importing at Calcutta, shall, previously to being permitted to land any part of their cargo or goods, execute a bond, rendering themselves liable to the payment of a penalty of rupees five thousand, in the event of their disposing of any persons as slaves.—Reg. X., 1811, sec. v., cl. 1.

167. The bond mentioned in the preceding paragraph shall be taken by one of his Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the town of Calcutta, who will of course cause it to be executed in due form.—Reg. X., 1811, sec. v., cl. 2.

168. It shall be the duty of the collector of Government customs at Calcutta to ascertain that the prescribed bond has been executed, previously to permitting any part of the cargo or goods of any vessel to be landed.—Reg. X., 1811, sec. v., cl. 3.

169. The following is the form of the bond to be taken in the cases above stated :—

" Know all men by these presents, that I, ———, captain of the ———, now lying and being in the river Hooghly in Bengal, am held and firmly bound unto the East-India Company, in the sum of five thousand rupees of lawful money of Bengal, to be paid to the said Company, their certain attorney, successors, or assigns, for which payment to be well and truly made, I bind myself, my heirs, executors, and administrators, firmly by these presents, sealed with my seal, dated the ——— day of ———, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ———. The condition of this obligation is such, that if the above-bounden ——— has made a just and true report in writing to the custom-master at Calcutta of the number of persons, male and female, imported by him into Bengal, in and on board the above-mentioned ———, and if the said ——— has not since his last arrival in Bengal, and shall not whilst he the said ——— or the said ——— shall be or remain in Bengal, land for the purpose of selling, giving away, or otherwise disposing of any person or persons imported on board the said ———, as and for a slave or slaves, and if the said ——— has not sold, given away, or disposed of, and shall not in Bengal, or in any of the countries of or under the management of the said Company, their governors or servants in India, sell, give away, or dispose of any person or persons, male or female, imported on board the said ———, on this her last arrival in Bengal, as and for a slave or slaves, then this obligation shall be void, otherwise the same shall be and remain in full force and virtue.

" Sealed and delivered (where no stamps are used) in the presence of ——— ." —Reg. X., 1811, sec. v., cl. 4.

TWO OR MORE OFFENCES CHARGED AT THE SAME TIME.

170. Whenever a prisoner may be charged before a magistrate of two or more distinct offences, for neither of which he may have been previously brought to trial, but for each of which he would have been subject, on conviction, to the penalties prescribed by Clause Fifth, Section II., (paragraph 49), or Clause Fourth, Section III., (paragraph 69), Regulation XII., 1818, or with two or more distinct thefts not being of the nature of those described in Clauses Second and Fourth, Section III., Regulation XII., 1818, (paragraphs 67 and 69), the magistrate shall refrain from passing sentence until he shall have completed his proceedings in both cases.—Reg. VI., 1824, sec. ii., cl. 1; Reg. VI., 1829, sec. ii., cl. 1.

SPECIFIC OFFENCES.—TWO OR MORE OFFENCES AT THE SAME TIME.

171. In all or any of the above cases, it shall be competent to the magistrate, if the prisoner be convicted, to reduce the punishment for the two offences, so as not to exceed imprisonment for the term of two years, with an additional year in commutation for corporal punishment, provided he shall be of opinion, on consideration of the several acts of criminality established against the prisoner, and the circumstances of each case, that the punishment above specified is sufficient.—Reg. VI., 1824, sec. ii., cl. 2; Reg. VI., 1829, sec. ii., cl. 2.

172. The magistrates and joint magistrates are empowered to commit for trial before the Sessions Court any persons charged with two or more offences of the above descriptions, whenever they may be of opinion that there exist any circumstances of aggravation, such as to render the prisoner deserving of a more severe punishment than they are competent to inflict.—Reg. VI., 1829, sec. ii., cl. 3.

173. The magistrates and joint magistrates will include all sentences passed by them under the foregoing provisions in the statements which they are required to submit periodically to the Sessions Courts, by Clause First, Section VI., Regulation XII. of 1818, and Clause First, Section III., Regulation IV. of 1820, ("MAGISTRATES," paragraph 96).—Reg. VI., 1829, sec. iii.

174. Whenever a prisoner may be brought to trial before a Sessions Court for two or more distinct offences included in separate commitments, and may be convicted at the same session of two or more offences, the prescribed penalties of which, under the Regulations in force, may exceed in the aggregate imprisonment for fourteen years, besides the further imprisonment in commutation for corporal punishment, but may not, for the crime established against the prisoner on any one commitment, amount to death or imprisonment for life (in which case the trial would be referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut), the session judge is authorized to reduce the prescribed punishments for the whole of the offences of which the prisoner may be so convicted at the same session, so as not to exceed in the aggregate imprisonment, in banishment from the district, for a term of fourteen years, and two years' additional imprisonment in commutation of corporal punishment; provided he shall be of opinion, on consideration of the several acts of criminality established against the prisoner, and the circumstances of each case, that the punishment above specified is sufficient. If the session judge, however, should be of opinion that the prisoner is deserving of imprisonment for a longer period, he shall pass sentence, in the several cases, for the punishment prescribed by the Regulations, and shall transmit the proceedings on each case, with a report of the circumstances and his sentiments on the punishment which should be inflicted upon the prisoner for the final sentence or order of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XV., 1814, sec. ii., cl. 1.

175. The principle of the foregoing paragraph shall be also considered applicable to cases in which prisoners convicted and sentenced at a preceding session of a Sessions Court may be convicted, at a subsequent session, of another offence committed before their first conviction and sentence. But it is not meant to apply to any new offence committed by a person after his conviction of a former offence, whether the period of confinement to which he may have been sentenced for his former offence shall have expired at the time of his committing the subsequent offence, or otherwise.—Reg. XV., 1814, sec. ii., cl. 2.

176. When a prisoner, committed or held to bail for trial before a Sessions Court on two or more distinct charges, may be liable on one or more convictions to a sentence of imprisonment for fourteen years, and the further charge or charges against the prisoner may not be such as would, on conviction, subject him to a sentence of death or imprisonment for life, it shall not be requisite for the session judge to try such additional charge or charges, unless there shall appear to be special and sufficient cause for trying the same. Provided that whenever a session judge may exercise the discretion thus vested in him, he shall report the same, with his reasons, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, in the statement transmittible to that Court of sentences passed by the Sessions Court; or if the trial held upon the prisoner be on any account referrible to the Nizamut Adawlut, in the letter accompanying such trial; and it shall be competent to the Nizamut Adawlut to order a further trial of the remaining charge or charges against the prisoner, in all cases wherein that Court may judge it proper so to direct.—Reg. XV., 1814, sec. ii., cl. 3.

CRIMINAL JUDICATURE.

PUNISHMENTS.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

1. It shall not be competent to a single judge of the Nizamut Adawlut to pass sentence for capital punishment, which shall in all cases require the concurrent opinion of two judges of the Court.—Reg. IX., 1831, sec. iv., cl. 4.

2. The Register of the Nizamut Adawlut, within three days after the passing of the final sentence, shall transmit a copy of it under the seal of the Court, and attested by his official signature, to the judge of the Sessions Court, who is immediately to issue a warrant to the proper magistrate to cause the sentence to be carried into execution. The magistrate, upon receipt of the warrant, shall cause the sentence to be carried into execution without delay, and return the warrant with an indorsement attested with his official seal and signature certifying the execution of the sentence. The warrant is to be forwarded by the judge to the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. lxxviii.

TRANSPORTATION AND BANISHMENT.

3. Whenever any of the Sudder Courts shall sentence any offender to imprisonment for life, it shall at the same time sentence such offender to transportation beyond sea for life, unless there should be special reasons inducing the Court to think such prisoner not a proper subject for transportation, which special reasons the Court is directed to record.—Act XIV., 1844, sec. i.

4. Transportation beyond sea shall be restricted to convicts, who may be sentenced to confinement for life.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. viii., cl. 2.

5. In the cases of convicts sentenced to confinement for life, whom the Sessions Court and Nizamut Adawlut may not consider proper objects of transportation beyond sea, as well as in all cases of convicts sentenced to imprisonment for a limited period, the Court by whom the sentence is passed, if it deem the same proper on consideration of the prisoner's offence, may adjudge him to be banished, during the period of his sentence, from the district in which his place of abode is situated, and to be kept to hard labour on the public roads, or other public works, in any other district to which he may be removed by order of the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. viii., cl. 3.

6. Provided always, that it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to detain in the gaol at Allypore, for any period which he may deem expedient, any convicts sentenced to transportation.—Reg. IX., 1813., sec. ii., cl. 2.

7. All convicts sentenced to transportation, shall be sent to such of the British settlements in Asia, or to the island of Mauritius, or its immediate dependencies, as the Governor-General in Council shall appoint; and shall also be liable to be employed at any places within the limits of the settlement to which they shall be sent, which shall from time to time be fixed on by the local administration. A power is further vested in the Governor-General in Council of transferring convicts from one place to another in the settlements aforesaid; and such transfer is authorized, as often as the same may be found requisite. The Governor-General in Council, however, previously to ordering such transfers, will consult the local administration upon the propriety of allowing any convicts to be exempted from removal, whose good conduct shall have merited this indulgence, or who from sickness or infirmity may not be fit objects to be removed.—Reg. IX., 1813, sec. ii., cl. 3; Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. xv.

8. As soon as any offender shall be delivered to the person or persons to be appointed by the Governor-General in Council, on that behalf, at the place to which he is transported, the property in the service of such offender shall be vested in such person or persons during the term of transportation.—Act XVI., 1840, sec. ii.

9. It shall be lawful for the Governor-General in Council to appoint the Governor or other authority at any place within the territories of the East-India Company, or to appoint one or more superintendents at any such place as the persons to whom convicts undergoing transportation shall be delivered, and in whom the property in the service of such convicts shall be vested as aforesaid. —Act XVI., 1840, sec. ii.

10. It shall be lawful for the Governor-General in Council to issue orders from time to time, to any such Governor, authority, or superintendent, and which orders are required to be duly executed, and to frame rules touching the classification of convicts, their confinement, treatment, and discipline, and touching such moderate correction as may be necessary in cases of misbehaviour and disorderly conduct, and of neglect or disobedience in the service of those persons in whom the property of such service may be vested as aforesaid.—Act XVI., 1840, sec. iii.

11. All persons who have heretofore been transported to any place within the territories of the East-India Company, and whose terms of transportation are not yet expired, shall be subject to the provisions contained in this Act; and nothing heretofore done with respect to offenders who have been so transported in conformity with the provisions of this Act, or by the orders or with the sanction of Government, shall be called in question in any Court of law.—Act XVI., 1840, sec. iv.

12. The control and superintendence over the places of banishment or transportation of prisoners is vested in the magistrates and joint magistrates, acting under the instructions of the zillah or city judges; and those officers shall be guided in regard to all matters relating thereto by such orders as they may receive from their respective local Governments.—Act XVIII., 1844, sec. ii.

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT.

13. No sentence of corporal punishment shall be passed by any Court, or any officer exercising magisterial powers, except as hereinafter allowed.—Reg. II., 1834, sec. ii., cl. 1.

14. Whenever a case may come before such Court or officer, in which a prisoner would have been liable to corporal punishment under any Regulation, in addition to the period of imprisonment limited by the Regulations, it shall be competent to such Court or officer passing sentence to direct an additional period of imprisonment, as follows: Courts of Nizamut Adawlut, or Courts of Sessions, two years; magistrates or joint magistrates, one year; assistants, principal, and other sudder aumeens, one month.—Reg. II., 1834, sec. ii., cl. 2.

15. It shall be competent to a magistrate, on conviction, in cases of thefts of property not exceeding in value the sum of fifty rupees, to sentence the person convicted to corporal punishment, not exceeding thirty stripes of a rattan.—Act III., 1844, sec. i.

16. It shall be competent to a magistrate, and he is required, on conviction, in cases of theft of property not exceeding in value the sum of fifty rupees, if the person convicted shall appear to him by inspection, or other evidence, to be of such tender years as to require punishment rather in the way of school discipline than of ordinary criminal justice, to sentence such person to corporal punishment with a light rattan, not exceeding ten stripes.—Act III., 1844, sec. ii.

17. No female shall be subject to corporal punishment; and in cases of infliction of corporal punishment, no other punishment shall be superadded, and the punishment shall be inflicted on all occasions in the presence of the magistrate.—Act III., 1844, sec. iii.

LABOUR.

18. In all cases of conviction for offences in which a sentence of imprisonment shall be passed for a period less than five years, with exception to the offences of murder, dacoity, highway robbery, burglary, theft, receiving stolen or plundered property, forgery, perjury, arson, and rape, or of convictions of any attempt to commit any of those offences, the Criminal Courts are required to commute the penalty of labour, with or without irons, which they are authorized to award in addition to imprisonment, to a fine not exceeding the amount which they are respectively competent to impose under the Regulations in force; such fine to be regulated with reference to the nature of the offence, the circumstances in life of the offender, and the term of imprisonment to which he may be sentenced. The Court imposing the fine shall fix a certain day within a reasonable time, not exceeding one month, for the payment thereof, and direct that, in default of payment by the period prescribed, the prisoner be subjected to labour, without fetters, until such fine be paid, or if not paid, until the completion of the term of his sentence. Nothing, however, in the foregoing rule shall be construed to supersede the power of the session judges, or Nizamut Adawlut, of exempting persons from labour and irons in any case whatever in which they may deem such exemption just and proper.—Reg. II., 1834, sec. iii., cl. 1.

19. All prisoners who may be exempted, or may be declared entitled to exemption from labour on payment of a fine under the rule prescribed in the preceding paragraph, shall, as far as practicable, be kept separate, both in and out of the jail, from convicts under sentence of labour in irons; and magistrates and superintendents of prisoners and their subordinate officers, shall be careful to prevent all communication between the two classes.—Reg. II., 1834, sec. iii., cl. 2.

FINES.

20. No fines shall be imposed by any Court of Criminal Judicature except to the use of Government; and whenever a fine shall be so imposed, the Court which may pass the sentence shall at the same time, weighing all the circumstances of the case, fix a definite period of imprisonment, to be held as equivalent to the fine, at the expiration of which the persons convicted shall be discharged, although they should have omitted to pay the fine. The imprisonment which may be awarded by the Sessions Court as an equivalent for fines imposed by them shall be temporary in all cases and not for life, and their sentences shall be executed without reference to the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XIV., 1797, sec. iii.

21. In all cases in which offenders are or may be punishable by any magistrate with fine or imprisonment, or both, according to the provisions of any Act heretofore passed or which shall hereafter be passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, and where the extreme amount of the fine or imprisonment is not specified, it shall not be lawful for the magistrate to impose any fine exceeding two hundred rupees, or to imprison the offender for any term exceeding six months. —Act II., 1839, sec. ii.

22. In all cases in which offenders are or may be punishable by fine before a magistrate, according to the provisions of any Act heretofore passed or which hereafter shall be passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, it shall be lawful for the magistrate, and he is required, to receive proof of the commission of the offence upon oath, or upon solemn affirmation in cases where a solemn affirmation is receivable by law instead of an oath.—Act II., 1839, sec. iii.

23. All Criminal Courts may add to the punishment competent to them to inflict upon persons convicted before them of robbery, theft, embezzlement, knowingly receiving stolen goods, cheating, or other wrongful appropriation of property, or of being accessory or privy to any such offence, the punishment of fine not exceeding the loss appearing to be caused to the several persons who have suffered by such wrong; and may pay and distribute the proceeds of the said fine, or any part thereof, to or for the benefit of the said several persons, according to the discretion of the Court.—Act XVI., 1850, sec. i.

24. Payment of every such fine may be enforced by distress and sale, under the order of the Court, of the goods of the offender.—Act XVI., 1850, sec. ii.

NOTE.—See "MAGISTRATES," paragraphs 55 and 56, and "SPECIFIC OFFENCES," paragraphs 77 and 78.

BRANDING, &c.

25. It shall not be lawful for any Court or magistrate within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company to order that any brand or indelible mark of any kind be made or renewed on any part of the person of any convicted offender, or to sentence any offender to be publicly exposed by tusheer, or to any other degrading exposure.—Act II., 1849, sec. ii.

MAHOMEDAN LAW.

GENERAL RULES FOR ITS ADMINISTRATION

1. The law officers of the Sessions Courts and of the Nizamut Adawlut shall declare the Mahomedan law as applicable to the several cases that come before them, and the sentence of the Courts shall be regulated by the futwahs of the law officers and by the Mahomedan law, except as otherwise provided in the Regulations and Acts of Government.—Reg. IX, 1793, secs. xlvii, and lxxiv.

2. The judges of the Sessions Courts are to refer to the cauzy and mufty of their respective Courts all questions on points of law that may arise during the course of any trial, and respecting which no specific rules shall have been enacted by the Governor-General in Council, and shall regulate their proceedings by the opinions which may be delivered by those officers If such opinions shall appear to the judges contrary to the principles of natural justice or to the Mahomedan law, they are nevertheless to be guided by them, and after completing the trial, and obtaining the futwah of the law officers upon the case, as well as in all cases in which they may disapprove of the futwah, they shall, without passing sentence upon the case, transmit the proceedings and futwah to the Nizamut Adawlut, with a separate letter stating their objections to such opinions or futwah, and wait the sentence of that Court —Reg IX, 1793, secs. liii and liv.

3. No criminal shall suffer the punishment of mutilation. If a prisoner shall be sentenced, in conformity to the futwah of the law officers, to lose two limbs, instead of being made to undergo such punishment, he shall be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for fourteen years, and if any prisoner shall be so sentenced to lose one limb, he shall, in lieu of such punishment, be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for seven years The judges are accordingly directed, whenever any criminal shall be sentenced to suffer mutilation, to commute such punishment for imprisonment and hard labour for the term above prescribed, and to issue their warrant to the magistrates for that purpose.—Reg. IX, 1793, sec li.

4. The religious persuasions of witnesses shall not be considered as a bar to the conviction or condemnation of a prisoner, but in cases in which the evidence given on a trial would be deemed incompetent by the Mahomedan law, solely on the ground of the persons giving such evidence not professing the Mahomedan religion, the law officers of the Sessions Court are to be required to declare what would have been their futwah, supposing such witnesses had been Mahomedans The Sessions Courts are not to pass sentence on such cases, but shall transmit the record of the trial, with the futwah directed to be required from the law officers, to the Nizamut Adawlut, which Court, provided they approve of the proceedings held on the trial, shall pass such sentence as they would have passed, had the witnesses, whose testimony may be so deemed incompetent, been of the Mahomedan persuasion —Reg IX, 1793, sec. lvi.

5. If the evidence of a witness on a criminal trial before a Sessions Court be declared by the Mahomedan law officer inadmissible, on the ground of the witness being a police officer, or an officer of Government of any description, or on any other ground of exception in the Mahomedan rules of evidence, which may appear to the judge of sessions unreasonable and insufficient, the judge shall cause the examination of the witness to be taken, notwithstanding the exception stated by the law officer, and shall require the latter, on completion of the trial, to declare in his futwah the sentence to which the prisoner would have been liable, if the evidence of the witness or witnesses objected to had been admissible under the provisions of the Mahomedan law. In such cases, however, if the conviction of the prisoner depend exclusively or principally upon the evidence of the witness or witnesses objected to by the law officer, the judge of sessions shall not pass any sentence, but shall refer the trial to the Nizamut Adawlut, which Court is empowered to pass such sentence as may be deemed just and proper under the general Regulations in force.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec v

6. Whenever the law officers of the Sessions Courts shall declare prisoners liable to deyut or pecuniary fines of any kind, for any other acts than murder and the several descriptions of homicide specified in Section III, Regulation IV., 1797, the Sessions Courts shall, at their discretion, commute such deyut or fines to imprisonment, for such period as they may think adequate to the offence, and their sentences in such instances shall be carried into execution without reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, if for temporary imprisonment, or referred to that Court, if for imprisonment for life, which shall, at its discretion, confirm the said sentences, or mitigate or entirely remit the imprisonment awarded.—Reg. XIV., 1797, sec. iv.

7. The Mahomedan law vests in the sovereign and his delegates the power of sentencing criminals to suffer discretionary punishment (under the legal denominations of tazeer, acoobut, and seeasut), in three cases. First, in the case of offences for which no specific penalty of hud or kissaas has been provided by the law; being, for the most part, offences not of a heinous nature, the punishment of which is left discretionary, below the measure of the specific penalties, for the correction and amendment of the offender. Secondly, for crimes within the specific provisions of hud and kissaas; when the proof of the commission of such crimes may not be such as the law requires for a judgment of the specific penalties, though sufficient to establish a strong presumption of guilt; or although the proof be such as is required for a sentence of hud or kissaas, when such sentence is barred by a remission of the claim to retaliation in cases of kissaas, or by any of the special exceptions and scrupulous distinctions which (under the general denomination of shoobah) are considered by the prevalent authorities of Mahomedan law to bar a judgment for the specific penalties of that law. Thirdly, for heinous crimes, in a high degree injurious to society; and particularly for repeated offences of this description, which, for the ends of public justice (as expressed by the term seeasut), may appear to require exemplary punishment beyond the prescribed penalties; and with respect to crimes of this description, an unlimited discretion, extending to capital punishment, is admitted to have been left by the Mahomedan law to the sovereign authority of every country in which that law prevails, as well as to its judiciary delegates. In the adjudication of punishments under the discretion thus allowed by the Mahomedan law, especially in the second of the three cases above stated, it has been observed, that the futwahs of the Mahomedan law officers of the Criminal Courts are often governed by a consideration of the degree of proof against the party accused, rather than the degree of guilt and criminality of the act established against him; and the penalties awarded by them, in such cases, are either adjudged on insufficient proof of guilt, or are inadequate to the heinousness of the offence of which the prisoner is convicted. It is, therefore, necessary that provision be made for determining the punishment to be adjudged by the Criminal Courts, in all cases wherein a discretion is left by the Mahomedan law, as well to guard against the infliction of any punishment without sufficient evidence of guilt, as to maintain the uniform and adequate punishment of offenders, when convicted, according to the criminality of the offences established against them. It is further requisite to define the crime and punishment of robbery by open violence, under the continued prevalence of this atrocious crime, which is frequently attended with murder, or with maiming, or other personal injury, as well as with the crime of arson or wilful burning of houses, and other aggravating circumstances, and for the punishment of which the specific provisions of the Mahomedan law, under the distinctions admitted to except offenders from the stated penalties, as well as from a distinction in the received construction of that law, between highway robbery at a distance from any inhabited place, and robberies not committed on or near the highways, or committed in or near any place inhabited, have been found altogether inadequate. In the case of murder committed by one or more robbers on the highway (kuttâ-oolturreek) at a distance from any inhabited place, the whole of the principals and accomplices are subject, by the Mahomedan law (under its specific provision of hud, or stated punishment by the right of God, being, in other words, exemplary punishment inflicted for the prevention of crimes, which is the end of public justice), to a sentence of death. The same punishment, in this instance, is inflicted on the whole band, in consideration of each of them being aiding and abetting to the others; and this principle, as allowed by some of the Mahomedan lawyers, is obviously applicable to all murders and other crimes committed by open violence, and by a number of persons assisting and supporting each other, whether on the highway, remote from or near to an inhabited place, or within a place inhabited, or in any other place whatever. But according to the prevailing doctrines, this provision of the Mahomedan law, as well as the provisions it contains for the punishment of highway robbery without murder, by amputation of two limbs, cannot be applied to murders or robberies committed in any other place than on or near the highway, at a distance from any place inhabited; and even with respect to these, it is held that the specific punishment is barred by any one of the band of robbers being under age, or a lunatic, or a relation within the prohibited degrees of the person robbed or murdered; or by the person robbed or murdered not being a fixed resident under the permanent protection of the Mussulman government; or with respect to robberies, by one of the robbers having a joint interest in the property plundered, or such property not being considered in legal custody with respect to any one of the robbers; or lastly, with regard to the separate punishment of each robber, if his share of the property taken shall not amount in value to ten dirms, being, according to the received calculation of the dirm, somewhat less than three rupees. These distinctions are evidently repugnant to the principles of public and equal justice. —Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. i.

8. In all trials before the Sessions Courts, wherein the Mahomedan law officers of those Courts may consider the prisoner liable to discretionary punishment (tazeer, acoobut, or seeasut), their futwah shall declare the same generally, with a statement of the grounds on which the prisoner is adjudged subject to discretionary punishment, leaving the measure of punishment in such cases to be determined by the session judge before whom the trial may be held, or by the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, under the provisions contained in the Regulations.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 1.

9. If the crime for which the prisoner is declared liable to discretionary punishment, in such cases, shall have been specifically provided for by any subsisting Regulation, denouncing the penalty to be adjudged on proof of the commission of such crime, and the judge before whom the trial may be held shall consider the crime to have been established against the prisoner, whether by his free and voluntary confession, or by the testimony of credible witnesses, or by strong circumstantial evidence, he shall sentence the prisoner to suffer the punishment for such crime prescribed by the Regulations; or, if the case be referrible under the Regulations for the sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut, shall transmit the trial, with his opinion thereupon, to that Court.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 2.

10. If the crime for which the prisoner is declared liable to discretionary punishment shall not have been specifically provided for by any Regulation denouncing the penalty to be adjudged on proof of the commission of it, but be such as would have subjected the prisoner to the specific penalty of hud or kissaas provided by the Mahomedan law, if he had been convicted by full legal evidence, and the futwah of the law officer shall declare him liable to discretionary punishment, in consequence of the evidence not being such as the Mahomedan law requires for a sentence of hud or kissaas, though sufficient to convict the prisoner on strong presumptive proof or violent presumption (ghalib-oo-zun), the judge before whom the trial may be held, provided he concur in the conviction of the prisoner, shall require the law officer to declare by a second futwah to what specific punishment (of hud or kissaas) the prisoner would have been liable under the Mahomedan law, if he had been convicted by full legal evidence, and shall proceed thereupon to pass sentence according to such second futwah (commuting the punishment, if any Regulation require it); or if the case be referrible for the sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut, shall transmit the trial, with his opinion, to that Court.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 3.

11. The judge before whom the trial may be held shall proceed in like manner as directed in the preceding paragraph, when the crime of which the prisoner is convicted (whether upon full legal evidence or upon strong presumptive proof) may not have been specifically provided for by any Regulation, but would subject the prisoner to the specific penalty of hud or kissaas provided by the Mahomedan law, if the sentence against him for such penalty were not barred by some special exception or scrupulous distinction (shoobah), not affecting the nature and criminality of the offence, and evidently repugnant to the principles of equal justice, in consequence of which bar to a judgment for the specific penalty the prisoner is declared liable to discretionary punishment. In such cases, the law officer is to declare, by a second futwah, to what punishment the prisoner would have been liable under the Mahomedan law for the crime committed by him, if the special exception or distinction, by which hud or kissaas is barred in the particular case, had not existed; and the judge is to proceed thereupon as directed in the preceding paragraph.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 4.

12. Nothing in this section, however, shall be construed as authorizing a sentence of discretionary punishment exceeding, or equal to, the specific punishment prescribed by the Mahomedan law, in cases where such specific penalty is remitted or mitigated by the provisions of the Mahomedan law, in consideration of circumstances which alter the nature and diminish the criminality of the offence; unless such enhanced or equal punishment for the crime in question shall have been expressly denounced by some Regulation in modification of the Mahomedan law. —Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 5.

13. Nor shall any part of the present Regulation be considered to authorize the infliction of any punishment whatever upon suspicion only (termed by the Mahomedan lawyers wuhm, shuk, or shoobah zaeefah), when the evidence against the prisoner is undeserving of credit, or the presumption of his guilt, arising from credible testimony, or circumstantial evidence, is weak, and does not amount to the degree of strong and violent presumption held sufficient for conviction, and recognized as such in the Mahomedan law, under the denominations of ghalib-oo-zun, akbur-oo-raee, and shoobuh-oo-cuvvee, or shoodeed. When the judge before whom a prisoner may be tried shall not consider him convicted on such presumptive proof, or on the evidence of credible witnesses, or on his own confession, he shall not sentence the prisoner to suffer any punishment, whatever may be the futwah of the law officer. But upon proof of notorious bad character, the session Judge may direct the zillah or city magistrate to detain the prisoner in custody, until he shall give sufficient security for his future good behaviour and appearance when required.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 6.

14. If the crime of which the prisoner is convicted, and for which he is declared liable to discretionary punishment, shall neither have been specifically provided for by any Regulation, nor by any stated penalty in the Mahomedan law, and the judge before whom the trial may be held shall consider the crime to have been established against the prisoner and deserving of punishment; he shall, after consulting with the law officer respecting the measure of punishment which, under the discretion left by the law, and the whole of the circumstances of the case, should be inflicted upon the prisoner, adjudge the prisoner to suffer such punishment as may appear adequate to his guilt and the nature of the offence of which he is convicted, not exceeding imprisonment with hard labour for the term of seven years, and two years' additional imprisonment in commutation of corporal punishment. If, in any instance, this degree of punishment appear to the session judge insufficient, in a case not specifically provided for by the Mahomedan law or the Regulations, he shall transmit the trial, with his sentiments thereupon, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 7; and Reg. II., 1834.

15. In all trials transmitted by the Sessions Court to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, in which the Mahomedan law officers of that Court may consider the prisoner or prisoners liable to discretionary punishment, they shall declare the same generally, with a statement of the grounds on which the prisoner or prisoners may be adjudged by them subject to discretionary punishment, leaving the measure of punishment in such cases to be determined by the judges of the Nizamut Adawlut, under the provisions contained in Regulation LIII., 1803, or any other existing Regulation.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. vii., cl. 1.

16. The several provisions made by paragraphs 9 to 13, for the guidance of the Sessions Court, in cases wherein their law officers may declare a prisoner or prisoners liable to discretionary punishment, and wherein a specific punishment may have been fixed and declared by the Regulations, or wherein the specific penalties of the Mahomedan law may be withheld, on the ground of the evidence against the prisoner not being such as the law requires for a sentence of hud or kissaas, though sufficient to convict the prisoner on strong presumptive proof, or wherein the sentence of hud or kissaas is barred against the prisoner, though fully convicted, by some special exception or distinction, not affecting the nature and criminality of the offence, and evidently repugnant to the principles of equal justice, shall be considered equally applicable to all cases of the same descriptions, wherein the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut, in any trials before that Court, may declare the prisoner or prisoners liable to discretionary punishment; and the judges of that Court are to pass sentence accordingly, after taking a second futwah from their law officers in cases which may require it.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. vii., cl. 2.

17. In trials referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, under paragraph 14, viz. when the crime of which the prisoner is convicted, and for which he is declared liable to discretionary punishment, shall not have been specifically provided for, either by the Regulations, or by any stated penalty in the Mahomedan law, the judges of the Nizamut Adawlut, provided the offence be punishable at discretion under the Mahomedan law, they shall be satisfied of the conviction of the prisoner, are authorized to pass such sentence upon the prisoner, not extending to capital punishment, as they may deem adequate to the crime of which he has been convicted, and consonant to the general principles of justice, on due consideration of all the circumstances of the case.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. vii., cl. 3.

18. The provisions contained in Sections III. and IV. of Regulation LIII., 1803 (Specific Offences, paragraphs 27 to 34), shall govern the sentences of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut in the cases therein specified, and the judges of that Court are authorized to adjudge the stated punishment, whatever may be the futwah of their law officers; provided that it shall declare the prisoner or prisoners to have been convicted of the crimes incurring the stated penalties, either on free and voluntary confession, or on the testimony of credible witnesses, or on strong circumstantial evidence (sufficient to establish ghalib-zun, or violent presumption of guilt): and provided the judges of the Nizamut Adawlut shall see no cause to disapprove such conviction of the prisoner or prisoners, or to mitigate or remit the specified punishment.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. vii., cl. 4.

EXEMPTION FROM REFERENCE FOR FUTWAH OF MAHOMEDAN LAW OFFICERS.

19. Whenever there may appear to be sufficient cause for dispensing with the attendance and futwah of the law officers of the Sessions Courts upon a criminal trial or trials to be held before any of those Courts, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council, or to the executive Government for the time being, to order the same; and an official communication of such order by the secretary to Government in the judicial department shall be deemed sufficient authority for the trial or trials therein referred to being held before the judge of the Sessions Court, without the attendance or futwah of the law officers.—Reg. I., 1810, sec. ii.

20. In such cases, no sentence shall be passed by the session judge; but the proceedings on the trial, when completed, shall be transmitted with the opinion of the judge on the evidence and facts established, for the sentence of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. I., 1810, sec. iii.

21. In the event of any question of Mahomedan law arising upon such trials, the same shall be recorded upon the proceedings, for the information and decision of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut; but if the question refer to the competency of a witness, such witness shall be examined, leaving the admission or ultimate rejection of the testimony so given to the consideration of the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. I., 1810, sec. iv.

22. No Court shall require any futwah from any law officer on the trial of any person accused of any of the following offences: having belonged to any gang of Thugs or Dacoits either within or without the territories of the East-India Company; or to any wandering gang of persons associated for the purpose of theft or robbery, not being gangs of Thugs or Dacoits.—Act XXX., 1836, sec. iii.; Act XXIV., 1843, sec. iii.; Act XI., 1848, sec. iii.

23. Criminal trials may be held without the necessity of any special authority from the Government by all Courts of criminal justice in which a commissioner of circuit or judge of sessions may preside, with the aid of a native punchayet, or assessors, or jury, under the provisions of Act VI., 1832. In all such trials, the futwah of a Mahomedan law officer is declared unnecessary, and may be dispensed with at the option of the Court, anything in the existing Regulations to the contrary notwithstanding; provided that whenever the futwah is dispensed with, and the crime of which the prisoner is convicted be one which the judge is not specifically empowered by the Regulations to punish, he shall not proceed to pass sentence, but shall refer the case for the consideration of the Nizamut Adawlut, stating at length in the proceedings the opinion of the punchayet, assessors, or jury, and his own opinion as to the crime proved, and the nature and extent of the punishment which should be awarded.—Reg. VI., 1832, sec. iv., cl. 1.

24. In all such trials, the decision is vested exclusively in the officer presiding in the Court, provided that the sentence be one which, under the existing Regulations, it is within his competency to pass.—Reg. VI., 1832, sec. iv., cl. 2.

25. Any person not professing the Mahomedan faith, when brought to trial on a commitment for an offence cognizable under the general Regulations, may claim to be exempted from trial under the provisions of the Mahomedan criminal code; and in such case the session judge presiding on the trial shall comply with such requisition, and shall proceed in one of the three modes above referred to, at the same time dispensing with the futwah of the Mahomedan law officer.—Reg. VI., 1832, sec. v.

26. It shall not hereafter be necessary that a futwah be filed by the law officers in every case that may be referred for the final sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut; but the judge or judges, by whom the proceedings shall be reviewed, shall exercise their discretion in requiring a futwah, or otherwise, as may appear to them expedient or necessary, excepting in cases in which exemption from the futwah is prescribed by the preceding paragraph.—Reg. VI., 1832, sec. vi.

PROCEDURE IN CASES OF ALLEGED INSANITY.

27. The circumstance of supervening insanity, subsequent to the perpetration of a crime, at a time when no degree of derangement existed, and prior to the conviction of the prisoner for such crime, having been declared by the law officers, in a case of murder, to bar all capital or discretionary punishment, and to subject such person to deyut only in all such cases, viz. of a prisoner being afflicted with insanity subsequent to the commission of any crime, and of his subsequent perfect recovery, the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut shall be called on to declare what the futwah would have been, if such derangement had not intervened, and the judge or judges sitting on the trial shall pass sentence under the general Regulations, and on consideration of all the circumstances of the case, the same as if no such malady had happened to the prisoner.—Reg. IV., 1822, sec. iv.

28. The rule contained in Section IV., Regulation XVII., 1817 (Nizamut Adawlut, paragraph 10), empowering two or more judges of the Nizamut Adawlut to convict and punish a prisoner charged with a criminal offence, in opposition to the acquittal of their law officers, shall be considered to extend to any case in which the futwah of the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut may declare the legal penalty, or punishment generally, barred by reason of a doubt as to the prisoner's sanity when he committed the act charged; provided two or more judges of the Nizamut Adawlut, on due consideration of the evidence in such case, shall be satisfied that there is no sufficient ground to believe that the prisoner was insane when he committed the act so charged, and that he is a proper object of punishment.—Reg. IV., 1822, sec. vii.

29. No person who does an act which, if done by a person of sound mind, is an offence, shall be acquitted of such offence for unsoundness of mind, unless the Court or jury, as the case may be, in which, according to the constitution of the Court, the power of conviction or acquittal is vested, shall find that, by reason of unsoundness of mind, not wilfully caused by himself, he was unconscious and incapable of knowing, at the time of doing the said act, that he was doing an act forbidden by the law of the land.—Act IV., 1849, sec. i.

30. Whenever a person charged with any offence shall be acquitted, because he is within the exception made by the foregoing paragraph, the Court or jury shall give a special judgment or verdict, that he did the act charged against him, being then of unsound mind, so as to excuse him according to law.—Act IV., 1849, sec. ii.

31. Whenever such special judgment or verdict, as aforesaid, shall have been given against any person, the Court, before which the trial was had, shall order him to be kept in safe custody, in such place and manner as to the Court shall seem fit, until the pleasure of the Government can be known thereon: and thereupon the Government may order such person to be kept in strict custody, for such time and in such manner as to the Government shall seem fit.—Act IV., 1849, sec. iii.

32. In all cases in which, before the passing of this Act, any person has been acquitted of any offence on the ground of insanity, lunacy, idiocy, or unsoundness of mind, such person may be kept in the same strict custody in which persons may be kept, who shall be hereafter acquitted, for unsoundness of mind.—Act IV., 1849, sec. iv.

33. No person, against whom any such special judgment or verdict shall have been given, shall be entitled to be discharged out of custody on being restored to soundness of mind, unless by order and at the discretion of the Government.—Act IV., 1849, sec. v.

34. Whenever it shall appear to the Government that any person imprisoned by the sentence of any Court is of unsound mind, the Government, by a warrant which shall set forth the grounds of belief that such prisoner is of unsound mind, may order the removal of such prisoner to a lunatic asylum, or other fit place of safe custody, there to be kept and treated as the Government shall order; and, when it shall appear to the Government that such prisoner has become of sound mind, the Government, by a warrant directed to the person having charge of him, shall remand such prisoner to the prison from which he was removed, if then still liable to be kept in custody, or if not, shall order him to be discharged out of custody.—Act IV., 1849, sec. vi.

NOTE.—The rules for the application of Mahomedan law in cases of conviction of particular crimes will be found under the head "SPECIFIC OFFENCES."

JAILS AND PRISONERS.

CONTROL AND SUPERINTENDENCE.

1. The whole control and superintendence over the several jails of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, the prisoners confined in them, the establishments thereunto belonging, and the places of banishment or transportation of prisoners, shall be vested in the magistrates and joint magistrates, acting under the instructions of the zillah and city judges, and the magistrates, joint magistrates, and zillah and city judges, shall be guided in regard to all matters relating to the jails under their charge, the prisoners confined in them, the establishments thereunto belonging, and the places of banishment or transportation of prisoners, by such orders as they may receive from their respective local governments.—Reg. XVIII., 1844, secs. i. and ii.

RECEPTION AND CUSTODY OF PRISONERS.

2. Any zillah or city magistrate shall be competent to give effect to the sentence of a general court-martial, adjudging imprisonment with hard labour among the convicts of the civil power, on the offender being delivered into his custody, and the sentence being certified to him for the purpose of his giving it effect, by the judge advocate-general, or his deputy, under the authority of the Commander-in-Chief; and the sentence so certified shall serve as the magistrate's warrant and authority for carrying it into effect according to the terms of it.—Reg. IV., 1820, sec. ii.

3. Whenever, under Act No. XXIII. of 1839 ("MILITARY COURTS," paragraph 4), any sentence of a court-martial shall adjudge imprisonment, or imprisonment with labour, for any offence, it shall be the duty of every judge, magistrate, sheriff, or other officer in charge of any jail, to give effect to such sentence on the offender being delivered into his custody, and on being furnished with a copy of the sentence by the officer commanding the division, garrison, regiment, or detachment, as the case may be, to which the offender belongs.—Act II., 1840, sec. i.

4. All sheriffs, jailers, and other persons having custody of any offender under sentence of a court-martial, shall obey and give effect to any warrant of the Commander-in-Chief, countersigned by a magistrate or judge of the Supreme Court as aforesaid, for the pardon and release of any offender in their custody respectively, or for the remission of any part of his sentence.—Act VI., 1850, sec. iv.

5. Within the territories subject to the Government of the East-India Company, and without the local limits of the jurisdiction of her Majesty's Courts of Judicature, the several officers in charge of jails shall be competent to give effect to any sentence that may be passed by any Court established, or that may be established by the authority of the Governor-General of India in Council, for the administration of criminal justice in states or territories administered by officers acting under the authority of the East-India Company, although such states or territories are not subject to the Government of Fort William in Bengal, or are not subject to the operation of the general Regulations.—Act V., 1847, sec. i.

6. A warrant under the official seal and signature of the officer or officers exercising criminal jurisdiction within such states or territories as aforesaid, shall be sufficient authority for holding any prisoner in confinement, or for transmitting any prisoner for transportation beyond sea, or for inflicting any other punishment prescribed therein.—Act V., 1847, sec. ii.

7. If any officer in charge of a jail shall entertain any doubt as to the legality of any warrant sent to him for execution under this Act, or as to the competency of the person or persons whose official seal and signature may be affixed thereto, to pass the sentence and issue such warrant, such officer shall refer the matter to the Government to which he is subject, by whose order on the case such officer, and all other public officers, shall be guided as to the future disposal of the prisoner, and that pending any such reference, the prisoner shall be detained in custody in such manner and with such restrictions or mitigations as may be specified in the warrant.—Act V., 1847, sec. iii.

8. The provisions of the existing Acts and Regulations, and all other rules in force for the treatment and security of prisoners confined in the said jails, shall apply and be of equal force and effect in the case of prisoners confined therein under this Act, as in the case of other prisoners confined therein.—Act V., 1847, sec. iv.

9. When any person is under sentence of imprisonment within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, by any authority other than that of one of the Supreme Courts of Judicature established by royal charter, the Governor, or Governor in Council, or other person administering the Government of the presidency or place, may order the removal of such prisoner from the prison or place in which he is confined to any other public prison or place of confinement within the same presidency or Government.—Act VII., 1850, sec. ii.

10. The time of removal from one prison to another, or while the prisoner is in custody under such warrant of removal, shall reckon as part of his imprisonment.—Act VII., 1850, sec. iii.

11. The magistrates of the several zillahs and cities shall transmit to the Government a list of the convicts in their respective jails who may have been sentenced to transportation or to banishment, specifying in such lists the names, ages, crimes, and sentences of the several convicts; and in the lists of those sentenced to banishment the district in which they may have usually resided before they were brought to trial.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. viii., cl. 4; and Act XVIII., 1844.

12. The Government, after receiving the list required by the foregoing paragraph, will issue the necessary directions for conveying to jail the convicts sentenced to transportation beyond sea, till an opportunity may offer for transporting them; and will also give the requisite instructions concerning the removal of the convicts under a sentence of banishment.—Reg. LIII., 1803, sec. viii., cl. 5; and Act XVIII., 1844.

DISCIPLINE IN CRIMINAL PRISONS.

13. The magistrate is to visit the jail at least once in every month, and redress all well-founded complaints of ill-treatment which may be preferred to them by the prisoners against the jailer, or any officers havingcharge of them. He is to be particularly attentive to the health and cleanliness of the prisoners, and to see that the surgeon of the station attends and administers to the sick.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xx.

14. Separate apartments in the jail are to be allotted for the following description of prisoners:—

Prisoners under sentence of death.

Prisoners sentenced to confinement by the Sessions Court or the Nizamut Adawlut.

Prisoners committed to take their trial before the Sessions Court.

Prisoners sentenced to confinement by the magistrate for petty crimes or misdemeanors cognizable by him.

And as the crimes proved or alleged against the second or third descriptions of prisoners must be of different degrees of atrocity, the magistrates are required to separate those who have been found guilty or accused of heinous crimes from such as have been convicted of or charged with crimes of less magnitude. They are likewise to separate the male from the female prisoners, so as to prevent them having any communication with each other; and the rules prescribed in this paragraph for keeping apart the several descriptions of the former, are to be considered applicable also to the latter. The magistrates are further enjoined to endeavour to prevent drunkenness, gaming, and other immoralities being practised in the jails.—Reg. IX., 1793, sec. xxi.

15. All prisoners who may be exempted, or may be declared entitled to exemption from labour on payment of a fine, shall, as far as practicable, be kept separate, both in and out of the jail, from convicts under sentence of labour in irons; and magistrates and superintendents of prisoners and their subordinate officers, shall be careful to prevent all communication between the two classes.—Reg. II., 1834, sec. iii., cl. 2.

16. For the purpose of enabling the magistrates to maintain good order and discipline among the prisoners confined in the public jails or other authorized places of confinement, and to enforce a due observance of the prescribed rules by the employment of the prisoners under their charge, they are vested with authority to punish, on a summary inquiry, the offences specified in the following Sections of this Regulation.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. iv.

17. A contumacious refusal to work by any prisoner sentenced to hard labour, or though not so sentenced, who may be subject to labour, under any provision in the Regulations.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. v., cl. 1.

18. Wilful neglect and indolence in the performance of any prescribed work by a prisoner subject to labour, as described in the preceding paragraph, especially after previous admonition.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. v., cl. 2.

19. For the above offences the magistrate may cause the prisoner to be moderately corrected with a rattan; or in the instance of a prisoner's pertinaciously refusing to work, may likewise order his diet allowance to be reduced, in such degree as may be consistent with his support, until he shall perform the work required of him.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. vi., cl. 2.

20. Wilful disobedience to any of the written rules for the observance of prisoners and internal economy of a public jail, which may have been translated into the current language of the country, and suspended on a board within the jail for general information, as directed in the printed jail rules in force.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. v., cl. 3.

21. Refractory behaviour by prisoners; such as resistance to the jailor, guards, or other public officers, in the regular discharge of their proper functions; abusive language to any such officers; and generally any culpable behaviour towards them, which may not involve a serious act of criminality such as cannot be duly punished by the magistrates, and should therefore be brought before the Sessions Court.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. v., cl. 4.

22. Any other instance of disorderly conduct by a prisoner; such as riot, insurrection, attempt to escape, taking off or loosening, or attempting to loosen, by filing, cutting, or otherwise, his own irons, or those of other prisoners, with a view to escape; conspiring with other prisoners for the purpose of insurrection or escape, or for any other criminal purpose; abusing or assaulting another prisoner, and generally any misconduct committed by a prisoner whilst in custody, which, under the Regulations or Acts in force, or from its aggravated nature, may not exceed the competency of the magistrate, and therefore be more properly cognizable by the Sessions Court.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. v., cl. 5.

23. The offences specified in paragraphs 20 to 22 shall be punishable, according to the nature and circumstances of the case, by stripes with a rattan, not exceeding thirty, or by close, and as far as practicable, by solitary confinement; or when a prisoner may have attempted to escape, by the substitution of heavy fetters for those in ordinary use, by the temporary addition of neck chains of a moderate weight, when the prisoner may have been refractory or turbulent, or guilty of any act of violence, and in aggravated or emergent cases of this nature, by the further restraint of handcuffs, whilst such restraint, which is never to be imposed without necessity, shall appear to be requisite for the safeguard of the prisoner, or to prevent his doing mischief to others.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. vi., cl. 3.

24. In adjudging punishment on a summary inquiry, under the foregoing rules in paragraphs 19 and 23, due regard must be had to the nature of the offence, the condition of the prisoner, and every other just consideration applicable to the case.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. vi., cl. 1.

25. The powers above declared to be vested in magistrates may be exercised by joint magistrates and assistant magistrates, who are not stationed at the same place with the zillah or city magistrates, and who, under the general Regulations, are invested with the authority of magistrates, with respect to prisoners under their immediate charge. The zillah and city magistrates are further empowered to refer to their assistants at the sudder stations, any cases within the provisions of this Regulation, observing the rule that the order of reference shall direct, whether the assistant is to submit his proceedings for the magistrate's decision, or to pass his own determination on the case referred to him. If the assistant be authorized to determine the case referred to him, he is empowered to pass the same order as might have been passed by the magistrate, but his decision will be open to revision by the magistrate, if the latter see cause for it, as provided in Section XXI., Regulation IX., 1807 ("Magistrates," paragraph 125), with respect to all judgments passed by the assistant to a magistrate, who is not vested with the full powers of magistrate.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. vii.

26. It shall not be necessary to make a detailed record of the evidence, or of any part of the proceedings held in the summary inquiries authorized by Regulation XIV., 1816, nor shall it be requisite to examine witnesses upon oath or affirmation, except in cases of a serious nature, involving offences specifically provided for by the general rules in force for the administration of criminal justice. But a record shall be kept of every summary conviction and punishment, stating the name of the prisoner, the offence charged against him, the substance of the evidence and conviction, or the magistrate's personal view when the facts of the case may have taken place within his view, and the punishment ordered, with the date of the order, to be signed by the public officer by whom it may be passed.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. viii.

27. The rules contained in Section III., Regulation II., 1834 (Punishments, paragraphs 18, 19), respecting exemption from the punishment of labour, are not intended to interfere with the general discretion vested in the magistrates of imposing fetters, or otherwise restraining refractory prisoners under the provisions in force for that purpose, nor to exempt from a sentence of labour, with or without irons, convicts who, having been relieved therefrom under the provisions of that Regulation, may effect their escape from a gaol or other place of confinement, or from the custody of their guards, and may have been re-apprehended.—Reg. II., 1834, sec. iv.

28. The provisions of Clause First, Section II., Regulation II., 1834 (Punishments, paragraph 13), shall not exempt convicts sentenced to labour in irons from such moderate corporal punishment during their imprisonment as may be unavoidable for the maintenance of the discipline of the gaols —Reg II, 1834, sec vi

29 It shall be competent to the Governor-General, by an order in council, to issue such orders as he may from time to time deem necessary for the introduction of a system of discipline into the gaols, calculated both to reform the convicts and to render their imprisonment efficacious, as an example to deter others from the commission of crime —Reg II, 1834, sec vii

30 Within the territories subject to the Government of the East-India Company, except within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts, any convict sentenced to imprisonment for life, or to transportation for life, who does any act with the intention of thereby causing, or with the knowledge that he or she is likely thereby to cause, the death of any person, shall, upon conviction thereof, before the Sessions Court, subject to confirmation by the Sudder Court, be punished with death, or with transportation for life, or with corporal punishment not exceeding thirty-nine stripes, whether such convict does or does not by such act cause the death of any person —Act XVIII, 1845, sec i

31 Any such convict as aforesaid, who commits any offence whatever other than the offences mentioned in the preceding paragraph, or who is guilty of violent or disorderly conduct after having been punished by the order of the superintendent of the gaol, in which he or she is confined, shall, upon conviction thereof before the Sessions Court, subject, if the sentence be transportation for life, to confirmation by the Sudder Court, be punished with transportation for life, or with corporal punishment not exceeding thirty-nine stripes —Act XVIII, 1845, sec ii

DISCIPLINE IN CIVIL PRISONS

32 The magistrate is vested with authority to punish, on a summary inquiry, the offences specified in the following section of this Regulation, when the same are committed in the civil jail under his control —Reg III, 1826, sec iii

33 Refractory behaviour by any prisoner confined under process of the Civil Court, such as resistance to the jailor, guards, or other public officers in the regular discharge of their public functions, abusive language to any such officers, and generally any culpable behaviour towards them, which may not involve a serious act of criminality, such as cannot be duly punished by the magistrate, and should therefore be brought before the Sessions Court —Reg III, 1826, sec iv, cl 1

34 Any other instance of disorderly conduct by a prisoner, such as riot, insurrection, attempt to escape, conspiring with other prisoners with a view to escape, or for the purpose of insurrection, or for any other unlawful or prohibited purpose, abusing or assaulting another prisoner, and, generally, any misconduct committed by a prisoner whilst in custody, which, under the Regulations in force, or from its aggravated nature, may not exceed the competency of the magistrate, and therefore be more properly cognizable by the Sessions Court —Reg III, 1826, sec. iv, cl 2

35 The powers vested in the magistrate for the punishment of the offences specified in the preceding section (paragraphs 32, 33), which on a summary inquiry may appear to have been committed by any of the prisoners confined under civil process, are declared to be as follows, due regard being had to the nature of the offence, the condition of the prisoner, and every just consideration applicable to the case —Reg III, 1826, sec v, cl 1

36. The offences specified in the preceding section shall be punishable by close confinement, or by a reduction of the prisoner s allowance, for any term not exceeding two months, the allowance to be in no case reduced below what may be consistent with the prisoner s support, and the difference between the prisoner's full allowance and the reduced rate to be carried to the credit of Government as a fine —Reg III, 1826, sec v, cl 2

37 The rule for conducting such summary inquiries, and recording such sentences, and for their inspection by the session judge, shall be the same with that prescribed with regard to prisoners confined in the criminal jails, by Section VIII, Regulation XIV., 1816 (paragraph 25) —Reg III, 1826, sec v, cl 3

38 Provided, however, that nothing in this Regulation shall be construed to give the magistrate any jurisdiction whatever over the question of a civil prisoner s liability to confinement, or title to release, with reference to the civil process under which he may have been sent to jail, or to preclude the judge of the Civil Court, or his ministerial officers, European or native, authorized and deputed by him, from visiting the civil jail, or the judge from summoning any civil prisoner to his Court, upon matters connected with the civil process under which he is confined, or for other judicial purpose —Reg III, 1826, sec vi

WORK OF CONVICTS

39 It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to detain in the jail at Allipore, for any period which he may deem expedient, any convicts sentenced to transportation —Reg IX, 1813, sec ii, cl 2

40 The superintendent of the jail at Allipore is vested with authority to employ, in the repair of the public roads, or in other public works beyond the area of the jail, any of the convicts who are now, or may hereafter be sentenced to imprisonment for life in the jail at Allipore, and who may be subject to hard labour The superintendent will be careful to exercise this authority with due regard to the character and circumstances of the convicts, and will adopt suitable precautions to guard against their escape.—Reg. IV., 1823, sec. vii.

41 Persons sentenced to imprisonment for life in the jail at Allipore may be employed in the manufacture of articles for which a constant demand may exist at the presidency, or in such other labour as the superintendent of the jail may direct, subject of course to any instructions with which he may be at any time furnished on the question by the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. XIV., 1811, sec. ii, cl. 4.

42. Whenever it may be necessary, under the orders of Government, to collect any number of convicts together for the execution of public works, and such convicts cannot be supplied from the sudder station of the district in which their services may be required, the superintendents of police shall make application to the Government, stating the number of prisoners required, the work on which it is proposed that they should be employed, and the districts from which, in their opinion, they can be most conveniently supplied, and the Government shall determine on the expediency of the removal of the convicts, and issue such instructions on the subject as they may deem proper—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. xviii

43. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to vest superintendents of convicts employed on the roads and other public works, and assistants to such superintendents, with such powers as he may from time to time deem necessary to enable them to exert an efficient control over the convicts and the guards employed with them—Reg. IV., 1833, secs i. and ii.

44. If any convict under sentence of imprisonment shall, from his uniform good behaviour and industrious performance of the work assigned to him, or from his meritorious conduct in preventing the escape of other prisoners, or rendering any other public service, appear to the magistrate having charge of him to deserve a remission of the further punishment to which he may be liable under his sentence, or of any part of it, a report of the circumstances of the case, with a copy of the sentence passed upon the prisoner, shall be transmitted by the magistrate to the Government for their orders, as provided by Act XVIII, 1844—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec x., cl. 1, and Act XVIII, 1844.

45. In cases of short imprisonment, adjudged by the magistrate or his assistant, wherein the object would be defeated by the delay attending a reference, as directed in the preceding paragraph, the magistrate is empowered to order the discharge of a prisoner who may appear to deserve a remission of punishment on the grounds specified, provided that his reasons for every such order be recorded on his proceedings.—Reg. XIV., 1816, sec. x., cl. 2.

46. The magistrates shall be careful to prevent any maltreatment of prisoners by any of the native officers attached to their respective jails, or in charge of prisoners employed on the public roads All complaints of prisoners against the officers having charge of them shall be immediately inquired into by the magistrates, and if proved to be well founded, the offenders shall be liable to immediate dismission, besides a fine, not exceeding one month's salary, or imprisonment not exceeding six months; or when the offender may be a burkundaze, pyke, or other inferior officer, to imprisonment not exceeding one year—Reg XIV., 1816, sec ix, cl 2, and Reg II, 1834.

47. It is not of course intended that the foregoing paragraph should be considered applicable to any military guards, sepoys, or officers, or to persons of any denomination, who are subject to a military tribunal. In the event of any such persons being guilty of a neglect of duty, or other misconduct involving an offence cognizable by a court-martial, whilst employed in the custody of prisoners, the magistrate will continue to observe the rule prescribed for such cases in Section X, Regulation XI., 1806 ("MILITARY," paragraphs 261, 262)—Reg XIV., 1816, sec. ix, cl 3.

ESCAPE OF PRISONERS.

48 Any convicts sentenced to imprisonment by the Sessions Courts or by the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, who during the period of their sentences may escape from jail, or other place of confinement, or from the roads or any other place where they may be employed, and who may be re-apprehended, shall be brought to trial before the Sessions Courts for such escape, as well as for any acts of violence or aggravating circumstances attending their escape, or for any violent acts done in an attempt to escape; and, on conviction, they shall be liable to such further punishment, in addition to their former sentences, as may be adjudged against them, on consideration of the circumstances of the case.—Reg LIII, 1803, sec ix, cl. 1

49. Any convict under sentence of transportation for life, who may be transported to any place beyond sea, and shall escape from such place of transportation, and return without permission to Bengal, or to any part of the Company's territory under the presidency of Bengal, shall, on conviction thereof, to the satisfaction of the Nizamut Adawlut, and if no circumstances appear to that Court to render such convict an object of mercy, be adjudged to suffer death — Reg LIII, 1803, sec ix, cl 2

50 All guards, of whatever description, having the custody of convicts who escape, and who may appear on the magistrate's inquiry to have been guilty of wilful neglect, are to be immediately dismissed from the public service, and should any connivance or further criminality appear against them, are to be committed or held to bail, according to the circumstances of the case, for trial before the Sessions Court, that on conviction they may receive the punishment which the law directs.—Reg II, 1799, sec. vi.

51. The foregoing provision (paragraph 49) is extended to guards in charge of prisoners who may escape from their custody, whether before or after conviction; but shall not be considered applicable to military guards from the provincial battalions (while such battalions continue subject to military law), or from any regular corps of the army.—Reg XI, 1806, sec x., cl. 2.

52. The cases of convicts, or of prisoners ordered to be confined till they give security for good behaviour, who may effect their escape, while under sentence or order of imprisonment, from a jail or other place of confinement, or from the custody of their guards, shall be cognizable by the magistrate, and upon conviction, the magistrate shall be empowered to sentence the offenders to imprisonment not exceeding one year in commutation for corporal punishment, and (if sentenced to a limited period of imprisonment) to suffer such further period of imprisonment beyond the unexpired term of their original sentence as he may judge proper, provided, however, that such additional imprisonment shall in no case exceed the period of two years If the prisoner be in confinement under an order to find security for good behaviour, he may be sentenced to imprisonment for a specific term not exceeding two years.—Reg. XII, 1818, sec. v., cl 1; and Reg. II., 1834.

53 The cases of prisoners apprehended and detained in custody under examination on charges of a criminal nature, but not admitted to bail, who may effect their escape from a jail or other place of confinement, or from the custody of their guards, shall also be cognizable by the magistrates, and such prisoners being duly convicted of the offence in question, shall be liable to a sentence of imprisonment in no case exceeding six months.—Reg XII, 1818, sec v, cl 2.

54 The rules contained in the two preceding paragraphs shall not, however, be considered applicable to the cases of convicts or other prisoners, who, in effecting their escape, or in attempting to effect their escape, shall be guilty of such a degree of violence towards their guards or other individuals as may in its consequences involve the death, wounding, or severe personal injury of any person or persons. In all cases of that nature it shall be the duty of the magistrate to commit the offender to take his trial before the Sessions Court.—Reg. XII, 1818, sec. v, cl 3.

55. The zillah and city magistrates shall communicate to the superintendents of police of their respective divisions all instances of convicts breaking jail, before the expiration of the period of their sentences, as well as every instance in which a prisoner in custody, during examination or commitment for trial, or under requisition of security for good behaviour, may effect his escape, transmitting, for the information of the superintendents of police, a copy or extract of the proceedings holden by them on such occasions, together with information of the measures taken to re-apprehend the persons who have escaped, stating, at the same time, whether, in their opinion, it may be advisable to offer any reward for the re-apprehension of such persons, and if so, the amount of such reward —Reg. XVII, 1816, sec xiv., cl. 2.

56. If the superintendent of police should be of opinion that the re-apprehension of the offender or offenders may be effected without the offer of a reward, he will employ, in concert with the local magistrate, the means which he may consider best adapted to that purpose, but should he deem the offer of a reward expedient, he will in like manner adopt the necessary measures for giving publicity to the same, provided, that whenever the reward proposed to be offered for the re-apprehension of any individual shall exceed the sum of one hundred rupees, the sanction shall be previously obtained of such officer as may be empowered by the Government to authorize the grant of rewards, in cases, however, in which heinous offenders may have escaped, or on occasions of emergency, the magistrates shall exercise a discretion in offering a reward not exceeding the sum of one hundred rupees, reporting the offer for the confirmation of the superintendent of police. —Reg XVII., 1816, sec. xiv., cl. 3, Act XVI., 1843.

57 All proceedings of magistrates in regard to the escape of prisoners, as well as any proceedings respecting the conduct of the guards from whose custody the escape has been effected, are to be submitted for the inspection or orders of the judge.—Reg XVII, 1816, sec. xiv., cl. 1; and Act XVIII, 1844.

ESTABLISHMENT AND JURISDICTION.

1. The police of the country is under the exclusive charge of the officers who may be appointed to the superintendence of it on the part of Government. Landholders and farmers of land are prohibited entertaining establishments of police officers, unless specially authorized so to do by the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. ii.; Reg. XVIII., 1805.

2. The magistrates are to divide their respective zillahs, including the rent-free lands, into police jurisdictions. Each jurisdiction is to be ten coss square, except where local circumstances shall render it advisable to form all or any of the jurisdictions of greater or less extent. The guarding of each jurisdiction is to be committed to a darogah or superintendent, with an establishment of officers. The darogahs with their establishments are to be stationed in the centre of their respective jurisdictions; unless for special reasons it shall be thought expedient, in particular instances, to fix them in any other situation: and the magistrates are directed to endeavour to form the jurisdictions in such a manner as to bring the principal towns, bazars, and gunges in the centre of them, that the police establishments may serve for the protection of these principal places, as well as the circumjacent country.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. iv.

3. The police jurisdictions are to be numbered, and to be named after the places at which the darogahs and their establishments may be stationed. The magistrates are not to change the names or numbers of the jurisdictions, nor to alter the limits of them, without the sanction of the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. v.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE.

4. It shall be lawful for the Governor of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal to appoint a superintendent of police for the territories under his government, or for any part thereof, and for the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces to appoint a superintendent of police for those provinces, or for any part thereof; and such superintendent shall be guided in the execution of the duties of his office by the rules contained in Regulation X., 1808, and other Regulations of the Bengal code, subsequently enacted, in regard to the said office, in so far as they may not be modified or repealed.—Act XXIV., 1837, secs. i. & ii.

5. The power to revise orders passed by the zillah or city magistrates regarding the appointment, suspension, and removal of any ministerial or police officer subordinate to such magistrate, is vested in the superintendents of police; and the orders passed on such revision by the superintendent of police shall not be open to revision by the Sessions Court or the Nizamut Adawlut. —Act XXIV., 1837, secs. iv. to vi.; Act XXXI., 1841, sec. vii.

6. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council, whenever he may deem it advisable, to invest any superintendent of police with the office of magistrate in any zillah or city, or in any part thereof.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. ii., cl. 3.

7. The Governor-General in Council reserves to himself a discretion of placing any part of the police or other public establishments under the immediate control of the superintendents of police, who have concurrent jurisdiction with the several magistrates in the zillahs and cities of their respective divisions.—Reg. XVI., 1810, secs. xi. & xii.

8. The superintendent of police is empowered to execute his warrants, and other process, in the form prescribed by the Regulations, either by means of his own officers, or through the local authorities, as he may judge proper. The several zillah and city magistrates, and all persons acting under them, are required to aid and support the officers of the superintendent of police in the execution of any warrant or other process issued by him under his seal and signature; and resistance to any process so issued is declared to be punishable, in like manner as provided by the Regulations for resistance to the process of a zillah or city magistrate.—Reg. X., 1808, sec. vi.

9. In cases in which the execution of sentences which may be passed by the superintendents on offenders cannot conveniently be carried into effect under their immediate directions, they are authorized to certify all such sentences to the magistrate of the district in which the offence may have been committed; and the magistrate to whom such application may be addressed is required to carry the sentence of the superintendent into execution, in the same manner as if it had been passed by the magistrate himself.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. v., cl. 1.

10. In cases in which persons may be committed or held to bail by the superintendents of police for trial before the Sessions Courts, and the said superintendents may not conveniently be able to superintend the conduct of such prosecutions themselves, it shall be competent for them to certify the order regarding the trial to the magistrate of the district in which the offence may be alleged to have been committed; and the magistrate, on receipt of such application, shall then superintend the conduct of the prosecution before the Sessions Court, in the same manner as if the accused party had been committed or held to bail by the magistrate himself.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. v., cl. 2.

11. The superintendent of police is authorized to correspond, either publicly or secretly, with the officers of Government in every department, upon subjects connected with the discharge of the duty committed to him; and all public officers are directed to furnish the superintendent with any information they may possess upon such subjects, as well as generally to co-operate with him, and to afford every assistance in their power to enable him to accomplish the objects of his appointment.—Reg. X., 1808, sec. vii.

12. The superintendent of police shall communicate immediately with the Governor-General in Council, through the secretary in the judicial department, upon all matters connected with his office; and shall act under such instructions as may, from time to time, be transmitted for his guidance by the order of Government.—Reg. X., 1808, sec. viii.

13. The superintendent of police shall also be considered under the general authority of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, in all matters relative to the police; and upon any point not expressly provided for by the Regulations or by the orders of Government, shall be guided by the instructions of that Court.—Reg. X., 1808, sec. ix.

14. The primary object of the appointment of superintendents of police being the apprehension of dacoits, cozauks, thugs, budecks, and other descriptions of public offenders, guilty of the commission of robberies and other crimes by open violence, the said superintendents shall from time to time proceed into the different zillahs, or to any of the cities comprised within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, according as they may themselves deem necessary and proper, or as the Governor-General in Council, or Vice-President in Council, may direct: provided, however, that nothing contained in this paragraph shall be construed to prevent the superintendents from exercising the full powers of their offices throughout the whole extent of their jurisdictions, in whatever part of it they may at any time be resident.—Reg. VIII., 1810, sec. iv.

15. It shall be the duty of the superintendents to keep themselves constantly informed, by communication with the local magistrates, with the darogahs of police, and with the zemindars and others, and by every other practicable means of inquiry, of the actual state of the police in the several zillahs and cities comprised within their respective jurisdictions, and submit to Government any information respecting the prevalence of public offences in any of those zillahs or cities, or on other points appearing to the superintendents to require the interposition of Government.—Reg. VIII., 1810, sec. v.

16. The magistrates of the several zillahs and cities are enjoined to afford every aid and co-operation to the superintendents of police and to their respective officers in the discharge of the duties vested in them.—Reg. VIII., 1810, sec. vi.

17. The superintendents of police are competent to remove or appoint any ministerial native officer employed upon their respective establishments whenever they may see sufficient cause; and all such appointments or removals shall be final.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. x.

18. A general register of all establishments of police guards (whether permanent or temporary) which may be entertained at the charge of Government, shall be prepared and kept up by the superintendents of police for their respective divisions, according to such form as may be judged most convenient, exhibiting the description, strength, distribution, and expense of all such guards or establishments entertained within the provinces dependent on the presidency of Fort William.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. ii., cl. 1.

19. The several zillah and city magistrates shall furnish the superintendents of police with such information as may be required to enable the superintendents, in concert with those officers, to enter upon a complete and accurate revision of the police establishments of the several zillahs or cities, and to prepare and submit to Government, on as reduced a scale as may be practicable without hazard to the public safety, a revised statement of police establishments for each district comprised within their respective jurisdictions.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. ii., cl. 2.

20. The superintendents of police will regularly submit to Government, with their annual police reports, or as soon after the transmission thereof as may be practicable, an abstract statement, exhibiting a comparative view of the strength and expense of all descriptions of police establishments entertained, during the two preceding years, in the several districts situated within their respective jurisdictions, together with a separate address, explanatory, on the one hand, of any temporary or local increase in such establishments which circumstances may have rendered necessary, or suggesting, on the other, any further reductions in the strength of those establishments which the ameliorated state of the police, the progressive introduction of subsidiary police arrangements, or other circumstances, may appear to admit.—Reg XVII, 1816, sec iii.

21 The superintendents of police will also submit to Government an annual report respecting the state of all subsidiary police establishments which may have been, or which may hereafter be, entertained on the principles of the provisions of the Regulations. The local magistrates are strictly enjoined to give the utmost attention to the due organization and proper maintenance of such establishments, in conformity with those provisions, and vigilantly to guard against any relaxation of control, either in respect to the conduct of the individuals composing such establishments, or of those who may be intrusted with the realization and payment of the stipends of the chokeedars; and it shall be the special duty of the superintendents of police to bring under the notice of the local magistrates, and, if necessary, of Government, any material deviation from the existing provisions which may prevail, whether partially or otherwise, in respect to those establishments, as well as to offer any suggestions which, from experience, may appear calculated to extend and to confirm the benefits contemplated by their institution.—Reg XVII, 1816, sec iv.

22. In order to enable the superintendents of police to furnish the annual report to Government required by the preceding paragraphs, the several zillah and city magistrates shall supply any information relating to the establishments in question which the superintendents may require, and shall likewise conform to any suggestions of those officers, in respect to the organization and management of the said establishments, which may be consistent with the tenor and spirit of the Regulations —Reg XVII, 1816, sec v.

23. The superintendents of police are competent, in the same manner and to the same extent as the local magistrates, to impose fines on any cutwal, police darogah, or other subordinate officer of the police establishments stationed within the limits of their respective jurisdictions.—Reg XVII, 1816, sec. xi, cl. 1.

24 The superintendents of police are likewise competent to suspend from office any cutwal, darogah, or other subordinate officer of the police establishments of their respective jurisdictions, during any inquiry which they may judge proper to institute in regard to the conduct of such officers, and also for neglect or failure to furnish information, or to obey orders issued to them by the superintendents of police.—Reg XVII., 1816, sec xi., cl 2.

25. Whenever the superintendents of police may deem it necessary, in the discharge of their duties, to fine or suspend any of the public officers above specified, they shall communicate an extract from their proceedings, with a copy of the order passed by them, to the local magistrate, who will proceed to realize the fine in the same manner as if it had been imposed by the magistrate himself, or to carry into effect the superintendents' order of suspension, and to supply the vacancy occasioned thereby —Reg XVII., 1816, sec xi, cl. 3.

26. Should the superintendents of police, on visiting any district of their respective jurisdictions, deem it advisable to take under their immediate charge, for the purpose of exercising temporarily the powers of magistrate, any police thannah or thannahs of such district, they will make the necessary application for that purpose to the local magistrate, who will comply with all requisitions to that effect from the superintendents of police, without awaiting any specific orders from Government, and the zillah or city magistrates shall not be considered to be authorized, without the special sanction of Government, to exercise any concurrent jurisdiction in such thannah or thannahs, except in the cases provided for in Section XVI, Regulation XXII., 1793, or the enactments extending those provisions (" MAGISTRATES," paragraph 9) —Reg XVII, 1816, sec xii.

27. All correspondence of the zillah and city magistrates relative to the strength, distribution, or expense of their police (whether temporary or permanent), or respecting any alteration of police stations, or of their local boundaries, and generally all correspondence of those officers with the Government, which may have reference to arrangements or matters of police, shall hereafter be conducted through the offices of the superintendents of police.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. xiii.

SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE IN THE CAMP OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL, THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, OR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.

28 As often as the Governor-General of India, or the Commander-in-Chief of all the Forces in India, or the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, shall pass through any part of the territories of the East-India Company, attended by a camp, it shall be lawful for the Governor-General of India in Council, by an order in council, to appoint a superintendent of the police of such camp —Act XXVI, 1836, sec. i.

29. With respect to all offences committed in any such camp, or on the line of march between the stations of any such camp, such superintendent shall have concurrent criminal jurisdiction with the magistrate of the zillah or city within which such offence shall have been committed.—Act XXVI., 1836, sec. ii.

30. As often as the said superintendent shall, by virtue of the powers conferred on him by the preceding paragraph, commit any person for trial before the Sessions Court, or sentence any person to imprisonment, it shall be lawful for the said superintendent to transmit such person to the magistrate of the zillah or city where the camp shall then be, with a copy of the commitment or sentence, under the hand of him the said superintendent, and the said magistrate shall give effect to such commitment or sentence.—Act XXVI., 1836, sec. iii.

31. All officers subordinate to the magistrate of the zillah or city where such camp shall be, shall be assisting to the said superintendent in the exercise of the powers conferred on him by this Act, in the same manner as they are bound to be assisting to the said magistrate.—Act XXVI., 1836, sec. iv.

APPOINTMENT AND REMOVAL OF NATIVE POLICE OFFICERS.

32. The magistrates are empowered to appoint darogahs and other subordinate officers of police, to remove them from one station to another, and to suspend and dismiss them from office for neglect, misconduct, or incapacity, subject to the orders of the superintendent of police, whose decision shall be final, unless the Governor-General in Council shall see reason to issue special orders on any cases. No person is to be appointed a darogah without giving security for his appearance in the amount of Rs. 1,000; himself in Rs. 500, and two responsible persons in Rs. 250 each.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. vi.; Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. vii., cl. 1; Reg. XX., 1817, sec. iii., cls. 1 & 2; Reg. XI., 1831, sec. viii.

33. The magistrate will furnish to each police-officer, on his appointment, a written document under his official seal and signature, specifying the station to which the officer is appointed, and requiring him to perform the duties of it, in conformity with the Regulations.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. iii., cl. 3.

34. The zillah and city magistrates are required to record, upon their proceedings, the grounds upon which any native officers may be removed by them under the provisions of this Regulation, and to select proper persons to fill all vacancies in the situations of such officers, and to continue in office the persons appointed, whether by themselves or by their predecessors, whilst they discharge the duties assigned to them with diligence and integrity.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. vii., cl. 3.

35. The superintendent of police shall exercise all the powers which were formerly exercised by the judges or commissioners of circuit in regard to the appointment, suspension, and removal of any ministerial or police officer subordinate to any zillah or city magistrate or joint magistrate, and the orders of the superintendent of police in regard to such appointments, suspensions, and removals, shall not be open to revision by the Nizamut Adawlut.—Act XXIV., 1837, secs. iv. & vi.; Act XXXI., 1841, sec. vii.

36. No appointment to the office of cutwal or police darogah shall be considered final till confirmed by the superintendent of police, under the authority vested in him; but the magistrate is authorized to make temporary appointments of persons duly qualified to perform the duty of cutwal or police darogah in cases of death, removal, suspension, or resignation, immediately reporting the same for the information of the superintendent of police.—Reg. VIII., 1809, sec. v., cl. 2; Act XXIV., 1837, sec. iv.

37. The zillah and city magistrates shall submit to the superintendent of police, for his information, a list of all persons whom they may have appointed to the offices of cutwal or police darogah, specifying their names, ages, past employments, characters, and qualifications.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. vii., cl. 4.

38. In the event of any officer of the descriptions noticed in the preceding paragraph deeming himself aggrieved by any order passed by a zillah or city magistrate with respect to his dismission from office, he shall be at liberty to present a petition to the superintendent of police, setting forth the circumstances of his case, and grounds of complaint.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. vii., cl. 5.

39. On perusal of a petition of the description specified in the preceding paragraph, the superintendent of police, if he deem proper, may require the magistrate to submit the proceedings holden on the case for his inspection, accompanied by any explanation, in the English language, which the magistrate may be desirous to offer.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. vii., cl. 6.

40. After consideration of the papers furnished, should the superintendent of police be of opinion that the powers vested in the magistrate by the preceding clauses of this section have been perverted, he shall submit the proceedings to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. vii., cl. 7.

41. All deaths, resignations, removals, or appointments in the office of a cutwal or darogah of police, shall be communicated by the magistrates to the superintendents of police, in such form as the superintendents may deem convenient and proper; in order, not only that the registers of police establishments may be kept correct, but that any cutwal or police darogah who may have been dismissed from his office on conviction before the Sessions Court or Nizamut Adawlut of corruption, or of any other criminal offence declared to be punishable by dismission from office, may be precluded from being again employed in any similar situation elsewhere.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. ix., cl. 1.

42. If any case of this nature should come under the observation of the superintendents of police, it will be their duty to communicate the requisite information to the zillah or city magistrate, in order that the cutwal, darogah, or other police officer who may have been appointed under the circumstances described in the latter part of the preceding paragraph may be immediately removed from his situation.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. ix., cl. 2.

43. The removal of a police officer shall not be considered to preclude the future employment of such person in any other situation in the public service for which he may be deemed duly qualified, except in the cases of conviction described in paragraph 41.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. ix., cl. 3.

44. The Courts of Sessions and the Nizamut Adawlut may order the removal of any police officer who may be convicted of a criminal offence, if the conduct of such officer appear, from any proceedings before the said Courts, to be such as to require his removal from the public situation held by him, and it shall be the duty of the magistrate to take measures for the appointment of a successor to the vacant office, in conformity with the Regulations.—Reg. XXV., 1814, sec. xv.; Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. vii., cl. 8.

45. Whenever a cutwal or police darogah may be desirous of resigning his office, his resignation shall be received and recorded by the magistrate in open Court, and shall be transmitted, without delay, to the superintendent of police, with the nomination of a proper person to be his successor.—Reg. VIII., 1809, sec. v., cl. 3.

46. When a magistrate shall see cause for the removal of any cutwal or police darogah, on the ground of misconduct, neglect of duty, experienced incapacity, or other disqualification, such magistrate shall report the circumstances of the case, with his opinion on the subject, to the superintendent of police, who will pass such order as may appear proper on the report so made, or call for further information, or direct any further inquiry which the nature and circumstances of the case may require.—Reg. VIII., 1809, sec. v., cl. 4.

47. In cases of gross misconduct, neglect, or incapacity, such as to require the immediate suspension of a police officer, the magistrate is authorized to order the same, reporting it, with the other information required from him, to the superintendent of police. He may also, in addition to the general powers vested in him by the Regulations for the punishment of any specific crime or misdemeanor, fine any officer of police under his authority for neglect of duty, in a sum equal to one month's salary, and cause the same to be levied by a stoppage of the fixed allowance payable to such officer. Police officers of every denomination, as well as all other native officers in the service of Government, will be liable to removal from the public trusts committed to them without proof of any specific act of criminality, whenever there may be sufficient reason to believe them incapable or neglectful of their prescribed duties, or in any respect unworthy of public confidence. —Reg. VIII., 1809, sec. v., cl. 5.

48. If the darogah of a jurisdiction, or any officer under his authority, shall be guilty of corruption, extortion, or oppression, or commit any act repugnant to the Regulations, the party injured is permitted to prosecute him, either criminally, before the Sessions Court, or for damages in the Dewanny Adawlut. The judges of the above-mentioned Courts are required to take cognizance of all such prosecutions or suits as may be brought before them under this Regulation, and to pass such sentence or decree as may appear to them equitable, upon a consideration of the circumstances of the case.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xxii.

XX., 1817, sec. iv., cl. 4.

Rules regarding the use of a Seal of Office at each Thannah, and the Badges, Arms, and Accoutrements of the Police Burkundauzes.

53. All cutwals and police darogahs shall henceforward use a brass seal of office, an inch in diameter, and made after the form described in the margin, the name of the cutwalee or thannah, and the name of the city or zillah in which it may be included, being engraved on the surface of the seal.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. v., cl. 1.

54. The police burkundauzes shall wear brass badges, engraved with the name of the police-station, and of the district in which they may be employed, and shall be armed with a spear, and a sword and shield, or with a matchlock, sword and shield, or with a spear and matchlock, as circumstances may render expedient; they shall also be uniformly dressed in such manner as may be prescribed by the Court of Nizamut Adawlut through the superintendent of the police.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. v., cl. 2.

Powers and Duties of Police Officers employed at Outposts.

55. In modification of Sections VI. and VII., Regulation XIV., 1807, the magistrates are authorized to exercise the power of stationing any portion of their police thannah establishments (not exceeding one-third of the entire establishment) at any chokee, village, ghaut, highway, or other place within the limits of the thannah to which such establishments may appertain; reporting always the particulars, as well as the grounds of the arrangement, for the information of the superintendent of police of the division.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. viii., cl. 1.

56. Police officers stationed, with the sanction of the zillah or city magistrate, at any chokee, village, ghaut, highway, or other place within the limits of a thannah, shall be guided by the following rules.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. vi., cl. 1.

57. Jemadars, burkundauzes, and other police officers stationed at outposts, or subordinate chokees, shall act under the control of the darogah or head police officer of the thannah to which they may be attached, and shall afford their aid for the prevention of crimes, the apprehension of criminals, and generally for the preservation of the peace, and shall report to the thannah all occurrences relating to matters of police which may come to their knowledge.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. vi., cl. 2.

POLICE.—DUTIES OF NATIVE POLICE OFFICERS.

58. The officers of police stationed at outposts shall be competent to apprehend, without a written charge or warrant, persons found in the act of committing a breach of the peace, or against whom a hue and cry shall have been raised, or who shall be detected with stolen goods in their possession, or who may be liable to apprehension, under the rules in force, as proclaimed, or notorious robbers, or vagrants, without any ostensible means of subsistence; but no person shall be arrested by the subordinate officers of police except in cases of the nature above noticed, unless under the special warrant of the magistrate, or of the darogah of the thannah to which the outpost may be attached.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. vi., cl. 3.

59. Persons apprehended by the subordinate establishments of police shall be forwarded immediately to the thannah to which the outpost may belong, accompanied by an explanation of the circumstances of the case, and of the causes which may have led to the apprehension of the prisoner.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. vi., cl. 4.

Rules regarding the application of Police Officers for leave of absence, and deputation of Burkundauzes to the Sudder Station.

60. Any police darogah, mohurer, or jemadar, applying for leave of absence, shall name an individual, for the approval of the magistrate, to officiate for him during his absence, and the person who may be appointed to act shall receive, during his absence, the entire allowances of the police officer for whom he may officiate, or such part thereof as the magistrate shall, in each instance, judge it proper to fix. The burkundauzes shall submit their applications to the magistrate through the darogahs; and the persons nominated to act during their absence shall receive the entire salaries of the individuals for whom they may officiate, or such part thereof as may be fixed by the magistrate. In the event of the absentee's exceeding the period of his leave, the darogah shall report the circumstance for the orders of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. vii., cl. 1.

61. Whenever a burkundauze may be despatched to the Magistrates' Court, the jemadar or other police officer by whom he may be despatched shall deliver to him a certificate, showing the name of the burkundauze, and the date and time of his despatch, agreeably to the first three columns of the Form No. 1 of the Appendix.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. vii., cl. 2.

62. On the arrival of the burkundauze at the sudder station, he shall proceed to the nazir of the Foujdary Court, who will insert in the fourth column of the paper the date and hour of his arrival, and in the event of any unnecessary delay appearing on comparing the date of his despatch from the thannah with that of his arrival at the sudder station, will report the circumstances to the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. vii., cl. 3.

63. On the departure of the burkundauze from the sudder station, he shall again proceed to the foujdary nazir, who will note in the fifth column the date and time of his departure, and on his arrival at the thannah station the certificate shall be delivered up to the darogah, mohurer, or jemadar, who, in the event of the burkundauze having loitered on the road, will report the particulars for the orders of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. vii., cl. 4.

Records to be kept and preserved at the Thannah.

64. The police darogahs and mohurers are enjoined to bind up, separately from all other records, and to preserve with care, the several Regulations of Government which may be sent to their respective thannahs; and they shall also cause the same to be publicly read for general information, and shall take every favourable occasion of promulgating the rules therein contained. —Reg. XX., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 1.

65. The books and registers alluded to in the following clauses of this section shall be kept up with regularity at the several police thannahs; and darogahs and mohurers, on their appointments to police stations, are required to inspect the records, and to report to the magistrates on the general state of the thannah papers, within ten days after receiving charge. Every police darogah, or thannah mohurer, receiving charge of the records of a police station, shall sign a list of the records delivered over to him, which also shall be signed by the officer delivering over charge; and the list so authenticated by their joint signatures shall be transmitted to the magistrate. An exact counterpart, authenticated in the same manner, shall also be kept at the thannah. The magistrates and their assistants, and the joint magistrates who may occasionally visit the thannahs, shall avail themselves of any opportunities that may offer to inspect the records, and in the event of their being found deficient, or of any gross neglect in the care of them, the police darogah and mohurer who may appear culpable will be liable to dismission, or to a fine, according to the circumstances of the case.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 2.

66. The police darogahs shall severally be furnished with blank books for diaries, each book containing 100 pages, to be signed and numbered by the magistrate's assistant, if on the spot, or in his absence by the serishtadar, or other head ministerial officer of the Magistrates' Court.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 3.

67. 69. The purport of every petition, representation, complaint, or information, presented to any officer of police, shall be recorded in the diary of the thannah, whether the same may be cognizable by the native officers of police or otherwise; and if it be proved that a darogah has apprehended any persons, or issued orders, or done any official act which he may not have inserted and truly stated in his diary, or that any occurrences have been wilfully omitted, he shall be punished with dismission from office, or by such other penalty as the circumstances of the case may appear, under the general Regulations, to require.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 6.

71. The darogah or other officer of police presiding at the thannah, shall be careful to report to the magistrate, at least a month before their diary books are likely to be written through, in order that fresh blank books may be furnished to the thannah without delay, and those diary books which may be completed shall be deposited in the records of the thannah.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. viii., cl. 8.

This list the burkundauze will deliver to the treasurer of the Foujdary Court, on his receiving the pay of the thannah establishment, which shall forthwith be conveyed to the darogah, or other police-officer in charge of the thannah, who will pay the amount due to the several individuals of the establishment, and transmit their receipts with his own, in a paper, corresponding in substance with the form above mentioned, to remain with the records of the Magistrates' Court.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 2.

81. In preparing the abstract monthly statements of heinous offences according to the form No. 4 of the Appendix, the darogahs shall pay strict attention to the following rules.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 3.

82. The darogahs shall, as far may be in their power, distinguish wilful and malicious murder (kutli-umd) from every other species of homicide, reporting all cases of murder not accompanied with robbery or burglary under the fifth head, and cases of homicide of every other description, excepting homicide in affrays, under the eleventh head of the statement.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 4.

83. Under the sixth head the darogahs shall insert all cases of wounding, or violent corporal injury inflicted maliciously, and not in the prosecution of robbery or burglary, or during an affray. —Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 5.

84. Under the twelfth head of the statement all affrays and riots shall be entered, in which any considerable number of persons may have been concerned, or in which any person may have been killed or wounded, and the public peace may have been disturbed; but it shall not be necessary to include in this column cases of assault and battery, or drunken broils, in which only a few individuals may have disputed, and no very serious personal injury may have been sustained.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 6.

85. Under the thirteenth and fourteenth heads of the statement all cases shall be entered in which any person may enter or attempt to enter by day or by night, by breaking into any dwelling-house, warehouse, storehouse, or other building or place used for the custody and preservation of property, whether the same be constructed of stone, brick, mud, bamboo, grass, or other materials, or into a tent, boat, or other place of habitation, whether such entry be effected by cutting through or under the wall, or by forcibly raising the roof of the house, or by any other means attended with breaking, and whether, in pursuance of the intent to commit such robbery, any property shall be carried away or otherwise.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 7.

86. Under the seventeenth head all cases shall be entered of receiving, vending, or concealing, or melting down stolen property.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 8.

87. The eighteenth head of the statement shall include only those cases of arson in which any habitation or other property may appear to have been purposely and maliciously fired, and the darogah shall not include accidental fires under this head.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 9.

88. Under the concluding or twentieth head of the statement, the darogah shall insert all cases in which the person destroyed may appear to have been the immediate and voluntary cause of his own death.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 10.

89. The darogahs shall report in the statement above prescribed all heinous offences which may come to their knowledge, whether the offenders may be apprehended or otherwise, and shall distinguish in the third column all attempts in which the criminal intent may have failed, inserting in the second column only those cases in which the crime may have been actually perpetrated.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 11.

90. A monthly report of crimes and offences, agreeably to the Form No. 4 of the Appendix, shall be transmitted by the police darogahs from each police thannah to the office of the superintendent of police for the division, on or before the 5th of the ensuing month.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 12.

91. The reports and returns submitted by the police-officers to the magistrates shall be written in a clear and legible hand, and shall bear at the foot of the writing the date of the despatch, according to the era current in the district, and the signature of the police-officer by whom the report may be made, and when the circumstances may admit, the seat of the thannah; all examinations taken and proceedings held by the police-officers shall be superscribed with the date and month of the era current in their several jurisdictions.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 13.

92. The papers transmitted by the police-officers to the Foujdarry Court shall be strung on a thread, the ends of which shall be secured with wax, and the record of each case shall be made up in a separate envelope, and addressed to the magistrate of the district; the name of the thannah, from whence the report may be made, shall be marked on the envelope.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 14.

93. Every process and order addressed by a magistrate to a police-officer shall limit a certain time in which it is to be served, executed, and returned to the Magistrate's Court.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 15.

94. The returns to all orders and processes, and the certificates of the due publication of all proclamations, addressed by the magistrates to the police-officers, shall be indorsed, as far as the size of the paper will admit, on the original order or process; and if the length of the return should render it necessary, a separate paper shall be annexed to the original document; and a copy of the return shall be entered in the register prescribed by paragraph 72.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 16.

95. The police-officers shall, to the extent of their ability, carry into effect such instructions as they may receive within the period specified in the magistrate's order; and if the directions contained in the order or process cannot be entirely carried into effect within the time limited, a report shall be made, at the expiration of such period, of the cause of delay, with specific information when a further and full return will be made, and the original order or process shall be sent to the magistrate, with such final return, indorsed as directed in the preceding paragraph.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 17.

96. The darogahs and mohurrers shall be careful to render their reports and returns in as precise terms as possible, and they shall refrain from recapitulating in their returns a detail of the magistrate's orders, and when referring to such orders shall merely state, summarily, the nature of the case and the date of the perwannah.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. ix., cl. 18.

Rules regarding Dawks, and for expediting the transmission of official Papers to and from the Thannahs.

97. To facilitate the communication between the Magistrate's Court and the stations of the darogahs of police, and to enable the magistrates to obtain speedy information of the occurrence of crimes, as well as with the view of preventing the unnecessary confinement of persons who may be detained in custody pending an inquiry of the police-officers, or trial before the magistrate, the magistrates and the native officers of police are required to attend, as far as may be practicable, to the directions contained in the following rules.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. x., cl. 1.

98. The superintendence of the despatch by dawk of perwannahs to the police darogahs, and of reports from the officers of police to the Magistrate's Court, shall be intrusted to the nazirs of the Criminal Courts, and to the thannah mohurrers, who shall be held responsible for the speedy transmission of the packets to and fro; and shall report to the magistrates all instances of delay which may come to their knowledge.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. x., cl. 2.

99. As far as circumstances may admit, the magistrate's orders to his police-officers, and the thannah reports, whether addressed to the magistrates or to the superintendents of police, shall be transmitted by the Government dawk; and all dawk officers in the Company's provinces are required to receive and convey, free of expense, such orders and reports, the same being superscribed with the name and official designation of the public officer by whom the papers may be despatched; together with the words "Kar Surkar," to denote that they relate to the public service.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. x., cl. 3.

100. In cases where a thannah station may be situated at a considerable distance from the route of the Government dawk, the magistrates, in communication with their police-officers, shall establish dawk stations between the thannahs, or from the thannahs to the Magistrate's Court, at proper distances, according to local circumstances, but not in any instance exceeding five coss, and the land proprietors and farmers of land, or their local managers, shall be called upon to name and appoint the requisite number of peons or pykes (not being village watchmen) for the performance of this duty. In places where no establishment of regular police-officers may be stationed, they shall also be required to fix on a particular house in the village, where the peons or pykes may at all times be found without delay, and to name the mundul, putwaree, or other person in the village, whose business it shall be to receive and forward the papers transmitted by the dawk,—a statement shall be prepared and kept up at each thannah station; and it shall be the duty of every darogah, on his appointment to a thannah, to see that this paper is included in the records of the thannah, as well as that the dawk for the conveyance of the magistrate's perwannahs and the thannah reports is duly regulated, and the peons or pykes maintained by the landholders, farmers, or managers, at the appointed stages.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. x., cl. 4.

101. The landholders, proprietors, and farmers of land, with their local managers and heads of villages, shall be held responsible for a due observance of the foregoing rules, and shall be liable, on proof before the magistrate of wilful disregard of these provisions, especially after a previous admonition, to be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, commutable, in default of payment, to confinement in the civil jail for any period not exceeding one month.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. x., cl. 5.

102. The nazir of the Magistrate's Court shall forward by the dawk, every day at the same hour (except when otherwise specially instructed by the magistrate), all perwannahs and papers addressed to the respective thannahs, which the magistrate may direct to be transmitted by the dawk; and shall write on the envelope of each packet the date and time of despatch. It shall likewise be the duty of the nazir to record on the envelope of all reports received from the thannahs, the date and time of their receipt.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. x., cl. 6.

103. All reports and papers transmitted by the dawk from the police thannahs shall be addressed to the magistrate, and the seal of the thannah shall be affixed to the envelope; the mohurrer shall specify on the envelope the date and hour of despatch; and in cases where the papers of one thannah may be left at another thannah on their transmit to and from the magistrate's station, the mohurrer of the latter thannah shall forward such papers, noting on the back of the envelope the date and hour of the arrival and departure of the dawk.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. x., cl. 7.

104. The police darogahs and their mohurrers are required to forward by the thannah dawk, or by the hands of their burkundauzes, as occasions may offer, such reports and papers as may be sent to them by the principal sudder ameens, sudder ameens, or moonsiffs, for the trial of civil suits, for the purpose of transmission to the judge of the district; and they shall grant receipts to the principal sudder ameens, sudder ameens, or moonsiffs, for such papers as may be delivered to them.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. x. cl. 8.

Prohibiting various irregular Practices on the part of the Police-Officers.

105. No police darogah, mohurrer, jemadar, or burkundauze shall trade or keep any warehouse or shop for wholesale or retail, within the limits of the thannah to which he may be appointed.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xi., cl. 1.

106. The darogahs of police are prohibited from employing the burkundauzes of their thannahs on their own private affairs, under penalty of fine and dismission from office.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xi., cl. 2.

107. Whenever a summons or warrant, or other criminal process, may be served by a burkundauze, or other police-officer receiving pay from Government, no diet money, or other allowance or gratuity, shall be demanded or received from the complainant or the accused, or from any witness or other person; and the demand or receipt of such by any police officer, directly or indirectly, in violation of this rule, shall be punishable as a criminal offence on conviction before the magistrate or Sessions Court. The offender shall also be compellable, either on a criminal prosecution, or by a civil action, to refund the amount received, besides being liable to immediate dismission from office, under the provisions contained in the existing Regulations.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xi., cl. 3.

108. The police darogahs are enjoined, under penalty of dismission from office, not to permit any established vakeel or mokhtar to be permanently employed at their thannahs, on the part of any landholder, farmer, local agent or other person. But this rule is not meant to preclude the occasional exployment of a vakeel or mokhtar, for any specific purpose when it may be necessary.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xi., cl. 4.

109. The darogahs and other mofussil police-officers are prohibited from employing any mokhtar or vakeel at the station of the zillah or city magistrate for the purpose of receiving and transmitting the salaries of the thannah establishment, or for any other purpose connected with their public functions, except in particular cases wherein they may be specially authorized by the magistrate to employ a vakeel.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xi., cl. 5.

110. No mohurrers or writers, excepting those on the police establishments paid by Government, shall be employed at the thannahs without the previous sanction of the magistrate, except in cases of emergency, which will not admit of delay. In the event of any police darogahs requiring the assistance of additional mohurrers, in consequence of a stress of business, he shall report the circumstance for the orders of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xi., cl. 6.

111. The darogahs are prohibited from encouraging or employing, without the knowledge or express sanction of the magistrate, any goindahs or spies, who may earn a livelihood by the profession of an informer, and they shall apprehend and send to the magistrate any persons who may give out that they are employed as goindahs by the magistrate, or by the superintendent of police, unless such persons can show a written authority from the magistrate, or from the superintendent of police. The above provisions shall not be construed as precluding the police officers from employing persons to trace offenders who may have eluded the pursuit of justice, or from encouraging persons to furnish information, by which robbers, or other known criminals, may be discovered and apprehended. On the contrary, the darogahs shall encourage such persons to communicate all the information possessed by them, and shall report to the magistrate any instance of meritorious service on the part of any such individual, by which offenders may be brought to justice, whether the individual may have personally exposed himself to trouble and risk in securing the offender, or may have merely supplied the necessary intelligence to the police officers.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xi., cl. 7.

Charges not cognizable by Police-Officers.

112. The darogahs and other native officers of police are prohibited, under pain of dismission from office, from taking cognizance of any charge of adultery, fornication, calumny, abusive language, slight trespass, or inconsiderable assault.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xii., cl. 1.

113. Persons preferring to the native police-officers charges of the nature specified in the preceding paragraph, shall be referred by those officers for redress to the Magistrate's Court, and informed that cognizance cannot be taken of their complaints at the thannahs; and the darogah or other police-officer to whom any such charges may be presented in writing, shall record in the thannah diary, hereinafter prescribed, the name of the complainant, the nature of the charge, and the date on which it may be rejected. The date and ground of rejection shall also be indorsed on the written plaint, to be returned to the complainant.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xii., cl. 2.

114. The darogahs and other police-officers are likewise prohibited from admitting compromises or razeenamahs in any cases, and from interfering in any matter which may not be expressly provided for in this or in any other Regulation, as well as in all cases from passing sentence upon any complaint, from imposing a fine, or inflicting any punishment, and from making any exaction from the prosecutor or the accused, or their respective witnesses, or from any other persons whatsoever.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xii., cl. 3.

General Duties of Police-Officers on receiving Charges or Information of heinous Offences.

115. On receipt of any charge or information of murder, robbery, theft, burglary, homicide, maiming, wounding, actual affray, or other heinous offence, not excepted by this Regulation from the cognizance of the police darogah, the statement of the prosecutor or informer shall be certified on oath, or by a solemn declaration, in conformity with the provisions of Act V., 1840; and such inquiry shall be made as may be necessary to elucidate the circumstances of the case; and if there are any witnesses to the fact, or persons acquainted with the particulars, they shall be questioned, without oath or affirmation, either privately and apart, or publicly, as may appear most conducive to the attainment of the truth.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 1.

116. It shall not be considered necessary to take down in detail the questions and answers of the witnesses, but the substance of any material information obtained from them shall be reduced to the form of a sooruthal, or kyfeeut, which document shall be authenticated by the attestation of the persons examined, and transmitted to the magistrate under the signature of the police-officer by whom the inquiry may be made; the evidence of the eye-witnesses being distinguished in the report from that of persons deposing from hearsay.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 2.

117. In cases of murder, gang robbery, burglary, attended with wounding or other violent crime, where the circumstances of the case may be elucidated in a greater degree by a sketch or plan of the spot, the same shall be prepared, if it can be done without subjecting the inhabitants to inconvenience, and submitted with the report. The police-officers shall also be careful to ascertain in all cases the exact date and time of the day or night when the offence charged may have been committed; and shall record the date according to the Bengal, Fussily, or other era current in the district.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 3.

118. The police darogahs are prohibited from causing witnesses to certify to the truth of their depositions by an oath or by a solemn declaration, in conformity with the provisions of Act V., 1840, on any local investigation which may be made by them into the circumstances of any murder, robbery, or other crime, or in the performance of any other of their duties, unless the same be expressly sanctioned by the provisions of a Regulation applicable to the case.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 4.

119. The officers of police shall endeavour, as far as practicable, to complete the inquiry in the first instance, and to collect all attainable evidence, and to bind over all the witnesses, necessary for the trial, to appear before the magistrate at the time when the report may reach the Magistrate's Court, in order that the case may be tried without unnecessary delay. The darogah shall send in with the chelan or despatch, any burkundauzes or other subordinate police-officers, whose evidence may be necessary on the trial of the case; and if the whole of the witnesses cannot be found at the time of transmission of the chelan, the darogah shall endeavour to collect them, and shall send them in without waiting the instructions of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 5.

120. In cases wherein the offenders are unknown, or though recognized, may not have been apprehended, the prescribed local inquiry into the circumstances shall, notwithstanding, be made without delay, and the police darogah shall transmit an immediate and full report of the result to the magistrate, for his information and orders. But the witnesses shall not in such cases be sent to the magistrate, nor bound over to attend him without his special instructions for the purpose.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 6.

121. In all cases where the offender may be known, and may have absconded, the police-officer conducting the inquiry shall ascertain and describe the person of the offender, specifying also his name, and that of his father, as well as his usual place of residence, in order that he may hereafter, if necessary, be fully identified.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 7.

122. If, in the conduct of an inquiry, the person accused or suspected should appear to have been guilty of more than one offence, cognizable by police-officers, or if any misconduct or neglect in matters of police should attach to any zemindar, farmer, local agent, village watchman, or other person, whose duty it may be to aid the police, the police darogah shall institute a distinct inquiry on each case, the result of which shall be transmitted to the magistrate in separate reports and despatches.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 8.

123. Whenever any person may be apprehended and sent to the Magistrate's Court, under the provisions of this Regulation, and it may be known to the police darogah, or other officer presiding at the thannah, that such person has been apprehended on a former occasion by the police on any other account, the darogah or other officer, reporting on the case which may be the ground of his present apprehension, shall state also the offence for which the prisoner may have formerly been arrested, and if practicable, shall ascertain from the thannah papers, and report the year and date of the record of the case referred to.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 9.

124. The darogahs of police, when they may proceed from their thannahs for the purpose of making any local inquiry, or for the performance of any other public duty, shall state in their reports the date and time of their departure from the thannah station, and the date and time of their arrival at the place of their destination, and also of their return to the thannah. The month and the year to be used on all such occasions, as well as generally in the reports of the police darogahs, shall be those of the current era of the district, whether the Bengallee, Fussily, or Willaity.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiii., cl. 10.

Rules for holding Inquests on Occasions of Murder, Homicides, Wounding, and unnatural Deaths.

125. The principal persons residing in villages, whether landholders or farmers, or other local managers or mundals, putwarries, or other heads of villages, are responsible for the early and punctual communication to the officers of the nearest police-station of all unnatural deaths, or deaths attended with suspicious circumstances, which may come to their knowledge; and any landholder, farmer, manager, or other principal inhabitant of a village, who may be convicted of wilfully neglecting or delaying to furnish the information above required, shall be liable to be fined by the magistrate in any sum not exceeding Rs. 200; and in default of payment, to be confined for any period of imprisonment not exceeding six months.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 1.

126. In all cases of murder, unnatural or suspicious death, or violent and dangerous wounding, the darogah of police shall make it an invariable rule, immediately on receiving information, to repair in person to the spot on which the dead body, or person wounded, may have been found, or if prevented from going personally, shall depute a proper officer; and on such occasions the following rules shall be strictly observed.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 2.

127. That they question privately, in the first instance, any relations, connections, friends, or neighbours of the deceased, or of the person wounded, who may be able to state the circumstances of the case; and that they endeavour to collect, before the inhabitants shall have assembled for the public inquest, such information as may guide their inquiries in the conduct of the investigation.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 3.

128. That they question the individual wounded, and require him, if he is able to speak, to name and describe, on oath or affirmation, the person by whom he may have been wounded, the names of the persons present when the act was committed, and, generally, the circumstances under which the crime was perpetrated.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 4.

129. That they examine the body of the person wounded, or, in cases of death, the dead body, with a view to ascertain the number of wounds or other corporal injuries; the length, breadth, and depth of each; with what weapons the wounds or hurts may have been given; and the parts of the body in which they may have been received, and that they record the same either at the foot of their sooruthal or report, or on a separate paper to be annexed to the report.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 5.

130. That they describe particularly the spot on which the wounded person or the dead body may have been found; and that they report whether the crime appears to have been committed on the spot, or whether the individual wounded, or the dead body, appears to have been brought and laid there; also in cases of alleged suicide, or of accidental death, whether the circumstances under which the body may be found are such as to warrant a conclusion, that the deceased had met with his death from his own hands, or by misadventure, or whether any, and what grounds may exist for believing the deceased to have been killed by the hands of others; and further, that they ascertain the name of the person wounded, or of the deceased, if any person present should recognize him.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 6.

131. That if the person killed shall appear to be a stranger, and his name shall not be known, they endeavour to ascertain where he was last seen, or where he slept the night before.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 7.

132. That in cases in which the offenders may not be immediately discovered, or the cause of the murder or unnatural death or wounding may be unknown, the police-officer conducting the inquiry shall endeavour to trace whether any enmity, ill-will, jealousy, or other cause of dissension, subsisted between the wounded or deceased, and any other person or persons in the neighbourhood, and if so, the particulars of the disagreement; when and under what circumstances the wounded or the deceased, and the persons said to bear him ill-will, may last have been seen in company, and whether any and what angry expressions had been used by the parties; moreover, in cases in which there may be reason to believe that the unknown offender has received any wound, or other corporal injury, from resistance in the perpetration of the crime, they shall question the hujjams, village surgeons, washermen, or other persons residing in the vicinity, who from their profession may be likely to afford information, leading to the discovery of the offender in such cases.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 8.

133. That the above inquiry be made and committed to writing in the presence of creditable people, resident on the spot or in the neighbouring villages; and that they require a sufficient number of persons present to subscribe their names to the paper, which is likewise to be attested by their own signature, and forwarded without delay to the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 9.

134. In cases of murder, it shall be the duty of the officers of police to endeavour to obtain and secure the weapon or instrument with which the crime may have been committed, in order that the same may be produced and identified at the further stages of the inquiry or trial for the offence.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 10.

135. In cases of wounding, the darogah, or other police-officer conducting the inquiry, shall endeavour to obtain for the person wounded such surgical assistance as may be procurable, and, if the wounds are severe, the individual wounded shall not be moved or sent to the Magistrate's Court until he may be able to travel without inconvenience or risk. The police-officers are further directed to notify to the inhabitants, as occasion may offer, that in the event of any person being wounded by robbers or others, in such manner that he cannot be conveyed to the thannah without hazard of his life, it is not necessary to remove such person from the place where he can be best taken care of, but that immediate notice must be given at the thannah, that the police-officer may proceed to the spot, in conformity with paragraph 126, and make the inquiry therein prescribed.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 11.

136. In cases of murder or unnatural death, the police darogah shall, on ordinary occasions, when he has completed his inquiry, either make the body over to the charge of the relations of the deceased, or shall cause it to be buried or burnt on the spot, as the usages of the country and religious persuasion of the deceased may render proper; and it shall not be considered necessary to send the corpse for the inspection of the magistrate, except in cases of murder by poison, or on occasions where the injury sustained by the deceased may be of a doubtful nature, requiring the inspection and report of a surgeon, in which cases the darogah shall, if the state of the weather and the distance from the Magistrate's Court will admit of the body being transported without risk of putrefaction on the road, forward the corpse, covered with a cloth, in the most decent and expeditious manner practicable, to the magistrate's place of residence.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 12.

Inquiries to be made by the Police-Officers in Cases of Gang-Robbery, Burglary, and other heinous Offences.

137. In all cases of gang-robbery, or other robbery by open violence, as well as in every instance of a heinous crime, attended with a violent breach of the peace, or other circumstances of aggravation, the police darogah, in whose jurisdiction the offence may occur, shall, if practicable, proceed in person to the spot without delay, transmitting an immediate report of the occurrence and of his departure from the thannah, for the information of the magistrate. If unable to proceed in person, or if the case be not of a heinous nature, nor attended with circumstances of aggravation, the darogah shall be at liberty to depute a fit person from among the officers acting under him, to ascertain the facts and circumstances of the case, and to procure all the information which it may be practicable to obtain for the discovery and apprehension of the offenders.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xv., cl. 1.

138. The police-officer making local inquiries of the description specified in paragraphs 125 to 136, shall be careful to ascertain and record the day and hour when the fact was committed, the situation of the place, the names and descriptions of any persons who may have been recognized as the perpetrators of the crime, by whom such persons have been seen and known, and the names and description of any persons suspected of being concerned in the offence committed, with the grounds of such suspicion. Also a full recital of the manner in which the crime has been effected, and in cases of robbery, of the articles of property plundered, the direction in which the robbers may have fled; whether they had torches, and any and what arms; whether they attempted to conceal their persons during the robbery; whether any arms or articles of property belonging to the robbers were picked up after the outrage; and if so, whether any person in the neighbourhood has recognized such articles; whether any number of persons were known to have assembled at any liquor-shop, fakeer's muth, or other place, immediately preceding the occurrence of the robbery, and if so, the general character of such persons; whether the landholders and farmers or their local agents took any and what measures, immediately after the occurrence, for the discovery and apprehension of the offenders; whether the village watchmen were present, and showed a proper degree of attention and alacrity on the occasion, or otherwise; whether there are any persons of notorious bad character in the neighbourhood, or persons who have before been punished for robbery and discharged from jail, and if so, where such persons were at the time of the commission of the offence.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xv., cl. 2.

139. The foregoing inquiries shall be made and committed to writing on the spot, in the form of a sooruthal or report, and in the presence of three or more creditable inhabitants of the neighbourhood, by whom it shall be attested, and the papers shall be forwarded without delay for the information of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xv., cl. 3.

140. It shall further be the duty of the police-officers, on occasions of the description above mentioned, as well as in cases of murder and unnatural death, to apprize the persons present at the inquiry, that their suppression or denial of any knowledge which they may possess relative to the perpetrators of the crime will tend to invalidate their testimony in the event of their deposing to such knowledge at a future period. They shall at the same time give encouragement to all persons, not accomplices or accessaries, who may have been present at the commission of a crime, to make a full communication of every fact and circumstance within their knowledge respecting the offenders, and shall take their information or evidence with such precautions of secrecy as may be deemed requisite, where persons supposed to have recognized any of the offenders may appear to be deterred from publicly naming them, under fear of the consequences, if the parties should not be apprehended.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xv., cl. 4.

141. The darogahs of police shall invariably report to the magistrate every instance of burglary and theft which may be brought to their knowledge or otherwise, as well as of the attempts in which the offenders may not have succeeded in carrying off property.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xv., cl. 5.

142. In cases of burglary, the police-officer conducting the inquiry shall attend to the foregoing instructions regarding inquiries in cases of robbery, as far as the same may be applicable; and shall be careful to ascertain and report the time of the day or night at which the offence was perpetrated, and the means used in effecting an entry into the habitation; and if by breaking or cutting through a wall, mat, or other partition, the length and breadth of the aperture; also whether the house or apartment into which a burglarious entry may have been effected is used as a place of residence, or for the custody and preservation of property.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xv., cl. 6.

143. Police-officers making inquiries in cases of robbery, burglary, and theft, shall require the village chokeedars, the landholders and their agents, and the inhabitants of the place where the offence may be committed, to state whether they suspect any and what persons of having committed the offence, and if so, the grounds of their suspicion; after which, they shall take the necessary measures to ascertain how far such suspicions may be well founded, and where the persons suspected may have been at the time the crime was perpetrated.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xv., cl. 7.

144. In cases of burglary and thefts, unattended with personal violence, it shall not be lawful for darogahs or other police-officers to make the local inquiry heretofore required by paragraphs 115 to 124 and 137 to 143, or to apprehend persons suspected of such offences, unless a petition on unstamped paper shall be presented to them by an individual injured, requesting that a search may be made for property stolen, or that the offender or offenders may be brought to punishment, or unless an express order to adopt measures for those purposes shall be received by them from the magistrate or joint magistrate to whom they may be subordinate.—Reg. II., 1832, sec. ii, cl. 2.

Search for Stolen Property, and disposal thereof when found.

145. The search for plundered or stolen property, whether under the special orders of the magistrate, or under information received by the native officers of police, shall be conducted agreeably to the following rules.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xvi., cl. 1.

146. The darogahs of police are prohibited, except under the special orders of the magistrate, from searching the interior of any house or building for stolen or plundered property, unless a list of the articles missing be delivered or taken down in writing at the thannah, with a declaration, stating that a robbery has been committed, and that the informant, whether he be the owner of the property, or accomplice in the offence, or other person, has substantial ground to believe that the property is deposited in such house or place —Reg XX, 1817, sec xvi, cl 2

147 In the case of search warrants issued from the magistrate s office, the police-officers shall report the execution of the process on the back of the warrant —Reg XX, 1817, sec xvi, cl 3

148 The darogahs, when not especially instructed by the magistrate, shall transmit all representations made to them regarding the receipt or concealment of plundered or stolen property, at or before the time when they may proceed to the search, for the information of the magistrate, and for any orders which he may deem it necessary to issue on the subject They shall also take the necessary precautions for preventing any such property from being clandestinely removed —Reg XX, 1817, sec xvi, cl 4

149 The search for plundered and stolen property shall be proceeded on without previous notice being given to the owners or inhabitants of the house, and shall uniformly be made in the day-time, unless there shall be substantial reason to believe, that in case of any delay the property sought will be removed The process shall invariably be conducted by the darogah, mohurrer, or jummadar in person, and if the darogah cannot himself proceed, he shall issue a warrant according to form No 10 of the Appendix The search shall be made in the presence of three or more respectable inhabitants of the village in which the house or place searched may be situated, who shall subscribe their names to the report made to the magistrate s office, and an opportunity shall, in every instance, be afforded to the occupant of the house of attending the search —Reg XX, 1817, sec xvi, cl 5

150 In conducting the search directed by the preceding rules, the police darogahs shall be careful that no articles of property are surreptitiously introduced into the habitation at the time of search, and no prosecutor or informer, or any other person, shall be permitted to enter, unless he allows himself to be strictly examined in the first instance —Reg XX, 1817, sec xvi, cl 6

151 Should the occupant of the house ordered to be searched be of such a rank in society as would render it improper and objectionable, according to the prevailing opinions and usages of the country, for the officers of police to enter the zenana or apartments of the women, the police-officers shall give due notice for the removal of any women within the zenana, and after furnishing means for their removal in a suitable manner (if they be women of rank, who according to the customs of the country cannot appear in public), shall enter the zenana apartments for the purpose of completing the search, using at the same time every precaution consistent with these provisions, for preventing the clandestine removal of property —Reg XX, 1817, sec xvi, cl 7.

152. If on examining the premises ordered to be searched any property be discovered, which shall be alleged by the complainant or informer, at whose instance the search may be made, to have been stolen or plundered, or which there may be any other reasonable ground to believe has been acquired by theft or robbery, the darogah, or other officer of police, by whom the search may have been conducted, shall endeavour to trace the actual proprietor from whom the property may have been stolen or plundered, and shall question the occupant of the house regarding the means by which the property was obtained, and in the event of his being unable to give a satisfactory explanation, shall forward the property, together with the person in whose house it may have been discovered, to the magistrate —Reg XX, 1817, sec xvi, cl 8

153 Should any suspicious property be discovered in the course of a search conducted under the foregoing provisions, and should no person lay claim to the same, the police darogah shall compare the articles with such lists of property stolen or plundered as may have been previously delivered into the thannah in other cases, and recorded in the register prescribed by paragraph 76, and in the event of the property corresponding with the amount given in the list, shall either send the articles for the inspection of the supposed proprietor, or shall summon him to the thannah for the purpose of identifying his property —Reg XX., 1817, sec xvi, cl 9

154 On the occasion of searching a house under the foregoing rules, the police-officer shall be careful to notice the particular spot in which the property may be found, the time of finding, and the name of the finder, and all property which may be claimed as having been stolen or plundered, as well as all property of a suspicious nature found on persons charged with robbery, burglary, or theft, or which may be seized by the officers of police under suspicious circumstances, shall be forwarded without delay to the magistrate, together with a despatch A copy of the despatch being registered as prescribed by paragraph 74, the original shall be given to the burkundauze charged with the conveyance of the property, to be delivered to the nazir on his arrival at the sudder station —Reg XX, 1817, sec xvi, cl 10

155. Articles of value and of small bulk shall be fastened up in a box, petarah, or bag, and the seal of the thannah affixed Each article of property shall have a separate number (written on paper with the seal of the thannah attached to it), to correspond with the number contained in the first column of the despatch; and darogahs, when describing the property in their reports, shall invariably quote the number affixed to each article.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xvi., cl. 11.

156. No property shall be removed from a house by an officer of police unless it be claimed or recognized as having been stolen or plundered, or considered to be suspicious; and no property once removed shall be returned without the special instructions of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xvi., cl. 12.

157. On the occurrence of a heinous robbery, burglary, or theft, the darogah of police shall transmit a list of the property plundered or stolen to the proprietor or manager of the estate in which the crime may have been committed, with an injunction to cause the list to be affixed in a conspicuous place, and also published in the several bazaars and hauts situated in the estate, at the same time requiring all gold and silversmiths, retail dealers, and other persons, to give notice to the officers of police against persons offering such articles for sale.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xvi., cl. 13.

158. Whenever the person in whose possession stolen or plundered property may be found shall deny all knowledge of the theft or robbery, and assert that he procured the property by honest means, the darogah, or other police-officers conducting the inquiry, shall require such person to state the circumstances under which he became possessed of the property, and shall endeavour to ascertain through whose hands it may have passed, as well as to trace the persons by whom the robbery or theft may have been committed.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xvi., cl. 14.

159. Any person who may find within his house or premises property not his own, which he may have reason to believe lost or stolen property, or to have been deposited within his house or premises with a malicious intent, shall, within twenty-four hours after finding such property, convey it to the nearest police-darogah, and report the circumstances attending the discovery of the property. The darogah shall commit to writing the circumstances which may be stated by the person finding the property, and cause the same to be signed by him, and attested by two or more witnesses present. Such attested writing, together with the property found, shall then be forwarded by the darogah, without delay, to the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xvi., cl. 15.

160. All unclaimed property, whether cattle, boats, timbers, or other goods or chattels, shall be considered as belonging to Government, and the darogahs of police shall forward any property of this description which may come into their hands to the magistrate of the district in which they may respectively be employed; or if any article of unclaimed property cannot be easily moved, the darogah of police shall make over the charge of such article to the local zemindar, manager, or head person of the village, until the order of the magistrate in regard to its disposal can be obtained.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xvi., cl. 16.

161. On the production of the property and appearance before the magistrate of the party in whose possession it was found, he or they shall be required to explain by what means it was obtained, and if it was acquired by purchase, to state the name of the person, together with his place of residence, from whom it was bought. If the holder or holders of the property shall be unable, after the above and such further examination as the magistrate may make, to give a satisfactory account of the means by which it was acquired, and the magistrate shall, on consideration of that and all the other circumstances of the case, think that there are strong grounds for believing that the property was actually stolen or otherwise illegally acquired, he shall detain the property and issue a publication (supposing no person to have hitherto appeared to claim it), specifying the particular articles of property discovered and suspected to have been stolen or otherwise dishonestly acquired, and requiring any person who may have claims to it to appear and establish his or her right thereto, within six months from the date of the said publication.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. xi., cl. 8.

162. Whenever any person may advance claims to property discovered in the mode stated in the preceding paragraph, the magistrate will, of course, put the case into a regular course of prosecution under the general Regulations.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. xi., cl. 9.

163. If no person should appear, within the period of six months from the date of the above-mentioned publication, to claim property deposited in the custody of the magistrate, under the rules contained in this section, and if the party in whose possession such property was found shall have been unable to show that it was legally acquired, and to remove the suspicions which existed that it was dishonestly obtained, the said property shall, in such case, be declared by the magistrate confiscated to Government.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. xi., cl. 10.

164. Whenever the necessity may, in the opinion of the magistrate, cease to exist for retaining any longer any gold or silver ornaments, or brass or copper utensils, which may have been confiscated to Government, such ornaments and utensils shall be broken up and sold at his public cutcherry as bullion or old metal.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. xi., cl. 11.

Duties of Police-Officers with regard to Coiners and Utterers of Base Coin.

165. The darogahs of police shall apprehend and send to the magistrate all persons uttering base coin, and knowing it to be such, or who may be charged with counterfeiting or debasing the current coin. On the receipt of credible information they shall, under the provisions of paragraphs 145 to 160, proceed to search the houses of persons accused of manufacturing or knowingly uttering base or counterfeit coin, and shall seize and transmit to the magistrate any such coin which may be found, together with all implements used for the purpose of debasing or counterfeiting the coin; also all books of accounts relating to the sale or circulation of base coin, together with such evidence as may be procurable to establish the offence imputed to the accused. Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xvii.

Duties of Police-Officers in the Prevention or Suppression of Affrays and Riots.

166. The darogahs of police shall proceed in person, or depute one or more of their officers, as circumstances may require, to attend and maintain the peace at fairs, and during the celebration of festivals, at all places where any considerable number of persons may be collected together.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xviii., cl. 1.

167. On receiving intimation of any tumultuous meeting or assemblage of persons, or of any projected riot or serious disturbance, whether arising from trespass or disputes regarding land, crops, tunks, water-courses, reservoirs, or other causes, the darogahs of police shall either proceed in person, or cause the mohurrer or jummadar to repair immediately to the spot, and the police-officer employed on such duty shall, in the first instance, proceed to the residence of the zemindar, talookdar, or farmer, in whose estate or farm the disputants may be said to be, and require him instantly to cause them to disperse, acquainting him that the land or crop in dispute will be liable to confiscation if any affray ensue.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xviii., cl. 2.

168. In the event of this measure proving insufficient, he shall endeavour to prevail on the parties to disperse, and either to adjust their differences amongst themselves by arbitration or punchayet, or to have recourse to a Court of Judicature for the decision of their claims. In the event of such endeavours proving fruitless, the police-officer who may be present shall declare aloud, that if any person is killed, wounded, or violently beaten, all persons concerned in the affray will be brought to trial before the Criminal Courts. The police-officers will at the same time strive to seize the leaders, or principal offenders; and in the event of their failing so to do, they will endeavour to ascertain their names and places of abode, and to collect sufficient evidence, if practicable, from persons unconnected with the parties, of the circumstances of the affray, the causes which led to it, and who were the first aggressors; and, after taking these steps, shall set people to watch the further proceedings of the parties, and immediately communicate the whole of the particulars to the magistrate, who will adopt the necessary measures for bringing the offender or offenders to condign punishment.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xviii., cl. 3.

169. The officers of police are required to proceed to the spot, as above directed, and use every precaution to prevent affrays, but they shall confine themselves to maintaining the peace, and shall on no account take part with or afford assistance to either side in the dispute; and darogahs are strictly prohibited, unless under the special instructions of the magistrate, from deputing burkundauzes, or muzkooree peons, to defend the property of either party, applying for the aid of the police, on the ground of alleged apprehension of affray.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xviii., cl. 4.

170. If the cause of dispute be land or crops, the darogah, in his report to the magistrate, shall describe the land contested, or the quantity or quality of the grain; and in boundary disputes, where the claims of individuals may be better explained by a plan of the ground, shall prepare and transmit with their reports a sketch showing the outline and general position of the portions of land claimed by the contending parties.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xviii., cl. 5.

Duties of Police-Officers in receiving Confessions, and in the Treatment of Prisoners generally.

171. Whenever any person may be apprehended and brought before a darogah, or other police-officer, under the provisions of this Regulaton, the examination of the prisoner shall be taken without oath or affirmation, in the presence of three or more credible witnesses, who are to attest the examination; and the police-officer presiding at the inquiry shall question the prisoner fully regarding the whole of the circumstances of the case, and the persons concerned in the commission of the crime; and if any property may be stolen or plundered, the persons in possession of such property, or the place where it has been deposited. In the event of the prisoner's making free and voluntary confession, it shall be immediately written down, if practicable, in the language best understood by the person confessing, and in the presence of three or more credible witnesses, who can sign their names, and are not officers of the police, or connected with the thannah establishment: if no persons can be found who may be able to read or write, the most respectable persons in the village shall be required to bear witness, and to affix their marks in attestation of the writing. The party confessing, as well as the witnesses, shall be allowed to read the same when finished, or if unable to read, the police-officer recording the confession shall invariably read it over in the presence of the party and witnesses, before it is signed and attested, and shall state, at the foot of the paper, the day of the week, date, hour, and place, at which it may be taken; the original confession, bearing the signatures of the party and witnesses, shall invariably be transmitted to the magistrate, and not a copy; and the police-officer presiding at the inquiry, as well as the person by whom the confession may be taken down in writing, shall subscribe their signatures to the paper in attestation of its authenticity.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 1.

172. No compulsion shall be used either towards parties or witnesses for the purposes of obtaining any information whatsoever; and police-officers are strictly enjoined, not on any occasion, or under any pretext whatever, to encourage a prisoner, apprehended upon a criminal charge, to confess the same, or to excite the hopes or fears of a prisoner by holding forth a prospect of pardon, or using threats, or otherwise persuading or intimidating the prisoner, with the view of inducing him to confess: any species of maltreatment inflicted on a prisoner or witne by a police-officer, landholder, or farmer, or by any other person whatever, whether with a view . extort a confession, or to procure information, will subject the offender to exemplary punishment, on conviction before the magistrate or Sessions Court.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 2.

173. Whenever a confession may be taken at night, or at any other place than the police thannah, the special reason for its having been so taken shall be stated in the darogah's report.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 3.

174. The foregoing provisions are not meant to preclude the police darogah, or officers presiding at the inquiry, from making any private verbal examination which he may deem requisite, with the view of ascertaining accomplices, or discovering stolen property, or obtaining means of proof.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 4.

175. Prisoners confessing offences shall be kept apart from all persons in custody at the thannah, and if practicable, shall be forwarded to the Magistrate's Court under charge of a separate guard.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 5.

176. Witnesses to confessions shall invariably be bound over by the police darogahs to attend the magistrate on the arrival and examination of the prisoners at the sudder station, and the police-officers shall be careful not to admit of any deviation from this rule.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 6.

177. Prisoners during their detention at the thannah shall be confined within the thannah-house, or guard-room, or in some other convenient place of confinement, where they will not be exposed to the open air.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 7.

178. Stocks may be used at the thannahs during the night for the purpose of securing the persons of robbers and murderers, or other persons of dangerous character, or disorderly behaviour, or persons who may have escaped from custody, until they can be forwarded to the magistrate; but the darogahs are strictly enjoined, under pain of dismission from office, not to place any individual in the stocks, except during the night time, and then only in cases of robbery and murder, or of previous escape from custody, or when the notoriety of the prisoner's character or his behaviour may be such as to render this mode of confinement essential for his safeguard.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 8.

179. The darogahs of police shall be competent to use handcuffs of a light construction, to be provided by the magistrates (instead of fetters and ropes for the legs and arms), for the purpose of forwarding heinous criminals with safety to the Magistrate's Court.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 9.

180. The darogahs shall be held strictly accountable for any ill-treatment which prisoners may sustain whilst under their charge, and for any severity further than what may be essentially requisite for securing the persons of such prisoners.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 10.

181. Burkundauzes escorting prisoners shall, on ordinary occasions, journey at a rate not less than six or more than eight coss per diem.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 11.

182. When alighting at any village for the night, the police-officers having charge of prisoners shall report their arrival to the proprietor, farmer, or head man of the village, who shall point out a proper place for securing the prisoners during the night, and shall require the village watchmen to afford their aid in guarding them.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 12.

183. In cases in which the prisoners may be unable to support themselves during their journey from the police thannah to the Magistrate's Court, the darogahs shall advance such amount for diet-allowance as may be necessary for their way-charges, not exceeding the rate of one anna per diem, reporting the same for the information and orders of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 13.

184. On the arrival of the prisoners at the sudder station, the burkundauzes charged with the despatch shall convey them to the foujdary nazir, or to such other native officer as the magistrate may appoint, in order that they may be secured in a lock-up house until the report of the case can be perused by the magistrate, till which time one or more of the burkundauzes who may have accompanied the prisoners shall remain in attendance, to be examined, if necessary, on any points relating to the case.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 14.

185. Prisoners who may be sent from the station of one district to that of another, or who may be sent by a magistrate into the mofussil, for the purpose of being discharged, shall, exclusive of other papers, be sent with a written despatch, unsealed, showing the name of the prisoner and his destination; and it shall be the duty of the darogahs to forward prisoners of this description according to the despatch which may accompany them, under charge of the police burkundauzes from thannah to thannah. A statement of all such cases, specifying the names of the prisoners and other particulars, shall be recorded in the thannah diary prescribed by paragraphs 64 to 78.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 15.

186. The darogah and other officers of police are prohibited, under penalty of immediate dismission from office, from detaining any prisoners, without sending them to the magistrate, beyond such time as may be indispensably requisite for the inquiries directed by this or any other Regulation; and if from any cause the inquiry cannot be completed within forty-eight hours after the arrival of a prisoner at the cutcherry or station of the police-officer, the person shall, notwithstanding, be sent to the magistrate, with a report of the case, and a chelan or despatch, drawn up according to the form No. 2 of the Appendix, a copy of which shall be given to the burkundauze under whose charge the prisoner may be forwarded, to be delivered to the nazir on his arrival at the sudder station.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 16.

187. The officers of police shall report to the magistrate the cases of all persons apprehended within their respective jurisdictions, whether such persons may have been admitted to bail, or otherwise; and no person who may be once apprehended shall be discharged, except on bail, or under the special orders of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xix., cl. 17.

Rules relating to Notorious Offenders and to Vagrants, their Apprehension and Discharge.

188. It shall be the duty of the darogahs of police to apprehend and forward to the magistrate all persons residing within their respective jurisdictions who may be notorious, as dacoits or robbers of any denomination; or as house-breakers, thieves, or receivers of stolen property.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 1.

189. On any written charge being preferred to a police darogah against individuals within his jurisdiction, of their being notorious robbers, burglars, thieves, or receivers of stolen property; or on the darogah's receiving credible information of such persons being within his jurisdiction, the darogah, or other police-officer presiding in the thannah jurisdiction, shall, previously to the apprehension of the accused, make such secret and summary inquiry in the neighbourhood as may be practicable, without endangering his escape, in regard to his general character and means of subsistence; and if there shall appear substantial grounds to believe that the charge or information is well founded, the darogah or other police-officer shall apprehend the person suspected, and shall examine him, without oath, regarding his name, connections, place of residence, occupation, and means of livelihood. If, on such examination, and any further immediate inquiry which may be practicable, there appear to be strong grounds of presumption that the charge or information against the prisoner is unfounded, or greatly exaggerated, and the prisoner shall tender sufficient bail for his appearance before the magistrate, such bail shall be accepted; or in failure thereof, as well as in all cases wherein the examination of the prisoner may tend to confirm the truth of the charge or information against him, he shall be forwarded under custody to the magistrate, together with a written report of the inquiry, including such particulars as may be necessary to enable the magistrate to form a just comprehension of the merits of the case.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 2.

190. The foregoing rule shall not be construed as authorizing the police-officers to make the sooruthals and inquiries regarding character provided for in the next paragraph, except under the special orders of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 3.

191. Whenever a police darogah may receive instructions from a magistrate to make a local inquiry and sooruthal, for the purpose of ascertaining the character of any person of bad fame or suspicious livelihood the darogah shall proceed himself, or shall depute the mohurrir or jummadar of the thannah to the village in which the suspected person may have been known to reside, and the darogah, mohurer, or jemmadar, when not otherwise specially instructed by the magistrate, shall summon four or more of the principal inhabitants (not being females), or of the middling classes residing in the village, and shall question them, without oath or affirmation, respecting the present and former place of residence of the prisoner, his general character, means of subsistence, property in ploughs, land, cattle, and other goods and chattels; he shall also require them to state whether the individual suspected associates with persons of bad character, robbers, or armed men; and if so, the names of such persons; whether he is frequently absent from his house or place of residence at night without sufficient cause; whether his expenses are in proportion to or exceed his means; whether any person in the village bears the prisoner enmity, and whether the prisoner was ever before apprehended, and if so, on what account.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 4.

192. The sooruthal, containing the result of the inquiry above directed, shall be signed by the persons assembled, and if the result of the inquiry be favourable to the character of the prisoner, the darogah shall only forward his report, and await the orders of the magistrate; but if unfavourable, a sufficient number of the subscribing witnesses, not in any instance exceeding four (unless under the special orders of the magistrate), shall be immediately required to execute recognizances to appear and give evidence in the Foujdary Court.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 5.

193. Whenever a person of bad character may be liberated from custody, or may be released from jail, after the expiration of a specific sentence of imprisonment, and the magistrate may be of opinion, with reference to the character of the prisoner, that his future conduct should be watched, such individual shall be sent to the thannah division in which his habitation may be situated, and shall be released by the officers of the police, in the presence of the munduls, putwarries, and other head men and watchmen of the village to which the person liberated may belong, who shall be enjoined to afford him all practicable aid in procuring an honest livelihood; but at the same time to keep a vigilant inspection over his conduct and mode of living, and to give timely information to the police-officer of the jurisdiction in the event of his being absent from his village at night without giving notice of his intention, or of his associating with individuals of bad reputation, or of his ceasing to labour or to obtain a livelihood by creditable means; in all which cases they will be held responsible and liable to the penalty stated in the next paragraph, unless they give due information of the circumstances to the thannah.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 6.

194. On the occasion of releasing a prisoner under the provisions of the foregoing rules, the police darogah shall report to the magistrate the names of the munduls and other head men of the village present at the time of the prisoner's discharge; and if the person released should hereafter be convicted of any criminal offence, and if it be established that the head men of the place neglected to furnish the information required by the preceding paragraph, they shall be liable to the payment of a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees from each individual, commutable, in default of payment, to one month's confinement in the civil jail.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 7.

195. It shall be the duty of the darogahs of police to apprehend all vagrants and suspicious persons, of whatever denomination, wandering about the country in parties, or lurking about individually, without any fixed place of abode; or who, though resident in a particular place, may have no ostensible means of honest livelihood, and who, on examination, may be unable to give a satisfactory account of themselves.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 8.

196. Police darogahs receiving information of the resort of persons of the description specified in the preceding paragraph, shall, previous to their apprehension, make such summary inquiry as the nature of the case may admit, without risk to their escape; and in the event of strong suspicion attaching to them, shall secure their persons, and, unless on examination, without oath or affirmation, respecting their names, connections, place of residence, occupation, and means of livelihood, they can render a satisfactory account of themselves, shall forward them forthwith to the magistrate, together with a report of the circumstances under which they may have been arrested, and of the inquiry made.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 9.

197. In cases where the names of the vagrants or other suspicious persons cannot be ascertained, it shall be competent to the police darogah to apprehend such persons without a specific warrant, and in the event of any number of persons of this description being in sufficient force to resist the officers of the thannah, the darogah shall require the aid of the local zemindar, or other landholder or farmer, or of the police-officers of the adjacent thannah, or shall apply for assistance from the sudder station, according to the exigency of the case.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 10.

198. After the apprehension and examination of the persons suspected, should the information upon which the police darogah acted prove to be incorrect, and no sufficient reason appear for sending them to the magistrate, the darogah shall admit the parties to bail if they are able to furnish sufficient security, and shall report the circumstances to the magistrate, without sending them to the sudder station, till the receipt of an order to that effect.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 11.

199. In enforcing the provisions contained in the preceding rules, the darogah and other officers of police, and the village watchmen, shall be careful not to confound strangers coming from the adjacent districts or countries, for the evident purpose of cultivating land or exercising their several professions, with vagrants or other suspected persons. On the contrary, the darogahs shall afford all due and reasonable encouragement to persons coming of their own accord into their respective limits, who may be desirous of settling therein from such industrious motives: the police-officers will nevertheless keep a watchful eye over such persons so long as it may appear necessary, and the darogahs will invariably report to the magistrate every instance that may come to their knowledge of an accession of this nature to the population of their respective divisions.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xx., cl. 12.

200. In addition to the powers vested in darogahs of police by paragraphs 184 to 189, with regard to the apprehension of all vagrants and suspicious persons, they are empowered to detain all persons travelling in bodies through their jurisdictions, or assembling therein, under circumstances leading to the suspicion that they are subjects of foreign states, who have assumed fictitious characters, or have assembled together in armed bodies for the purpose of committing robberies or other crimes within the British territories; and unless on examination they shall be able to give a satisfactory account of themselves, the darogahs shall without delay either report to the magistrates the circumstances under which they may have been detained, or in cases of an emergent nature shall forward such individuals to the magistrates.—Reg. III., 1821, sec. vii., cls. 1 & 2.

201. If a darogah of police, acting under the discretion vested in him by the preceding paragraph, shall not see sufficient cause, after the examination of the persons suspected, to send them to the magistrate or to detain them until the orders of the magistrate shall be received, but shall nevertheless entertain suspicions of their real character and intentions, he shall depute one or more police-officers to watch their proceedings in passing through his jurisdiction, and shall notify the same to the adjoining police division, in order that the same precautions may be adopted and followed up.—Reg. III., 1821, sec. vii., cl. 3.

202. If a darogah of police shall forward to the magistrate any persons travelling through or assembling in his division under suspicious circumstances, the magistrate, having duly inquired into the grounds of their arrest, shall either release them, or adopt the precautionary measures directed in the preceding paragraph; or if they appear to be travelling without any reasonable object, and to be inhabitants of a remote district, or subjects of a foreign state, he shall compel them to return, under a suitable guard, from station to station to the district or territory from which they may appear to have proceeded.—Reg. III., 1821, sec. vii., cl. 4.

203. The zillah and city magistrate shall examine all vagrants or suspected persons who may be lurking about his jurisdiction without any ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves, and also any person who may have a knowledge of their usual place of residence, occupation, or mode of obtaining their livelihood; and if there shall appear to him grounds for supposing that they are disorderly or ill-disposed people, he shall employ them in repairing the public roads, or upon any other public work, until they find a security for their good behaviour in case of their being discharged, or until some creditable persons shall agree to entertain them in their service, or the magistrate shall be satisfied, from their deportment whilst in his custody, or other circumstances, that they will of themselves take to some service or employment so as to obtain an honest livelihood, in either of which cases the magistrate shall discharge them. If any person so apprehended shall make his escape from the custody of the magistrate before he is regularly discharged, and shall be re-apprehended, he shall be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for six months.—Reg. XXII., 1793, secs. x. and xxxiii.

Village Watchmen.

204. It shall be the duty of the darogahs of police, under the guidance and instruction of the magistrate, to prepare and keep up at their thannahs a complete register of the village watchmen employed within the limits of the authority of the said darogahs respectively, drawn out after the form No. 6 of the Appendix; and upon the death or removal of any of the watchmen, the landholders and other persons to whom the right of nomination to such vacancies shall belong, shall send the names of the persons whom they may appoint to the darogah of the jurisdiction, that they may be registered by him as above directed.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 1.

205. The village watchmen are declared subject to the orders of the police darogahs.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 2.

206. Village watchmen who may reside within one coss of the thannah station to which they may be subject, shall report daily to the thannah all occurrences connected with the police which may have happened in their respective villages during the preceding twenty-four hours; village watchmen residing from one to three coss distant from the thannah shall furnish similar reports twice every week; and all other watchmen whose residence may be situated at a greater distance shall report once in every week or fortnight, as they may be specially instructed by the police darogah so to do.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 3.

207. All occurrences reported by the village watchmen shall be recorded by the mohurers in the thannah diaries; but it shall not be considered necessary to enter in such diaries the reports of watchmen who have no communication to make further than that the peace of their divisions has been undisturbed since their last report.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 4.

208. The village watchman shall apprehend and send to the darogah, or other police-officer presiding at a thannah, any person who may be taken in the act of committing murder, robbery, housebreaking or theft; also proclaimed offenders, and persons against whom a hue and cry shall have been raised of their having been concerned in a recent criminal offence. It shall further be the special duty of the village watchmen to convey to the thannah immediate intelligence of any robbers who may have concealed themselves in their respective villages, or in the adjacent country; and also of any vagrants, or other persons who may be lurking about the country without any ostensible means of subsistence, and who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves. It shall likewise be the business of the village watchmen to convey early intimation to the thannah of all murders, robberies, burglaries, thefts, violent affrays, and other heinous offences, perpetrated in the villages or places in which they may be stationed.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 5.

209. The report of the village watchmen to the police-officers of the regular establishments shall be made verbally; and they shall not, unless they appear as prosecutors, be sworn to their depositions at the thannahs, or be detained at the thannahs, or sent into the Magistrate's Court, unless on account of misconduct, or under the special orders of the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 6.

210. Darogahs of police shall invariably ascertain and report, when making inquiries on the occasion of any robbery, burglary, or theft, the conduct of the village watchmen; and whether they were present at their posts when the offence was perpetrated; if not, the cause of their absence, and whether there may be reason to believe that they were themselves concerned in, or connived at, the commission of the crime. In the event of any neglect or suspicion of criminality attaching to a village watchman, the darogah shall either send the individual to the magistrate, with a separate report of the grounds of the charge exhibited against him, and evidence to establish the same, or shall forward a report in the first instance, and wait the instructions of the magistrate, as the nature of the alleged offence may dictate. In the event of any gross neglect or misconduct in the discharge of his duty as a police-officer being established against a village watchman, he shall be liable to dismission from his station by order of the magistrate, independently of any punishment to which he may be subject for specific acts of criminality, under the laws and Regulations in force.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 7.

211. The darogahs or their police-officers are prohibited, under penalty of dismission from office, from employing the village watchmen on their private concerns, or on any duties unconnected with the police.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 8.

212. In those towns and villages where the darogahs of the mofussil police jurisdiction, or the officers of outposts, may be stationed, the duties of watching and patrolling shall be performed conjointly by the regular police-officers and the village watchmen; and private watchmen, entertained by individuals for guarding their habitations, shops, or warehouses, shall also afford their assistance, and be considered subject, in the performance of this duty, to the orders of the police darogahs of the station.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 9.

213. On the occurrence of a gang or highway-robbery, or any robbery by open violence, murder, burglary, or theft, attended with wounding, or any other heinous offence attended with a violent breach of the peace, the village watchmen shall, to the utmost of their ability, resist and endeavour to apprehend the offenders, and shall require the head men of the village to collect the inhabitants, and to oppose and seize the criminals, or to pursue them if they have fled; and it shall be incumbent on the inhabitants of the villages through which, or near to which, the pursuit may lay, to afford, on the requisition of the village watchmen or other police-officer, every practicable assistance towards the apprehension of the robbers or other offenders, and recovery of any property stolen or plundered by them, continuing the pursuit from village to village. Any head man or watchman of a village who may be convicted before the local magistrate of wilful inattention to such requisition shall be liable to fine and imprisonment, not exceeding the limitation prescribed by Section xix. Regulation IX., 1807 ("MAGISTRATES," paragrapn 51).—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxi., cl. 10.

Concurrent Jurisdiction of Police Darogahs.

214. Whenever a police darogah may receive intelligence of any murder, gang-robbery, or other heinous crime having occurred within his jurisdiction, the perpetrators of which may not have been apprehended, he shall despatch immediate information of the occurrence to the neighbouring police darogahs, both in the district in which his thannah may be situated and in the adjacent districts.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxii., cl. 1.

215. The darogahs and other police-officers are empowered, either under the warrant of the magistrate, or without such warrant, to pursue persons charged with the crimes above mentioned into the jurisdiction of other darogahs, whether subject to the same magistrate or to the magistrate of any other zillah or city; and the magistrates, darogahs, police-officers, landholders, farmers, gomashtahs of villages, cultivators of land, and all other persons having authority, or residing in the jurisdiction into which the offenders may be pursued, are required to afford every assistance in their power to the pursuing officers, for the apprehension of the offenders.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxii., cl. 2.

216. It is to be understood, however, that this concurrent authority is to be exercised by the police-officers only in those cases in which the crime shall have been committed within their own respective jurisdictions; or in the event of the crime having been committed in any other jurisdiction, when the offender shall be actually within their jurisdiction at the time the charge may be preferred to them: and it shall not be lawful for the daroguh of one zillah or jurisdiction to issue a warrant for the apprehension of an offender being or residing in another zillah or jurisdiction at the time of a complaint being preferred, for any crime not committed within the limits of his own jurisdiction. In such cases, the complainant must apply, in the first instance, to the magistrate of the zillah, or to the darogah of the jurisdiction, in which the crime or misdemeanor shall have been committed, or in which the offender may reside or be found. But should the complainant first prefer a written application to the darogah of another jurisdiction, such darogah shall record in his diary the name of the complainant, the nature of the charge, and the date on which the complaint may have been referred to another darogah. The date and ground of such reference shall also be indorsed upon the application to be returned to the complainant.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxii., cl. 3.

217. Whenever the police-officers employed under one magistrate shall apprehend offenders in the jurisdiction of another magistrate, in virtue of the powers vested in them by the preceding rules, they shall immediately deliver to the darogah of the police jurisdiction in which the offenders may be apprehended, a list of their names, and a statement of the crimes or misdemeanors with which they may be charged; and the latter darogah shall immediately forward such list and statement to the magistrate to whose authority he may be subject.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxii., cl. 4.

218. The police darogahs, in pursuance of Section xv., Regulation I., 1804, are empowered to issue process within the limits of the invalid thannahs in the same manner as in other parts of the country.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxii., cl. 5.

Prosecutors and Witnesses.

219. Subpœnas to prosecutors and witnesses shall be drawn out according to the form No. 11 of the Appendix, and shall be served by a single burkundauze; but the darogahs are strictly prohibited from delivering summonses to parties or their agents to be served on their own witnesses.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxiii., cl. 1.

220. Prosecutors and witnesses, whose attendance may be necessary at the Criminal Courts, shall execute recognizances (mochulkas) according to the form No. 12 and No. 13 respectively of the Appendix, before the police-officers, to appear before the magistrate on a specific day, which shall be the day whereon the party accused may be bound to appear if he shall have been admitted to bail, or on the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the magistrate's place of residence if he is to be forwarded thither under custody: the police-officer in whose presence the recognizance may be executed shall forward it, with his report, to the magistrate, and shall deliver to the prosecutor or witness a despatch addressed to the magistrate, which the prosecutor or witness shall be required to deliver in person to the magistrate, unaccompanied by any officer of police.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxiii., cl. 2.

221. The police-officers are prohibited from subjecting prosecutors to any degree of restraint, unless their complaints should appear, on inquiry, to be false and malicious; in which case, the circumstances shall be reported to the magistrate, and the complainant shall be required by the darogah to furnish bail for his appearance before the magistrate; in the event of his not conforming to such requisition, he shall be forwarded under custody to the Foujdary Court.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxiii., cl. 3.

222. The officers of police are strictly enjoined not to subject witnesses to any restraint or unnecessary inconvenience, nor to require them to give security for their appearance; but if any witness shall refuse to attend or to execute the recognizance directed in paragraph 220, it shall be competent to the darogah or other police-officers presiding at the thannah to forward such witness under custody to the Magistrate's Court.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxiii., cl. 4.

Summons.

223. On a complaint being preferred in writing to a darogah, or to any other officer of police authorized to receive the same, against a person subject to his jurisdiction, for any bailable crime or misdemeanor declared by this Regulation to be cognizable by the native officers of police, and which may not require the immediate apprehension of the accused, the police-officer receiving such complaint, upon the party complaining making oath (or a solemn declaration, if the party be of a rank or caste which would render it improper to compel him to take an oath) to the truth of the complaint, or without such oath or declaration, if satisfactory reason be assigned by the complainant for not attending to make the same, and the truth of the charge be deposed to on oath, or under solemn declaration, by some other credible person or persons, shall issue a summons under his official seal and signature, to be served through a single burkundauze, or through any known and accredited agent of the party complained against, who may be on the spot and willing to receive the same in behalf of his principal, but no summons shall be delivered to a complainant to serve on the person accused —Reg XX, 1817, sec xxiv, cl 1

224 Police-officers intrusted with the service of summonses in cases wherein bail may not be required, shall demand only an acknowledgment of the receipt of the process; and in the absence of the party, the summons may be served on the principal person in his house or family, if such person be willing to receive the same, and to return an acknowledgment for the party whose attendance is required —Reg XX, 1817, sec xxiv, cl. 2

225 The summons to be issued by police-officers under the rules contained in the preceding paragraphs shall be made out in the form No. 15 of the Appendix, but if the charge be of a serious nature, and such as may appear to require bail to secure the appearance of the party accused, either in person or by vakeel before the magistrate, the summons shall be drawn up according to form No 16, and shall specify the bail to be given, which is in no case to exceed what may be sufficient to prevent the parties absconding before the case shall come before the magistrate, who will then issue such further process or order as he may judge proper.—Reg XX, 1817, sec xxiv, cl 3

226 If an accused person on whom a summons shall have been served as directed in the preceding rules shall not attend in person or by vakeel, and give bail (if required) according to the exigency of the summons within the period limited by it, the darogah shall issue a warrant (according to the form No 17 of the Appendix), under his official seal and signature, for the apprehension of his person.—Reg XX., 1817, sec xxiv., cl 4

227. Whenever any process may be issued by a magistrate or darogah of police for the attendance of any prosecutor or witness, or for the apprehension of any defendant (not being a proclaimed offender), and such person may be absent, or may have absconded, the police-officer intrusted with the process shall require the proprietor, manager, or head person of the village in which the person summoned may be said to reside, to furnish a written certificate of the individual's absence, engaging therein either to cause the attendance of the individual summoned on his return to his village, or to give information at the thannah of his arrival —Reg XX., 1817, sec. xxiv, cl 5.

228 Should it afterwards be established, on inquiry before the magistrate, that the person summoned was actually in the village at the time of the execution of a certificate of the above description, or should it be proved that he returned to the village afterwards, and that the person executing the certificate had wilfully neglected to give due intimation of his return to the officers of the police, the person so offending shall be liable to be fined by the magistrate in any sum not exceeding two hundred rupees, and in default of payment to be confined in the civil jail for any period not exceeding one month —Reg XX, 1817, sec xxiv, cl 6.

Arrest of Persons and Bail

229 Upon a complaint being preferred in writing to a darogah, or other police-officer authorized to receive the same, or on the receipt of credible information, whether given by confessing prisoners against accomplices, or by other persons against any person subject to his jurisdiction, for any crime of a heinous nature, such as murder, robbery, housebreaking, maiming, wounding, theft, setting fire to a village, house, or other building, counterfeiting the current coin, or knowingly uttering base coin, or any crime involving a dangerous breach of the peace, such as a violent affray, or assembling persons to commit an affray, or any similar offence requiring the immediate apprehension of the offender, and on the complainant or any other credible person or persons acquainted with the case deposing on oath (or under a solemn declaration) to the truth of the complaint, the darogah shall examine the complainant or party deposing regarding the circumstances of the case; and on his being satisfied from the particulars communicated that there are grounds to believe that the charge is well founded, and that the immediate apprehension of the offender is necessary to the ends of justice, the darogah or other police-officer, by a warrant under his seal and signature, drawn out according to the form No. 17 of the Appendix, shall cause the person accused to be apprehended and sent in safe custody to the magistrate within forty-eight hours after his apprehension, unless any special reason appear why the issue of process for apprehending the party accused should be stayed until the charge be reported for the orders of the magistrate, in which case such report shall be made without delay.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 1.

230. Darogahs and other police-officers are further empowered to postpone apprehending and forwarding to the magistrate persons charged with thefts, whether attended with burglary or otherwise; provided it shall appear that the offenders shall not have used any personal violence in the occurrence, and provided that the parties against whom the offence shall have been committed shall express their desire that the offenders shall not be apprehended and conveyed before the magistrate; provided, also, that the offenders have not previously been actually guilty of or suspected of having committed theft, or burglary, or robbery.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. vii., cl. 1.

231. Every case of this nature shall be fully and immediately reported by the police-officers to the magistrate, who will either call for any further information which he may judge proper, or will at once determine, according to the circumstances of the case, whether it is or is not necessary, for the ends of justice, that the charge should be regularly investigated, and will issue his orders accordingly.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. vii., cl. 2.

232. In the exercise of that discretion, the magistrate will be governed by any extenuating circumstances which may appear, such as the youth of the offender, his having been prompted to the offence (more especially in times of scarcity and famine) by extreme distress, and by his character appearing to have been previously respectable: under less favourable circumstances, the magistrate will also attend to the important object of preserving the honour of families when the offender may be nearly connected with the party who has suffered the injury, and the latter may be anxious to exempt the offender from the infamy of a public ignominious punishment.—Reg. XII., 1818, sec. vii., cl. 3.

233. Warrants issued by the police darogahs shall be served by the jummadar and burkundauzes of the thannah, and the mode of execution shall be certified on the back of the process, which shall be filed and sent in to the magistrate, together with the report and chelan which may accompany the prisoners.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 2.

234. In issuing processes of arrest in cases in which the darogah of police may apprehend resistance, or on any occasions where the assistance of the landholders, or farmers, or their local agents, may be necessary for the due execution of the process, the darogah shall, on the face of the dustuck, or warrant, specifically require, in writing, the proper landholder or farmer, or local agent (as the case may be), to back the process, and to afford their aid for effecting its due execution.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 3.

235. Darogahs, mohurrirs or jummadars of the police, shall be competent to apprehend, without a written charge or warrant, persons who may be found in the act of committing a breach of the peace, or against whom a general hue and cry may be raised immediately after the commission of the criminal offence, or who shall be detected with stolen goods in their possession; but on such occasions it shall be incumbent on the officer of police by whom the arrest may be made to record his reasons for seizing the offending party, and to forward such person forthwith, together with a report of the circumstances of the case, to the magistrate of the district.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 4.

236. Officers of police shall not without necessity break open the door of a dwelling-house, or of any place of habitation, for the purpose of executing a warrant or other process of arrest. But if certain information be received that a person charged with murder, robbery, or other heinous offence, or violent breach of the peace, and against whom a warrant or other process of arrest may in consequence have been issued, is concealed within a house or other building, and such person shall not deliver himself up on the requisition of the police-officer, bearing a written warrant and the written process to apprehend him, the latter may, in the presence of two or more creditable inhabitants of the place, break open the outer door of the house, or other building, and also the door of any interior apartment, not being a zenanah or female apartment in the actual occupancy of women, by the usage of the country considered private, for the purpose of executing the warrant, or other process of arrest intrusted to him.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 5.

237. In such cases, if information be received that the person accused has concealed himself in a zenanah or female apartment, in the actual occupancy of women, the police-officer employed to execute the warrant shall surround the house, or take such other precaution as may be requisite to prevent the escape of the accused; and shall endeavour to ascertain, by the means of two creditable women, unconnected with the family or with each other, whether the person against whom the warrant has been issued be really concealed in the zenanah; in which case, and if such person shall not on a further requisition deliver himself up, it shall be competent to the police-officer, in the presence of two or more creditable residents on the spot, to break open the female apartment and execute the process intrusted to him, giving notice at the same time to any women in the zenanah, that they may be at liberty to withdraw.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 6.

238. Any wilful abuse and perversion of the powers vested in police-officers for the ends of public justice will subject them, on conviction before the magistrate or Sessions Court, to exemplary punishment, according to the circumstances of the case, besides immediate dismission from office.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 7.

239. Persons charged with the commission of murder, robbery, housebreaking, theft, setting fire to any house or village, counterfeiting the coin, maihem, or serious wounding, where the life of the party wounded may be in danger, shall not be admitted to bail, provided that there may appear reasonable grounds for believing that such persons have been guilty of the crime imputed to them; but in all other cases, if sufficient bail be tendered for appearance before the magistrate, the darogah or other police-officer shall accept such bail, and shall immediately release the party apprehended.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 8.

240. The bail to be taken for appearance before the magistrate, in pursuance of the preceding rules, shall be in the form No. 18 of the Appendix.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 9.

241. Persons who may wound or slay murderers, robbers, or thieves, in their own defence, or in defence of their property, shall not be proceeded against or placed in restraint, or required to give bail, except under the special orders of the magistrate; police-officers are strictly prohibited from acting in violation of the rule, under penalty of dismission from office.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv., cl. 10.

242. In cases of manifest necessity, when the darogah or other officer of police may be apprehensive of danger to the public tranquillity, by the enlargement of a person arrested on a charge of affray, violent assault, or other bailable offence, without security being taken for his peaceable conduct, the party apprehended shall be required, in addition to the bail for his appearance, to furnish security for keeping the peace, and the surety (or sureties) shall execute a recognizance according to the form No. 19 of the Appendix, in an amount to be regulated by the circumstances of the case, and the condition of the person executing the same.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxv. cl. 11.

NOTE.—Section xxvi., Clauses First to Fourteenth, are under the head "Resistance to process;" and Clause Fifteenth under "Rewards."

Distraint for Arrears of Land-rent.

243. Landholders, farmers, and their local agents, or other persons empowered by the Regulations to distrain for arrears of land-rent, who may be opposed, or who may be apprehensive of resistance in effecting the regular distraint, or in maintaining possession of property previously distrained, are authorized to apply to the darogah of the thannah in whose jurisdiction the property may be, for assistance in making or maintaining the regular distraint; and the darogah, in order to support the distrainer and to prevent a breach of the peace, shall, on the distrainer certifying on oath, or by a solemn declaration, the opposition he has experienced, or the resistance which he apprehends, depute a muzkooree peon, with a written process, bearing the seal of the thannah, and signature of the darogah, and drawn up according to the form No. 20 of the Appendix.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxvii., cl. 2.

244. It shall be the duty of the muzkooree peon to exhibit to the defaulter the process prescribed by the preceding paragraph, and to use every means in his power to prevent resistance or other breach of the peace; and unless the arrear is liquidated, to support the distrainer in the exercise of the powers vested in him by the Regulations. He shall also give due attention to the whole conduct and proceedings of the distrainer, so as to be able to give evidence thereon, if afterwards required, either before the judge or magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxvii., cl. 3.

245. Whenever any peon, deputed under the foregoing rules, may depose that he has been opposed in the execution of such duty, or the darogah may be satisfied, from the representation made on oath or affirmation by the distrainer, in the first instance, that any resistance has been offered, amounting, or likely to amount, to a breach of the public peace, the darogah of police shall either proceed in person, or shall depute the mohurrir or jummadar of the thannah to support the distrainer and maintain the peace. He shall also proceed in person, or depute the mohurrir or jummadar of the thannah, whenever it may be proposed by a distrainer, under the powers vested in him by the Regulations, to force open the outer door, or to search the private apartments of a dwelling-house in which the distrainable property of a defaulter may appear to have been concealed.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxvii., cl. 4.

246. The regular burkundauzes of the police establishment shall not be employed to aid distrainers for arrears of land-rent, except in cases where the darogah, mohurrir, or jummadar, may proceed in person under the rules above prescribed.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxvii., cl. 5.

247. The landholders, farmers, and other local agents, and indigo-planters, and other persons, are prohibited from using stocks, or any other instrument of restraint, for the purpose of confining ryots, or other individuals indebted to them, on any account whatever; and the darogahs of police shall report to the magistrates, for such orders or process as may appear proper under the general Regulations, all instances which may come to their knowledge of a violation of this rule.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxvii., cl. 6.

248. Whenever any muzkooree peon, not receiving wages from Government, may be employed by a police darogah under the provisions of this Regulation, he shall receive tulubana, or diet-allowance, from the person at whose instance he may be employed, at the rate of two annas per diem; and the darogah shall not issue any process by the hands of a muzkooree peon until the estimated amount of the tulubana required for the fixed allowance of the peon at the above rate, during his employment, is deposited in advance; the darogahs are enjoined to prevent the muzkooree peon from demanding or receiving, directly or indirectly, from any party, in cases in which they may be employed, any allowance or gratuity exceeding the above rate, and shall report to the magistrate any instances which may come to their knowledge of the violation of this rule.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxvii., cl. 7.

Aid to be afforded to Officers of the Abkary Department.

249. Whenever an officer on a collector's establishment, duly authorized to distrain property on account of arrears of revenue due from any manufacturer or vendor of spirituous liquors, tarry, putchwye, or intoxicating drugs, including opium, may be resisted in the enforcement of the collector's process, he shall, on certifying such resistance on oath or affirmation before a darogah of police, receive the aid of the regular police-officers of the thannah in effecting their attachment; and the police-officers shall be guided in their proceedings, in regard to entering and searching houses for property belonging to defaulters, by the rules prescribed in this Regulation, for their conduct, in cases of distraint for arrears of land-rent, as far as the same may be applicable.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxviii., cl. 1.

250. Darogahs of police shall, as directed in Section xxiv., Regulation X., 1813 ("Abkary," paragraphs 117 to 121), support the officers of the abkary mehaul, in the execution of search-warrants, issued under the seal and signature of the collector, for the discovery of unlicensed stills, or of the produce of such stills.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxviii., cl. 2.

251. It is provided in the Regulation cited in the preceding paragraph, that such search-warrants shall be executed only in the day time, that is between sunrise and sunset, and if possible, in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the village in which the house or place proposed to be searched may be situated. It is further provided that, in the execution of such warrants, the apartments of the women, in houses belonging to persons of respectability and credit, that is, of all those classes whose women do not ordinarily appear in public, shall not be entered by the collector's officers, or by the officers of the police.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxviii., cl. 3.

252. The licensed vendors of spirits and drugs are bound by the conditions of their licenses not to harbour robbers, thieves, or riotous persons, nor to receive any goods or wearing apparel in barter for liquors or drugs; they are also bound not to open their shops before sunrise, nor keep them open after sunset, and are enjoined not to harbour any person in their shops during the night, but to give information to the nearest magistrate or police-officer of any suspected persons who may resort to their shops.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxviii., cl. 4.

253. The darogahs of police are enjoined to report to the magistrate any breach of the foregoing conditions which may come to their knowledge. They will also proceed against any licensed vendor of spirits or drugs who may be charged with a criminal offence cognizable by them, according to the general rules in force, which are applicable to the charge.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxviii., cl. 5.

254. Cutwals, darogahs of police, cutwals of military bazaars, and other native officers invested with local jurisdiction, who may authorize, support, countenance, or connive at the establishment of any unlicensed shop or shops, in any place subject to their control or influence, shall, besides being liable to dismission from office, be further subject, on conviction before the magistrate of the zillah, to the payment of a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees: the fine, if not duly paid, shall be commutable to imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months.—Reg. VII., 1824, sec. xiii., cl. 2.

255. Any person giving information by which a native officer shall be prosecuted to conviction, shall be entitled to a moiety of the fine which may be levied from the offender. But should it appear on investigation that the information originated in malice, or in motives clearly vexatious and unwarrantable on the side of the informant, it shall be competent for the officer by whom the case may be tried to impose such a fine as may appear to be reasonable, not exceeding, however, in any case, fifty rupees, or to order the offender to be imprisoned for a period not exceeding fifteen days.—Reg. VII., 1824, sec. xiv.

Execution of Criminal Process in the Salt and Opium Departments; and Duties of Darogahs relating to those Departments.

256. In all bailable cases, where it may be necessary, under the provisions of this Regulation, to summon or apprehend any manufacturer, molungee, or any officer or person employed in the salt or opium department, the darogahs of police shall transmit the summons or warrant, under a sealed cover, addressed to the salt or opium agent, or the head native officer of the aurung, kothee, or chokee, who will either give, or direct sufficient security to be given, for the due attendance of the party, certifying on the back of the process the manner in which it has been served, and by whom the security has been given, or causing the defendant to accompany the officer bearing the darogah's process to the thannah —Reg XX, 1817, sec. xxix, cl. 1.

257. In cases of bailable nature, in which a person under engagements, and employed in the salt or opium department, may be summoned under the provisions of the preceding paragraph, during the manufacturing season, the darogah of police shall, with the view of preventing unnecessary interruption to the manufacture, require the party summoned to appear in person or by vakeel, either during or after the manufacturing season, as the circumstances of the case may dictate, subject to the future orders of the magistrate, to whom the darogah shall in each instance report the reasons which may have influenced him in the exercise of the discretion here vested in him.—Reg XX., 1817, sec. xxix., cl. 2.

258. Summonses to manufacturers, molungees, officers, or persons employed in the salt or opium department, to attend as witnesses, shall be served in the manner directed by the preceding rules; but the salt or opium agent, or the head native officer of the aurung, kothee or chokee, shall, instead of requiring the person summoned to give security, or proceed to the thannah, take from the witnesses a recognizance agreeable to the form No. 13 of the Appendix, and shall deliver the same to the officer serving the process —Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxix, cl. 3.

259. If a charge shall be preferred to a police darogah against any molungee, or any other manufacturer, or any officer or person employed in the salt or opium department for an offence that is not bailable, and there shall appear to the darogah of police sufficient ground under the provisions of this Regulation for apprehending the person so charged, the warrant for his apprehension shall require him to attend immediately in person, and shall be executed in the same manner as upon persons not so employed. But the darogah, after securing the offender, is to give notice of his apprehension to the salt or opium agent, or to the head officer of the nearest aurung, kothee or chokee, as the case may be.—Reg XX., 1817, sec. xxix, cl. 4.

260. The officers of police, as required, shall comply with applications made to them by a salt agent or superintendent of a salt chokey, or by the officers attached to the salt department, or by any agent, or collector of revenue or customs, for assistance in effecting the seizure of alimentary salt illegally imported, manufactured, sold or transported, and also for the seizure of adulterated common alimentary salt, and for the attachment of the cattle, carriages, or boats used in transporting such salt.—Reg XX., 1817, sec xxix., cl. 5.

261 If any officer of police shall receive information of any salt not made in the Company's provinces having been illegally imported into the said territories, or of salt of any description being transported without the proper rowannahs or char chittees, or of any salt being manufactured on account of individuals, by molungees or other persons, at the khalarees or salt-works established by individuals for the purpose of manufacturing salt on their own account or that of any other person, or of the adulteration of alimentary salt, by mixing with it the substance called "karee noon," or other substance, such as "natron," or native fossil alkali, or the vegetable alkali or potash, such police-officers shall transmit immediate notice thereof to the nearest officer in the salt department empowered to attach contraband or adulterated salt, and to the magistrate to whose immediate orders the said police-officer may be subject.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxix., cl. 6.

262. The police-officers shall confine themselves to sending the information aforesaid to the nearest officer in the salt department, and to the magistrate, and to assisting in the seizure of the salt, either under the orders of the magistrate, or on application from the officers of the salt department; and shall not seize or detain any salt in the first instance of their own authority, except when they may have been vested by order of the Governor-General in Council with special authority for making such seizures, in which case they will receive separate instructions for their guidance in the performance of that duty.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxix., cl. 7.

263. In all cases in which it may appear that an attachment or seizure of salt has been made by an officer of police without the special orders of the magistrate, or an application from any public officer authorized to require the assistance of the police-officer by whom such attachment may be made, he shall be liable to dismission from office, and on the institution of a regular suit in the Dewanny Adawlut on the part of the proprietor, to the payment of full damages to the whole amount of the loss and expense to which the proprietors may have been subjected.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxix., cl. 8.

264. All officers of police are strictly enjoined, under pain of dismission from office, to assist in suppressing the illicit cultivation, manufacture, sale, purchase, importation, transportation, or possession of opium, as required by the provisions of Regulation XIII., 1816, which are herein recapitulated for their information and guidance.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxix., cl. 9.

265. Whenever a police darogah shall obtain intelligence of any land within his jurisdiction having been cultivated with the poppy, except with the permission or on account of Government, he shall immediately proceed to the spot, and, if the information be correct, shall attach the crop so illegally cultivated, and report the same to the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxix., cl. 10.

266. Such police-officer shall at the same time take security from the cultivator of the ground for his appearance before the collector or other officer in charge of the abkarry mehaul; and in the event of the cultivator not giving the required security he shall send him in custody to the magistrate, with the necessary witnesses, to prove the quantity of land which may have been cultivated by him with the poppy.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxix., cl. 11.

267. Any police darogah who shall knowingly permit the cultivation of the poppy within his jurisdiction, or who shall be convicted of conniving in any respect at the illicit cultivation of the poppy, shall, besides being liable to dismission from office for neglect of duty, be further subject, on conviction before the magistrate of the zillah, to the payment of the fine stated in Section XXXI., Regulation XIII., 1816 ("Opium," paragraph 36), for whatever quantity of land shall have been so illegally cultivated within his jurisdiction with his knowledge or connivance; and the fine, if not duly paid, shall be commutable to imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxix., cl. 12.

Note.—See "Salt," paragraphs 89, 90, 94, and 112; "Opium," paragraphs 48 and 112.

Miscellaneous Rules regarding Forts, armed Men, Military Stores, Dress of Sepoys or Lascars, and Badges, public Roads, and insane Persons.

268. The darogahs of police shall uniformly report to the magistrates whenever any individuals within their respective jurisdictions may entertain in their service any extraordinary number of armed men, or may commence building or repairing any fort or gurhee, or collecting together any quantity of arms, ammunition, or military stores.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxx., cl. 1.

269. The darogahs of police are required to apprehend and send to the magistrate, in pursuance of the rules contained in the following paragraphs, all persons not actually in the Honourable Company's military service, or belonging to persons specially exempted by Government from the operation of the rule contained in the section above mentioned, who may be found dressed in the uniform of the Company's sepoys or lascars, or in a dress so nearly approaching to that uniform as to enable the persons wearing it to impose themselves on the country-people for sepoys and lascars.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxx., cl. 2.

270. Native officers and sepoys, excepting subadars, jemadars, and serangs, even though in the service of the Company, who may temporarily reside in or have occasion to travel into the interior parts of the country, being forbidden by paragraph 274, unless employed on the public service, to wear their uniform coats: the local officers of police are empowered and directed to apprehend all persons of the above description violating this prohibition, and to send them to the magistrate.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxx., cl. 3.

271. All persons, whether European or native, within the Company's provinces (excepting such privileged persons as the Government may specially exempt from the operation of the rule contained in this paragraph) are positively forbidden to dress any of their servants, either for the purpose of parade or of business, in the uniform of the Company's sepoys and lascars, or in a dress so nearly approaching to that uniform as to enable the persons wearing it to impose themselves on the country-people for sepoys and lascars.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. ix., cl. 2.

272. All natives, excepting those actually in the military service of the Company, or belonging to persons specially exempted by Government from the operation of this rule, are forbidden to wear a dress similar to that mentioned in the foregoing paragraph.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. ix., cl. 3.

273. XI., 1806, sec. ix., cl. 4.

POLICE.—DUTIES OF NATIVE POLICE OFFICERS

274. Native officers and sepoys, excepting subadars, jemadars, and serangs, even though in the service of the Company, who may temporarily reside or have occasion to travel in the interior parts of the country, unless employed on the public service, are forbidden to wear their uniform coats —Reg XI., 1806, sec. ix, cl 5.

275. With the view of giving full effect to the orders contained in the preceding clauses, the military commanding officers of stations and of detachments in the interior parts of the country, and the several zillah and city magistrates, are hereby authorized and required to deprive of a military dress any person who shall wear it contrary to these orders, unless it shall appear that such person is in the military service of the Company; in which case he shall be sent to the corps to which he may belong, with a written complaint against him. The local officers of police are also empowered and directed to apprehend all persons of the above description, and to send them to the magistrate, who will deal with them in the manner above prescribed.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. ix., cl. 6.

276. Military officers, or other persons to whom escorts may be allowed, when travelling through the country by land or proceeding by water, are forbidden to send sepoys or lascars into the villages for the purpose of procuring any sort of provisions, or of pressing bearers or boatmen. Every local officer of police, upon proper application, will, under Section VIII of this Regulation, grant such assistance as he may be able to afford, and all violent measures, therefore, will be considered equally illegal and unnecessary —Reg XI., 1806, sec. ix., cl. 7

277. No person shall wear, or be accessory to the wearing by any other person of any chuprass or badge, intended to resemble any chuprass or badge worn by servants of the Government; and every person violating this rule shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment on conviction before a magistrate, as for a misdemeanor. Every chuprass or badge worn by any person not being a servant of the Government shall bear the name of the party by whom the wearer is employed, and whoever shall wear a chuprass or badge, or be accessory to the wearing such chuprass or badge, otherwise than in conformity to this rule, shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment on conviction before a magistrate, as for a misdemeanor —Act XVIII, 1835.

278. The darogahs of police shall prevent all encroachments on the public roads; and shall at the same time report the circumstances of each case for the information of the magistrate, and record an abstract of the same in his thannadary proceedings.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec xxx., cl. 5.

279. The police darogah shall secure and send to the sudder station of the district in which their thannahs may be situated, all insane persons found within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, from whose insanity there may be reason to apprehend any fatal or serious consequences, unless the friends of such persons will agree to enter into engagements to adopt such precautions as shall prevent their doing mischief. In such case, the police-officer to whom the engagements may be tendered shall refrain from securing the person of the insane individual, and await the instructions of the magistrate, to whom the circumstances of the case shall be reported without delay.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxx, cl. 6.

Session Judges and Europeans.

280. The officers of police are enjoined to show every mark of personal respect and attention to the session judges —Reg XX., 1817, sec xxxi, cl. 1

281. On the arrival of any European, not in his Majesty's or the Honourable Company's civil or military service who may propose to settle within the limits of any thannah jurisdiction, the darogah of the division shall report the circumstance for the information of the magistrate — Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxxi., cl. 2.

Despatches of Treasure.

282 The darogahs of police are enjoined to afford assistance, on application from the revenue officers, for the safe custody and conveyance of despatches of treasure, and to allow such despatches to be deposited, during the night, for better security, within the house allotted for the thannah.— Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxxii., cl. 1.

283. The darogahs of police shall likewise, as far as their other duties will admit, afford protection to despatches of treasure belonging to bankers and merchants, on application from the person in charge of the same.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxxii., cl. 2.

Rules relating generally to Landholders, Managers of Estates, &c.

284. The police darogahs shall take every favourable opportunity, when employed on local inquiries, as well as on other occasions, of explaining to the zemindars, talookdars, and other proprietors of land, malgoozaree or lakheraj, to the sudder farmers and under-renters of land, dependent talookdars, naibs, and other local agents, and to all native officers employed in the collection of the revenues and rents of land, on the part of Government or the Court of Wards, the duties incumbent upon them, and the responsibility attached to them under the provisions of Regulations VI. 1810, I. 1811, III. 1812, VIII. 1814 ("RESPONSIBILITIES OF LANDHOLDERS AND OTHERS"), and any other Regulations in force, to communicate to the magistrates and police darogahs, either publicly or secretly, all information which they may obtain respecting the commission of murder, robbery, housebreaking, arson or theft, within the limits of the estate or farm held or managed by them respectively; or respecting the resort of any known robbers, of whatever description, or the residence of any notorious receiver or vendor of stolen property, within such limits, as well as to afford their assistance in the apprehension of proclaimed offenders, and of all persons for whose apprehension warrants may have been issued by the local magistrate in pursuance of Section IX., Regulation III., 1812; and generally to co-operate with, assist, and support the police-officers of Government in maintaining the peace, preventing, as far as possible, affrays and other criminal acts of violence, or apprehending the offenders under the rules and restrictions which have been enacted and promulgated in the Regulations.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxxiii., cl. 1.

285. To enable the police darogahs the more effectually and satisfactorily to perform the service thus required from them, the magistrates shall be careful to furnish them with copies of or extracts from all Regulations in force on the points above adverted to, or any other immediately connected with the aid to be given by landholders, farmers, under-tenants, and managers of land, in support of an efficient police.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxxiii., cl. 2.

286. Copies of this Regulation shall be furnished to all zemindars, or other landholders or managers of estates intrusted with the management of the police; and such zemindars, or other landholders or managers, shall observe the rules therein prescribed for the conduct of the police darogahs, as far as the same may be applicable to their duties as chief police-officers.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxxiii., cl. 3.

Rules relating to Boats.

287. The darogahs are to seize all boats built, used, or transferred, in opposition to the rules contained in the following paragraphs, and to apprehend and send to the magistrate the artificers employed in repairing or building such boats, and to report to him the name of the proprietor of the village in which they may have been built or repaired, that the penalties hereafter specified may be enforced against him.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xx.

288. All persons are prohibited building or making use of boats of the following denominations and dimensions, or of boats of any other denominations, being of the same dimensions, without previously obtaining from the magistrate the written authority hereafter directed.

| | Covids length. | Covids breadth. |
|---|---|---|
| Luckhas ... ... ... | 40 to 90 ... ... ... | 2¼ to 4 |
| Jelkas ... ... ... | 30 to 70 ... ... ... | 3½ to 5 |

Paunsways of Chandpore carrying more than thirty oars.

—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xx., cl. 1.

289. The magistrates are directed to seize and confiscate all boats of the foregoing descriptions, which may be built, used, or transferred within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, without written authority from them for that purpose.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xx., cl. 2.

290. Any zemindar or other landholder allowing any boat of either of the descriptions above specified to be built or repaired within the limits of his zemindarry, unless a writing shall be produced to him, under the seal and signature of the magistrate of the zillah, authorizing the building or using of such boats, shall forfeit to Government the village in which such boat shall be proved to have been so built or repaired.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xx., cl. 3.

291. All carpenters, blacksmiths, or other artificers, are prohibited engaging for or being employed in the building or repairing of boats of the descriptions above mentioned (unless the person offering to employ them shall produce a writing, under the seal and signature of the magistrate, authorizing the building or using of such boat), under pain of being committed to close imprisonment for any period not longer than one month. The magistrates are empowered to cause artificers who may be proved to have offended against the prohibition contained in this paragraph, to be punished in the manner and under the limitations directed, according to the circumstances of the case.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xx., cl. 4.

292. The magistrates are empowered to authorize any person to build or use boats of the dimensions or descriptions above prohibited for the purposes of trade, or of conveying themselves from place to place by water, or for recreation; but such authority is to be given in writing, under his official seal and signature, and is constantly to remain with the person to whom the building of the boat may be committed whilst the boat is building, or on board of the boat in charge of some person after it is built, otherwise the boat shall be liable to seizure and confiscation notwithstanding such writing, in the same manner as if the boat had been built and used without such authority. The magistrates are to be careful not to grant licenses to build or use boats of the above denominations or dimensions, excepting to persons whom they may be satisfied will not allow them to be employed for any improper purposes. All persons desirous of building or using boats of the prohibited dimensions and descriptions, or to sell or transfer them, are to apply to the magistrate of the zillah for a written authority for that purpose. The magistrates shall cause this rule to be subjoined to all the written authorities which they grant for the building or using the boats in question; and the sanction for the sale or transfer of such boats shall be endorsed on the original authority for building or using them.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xx., cl. 5.

293. The above rules are to extend to the darogahs of cities, and the magistrates and their police-officers are directed to conform thereto.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xxxv.

REWARDS.

294. In cases wherein any meritorious service may have been rendered by police-officers or others in the apprehension or discovery of public offenders, for whom no specific reward may be payable to the person or persons who have performed such meritorious service, the Sessions Courts, on due consideration of the service rendered, the exertions made, and any expense incurred in the performance of it, are authorized to direct the payment of such remuneration as may be considered adequate, not exceeding the sum of one hundred rupees for a sirdar and ten rupees for an accomplice. If a larger reward be deemed proper, or when it may appear advisable to offer a reward for the apprehension of a known offender, or the discovery of unknown offenders in cases of magnitude, application shall be made to such officer or officers as from time to time may be empowered by the local Governments to authorize the grant of rewards.—Reg. XVI., 1810, sec. xviii.; and Act XVI., 1843.

295. When a zillah or city magistrate shall be of opinion that it is expedient to grant any reward to a police-officer or other person for particularly meritorious conduct, or for any services rendered to the police, he will state the circumstances, with his sentiments, to the superintendent of police.—Reg. XVII., 1816, sec. xv.

296. All rewards for the apprehension of proclaimed offenders, which may be sanctioned by the Regulations, and promulgated under the seal or signature of a magistrate, joint magistrate, or of the superintendents of police, will, if the offender be seized by the officers of police or other persons, be payable on the delivery of the person proclaimed to the magistrate of the zillah or city in which the offender may have been seized.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxvi., cl. 15.

TOWN AND CHOKEEDARY POLICE.

297. Head police-officers appointed in the cities and towns shall be guided in their discharge of the general duties of the police by the rules prescribed for the guidance of the darogahs of police, as far as the same may be applicable, and in the special police duties of the cities and towns by the rules in force which relate to the police of the cities and towns.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xxxiv.

298. The magistrates of cities shall divide the cities and the places adjacent, which are subject to their respective jurisdictions, into wards. Each ward shall be guarded by a darogah with a proper establishment.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xxvi.

299. The wards shall be numbered and named, and the magistrates shall not change the names or numbers of the wards, or alter their limits, without the sanction of the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xxvii.

300. The rules prescribed respecting the darogahs of the jurisdictions in the zillahs are to be held applicable to the darogahs of the wards in cities.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xxviii.

301. The jemadars of the establishments of the several wards, with one-half of the establishments, shall patrol their respective wards, without intermission, from sunset until twelve o'clock at night. The darogahs, with the other half of their establishments, shall patrol their respective wards, without intermission, from twelve o'clock at night until daylight. The patrols are to move about as silently and with as little noise as possible, that thieves and other disorderly persons may never be apprised of their approach. The patrols of the several wards are to be furnished with a singharah or horn, which they are to sound when they meet with robbers or other persons guilty of a breach of the peace, and have occasion to give the alarm to the other patrols or to the inhabitants of the ward, that they may co-operate to the apprehension of the offenders, but not otherwise.—Reg XXII, 1793, sec. xxix.

302. To assist the darogahs in obtaining the earliest intelligence of any robbers or other offenders that may be concealed or have taken up their residence within their respective wards, a mohullahdar and mohullahdarin shall be appointed to each ward; subject, however, to the orders of the darogahs, to whom they shall convey immediate information of any offenders that may be found in their respective wards.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xxx.

303. It shall be the duty of the darogahs of the wards to apprehend all murderers, robbers, house-breakers, thieves, and persons charged with, or suspected of crimes or misdemeanors, and all vagrants who may be lurking about their respective wards without any ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xxxi

304 The darogahs of the ward shall not discharge any persons whom they may have once apprehended without receiving orders from the magistrate for their release.—Reg XXII., 1793, sec xxxii.

305 The duty of the darogahs of the wards, with regard to persons charged with crimes or misdemeanors, is confined to apprehending them and causing them to be carried before the magistrate, as above prescribed. The darogahs are not to inquire into or pass sentence upon any complaint, or impose any fine, or make any exaction, or inflict any punishment on the complainants, or on the accused, or on any other persons whomsoever —Reg XXII., 1793, sec xxxiv.

306 The darogahs of the wards in cities, and the officers under their authority, shall be liable to prosecution in the Civil or Criminal Courts for acts of oppression, corruption, or extortion, or any acts not warranted by the Regulations, in the same manner as the darogahs of the zillahs and their officers —Reg XXII, 1793, sec. xxxviii.

307. The magistrates of cities are to furnish the darogahs of the wards in their respective jurisdictions with sunnuds of office and translates of this Regulation. The sunnuds and translates above mentioned are to be attested with the official seal and signature of the magistrates.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. xxxix.

308. All chokeedars who may have been heretofore appointed, or whom it may hereafter be judged necessary to appoint in aid of the police in the cities or at the stations at which the zillah magistrates ordinarily reside within the provinces immediately dependent on the presidency of Fort William, or at the several towns at which joint magistrates are stationed, shall be nominated, appointed, and maintained by the respective communities for whose benefit and protection such subsidiary police establishments may be required, and which communities are accordingly chargeable with the expense of maintaining such chokeedars, subject to the limitations and provisions following.—Reg. XXII, 1816, sec. iii.

309. All chokeedars of police who may have been appointed, or who may hereafter be appointed under the provisions of this Regulation, shall be paid in money only, and shall receive an allowance for their support, the amount of which shall be determined at the discretion of the magistrate, with reference to the usual wages of labour, not, however, exceeding four, or being less than two rupees per mensem.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. iv., Reg. VII., 1817, sec. ii, cl. 1.

310 It shall be the duty of the superintendents of police to bring under the notice of Government all instances in which it may appear expedient, on a consideration of the usual wages of labour, or of other special or local circumstances, that the chokeedars should receive a higher allowance than three rupees per mensem.—Reg VII., 1817, sec. ii, cl. 2.

311 The number of chokeedars to be appointed and maintained in the several cities or stations aforesaid shall likewise be determined at the discretion of the magistrate, or joint magistrate, with reference to the known or apparent condition of the inhabitants, not, however, exceeding in any instance the average number of two chokeedars to every fifty shops or occupied habitations.—Reg XXII., 1816, sec. v.

312. The aggregate sum to be collected monthly from the inhabitants of the several cities or stations aforesaid, to provide for the payment of their respective chokeedars, shall not exceed the average rate of two annas per mensem from the proprietor, or (in the absence of the proprietor) from the principal occupier of each shop or habitation —Reg. XXII, 1816, sec. vi.

313 The magistrates of the cities and zillah stations will continue to exercise a discretion in exempting the inhabitants of any mohullah from the maintenance of chokeedars, in which, either from the poverty or from the scanty population of the mohullah, it may not appear necessary to entertain such establishments.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. vii.

314. The several magistrates and joint magistrates will nominate and appoint five respectable inhabitants (being substantial householders) of each mohullah of the city, or other convenient division of the town, who shall constitute a punchayet, for the purpose of regulating and of annually revising and amending the rates of assessment to be levied from the inhabitants for the maintenance of their respective chokeedars, as well as for nominating and appointing such chokeedars, subject to the approval of the magistrate or joint magistrate; but the persons composing the punchayet shall not be required to realize such assessments, or to perform any duties which may not be expressly specified in this Regulation.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. ix.

315. The punchayet so constituted shall receive a sunnud of appointment, under the official seal and signature of the magistrate or joint magistrate, with a specification of the duties to be performed by them, according to the form and tenor prescribed in the following form :—

Whereas you (names of persons), inhabitants of (name of mohullah of city or town), are hereby constituted and appointed a punchayet, to regulate and fix the rates of assessment to be levied monthly from the several householders of the said (mohullah or town), for the payment of the chokeedars entertained for their protection, and to nominate and appoint such chokeedars, under the provisions following :—

Article 1st.—You are to regulate and determine the rates of assessment to be levied from the proprietor or principal occupier of each shop or habitation within the limits of the aforesaid (mohullah or town) for the payment of the wages of the chokeedars. You are to regulate the amount payable by each individual as equitably as may be practicable, with reference to the known or apparent condition and circumstances, and the value of property to be protected of each person assessed. Provided that no individual (whatever be his means or condition in life) be subjected to a higher rate of assessment than two rupees, nor to a lower rate than one anna per mensem. And provided, likewise, that the aggregate amount assessed shall not exceed the average of two annas per mensem upon each shop or occupied habitation, or the total sum of six rupees and four annas for every fifty shops or occupied habitations.

Article 2nd.—In the event of any proprietor or principal occupier of any shop or habitation in the said mohullah being in circumstances so indigent as to be manifestly unable to pay the monthly contribution of one anna, such person shall altogether be exempt from assessment.

Article 3rd.—The total amount assessed by you, in the entire mohullah, shall be sufficient to provide for the maintenance of (number) chokeedars at the monthly wages of (amount).

Article 4th.—When you shall have regulated the assessment on the principles above specified, you are to deliver to the magistrate a list, at the foot of which you shall affix your signature, specifying the names, occupation, and amount of assessment payable by each shopkeeper or householder assessed, according to the subjoined form.

Article 5th.—You are hereafter to nominate and appoint the police chokeedars, who may be entertained under this Regulation for the protection of the inhabitants of the aforesaid mohullah. You are to report to the magistrate the names and number of such chokeedars who are appointed; and you are also to report to the magistrate or police darogah of the mohullah any neglect or misconduct of such chokeedars in the discharge of their duties, or any vacancies that may arise from their absence or other cause.

Article 6th.—You are annually, or at any period during the year, when you may be required by the magistrate, to revise and amend the rates of assessment, on the principles above stated.

—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. x.; and Act XV., 1837, sec. ii.

316. On receipt of the list of persons assessed, which may be furnished by the punchayet as required by the sunnud, the magistrate or joint magistrate will revise, amend, and finally adjust, the rates of assessment under the limitations prescribed, in such manner as may appear just and proper, on consideration of any complaints of inequality of assessment, or representations of inability to pay the amount assessed, which may be preferred under the paragraph following; provided always, that the total amount assessed shall suffice to maintain the number of chokeedars the magistrate or joint magistrate may deem requisite for the protection of the inhabitants, under the limitation specified.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xi.

317. Any individual who may consider himself aggrieved by the assessment which may be fixed by the punchayet, or who shall be altogether unable to pay the lowest rate of monthly contribution, shall be at liberty to appeal to the magistrate or joint magistrate by a petition, setting forth the grounds of dissatisfaction or alleged grievance; and on the party making oath or an affirmation to the truth of the circumstances therein stated, the magistrate or joint magistrate, after such inquiry as he may deem necessary, will either amend the rate of assessment or grant such other relief as may appear just and proper, and his decision on all such petitions shall be final.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xii., cl. 1.

318. When the rates of assessment shall have been finally adjusted in the manner directed, a fair copy thereof, with a notification prefixed according to the form and tenor prescribed, and written in the language and character most commonly understood, shall be affixed for general information in some conspicuous and frequented place in the mohullah or division of the town to which the assessments may apply; a second copy shall be affixed in the same manner at the police thannah, and a third shall be deposited in the office of the magistrate or joint magistrate.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xiii.

319. A revised and corrected list of names, with amended rates of assessment, regulated on the principle prescribed in the sunnud of the punchayet, with a notification prefixed according to the form prescribed, shall be annually prepared, and published for general information in the manner above directed.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xiv., cl. 1.

320. The magistrates and joint magistrates alluded to in paragraph 308 are competent to cause the assessments to be revised and amended by the punchayet at any period during the year whenever that measure may be necessary, in order to supply any deficiency that may eventually arise in the amount of the funds for the payment of the stipends of the chokeedars; but on all such occasions they will address a written order to the punchayet, attested by their official seal and signature, specifying the amount of the deficiency required to be supplied by an amended assessment, and requiring a return to be made of such amended rates, according to the form subjoined to the sunnud in paragraph 315, within a stated and reasonable period.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xiv., cl. 2.

321. For the purpose of realizing the amount of the assessments for keeping with regularity and accuracy the records appertaining to the subsidiary police establishments, and for the payment of the monthly wages of the police chokeedars entertained under this Regulation, an intelligent and respectable native, duly qualified, shall be selected and appointed by the magistrate or joint magistrate, who shall be denominated the sudder chokeedaree bukshee, and who shall receive such fixed monthly salary and allowance for the provision of stationery and materials for keeping the prescribed records as may be determined by the Governor-General in Council, such salary and allowance to be defrayed from the amount of the assessment levied in the several towns and cities for the maintenance of those establishments. In making this selection, it shall be the duty of the magistrate or joint magistrate to consult as far as practicable the wishes of the most respectable inhabitants of the town.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xv.; Reg. II., 1832, sec. iv.

322. The bukshees who may be appointed under the preceding rule shall be exclusively employed in the duties prescribed by this Regulation, to the faithful discharge of which they shall subscribe a solemn affirmation; and the magistrates and joint magistrates are strictly enjoined not to allow any police darogah, or other public officer subject to their authority, or any other individual whatsoever, to interfere in any manner with the bukshee in the discharge of the duties specified following.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xvi., cl. 1; Reg. XVIII., 1817, sec. ii.

323. On the 1st of each Bengal or Fussily month, the bukshee shall proceed to collect in person, if practicable, or otherwise with the aid of the chokeedars, the quotas payable by each assessed individual within the limits of the city or town, being the station of the magistrate or joint magistrate.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xvi., cl. 3.

324. For all sums so paid, the bukshee shall sign any receipt or acknowledgment which may be correctly prepared and presented to him for that purpose at the time of payment by individuals assessed, who may be able to write; or should the person assessed be unable to write, the bukshee shall grant a receipt.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xvi., cl. 4.

325. The whole of the chokeedaree stipends which may be realized by the bukshee shall be immediately deposited by him in the treasury of the magistrate, and for which the receipt of the treasurer shall be taken by the bukshee.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xvi., cl. 6.

326. On the last day of each Bengal or Fussily month, the bukshee and police darogah jointly shall cause the attendance of the police chokeedars at the cutcherry of the magistrate or joint magistrate, where they shall be paid their monthly wages, in presence either of the magistrate or of his assistant, or of the joint magistrate; the receipt of each chokeedar being taken for the same in such form as may be convenient.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xvi., cl. 7.

327. The bukshee will likewise prepare any summons or process to be issued against defaulters: he shall keep a regular and correct account of all sales which may be made by him under the authority of the magistrate or joint magistrate for the realization of arrears, according to such form as shall be prescribed by the magistrate or joint magistrate; and he shall perform any other duties which the magistrate or joint magistrate may direct, connected with the general management of this branch of the police establishments.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xvi., cl. 8.

328. On receipt of lists of defaulters, the magistrate or joint magistrate will issue a summons against defaulters, requiring the immediate appearance of the persons therein named at his cutcherry, and will, either himself or by means of his assistant, examine into the merits of the case, and should the party allege that payment has been made, the magistrate or his assistant, or the joint magistrate, shall require the production of the voucher, or will make such further inquiry as he may deem proper; and in the event of it appearing, from such investigation, that any arrear is due, the magistrate or joint magistrate will issue a written order to the bukshee to levy the same by process of distress and sale of such part of the personal property of the defaulter as may suffice to make good the amount; and all orders so passed by a magistrate or joint magistrate shall be final.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xvii.

329. It shall be the duty of the police darogah to render the bukshee any aid he may require in the execution of the above duty; but all sales which may become necessary under the preceding paragraph shall be made in the most public manner practicable, and shall be previously notified by beat of drum in the mohullah; and any overplus which may arise after payment of the arrear due shall be restored to the party; or should the arrear be discharged at any time previously to such sale, the distress shall be immediately withdrawn and the property restored to the owner.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xviii.

330. Any complaints which may be preferred on oath, or on solemn affirmation, against a bukshee, appointed under this Regulation, for undue exaction, malversation or other misconduct in the discharge of the duties prescribed by this Regulation, shall be cognizable by the magistrate or joint magistrate only; and on proof of any such offence, to the satisfaction of the magistrate or joint magistrate, the bukshee shall be liable to dismissal from his office, and to imprisonment in the criminal jail for a period not exceeding six months; and shall likewise be required to refund to the party aggrieved any money corruptly or unduly exacted or received, or to restore any effects, or the value thereof, which may have been illegally sold or distrained, or in default thereof, he shall be further imprisoned until the amount be paid, provided that the total period of imprisonment shall not, in any case, exceed one year; or should the act with which a bukshee may be charged be of a nature to render it proper that he be committed to take his trial before the Sessions Court, the magistrate or joint magistrate will of course proceed against him in conformity with the provisions of the general Regulations.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xix.

331. Whenever any charge which may be preferred against a bukshee, for any unauthorized act alleged to have been done by him in the discharge of his duties, shall, upon investigation, prove manifestly unfounded, exaggerated, or vexatious, the party preferring the same shall be sentenced to punishment by fine or imprisonment, not exceeding the limitation specified in Section X., Regulation IX., 1793, and Section V., Regulation VII., 1811 ("MAGISTRATES," paragraphs 49 and 52).—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xx.

232. In the event of any individual, who may be appointed, by a magistrate or joint magistrate, a member of punchayet, declining, without reasonable or sufficient grounds, to undertake the office, as prescribed by this Regulation, he shall either find a substitute, to be approved by the magistrate or joint magistrate, or shall be subject to the payment of a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees, to be regulated at the discretion of the magistrate or joint magistrate with reference to the circumstances of the individuals, and which shall be levied by the usual process of distress and sale of property. Or in the event of the persons who may be nominated and appointed by the magistrate or joint magistrate to constitute the punchayet in any instance failing or objecting to perform the duties required of them, the magistrate or joint magistrate will proceed to regulate the assessments, and to appoint the requisite number of chokeedars, by means of the bukshee and the darogah of police; but this discretion shall not be exercised, except in cases of indispensable necessity, to provide for the objects in view; and any such interposition of the authority of the magistrate or joint magistrate shall be withdrawn, whenever the inhabitants of the mohullah, or other division of a town, shall petition to be allowed to form the assessments and to appoint chokeedars in the manner otherwise provided for by this Regulation.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xxi.

333. It shall be the duty of the chokeedars who may be appointed under this Regulation, constantly to watch over and protect the safety of the persons and the property of the inhabitants of their respective mohullahs, or divisions to which they may belong; to apprehend and immediately to convey to the cotwal or darogah of police to whose authority they may be subject, any person or persons who may be taken in the act of committing murder, robbery, house-breaking, or theft, or in the actual commission of any breach of the peace, or against whom a hue and cry shall have been raised. It shall also be their special duty to convey to the cotwal or darogah immediate intelligence of the resort of any receivers of stolen goods, or of any robbers or other persons of notorious or suspected bad livelihood, within the limits of their respective divisions; but they shall not interfere in cases of petty assault, abuse, adultery, or abortion; nor shall any person be arrested by a police chokeedar, except in cases herein specified, unless under the special warrant of the magistrate, or of the cotwal or darogah of police to whose authority they may be subject.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xxii.

334.—Chokeedars who may be appointed under this Regulation shall not be removed without the sanction of the magistrate or joint magistrate; and any chokeedar who may be proved guilty of neglect or misconduct in the discharge of his duties, or who may be convicted of connivance at the commission of any robbery or other heinous offence, shall be dismissed by the magistrate or joint magistrate from his situation, and shall be further punishable as the law directs.—Reg. XXII., 1816, sec. xxiii.

335. It shall be lawful for the several magistrates and joint magistrates within the presidency of Fort William in Bengal to appropriate a portion of the tax levied under Regulation XXII., 1816, of the Bengal code, to the purpose of cleansing and repairing the towns in which that tax is levied.—Act XV., 1837, sec. i.

336. No person whatever shall, either by reason of place of birth, or by reason of descent, be exempted from the payment of any assessment under Regulation XXII. of 1816, of the Bengal code, or under this Act.—Reg. XV., 1837, sec. iii.

337. The magistrates and joint magistrates are empowered and required, notwithstanding any thing to the contrary contained in Section XIX., Regulation XXVIII., 1814, to receive on unstamped paper all petitions which may be preferred to them by persons considering themselves aggrieved by the assessment which may have been fixed by the punchayet appointed under the provisions of paragraph 314.—Reg. III., 1821, sec. vi., cl. 2.

338. When petitions of the above nature shall be presented to a magistrate, or joint magistrate, he shall proceed upon them as directed in paragraph 317. It shall, however, be competent to the session judges holding the jail delivery, on the receipt of information leading them to be of opinion that the rate of assessment is too high, or otherwise essentially wrong or defective in any respect, to report their sentiments on the subject to Government, in order that, after making such further inquiries as may be necessary, suitable measures may be adopted for the revision or correction of the assessment.—Reg. III., 1821, sec. vi., cl. 3.

HEALTH OF TOWNS.

339. If it shall appear to the Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor of any presidency or place within the territories under the Government of the East-India Company, that the inhabitants of any town or suburb, not within the town of Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, are desirous of making better provision for making, repairing, cleaning, lighting, or watching any public streets, roads, drains, or tanks, or for the prevention of nuisances, or for improving the said town or suburb in any other manner, the said Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor, may order this Act to be put in force within such town or suburb.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. ii.

340. Whenever any application shall be made to the Government for putting this Act in force in any town or suburb, notice thereof shall be given in the Government Gazette of the presidency or place, and also by proclamation within such town or suburb, setting forth the purposes of the application, and giving reasonable time for all inhabitants of such town or suburb, who are minded to declare themselves for or against the adoption of this Act therein, for such purposes, or any of them.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. iii.

341. The Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor, shall take all such declarations into due consideration, and after the time allowed for receiving the same, shall make a final order, which shall be published in the Government Gazette, and also notified by proclamation within such town or suburb, to the effect that the application appears, or does not appear, to be according to the wishes of the inhabitants, either wholly, or in respect to one or more of the purposes in respect of which it is made; and if the whole or any part of it shall appear to be according to the wishes of the inhabitants, then this Act shall be thenceforth in force in such town or suburb, for such purposes only as shall be mentioned in the order.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. iv.

342. Whenever any such order shall be made and published as aforesaid, this Act shall come into force within the said town or suburb for such purposes as are mentioned in the order, and the making and publication of the said order shall be conclusive evidence that the provisions of this Act have been complied with, and that it is thenceforth in force within the said town or suburb for such purposes as are mentioned in the order.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. v.

343. Whenever this Act shall come into force in any town or suburb, the Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor, shall appoint the magistrate and such number of the inhabitants thereof as to him shall appear necessary, to be commissioners for putting the Act in force, and shall give authority to them to prepare rules for more effectually accomplishing the purposes for which they are appointed; which rules, when approved by the Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor, shall be of the same force within the said town or suburb, until altered or rescinded as hereinafter provided, as if they were inserted in this Act. And the said Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor, may remove any of the commissioners and appoint others, and may fill up vacancies occurring among the commissioners in such manner as may seem to him fit.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. vi.

344. The rules to be prepared by the said commissioners shall provide, among other things, for those following, that is to say:—

1st. The appointment and management of all necessary officers and servants of the commissioners, and the salaries to be allowed to them.

2nd. The definition of the persons of property within the town or suburb to be taxed for raising the moneys necessary for the purpose of this Act, whether by house assessment or town duties, or otherwise, the amount or rate of the taxes to be imposed, the manner of raising and collecting them, and insuring the safety and due application of them when collected.

3rd. The manner in which from time to time the rules in force are to be amended or rescinded, and new rules are to be made, with the approval, in every case, of the Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor.

4th. The definition and prohibition of nuisances within the town or suburb.

5th. The imposition of reasonable penalties for breach of any rule made by the commissioners, not exceeding fifty rupees, or in the case of continuing nuisance, not exceeding five rupees for every day that such nuisance is continued.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. vii.

345. The commissioners appointed from time to time shall have full power to make all necessary contracts for the purposes of this Act, and apply the taxes raised as aforesaid in the necessary works, and in payment of their officers and servants, and in the other expenses incident to the execution of this Act within the said town or suburb.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. viii.

346. No commissioner shall be personally liable for any contract made by the commissioners on behalf of the inhabitants of such town or suburb; but every commissioner shall be liable for any misapplication of the moneys collected, to which he shall have been knowingly party or privy, or which shall have happened through gross neglect of his duty, and shall be liable to be sued for the same as for money due to, and at the suit of the East-India Company.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. ix.

347. The powers of Act II., 1839 ("MAGISTRATES," paragraphs 54 to 57), for the recovery of fines, shall be applied for the recovery of all arrears of taxes and penalties under this Act; and every magistrate shall put in force the powers of the said Act, for that purpose, whenever thereunto required by the commissioners, or any of their officers deputed by them for the purposes of enforcing payment of arrears of taxes imposed under this Act.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. x.

348. No rate on property made under this Act shall be invalid for defect of form; and it shall be enough in any such rate on property, or any assessment of value for the purpose of making such rate, if the property rated or assessed shall be so described as to be generally known, and it shall not be necessary to name the owner or occupier thereof.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. xi.

349. All moveable property found in any house or building, or upon any land assessed under this Act, may be seized and sold by warrant of a magistrate for payment of any arrear of tax laid on such house, building, or land, under this Act.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. xii.

350. All commissioners acting in execution of this Act shall, on or before the last day of April in every year, make up and send to the Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor, an account of all works executed by them, and of all sums received and spent by them in the foregoing year, in such form and with such vouchers as the Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor, shall from time to time order.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. xiii.

351. The Governor, or Governor in Council, or Lieutenant-Governor, may, at any time, suspend the operation of this Act in any town or suburb, and appoint any person or persons to examine and report upon the behaviour of the commissioners, or any of them, or their officers, in the execution of this Act.—Act XXVI., 1850, sec. xiv.

REMOVAL OF NUISANCES.

352. It shall be lawful for any magistrate, when the public benefit and comfort are in question, to cause unlawful obstructions and nuisances to be removed from thoroughfares and public places, and to suppress, or cause to be removed to a different place, trades or occupations injurious to the health or comfort of the community, and to prevent such construction of buildings and such disposal of combustible substances as may appear to him likely to occasion conflagration, and to cause the removal of buildings in such state of weakness as, by the probability of their falling, may appear to him to expose individuals to danger.—Act XXI., 1841, sec. i.

353. In exercising the authority conferred by the above paragraph, the magistrate shall, after holding such inquiry as may satisfy him of the necessity of proceeding under this Act, issue an injunction, which, if practicable, shall be served personally on the parties concerned; but if such service shall be impracticable or very inconvenient, the injunction shall be notified by oral proclamation, and a written notice thereof shall be set up at such place or places as may be best adapted for conveying information to the parties concerned. And in case such injunction be not obeyed, the magistrate may compel observance thereof by force, and punish disobedience by fine, not exceeding two hundred rupees, or by imprisonment without labour for any period not exceeding one month; and if the magistrate finds it necessary to incur expense in removing noxious or dangerous articles or buildings, it shall be lawful for him to sell the same or their materials by public auction, in order to defray the charge, delivering any surplus that may remain to the owner. And it shall be lawful for the magistrate to compel, under the like penalty, the owners of tanks or wells adjacent to any public thoroughfare to fence the same in such manner as to prevent danger to the public arising therefrom.—Act XXI., 1841, sec. ii.

354. It shall be lawful for any person affected by such injunction or written notice as is above described, if he shall object thereto, to claim, by written petition to be presented to the magistrate within the period of ten days if reasonably practicable, if not, within the shortest reasonable further time from the receipt of such injunction or the publication of such notice, that a jury or punchayet may be appointed to try and decide the question; and the magistrate shall, on receiving such petition, pass order thereupon for the appointment of a jury or punchayet, which shall consist of not less than five persons, whereof the president and one-half of the other members shall be nominated by the magistrate from the residents in the vicinity, and the remaining members shall be nominated by the party petitioning. And the magistrate shall suspend the further execution of the injunction or order pending such inquiry, and be guided by the decision of the said jury, which shall be according to the opinion of the majority. Provided, however, that if the petitioner shall by neglect or in any other way prevent the appointment of such jury or punchayet, or if, from any cause, the jury so appointed shall not decide and report within a reasonable time, to be fixed in the order for their appointment, their functions shall cease from the date of the expiration of such period, unless they be continued by special order of the magistrate; and if from any of the above causes no decision be made by a jury or punchayet, the magistrate's order shall take effect as if not opposed.—Act XXI., 1841, sec. iii.

355. All the proceedings of magistrates under the authority of this Act shall be subject to the like appeal as other orders of magistrates, according to the Regulations of the respective presidencies.—Act XXI., 1841, sec. iv.

356. This Act shall not be applicable within the local limits of her Majesty's Courts of Justice.—Act XXI., 1841, sec. v.

ASSISTANCE TO TROOPS ON MARCH, AND TO TRAVELLERS.

357. Whenever a detachment of troops, or a single corps, shall be ordered to proceed, by land or by water, through any part of the Company's territories, the commanding officer of such detachment or corps is required to give the earliest practicable notice to the collectors of the revenue of the zillahs through which the troops are to pass, of the probable time of their arrival within such districts respectively; together with information of the probable period of their arrival at the particular places where supplies may be required, and a specification of the supplies which will be wanted. The commanding officer will likewise notify to the collectors the probable period of the arrival of the troops at the rivers or nullahs intersecting their march, where boats or temporary bridges may be necessary for crossing the troops and the baggage attached to them. The commanding officer will at the same time communicate to the magistrates of the zillahs through which the troops are to pass, the probable time of the arrival of the troops within their respective jurisdictions.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. ii.

POLICE.—ASSISTANCE TO TROOPS ON MARCH, AND TO TRAVELLERS.

358. On receiving the notification mentioned in the foregoing paragraph, the collector shall immediately issue the necessary orders to the landholders, farmers, tehseeldars, or other persons in charge of the lands through which the troops are to pass, for providing the supplies required, and for making any requisite preparations of boats or temporary bridges, or otherwise, for enabling the troops to cross such rivers or nullahs as may intersect their march without any impediment or delay. The collector shall at the same time depute a creditable native officer to accompany the troops through his jurisdiction, for the purpose of aiding in procuring the necessary supplies and of facilitating the march of the troops. It shall also be the duty of such native officer to provide the troops with whatever bearers, boatmen, carts, and bullocks, may be indispensably necessary to enable the troops to prosecute their route. Should he experience any difficulty in the performance of this duty, he is at liberty to apply for assistance to the nearest police-officer, who is directed to afford his aid in providing the number of carts and bullocks required.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. iii., cl. 1.

359. The supplies furnished (including earthen pots, firewood, and every article of supply) shall be paid for by the persons receiving the same, at the current bazaar prices of the place at which they may be provided; and all officers commanding detachments of troops or single corps marching through any part of the Company's territories, are enjoined to make immediate inquiry into any complaints which may be preferred to them by the persons furnishing such supplies, or in their behalf, against any person or persons under their command, and to afford such redress to the complainants as the nature of the case may appear to require.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. iii., cl. 2.

360. The practice of pressing or compelling individuals, whether under the denomination of coolies, begarees, or any other denomination, to carry burthens, either for the public service or for the convenience of private individuals, is positively prohibited; and the several magistrates and joint magistrates are required to adopt all legal means in their power to put an entire stop to the practice in question, by inquiring fully into all complaints which may be brought before them, and by subjecting persons regularly convicted of the offence, to such penalties as on a consideration of the circumstances of the case may appear to be proper, and consistent with the powers vested in the magistrates by the general Regulations.—Reg. III., 1820, sec. iii.

361. Whenever a detachment of troops or a single corps shall be provided with boats, temporary bridges, or other accommodations, by any landholder, farmer, tehseeldar, or other person, conformably to the orders of the collector of the zillah, for the purpose of crossing the troops and their baggage over rivers or nullahs, the commanding officer of such detachment or corps will grant a certificate to the person furnishing the same, specifying the number of boats and persons employed, the burthen of each boat, and how long employed on the public service. In instances in which temporary bridges may be constructed for the above purpose, the certificate to be granted by the commanding officer is to specify generally the dimensions of the bridges and the materials of which they may be composed.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. iv., cl. 1.

362. The certificate mentioned in the foregoing paragraph shall be immediately transmitted to the collector of the zillah by the person receiving it, accompanied by a detailed account of the expense incurred for the purposes therein specified. The collector shall without delay communicate the particulars of the account to the officer commanding the detachment or corps on whose account the expense may have been incurred, who shall certify generally thereon, whether the services charged for in it were performed, or shall state such exceptions as he may have to offer to any of the charges.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. iv., cl. 2.

363. When the account above mentioned shall be returned to the collector, he shall certify whether the sums and rates charged in it are in his opinion reasonable, and conformable to the usual rates of labour and hire in the zillah; and shall transmit the account, with the vouchers and certificates relating to it, with any requisite observations thereupon, through the prescribed channel, to the Governor-General in Council. After the account shall have undergone the examination and report prescribed for all military contingent charges, the Governor-General in Council will pass such final order as may appear proper. In the mean time, the collector is empowered in such cases to pay the amount of the charge, or such proportion of it as he may consider reasonable, to the landholder, farmer, or other person entitled thereto, inserting the amount so disbursed by him at the foot of his treasury account, in explanation of his treasury balance, in the mode prescribed for similar cases.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. iv., cl. 3.

364. Whenever a proprietor, farmer, tenant, or manager of land through which any detachment or corps of the Company's troops may march, or on which they may be encamped, shall consider himself entitled to compensation for any injury sustained from the march or encampment of the troops, he shall immediately furnish the commanding officer of such troops with as accurate a statement as can be prepared of the nature and extent of the injury sustained, when the commanding officer is required to certify generally thereon, whether or not the damage represented to have been sustained has been actually committed, together with his opinion respecting the justice and extent of the claim.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. v., cl. 1.

365. If the proprietor, farmer, tenant, or manager, after receiving such certificate, shall consider himself entitled to compensation, he will be at liberty to present the statement of his claim, with the commanding officer's certificate thereon, to the collector of the zillah (either in person or by his vakeel) within ten days from the date of the certificate; but no claim of this description shall be received by the collector after the expiration of that period, unless the person preferring it shall assign good and satisfactory reason for the delay. The collector, on receiving a statement of damage and the commanding officer's certificate thereon within the prescribed period, or afterwards, if sufficient reason be assigned for the delay, shall forthwith adopt such measures as may appear requisite to ascertain whether or not the claim be well founded; and shall report his proceedings to the Board of Revenue, accompanied by his opinion on the merits of the claim, for the consideration and orders of Government. It is however declared, that no claim will be received unless accompanied by the prescribed certificate of the commanding officer of the troops by whom the damage may be stated to have been committed, excepting in instances in which the claimant can show good and sufficient cause for not having obtained such certificate. In such cases, if the collector shall be satisfied with the cause assigned by the claimant for not having obtained the prescribed certificate, he shall transmit the petition and statement of the claimant to the officer commanding the troops by whom the damage may be stated to have been committed, and shall wait his reply thereto, previously to determining whether or not the claim be entitled to investigation.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. v., cl. 2.

366. Immediately on receiving the notification mentioned in paragraph 357, the magistrate shall transmit orders to the several police darogahs, or other local officers of the police through whose jurisdiction the troops are to pass, to afford every assistance in their power to facilitate the march of the troops through their respective jurisdictions; and to co-operate, as far as necessary, with the person deputed on the part of the collector in procuring the requisite supplies, as well as in adjusting any disputes which may arise respecting the prices of the articles furnished, and in preventing any alarm to the inhabitants of the country.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. vi.

367. Officers commanding detachments of troops or single corps on their march through any part of the Company's territories, are already required, by the general orders issued under date the 1st of February, 1788, to report to the Commander-in-Chief in what manner the troops have been supplied in passing through the districts lying in their route. In like manner, the collectors are directed to report to the Board of Revenue, and the magistrates to report to the Nizamut Adawlut, for the information of the Governor-General in Council, any complaints which may be made to them of the misbehaviour of the troops, when such complaints shall appear to be well founded and of sufficient importance to require communication to Government.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. vii.

368. Whenever any military officer, not commanding nor proceeding with a corps or detachment of troops, or any other person (whether European or native), not restricted by Government from passing through the country, may be proceeding within any part of the Company's provinces, either on the public service or on his private affairs, and shall be in need of assistance during his route, to enable him to prosecute his journey, he shall be at liberty to apply to the nearest local officer of police, to aid him in providing any requisite bearers, boatmen, carts, or bullocks, or any necessary supplies of provisions or other articles. On receiving an application of the above nature, the police officer to whom it may be made shall furnish the aid required, or cause it to be furnished by the proper person or persons; provided that a sufficient number of persons who have been accustomed to act as bearers or boatmen, or the requisite number of carts and bullocks, not exclusively appropriated to the purposes of agriculture and occasionally let for hire, can be procured within his jurisdiction. But all police officers are strictly forbidden, under pain of dismission from office (under the rules prescribed by Regulation V., 1804), on applications of the above nature, to compel any persons not accustomed to act as bearers or boatmen, to serve on such occasions, or to furnish a traveller, or cause him to be furnished, with bullocks or carts kept for private use and not for hire, or exclusively appropriated to the purposes of agriculture. Persons so employed, and the persons in charge of carts and bullocks so provided, shall be at liberty to return from the first police station in the next zillah through which the corps or detachment is to march, unless a voluntary engagement to the contrary may be entered into by such persons. The police officers are further enjoined to be careful that a proper compensation for the bearers, boatmen, carts, or bullocks employed, and a just price for the provisions or other articles provided, be secured to the persons entitled thereto. For this purpose, the police officers are authorized to adjust the rate of hire to be paid for the bearers, boatmen, carts, or bullocks required, and the price of any articles provided; as well as to demand that the whole, or a part, according to the circumstances of the case, be paid in advance. Should any traveller refuse to comply with the adjustment or demand so made by a police-officer, he will not be entitled to any assistance from the officers of Government under this Regulation.—Reg. XI., 1806, sec. viii.

369. Any landholder, farmer, tehsildar, or other person in the possession or management of land, who may have been duly required by a collector of the land revenue (or any public officer acting in that capacity) to provide supplies for a body of troops, about to proceed by land or water through any part of the British territories, or to make preparations of boats, temporary bridges, or otherwise, for enabling the troops to cross rivers or nullahs intersecting their march; and after the receipt of such requisition shall wilfully disobey or neglect the same, or shall without sufficient cause fail to exert himself for the due execution of the duty so assigned to him, shall, on proof of such failure, neglect, or disobedience, to the satisfaction of the collector (or other officer acting in that capacity) by whom the order may have been issued, or of his successor in the same office, be liable to a fine proportionate to the defaulter's condition in life and the circumstances of the case, in such amount as the collector or other officer, with due regard to these considerations, may judge it proper to impose, so that the fine shall not in any case exceed the sum of one thousand rupees.—Reg. VI., 1825, sec. ii.

370. The collector, or other officer acting in that capacity, who may exercise the powers vested in him by this Regulation, shall previously make a summary inquiry, in the presence of the party charged with disobeying or neglecting the order issued to him or of his representative, if, on being duly summoned, he shall attend in person, or by vakeel, for that purpose; if he shall fail to attend, either in person or by vakeel, the summary inquiry shall be conducted ex parte, and the collector shall record upon his proceedings the whole of the evidence obtained in proof of the neglect or disobedience for which a fine may be imposed.—Reg. VI., 1825, sec. iii.

371. The collector or other officer, who may adjudge a fine under this Regulation, shall be competent to levy the amount by the same process as is authorized for the recovery of arrears of the public revenue. Provided that, if an appeal be preferred from his decision, within six weeks from the date of it, to the Board of Revenue, in whose jurisdiction the district may be situate, and sufficient security be tendered for performing the judgment of the Board upon the appeal, the collector shall stay the execution of his order for levying the fine imposed by him, until he shall receive the final order of the Board.—Reg. VI., 1825, sec. iv.

372. Appeals from the orders of collectors or other public officers, adjudging fines under this Regulation, may be preferred on the stamped paper prescribed for other appeals to the Revenue Boards, either immediately to the proper Board, or through the officer by whom the fine may have been adjudged; and, on admission of the appeal, the whole of the proceedings in the case shall be transmitted to the Board. But no such appeal shall be receivable after the expiration of six weeks from the date of the judgment, without proof of sufficient reason for the delay, to the satisfaction of the Board by whom the case may be cognizable.—Reg. VI., 1825, sec. v.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND DUTIES OF LANDHOLDERS AND OTHERS.

373. Landholders and farmers of land are not, in future, to be considered responsible for robberies committed in their respective estates or farms, unless it shall be proved that they connived at the robbery, received any part of the property stolen or plundered, harboured the offenders, aided or refused to give effectual assistance to prevent their escape, or omitted to afford every assistance in their power to the officers of Government for their apprehension; in either of which cases they will be subject to be prosecuted personally for the crime or offence before the Court of Sessions, and if convicted, their lands and effects will be liable to be sold, at the discretion of the Governor-General in Council, to make good the value of the property stolen or plundered to the owner.—Reg. XXII., 1793, sec. iii.

374. All zemindars, talookdars, and other proprietors of lands, whether malguzary or lakheraj, all sudder farmers and under-renters of land of every description, all dependent talookdars, all naibs, and other local agents, all native officers employed in the collection of the revenues and rents of lands on the part of Government or of the Court of Wards, are declared especially accountable for the early and punctual communication to the magistrates and police darogahs, either publicly or secretly, as the informants may judge proper, of all intelligence which they may obtain respecting the resort to any place within the limits of the estate or farm held or managed by them, of any person or persons of the different classes of people ordinarily known by the appellation of dacoits, cozauks, thugs, or buddecks, or of any other description of robbers.—Reg. VI., 1810, sec. ii.

375. If a magistrate shall have grounds to believe that any person of the description of those specified in the first part of the preceding paragraph, shall have neglected to give due information to the magistrate or the police darogah of the resort of any dacoit, cozauk, thug, buddeck, or other robber, to any place within the limits of the estate or farm held or managed by such person, the magistrate shall call upon him to answer to the charge: and if it shall appear, upon a full and impartial inquiry, that the person accused has been actually guilty of the neglect ascribed to him, the magistrate shall sentence the offender to pay such a fine to Government, and to suffer imprisonment for such a period of time as he may deem proportioned to the offence, not exceeding, however, imprisonment for six months, and a fine of two hundred rupees, commutable, if not paid, to imprisonment for a further period not exceeding six months longer.—Reg. VI., 1810, sec. iii.

376. If a magistrate shall have grounds to suspect that any zemindar, or other person of the description of those mentioned in the preceding paragraphs, has afforded any actual assistance in harbouring a dacoit, cozauk, thug, buddeck, or other robber, subsequently to the promulgation of this Regulation (that is, if such person shall be suspected of having afforded to the said offender lodging, money, grain, or other supplies, or that he has committed any other overt act, tending to aid the offender in his depredations upon the community or to evade the pursuits of justice, or that he has received any present or nuzzur, either in money or goods, from the said offender), the magistrate shall call upon the person suspected of having so offended for his reply; and if it shall appear, upon a full and impartial inquiry, that he has been actually guilty of the serious offence ascribed to him, the magistrate, in addition to the punishment mentioned in the preceding paragraph, shall adjudge the estate or farm held by him (supposing him to be a sudder zemindar, talookdar, or farmer) forfeited to Government. Provided, however, that previously to carrying the judgment of forfeiture into execution, the magistrate shall submit his proceedings on the subject to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, who will confirm or annul the judgment so passed, according as they may be of opinion that the charge has been duly established, or otherwise. Provided, moreover, that in the event of their confirming the judgment, the Nizamut Adawlut shall report the case to the Governor-General in Council, at the same time stating their opinion, whether the forfeiture should be enforced or remitted, or commuted to a fine.—Reg. VI., 1810, sec. iv.

377. Should the person convicted of the offence mentioned in the preceding paragraph not be a proprietor or sudder farmer of land, the magistrate shall sentence him, in addition to the punishment noticed in paragraph 375, to such further fine and imprisonment as he may deem proportioned to his offence; but previously to carrying such further judgment into effect, the magistrate shall submit his proceedings to the Nizamut Adawlut, who will finally confirm, amend, or rescind the decision, as may appear to them to be just and proper. Should the person so offending be also an officer of Government, the Nizamut Adawlut shall, at the same time, order him to be dismissed from his office, and shall further report to the Governor-General in Council whether it appear expedient that the offender should be declared incapable of again serving Government in any public capacity.—Reg. VI., 1810, sec. v.

378. All zemindars, talookdars, and other proprietors of lands, whether malguzary or lakhiraj, all sudder farmers and under-renters of land of every description, all dependent talookdars, all naibs and other local agents, all native officers employed in the collection of the revenue and rents of lands on the part of Government or of the Court of Wards, are declared accountable for the early communication to the magistrate, either secretly or publicly, of all information which they may obtain respecting the residence of any notorious receiver or vender of stolen property, or respecting the commission of robberies, or the offence of breaking into houses, tents, or boats, or other places of habitation, or respecting the commission of murders, or the offences of arson or theft, committed within the limits of the estate or farm held or managed by them; and any landholder or other description of persons above noticed, to whom such responsibility is declared to attach, who may neglect to give the information hereby required to the police darogah or to the magistrate, shall, on proof of such neglect, after a full and impartial inquiry, be sentenced by the magistrate to imprisonment not exceeding six months, or a fine of two hundred rupees, commutable, if not paid, to imprisonment for a further period, not exceeding six months.—Reg. I., 1811, sec. x.; Reg. III., 1812, sec. iv., cl. 2; Reg. VIII., 1814, sec. ii.

379. All zemindars, talookdars, or other proprietors of land, whether malguzary or lakhiraj; all sudder farmers and under-renters of land of every description; all dependent talookdars; all naibs and other local agents; all native officers employed in the collection of the revenue and rents of lands on the part of Government, or the Court of Wards; and all munduls or other head men of villages, are declared especially accountable for the immediate communication to the officers of the nearest police station of any intended suttee or burning or burying alive of any Hindoo widow; and any zemindar, or other description of persons above noticed, to whom such responsibility is declared to attach, who may be convicted of wilfully neglecting or delaying to furnish the information above required, shall be liable to be fined by the magistrate or joint magistrate in any sum not exceeding two hundred rupees, and in default of payment, to be confined for any period of imprisonment not exceeding six months.—Reg. XVII., 1829, sec. iii., cl. 1.

380. The magistrates of the several zillahs and cities shall cause to be prepared registers of the names of the following descriptions of persons: register of convicts who have broken jail, or have otherwise effected their escape; register of persons charged with or suspected of the commission of specific crimes of a heinous nature, who may have eluded the pursuits of justice.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ix., cl. 1.

381. The registers above prescribed shall be regularly revised and kept up by the several magistrates, who shall forward copies of them, on the 1st of January and the 1st of July in each year, to the superintendents of police respectively, for their information.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ix., cl. 2.

382. At the expiration of every period of six months, or oftener when circumstances may appear to require it, the zillah and city magistrates shall cause lists to be prepared from the above-mentioned registers of all persons therein named who may not have been apprehended, and shall transmit copies of the said lists to the principal landholders, farmers, and managers of land, together with warrants for the apprehension of the persons therein named, agreeably to the prescribed forms. Transcripts of the lists thus prepared shall be at the same time transmitted by the magistrates, under their official seal and signature, to the police darogahs for their information.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ix., cl. 3.

383. The magistrates shall be careful to obtain from the landholders, farmers, and managers of land, or from their representatives, to whom the said lists and warrants may be delivered, written acknowledgments of the receipt of them.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ix., cl. 4.

384. All zemindars, talookdars, and other proprietors of lands, whether malguzary or lakhiraj, all sudder farmers and under-renters of land of every description, all dependent talookdars, all naibs and other local agents, all native officers employed in the collection of the revenues and rents of lands on the part of Government or of the Court of Wards, to whom the lists and warrants mentioned in the preceding paragraphs shall have been delivered, are authorized either to cause the immediate apprehension of any of the persons named in either of the said lists who may be found within the limits of the estates held or managed by them, or to apply to the nearest police-officer for any aid which may be required in the execution of that duty, or simply to communicate to such officer such information as may have been obtained respecting the place to which the persons in question may resort, or in which they may be concealed.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ix., cl. 5.

385. Persons who may be apprehended under the provisions of this Regulation shall be delivered as speedily as possible into the charge of the nearest darogah or other officer of police, for the purpose of being forwarded under safe custody to the magistrate, and an acknowledgment shall uniformly be given by such darogah or other officer of police, specifying the names of the prisoners and date on which they were delivered into his charge.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ix., cl. 6.

386. The several zemindars, farmers, and local agents, to whom warrants and lists of public offenders shall have been furnished under this Regulation, are required to transmit to the magistrates returns of all persons who may have been apprehended by them, or by means of information given by them to any police-officer during the preceding six months; counterparts of which returns shall at the same time be transmitted by the several zemindars, farmers, or local agents, by means of the public dawks, to the office of the superintendent of the police.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ix., cl. 7.

387. In like manner, the several darogahs shall transmit, at the periods above specified, returns of all persons named in the list with which they had been furnished who may have been apprehended by them, accompanied by any explanation which they may wish to offer in the event of no persons having been apprehended. Copies of the prescribed returns and explanations shall at the same time be forwarded by the police darogahs, by means of the public dawks, to the office of the superintendent of police; and such returns are to be invariably made, whether any persons shall have been apprehended or otherwise.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. ix., cl. 8.

388. The zillah and city magistrates shall cause it to be explained to all persons to whom warrants shall be granted for the apprehension of persons under the provisions of this Regulation, that if, in the legal execution of such warrants, either by themselves or by any person or persons acting under their authority, any resistance be made by the party named in the warrant or by any other person (the said warrant being shown to the party so resisting), such zemindar, farmer, or local agent, or other person acting under their authority, by whom the warrant may be executed, will be held guiltless with respect to any consequences which may ensue from such resistance to the execution thereof.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. x., cl. 1.

389. Any resistance by any person whatever of any warrant or process of the Court issued under this Regulation, shall be punishable in the same manner as is prescribed by the existing Regulations for resistance of process of the zillah and city magistrates.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. x., cl. 2.

390. The magistrates of the several zillahs and cities shall cause it to be carefully explained to the zemindars, farmers, and their local agents, to whom warrants shall be granted under this Regulation, that they will not be required either to become prosecutors or to attend the Court, or to adduce evidence, or otherwise be subjected to any personal inconvenience or expense on account of any charge or prosecution which may be depending or may be instituted against any person or persons legally apprehended by them under this Regulation, or who may be apprehended by means of any information which they may furnish to any police-officer of Government.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. xi., cl. 1.

391. In the event of any evidence being required by the magistrate in regard to the general character of any party apprehended by means of any zemindar, farmer, or local agent, or in respect to any other point or matter which shall not be furnished by the proceedings which may have been previously held by the court, or by any other records of the magistrate's office, the magistrate shall cause such evidence to be procured by means of the regular police-officers of Government.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. xi., cl. 2.

392. Whenever any zillah or city magistrate shall have grounds to believe that any zemindar, farmer, or manager of land, shall have been guilty of any neglect or misconduct in the discharge of the duty imposed upon him by this Regulation, the magistrate shall call upon him to answer to the charge; and if it shall appear, upon a full and impartial inquiry, that the person accused has been actually guilty of the neglect or misconduct ascribed to him, the magistrate shall sentence the offender to pay such a fine to Government, and to suffer imprisonment for such a period of time as he may deem proportioned to the offence, not exceeding, however, imprisonment for six months, and a fine of two hundred rupees, commutable, if not paid, to imprisonment for a further period not exceeding six months longer.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. xii.

393. The magistrates of the several zillahs and cities are empowered to grant lists and warrants for the apprehension of any persons of the description of those described in paragraph 380, prepared in the manner prescribed, to any individual with his consent, not being a zemindar, farmer, or local agent for the management of lands, or regular police-officer of Government; and the provisions of this Regulation shall be held applicable to the legal execution of any warrant of the magistrate by any person so employed.—Reg. III., 1812, sec. xiii.

394. The principal persons residing in villages, whether landholders or farmers, or other local managers or munduls, patwarries, or other heads of villages, and also chokeedars, and village guards of every description, are declared responsible for the early and punctual communication to the officers of the nearest police station, of the resort to, or passage through their villages, of any considerable body of strangers, or of the assemblage of such bodies within the limits of their villages, together with any particulars which they may be able to collect, as to the alleged object of their assemblage or journey, or any suspicions which may arise as to their real character and intentions. Any landholder or farmer, or other local manager or mundul, putwarry, or other heads of villages, who shall wilfully neglect or delay to give the information above required, shall, on proof of such neglect, after a full and impartial inquiry, be sentenced to suffer imprisonment not exceeding six months, and to pay a fine of two hundred rupees, commutable, if not paid, to imprisonment for a further period of six months.—Reg. IX., 1807, sec. xix.; Reg. III., 1821, sec. vii., cl. 5.

395. The principal persons residing in villages, whether landholders or farmers, or other local managers or munduls, putwarries or other heads of villages, are declared responsible for the early and punctual communication to the officers of the nearest police station, of all unnatural deaths, or deaths attended with suspicious circumstances, which may come to their knowledge; and any landholder, farmer, manager, or other principal inhabitant of a village, who may be convicted of wilfully neglecting or delaying to furnish the information above required, shall be liable to be fined by the magistrate in any sum not exceeding two hundred rupees; and in default of payment, to be confined for any period of imprisonment not exceeding six months.—Reg. XX., 1817, sec. xiv., cl. 1.

CRIMINAL JUDICATURE.

RULES AFFECTING THE CRIMINAL COURTS GENERALLY.

ATTENDANCE AND EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

NOTE.—The rules of sec. vi., Reg. IV., 1793, respecting the attendance and examination of witnesses, which are extended to the practice of the Criminal Courts by sec. ii., Reg. L., 1803, have been, in a great measure, superseded by the provisions of Act. XIX., 1853, as regards Civil Procedure; but they have not been affected as respects the Criminal Courts.

1. The Court shall summon the witnesses whom the party may name, except Mahomedan or Hindoo women of a rank or quality which, according to the usage of the country, would render it improper to compel them to appear in a court of justice. If a witness so summoned shall not attend on the day appointed, the judge shall cause the witness to be apprehended and brought into Court, and shall impose on him a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees. If a witness attending shall refuse to give his evidence or to subscribe his deposition, the judge shall commit him to close custody, and shall call upon him a second time after such interval as may by the Court be judged sufficient (not being less than one entire day), when, if the witness persist in his refusal to give evidence, he shall be fined in proportion to his situation in life (not exceeding the amount limited), and confined in the gaol of the Civil Court until the fine be discharged, or for such period of imprisonment as may be fixed in lieu of the fine, under Section III., Regulation XIV., 1797 ("PUNISHMENTS," paragraph 20); or, if the cause or trial in which the evidence of the witness may be requisite shall be still depending, until he shall consent to give his evidence therein; after which, in such case, he shall be released and the fine remitted.—Reg. L., 1803, sec. ii., cls. 1 and 2; and Reg. IV., 1793, sec. vi.

2. Provided, however, that it be not considered necessary that any trial before a Sessions Court be postponed to a future session for the evidence of a witness confined under the preceding paragraph, unless the judge should think it proper to postpone the same on this account, under the discretion vested in him by Section XLIX., Regulation IX., 1793 ("SESSIONS COURT," paragraph 19); nor shall it be necessary to postpone the decision of any criminal case, for the evidence of a witness so confined, beyond such period as may appear proper to the Court before which the suit or trial may be depending.—Reg. L., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 3.

3. Provided also, that all fines imposed by the zillah and city magistrates, whether for the non-attendance of witnesses duly summoned, or for the refusal to give evidence, shall be reported at the next ensuing gaol delivery, with all proceedings relative thereto, to the judges of the Sessions Courts; who, in the event of any representation being made to them relative to such fine, are to examine the magistrate's proceedings, and report to the Nizamut Adawlut if the fine shall appear to be immoderate or to have been imposed on insufficient grounds; or if otherwise, are to inform the party complaining by a written order on his petition.—Reg. L., 1803, sec. ii., cl. 4.

4. In the examination of parties and witnesses before the Sessions Courts, and also before the zillah and city magistrates, the following rules, in addition to those already established, are to be strictly attended to.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. vii., cl. 1.

5. All examinations of parties and witnesses are to be taken down in the language and character in which the person examined may desire to have the same recorded, and such person, whether party or witness, is to be allowed to read the same when finished; or if unable to read, it is to be read to him; after which, if he admit the record to be correct, he is to affix his name or mark to it; and the judge, magistrate, or other officer before whom such examination may have been taken, is to certify the same under his official signature on the original record, that the proceedings may be complete for the perusal of the law officers of the Sessions Court, as well as those of the Nizamut Adawlut, in the event of the trials being referred to that Court.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. vii., cl. 2.

6. In the examination of witnesses, leading questions suggesting an answer, or having tendency to such suggestion, are to be carefully avoided, and the interrogatories to them are to be proposed in such general terms as may bring forth all the information they possess and lead to a discovery of the truth. With this view, the parties are to be allowed to cross-examine the witnesses; and the judge or magistrate should also cross-examine them, when necessary, for the same purpose.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. vii., cl. 3.

7. All examinations of parties and witnesses, besides the name of the person examined, are to specify the name of his or her father, and if a married woman, the name of her husband, also the religion, caste, profession, and age of the party or witness, and the village and pergunnah in which they reside.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. vii., cl. 4.

8. When any stolen property or instruments of violence, stated to have been found upon the prisoners or in their houses, are produced before the magistrate or Sessions Court, the prosecutor, and any witnesses brought to give evidence thereupon, are to be carefully examined relative to the identity of such property or instruments recognized by them, and the circumstances of the same having been found upon the prisoners or in their houses. The principle of this rule is to be further applied in all instances of circumstantial evidence to which it may be applicable.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. vii., cl. 5.

9. With a view to impress upon the witnesses the necessity of caution and accuracy in delivering their evidence, it shall be the duty of the Mollah-koranee, or of the Brahmin, to repeat aloud to them, in the language which they best understand, the following admonition, immediately after they shall have been sworn, or shall have made a solemn affirmation respectively, viz.:—"In delivering your evidence under the oath or affirmation now administered, you are required to declare the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. You are carefully to distinguish what you personally know as an eye-witness, or otherwise, from what you may have heard from others; and are solemnly bound to answer all questions put to you on the trial before the Court, without any regard to the prosecutor or prisoner, to the best of your information and belief."—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. vii., cl. 6; and Act XXI., 1837, sec. i.

10. The Sessions Courts are to be careful to notice on their proceedings any material differences between the depositions of the same witnesses before them and the magistrates, and are to question the witnesses thereupon and record their answers; but the depositions taken before the magistrates are not to be read before the Sessions Court in the presence of the persons who gave the same, until they shall have been re-examined before the Sessions Court.—Reg. IV., 1797, sec. vii., cl. 7.

11. No person shall, by reason of any conviction for any offence whatever, be incompetent to be a witness in any stage of any cause, civil or criminal, before any Court in the territories of the East-India Company.—Act XIX., 1837.

APPEALS AND REVISION OF PROCEEDINGS.

12. From every sentence or order in criminal trials, within the limitation prescribed by Sections VIII. and IX., Regulation IX., 1793 ("MAGISTRATES," paragraphs 47 and 48), for the Lower Provinces, and the corresponding enactments for the other provinces; or in judicial proceedings other than criminal trials passed by an assistant to a magistrate, or by a sudder aumeen, or by a law officer, or by any other officer under a magistrate empowered to try criminal cases, there shall be permitted one appeal to the magistrate, joint magistrate, or officer exercising the powers of magistrate, within one month from the date of such sentence or order. And from every sentence or order in criminal trials beyond the limitation prescribed by the rules above referred to, or in judicial proceedings other than criminal trials passed by a magistrate, joint magistrate, assistant to a magistrate vested with special powers, or other officer empowered to try criminal cases, there shall be permitted within one month as aforesaid one appeal to the sessions judge. And from every sentence or order passed in criminal trial by a sessions judge, there shall be permitted within three months one appeal to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut. And, except as provided in paragraph 14, the sentences or orders passed upon such appeals shall be final.—Act XXXI., 1841, sec. ii.

13. It shall not be competent to a sessions judge to interfere with any order passed by a zillah or city magistrate, or joint magistrate, regarding the appointment, suspension, or removal of any ministerial or police officer, the revision of which has been intrusted to the superintendent of police, by Section IV., Act XXIV., 1837 ("POLICE," paragraph 5).—Act. XXIV., 1837, sec. v.

14. It shall be at all times lawful for the Courts of Nizamut Adawlut to call for the records of any criminal trials of any subordinate court and to pass upon them such orders as may seem fit.—Act. XXXI., 1841, sec. iii.

15. It shall be at all times lawful for a sessions judge and for a magistrate, joint magistrate, or officer exercising the powers of magistrate, to call for and examine the records of any court immediately subordinate to their respective courts, for the purpose of satisfying themselves as to the regularity of the proceedings of such subordinate courts: but it shall not be lawful for any court under the degree of the Nizamut Adawlut to alter any sentence or order of any subordinate court, except upon appeal duly made, by parties concerned.—Act. XXXI., 1841, sec. v.

16. The Nizamut Adawlut, in any case in which it shall appear to them, upon a review of the abstract statements or calendars of prisoners punished without reference, that the sentence passed is one which cannot lawfully be passed on a person convicted of the offence as stated in the abstract statement or calendar, shall annul the sentence, and shall certify to the subordinate court the sentence or sentences which may lawfully be passed for such offence, and thereupon the subordinate court shall pass a new sentence according to law, and shall amend the record in accordance therewith.—Act XIX., 1848, sec. ii.

17. The Nizamut Adawlut, in any case in which it shall appear to them, upon a review of the abstract statements or calendars of prisoners punished without reference, that the verdict or judgment pronounced on any prisoner was not warranted by the evidence, or that his sentence was too severe, may, if it thinks fit, require the judge of the court in which the conviction was had to certify under his hand all the evidence taken in the case affecting such prisoners, with any observations which the judge may be desirous of making in explanation of the verdict, judgment, or sentence, and thereupon the Nizamut Adawlut, as the case may be, may annul such verdict, judgment, and sentence, if the verdict or judgment shall appear to it not warranted by the evidence, or mitigate the sentence, if it shall appear too severe, and in either case shall certify its proceedings to the court in which the conviction was had, which shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the decision of the Nizamut Adawlut, and, if necessary, amend the record in accordance therewith.—Act XIX., 1848, sec. iii.

18. Instead of proceeding under Act XIX., 1848, the Nizamut Adawlut may, whenever it thinks fit, call for the whole record of any criminal trial in any subordinate court, and pass thereon such orders as it thinks fit, but not so as to enhance the punishment awarded, or punish any person acquitted in the subordinate court.—Act XIX., 1848, sec. iv.

19. It shall be competent to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut to revise the proceedings of the magistrates and joint magistrates, and superintendents of police, in any case in which a pardon may have been tendered to an accomplice or accessary, and to annul the orders passed on such proceedings, should it appear to the Superior Court that a pardon has been granted on insufficient grounds.—Reg. X., 1824, sec. v., cl. 3.

20. The orders of the superintendents of police in regard to the appointment, suspension, or removal of a ministerial or police officer of a zillah or city magistrate, or joint magistrate, shall not be open to revision by the Nizamut Adawlut.—Act XXIV., 1837, sec. vi.

RIGHT OF DEFENCE BY AUTHORIZED AGENTS.

21. In all courts and before all magistrates, or persons exercising any of the powers of a magistrate, under the authority of the East-India Company, every person on trial for the commission of any offence shall be admitted to defend himself either personally or by his authorized agent, and after the close of the case for the prosecution, to make full answer and defence thereto either personally or by his authorized agent.—Act XXXVIII., 1850, sec. i.

22. The said Courts, magistrates, and persons, subject to such rules as shall be from time to time made for their guidance by the Nizamut Adawlut, may allow any prosecution to be conducted by an authorized agent.—Act XXXVIII., 1850, sec. ii.

23. In those courts in which any person now has by law the right of employing whomsoever he can employ as counsel or pleader, nothing in this Act shall be deemed to restrict that right: in all other cases those persons only shall be deemed authorized agents within the meaning of this Act who are either advocates of one of the Supreme Courts of Justice established by royal charter, or authorized pleaders of the Civil Courts of the East-India Company, or by leave of the court, magistrate, or other person before whom the prisoner is on trial, any other person who is employed by the prosecutor or prisoner as his agent.—Act XXXVIII., 1850, sec. iii.

24. The above rules shall not be deemed to dispense with the presence of any person on trial for the commission of any offence when the presence of such accused person is now by law required.—Act XXXVIII., 1850, sec. iv.

GENERAL RULES.

Government Prosecution.

25. In charges preferred and prosecutions conducted on the part of Government, the vakeel of Government, or other person acting as prosecutor for Government, shall not be required to make oath or subscribe a declaration to the truth of the charge, when preferring it to the magistrate or stating it before the Sessions Court.—Reg. L., 1803, sec. iv.

Reimbursement of Costs.

26. The Criminal Courts are authorized to adjudge a reimbursement of costs actually incurred, upon a prosecution before them by either of the parties thereto, in particular instances wherein they may consider such reimbursement just and equitable.—Reg. XIV., 1797, sec. viii.

CRIMINAL ENACTMENTS OF LOCAL OPERATION.

NOTE.—Under this head are included all Regulations which are in force only in particular localities, whether in entire Provinces, as Benares and the Ceded and Conquered Provinces, or in divisions of more limited extent. The whole of such local Regulations are enumerated in the following lists, but as many of their provisions are identical with those previously enacted for the Lower Provinces, it has been deemed sufficient to notify in the lists the corresponding rules, and to indicate the places where they will be found among the rules of general operation. Such enactments as are special, and differing entirely from rules previously enacted, are printed at length.

The rules relating to Police, being most numerous, have been arranged under a separate division.

CRIMINAL ENACTMENTS OF LOCAL OPERATION.

BENARES.

Arson.

1. Setting fire to any house or village is declared to be an offence not bailable.—Reg. XVI., 1795, sec. iv., cl. 2.

Koorhs, Wounding Women and Children, and Infanticide.

2. The reverence paid by the Hindoos to Brahmins, and the reputed inviolability of their persons, and the loss of or prejudice to caste that ensues from proving the cause of their death, have in some places in the province of Benares, and more especially in the pergunnahs of Kuntit and Budhoee, been converted by some of the more unlearned part of them into the means of setting the laws at defiance, from the dread and apprehensions of the persons of the Hindoo religion, to whose lot it must frequently fall to be employed in enforcing against such Brahmins any process or demands on the part of Government. The devices occasionally put in practice under such circumstances by these Brahmins are, lacerating their own bodies, either more or less slightly, with knives or razors; threatening to swallow, or sometimes actually swallowing poison, or some powder which they declare to be such; or constructing a circular enclosure, called a koorh, in which they raise a pile of wood or of other combustibles, and betaking themselves to fasting, real or pretended, place within the area of the koorh an old woman, with a view to sacrifice her by setting fire to the koorh, on the approach of any person to serve them with any process, or to exercise coercion over them on the part of Government or its delegates. These Brahmins likewise, in the event of their not obtaining relief within a given time for any loss or disappointment that they may have justly or unjustly experienced, also occasionally bring out their women or children, and causing them to sit down in the view of the peon who is coming towards them on the part of Government or its delegates, they brandish their swords, and threaten to behead or otherwise slay these females or children, on the nearer approach of the peon; and there are instances in which, from resentment at being subjected to arrest or coercion, or other molestation, they have actually not only inflicted wounds on their own bodies, but put to death with their swords the females of their families or their own female infants, or some aged female procured for the occasion. Nor are the women always unwilling victims; on the contrary, from the prejudices in which they are brought up, it is supposed that in general they consider it incumbent on them to acquiesce cheerfully in this species of self-devotement, either from motives of mistaken honour or of resentment and revenge, believing that after death they shall become the tormentors of those who are the occasion of their being sacrificed. On similar principles, these Brahmins, to realize any claim or expectation, such as the recovery of a debt, or for the purpose of extorting some charitable donation, frequently proceed, either with some offensive weapon or with poison, to the door of another inhabitant of the same town or village, and take post there in the manner called dhurna; and it is understood, according to the received opinions on the subject, that they are to remain fasting in that place until their object be attained, and that it is equally incumbent on the party who is the occasion of such Brahmin's thus sitting, to abstain from nourishment until the latter be satisfied. Until this is effected, ingress and egress to and from his house are also more or less prevented, as, according to the received opinions, neither the one nor the other can be attempted but at the risk of the Brahmin's wounding himself with the weapon, or swallowing the powder or poison with which he may have come provided. These Brahmins, however, are frequently obliged to desist, and are removed from sitting dhurna by the officers of the Courts of justice without any ill consequence resulting, it having been found by experience that they seldom or ever attempt to commit suicide, or to wound themselves or others, after they are taken into the custody of Government. The rules and measures adopted for putting a stop to these abuses, and for preventing the revival of the still more savage custom which, until within these few years, had been generally prevalent amongst the tribe of Raujekoomars inhabiting the borders of the province near Juanpoor, of destroying their infant female children by suffering them to perish for want of sustenance, are hereby enacted with modifications into a Regulation.—Reg. XXI., 1795, sec. i.

3 Upon information in writing being preferred to the magistrate of the City or Zillah Court against any Brahmin or Brahmins for establishing a koorh, or for being prepared to maim, wound, or slaughter his women or children, or any or either of them, in the manner described in the preamble to this Regulation, or in any manner substantially similar thereto, on account of any subject of discontent or any other account whatsoever, in such case, upon oath or affirmation being made to the truth of the information, the magistrate is immediately to address to the said Brahmin or Brahmins a written notice in the Hindostanee language and Nageree character, and under his official seal, which notice is to be served on him or them by such of the relations, friends, or connections of the said Brahmin or Brahmins as the magistrate may think fit, and have an opportunity of employing for the purpose, and in default of such relations, friends, or connections of the said Brahmin or Brahmins, the magistrate is to cause the notice to be served by a single peon of the same religion, and the notice shall require the said Brahmin or Brahmins to remove the koorh, and the women and people that may be placed in it, or to desist from any preparation toward wounding or slaughtering the women or children, according as either or both of these facts shall be charged in the information The notice shall also contain a positive and encouraging assurance to the Brahmin or Brahmins in question, that on his or their complying with the principal exigence thereof, by removing the koorh and the person or persons therein, or by desisting from any preparation to wound or slaughter the women and children, and thereon repairing (as such Brahmin or Brahmins may think fit), in person or by vakeel, to the City or Zillah Court, proper inquiry shall be made concerning the dispute that may have given occasion to the act or acts thus prohibited But if the issuing of the notice shall not have the effect of inducing the said Brahmin or Brahmins to comply with the exigence thereof, a written return to that purpose is to be made and attested by the party or parties intrusted with the serving of it, and the magistrate is thereon to issue a warrant, under his official seal and signature, for the apprehension of the said Brahmin or Brahmins, specifying the misdemeanor and contumacy with which he or they stand charged, and the execution of the warrant is to be committed to peons of the Mahomedan religion, nor is any Hindoo to be sent on such duty On the Brahmin or Brahmins against whom the warrant shall have been issued being brought before the magistrate, he or they are to be dealt with in the mode prescribed in Section V, Regulation IX, 1793, ("MAGISTRATES," paragraphs 27, 29, 31, and 38), respecting persons charged with crimes or misdemeanors, and if it shall appear to the magistrate on the previous inquiry, which by the said section he is himself directed to make, that the misdemeanor or misdemeanors charged (that is, the constructing of the koorh, or being prepared to wound or slay the women or children according as either or both of these acts shall have been charged) were actually committed, and that there are grounds for suspecting the prisoner or the prisoners respectively to have been concerned, either as a principal or an accomplice, in the perpetration of either or both of these acts, the magistrate shall cause him or them to be committed to prison or held to bail (according as the parties shall appear to have been principals or accomplices), to take his or their trial before the Sessions Court, and shall bind over the informant or complainant, and the witnesses, to appear at the trial, in the manner prescribed in the aforesaid section —Reg XXI, 1795, sec. II

4 The Sessions Court shall conduct the trial of the Brahmin or Brahmins charged with the above offences in the manner prescribed in Regulations IX, 1793, and XVI, 1795, in respect to other offences, but as the Mahomedan law cannot adequately apply to offences of this local nature, it is therefore hereby provided and ordered, that where, in the opinion of the Sessions Court, the charge of being a principal in respect to the constructing of a koorh, or to having been prepared to wound or slay the women or children, shall be proved, the said Court shall sentence the prisoner to the payment of a fine equal to the amount of his annual income, which is to be estimated according to the best information that they may be able to procure respecting it, and on proof, to the Court's satisfaction, of the prisoner's being guilty only as an accomplice, he shall be sentenced to the payment of a fine equal to one-fourth of his estimated annual income In all cases of parties being sentenced to the payment of such fines, they are to be committed to and are to remain in gaol until the amount thereof be paid, or until they shall have delivered to the Sessions Court, or after the said Court's departure, to the magistrate, full and ample mal-zaminy or security to pay the same within six months from the date of their release, and such parties, before their enlargement, either in consequence of their having liquidated, or having entered into security for the payment of the fine imposed on them, shall deliver into the Sessions Court, or in their absence to the magistrate, fael zaminy or satisfactory security from one or more creditable persons, not to offend in like manner in future.—Reg XXI, 1795, sec III

5 All sentences passed by the Sessions Court under the preceding paragraph, without, however, any intermediate suspension of their execution, are to be transmitted within ten days after their being passed to the Nizamut Adawlut, which Court may order such mitigation and restitution of the fine or fines thereby imposed, as may be thought proper, but until the order be issued by the Nizamut Adawlut, the sentence of the Sessions Court is to be considered in full force, and to be carried into effect accordingly —Reg. XXI, 1795, sec. iv.

6. In case any Brahmin or Brahmins against whom the city or a zillah magistrate may issue the warrant prescribed in paragraph 3, shall refuse to obey, or resist, or cause to be resisted, the peons deputed to serve it, or escape after being taken by them into custody, or abscond, or shut himself or themselves up in any house or building, or retire to any place so that the warrant cannot be served upon him or them, the magistrate shall issue a precept to the collector requiring him to cause the nearest tehseeldar to attach the lands that such Brahmin or Brahmins may possess in property or in mortgage, or in farm or lakhiraj. The lands shall remain attached until he or they surrender, and the collections made during the attachment, after deducting such revenue as may fall due to Government, shall be accounted for and paid to the party against, or on account of, or in resentment to whom, the koorh was originally established, or the woman or women, or child or children, were to be wounded or slain; and after the surrender or apprehension of the Brahmin or Brahmins who set up the koorh, or was or were prepared to wound or slay his or their women or children, or either of them, his or their lands shall be released, but he or they shall be proceeded against, in respect to his or their trial for the original offence or offences, as prescribed in paragraphs 4 and 5—Reg XXI., 1795, sec. v.

7. In the event of any Brahmin or Brahmins establishing a koorh, or preparing to wound or slay his or their women or children, or any or either of them, with a view to prevent the serving of any dustuck or writ on him or them, for arrears of revenue, by the local tehseeldar, or by the collector of Benares, in the manner in which by Regulation VI., 1795, they are respectively authorized to issue such dustucks; if it be the dustuck of the tehseeldar that is thus opposed, he is not, after being informed thereof, to persist in enforcing it, but is to report the case immediately to the collector, accompanied by the written testimonies of the peon deputed to serve the dustuck; upon receipt of which information, or in case of his own original process being in like manner resisted, the collector is to represent, through the vakeel of Government, the amount of the balance due by such Brahmin or Brahmins, and the circumstances attending the issuing of his own or of his tehseeldar's process for realizing it, to the judge and magistrate of the city or zillah in whose jurisdiction the lands on account of which the arrears shall be due may be situated; and upon the peon deputed with the tehseeldar's or the collector's dustuck, or any other creditable person or persons, attending in court, and making oath or affirmation to the truth of the circumstance stated in the representation of the collector, either as to the constructing of a koorh by such Brahmin or Brahmins, or as to his or their being prepared to wound or slay the women and children, or any of them (according as one or both of these expedients shall be stated to have been resorted to by the Brahmin or Brahmins in question), the magistrate is thereon to issue to such Brahmin or Brahmins a written notice, under his official seal, in the Hindostanee language and Nageree character, which is to be served on him or them by such of the relations, friends, or connections of the said Brahmin or Brahmins as the magistrate may think fit and have an opportunity of employing for the purpose; and in default of such relations, friends, or connections of the said Brahmin or Brahmins, the magistrate is to cause the notice to be served by a single peon of the same religion; and the tenor of it shall require the said Brahmin or Brahmins to remove the koorh, and the women and people that may be placed in it, or to desist from any preparation for wounding or killing the women or children (according as either or both of these offences may be charged in the information), as likewise either to discharge the balance of rent or revenue that shall have been demanded from him or them, or to appear, and entering security for such part of it as he or they may have pleas against the payment of, to file his or their objections to the payment of such part, in the City or Zillah Court, that the merits of the case may be inquired into and decided, according to the principles by which other disputed demands and accounts of revenue are, under Regulation VI., 1795, directed to be determined; and the said notice is also to contain a positive and encouraging assurance to the Brahmin or Brahmins in question, that on his or their complying with the exigence of it, by removing the koorh and the persons therein, or by desisting from any preparation to wound or slay the women and children, and either discharging the balance of revenue in demand, or repairing in person, or deputing a vakeel, to the City or Zillah Court, and entering security for the amount of it, proper inquiry shall be made into the pleas that he or they may have to state against the justice of the demand If the issuing of the notice shall fail to induce the said Brahmin or Brahmins to comply with the requisitions of it, a written return to that effect is to be made and attested by the party or parties intrusted with the serving of it, and the magistrate is immediately to issue a warrant, under his official seal and signature, for the apprehension of such Brahmin or Brahmins, in which shall be specified the misdemeanor, contumacy, and arrear, with which he or they stand charged; and the warrant shall be executed by peons of the Mahomedan religion, as directed in paragraph 3; and if the Brahmin or Brahmins shall refuse to obey, or resist, or cause to be resisted, the peons deputed to serve it, or escape after being taken by them into custody, or abscond, or shut himself or themselves up in any house or building, or retire to any place so that the warrant cannot be served on him or them, the magistrate, on information to this effect, shall issue a precept to the collector, to cause the nearest tehseeldar to attach the lands that such Brahmin or Brahmins may possess in property or in mortgage, or in farm or lakhiraj; and the lands shall accordingly remain attached, and the profits of them be appropriated by Government, until the liquidation of the balance shall be effected either from the produce, or in consequence of the said Brahmin or Brahmins making good the same from his or their other means; and also until the said Brahmin or Brahmins shall have been brought, or made his or their appearance before the Court, when he or they shall be tried for being concerned, either as principals or accomplices, in setting up the koorh, or for having been prepared to wound or slay his or their women or children, or any or either of them, in the same manner, and with the same reservation as to the mitigation of the sentence, as is specified in paragraphs 3 to 5.—Reg. XXI., 1795, sec. vi.

8. If any Brahmin or Brahmins, on account of any discontent or alarm, well or ill founded, either against Government or its officers or servants, shall establish a koorh, in which any person or persons shall, at any period from its construction until its removal, be burnt to death, or otherwise lose their lives, in consequence of such koorhs being set fire to by any person whomsoever, the Brahmin or Brahmins who shall have caused the construction thereof shall be held chargeable with and made amenable for the crime of murder, as well as the party or parties who may have been immediately employed, or aided in setting fire to the pile or combustibles in question; and upon proof of the fact, to the satisfaction of the Sessions Court, such Brahmin or Brahmins, and such person or persons setting fire to the koorh, shall be sentenced, on trial before the said Court, to suffer the punishment of death, in the same manner as if they had committed and been convicted of kutl amd, or premeditated murder, according to the doctrines of the Mahomedan law: but it is to be at the same time explained to the party or parties thus condemned, as it is also hereby expressly provided, that all such trials, and sentences passed, are by Sessions Court to be submitted (in like manner as is prescribed in Section XLVII., Regulation IX., 1793, "Sessions Court," paragraphs 13 and 24), to the Nizamut Adawlut, and the party or parties condemned under this paragraph are to remain in gaol to await the final judgment of that Court; and if the Court of Nizamut Adawlut shall see cause for not proceeding pursuant to the sentence passed by the Sessions Court, either in respect to the Brahmin or Brahmins who may have caused the construction of the koorh, or to the party or parties who may have been employed or aided in firing it, they shall grant a pardon, or such other commutation by way of mitigation of the punishment, as to the said Court may seem proper.—Reg. XXI., 1795, sec. vii.; Reg. XIV., 1810, sec. ii.; Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xv.

9. If any Brahmin or Brahmins, under the circumstances, and in the manner described in the preceding paragraphs, or under such circumstances, and in such manner as shall be substantially similar thereto, with a sword or other offensive weapon, or otherwise, shall actually wound his or their women or children, or other women or children, or any or either of them, on account or in resentment of any real or supposed injury committed towards him or them, by any aumils, tehseeldars, or other officers or servants employed in the revenue or judicial departments, or shall so wound any of his or their own women or children, or any other woman or child, on account or in resentment of his or their differences with any individual, he or they shall, for such act or acts, be sentenced by the Sessions Court to transportation, subject to the same reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, and to the like commutation of the punishment, or pardon, as in the cases referred to in the preceding paragraph.—Reg. XXI., 1795, sec. viii.

10. If any Brahmin or Brahmins, under the circumstances, and in the manner above described, or under such circumstances and in such manner as shall be substantially similar thereto, with a sword or other offensive weapon, or otherwise, shall actually put to death his or their women or children, or other women or children, or any or either of them, on account or in resentment of any real or supposed injury committed towards him or them, by aumils, tehseeldars, or any other officers or servants employed in the revenue or judicial departments, or shall so put to death any of his or their own women and children, or any other woman or child, on account or in resentment of his or their differences with any individual, he or they shall be tried for such homicide, and on proof of the fact or facts, be accordingly sentenced by the Sessions Court to capital punishment, subject to the same reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, and to the like commutation of the punishment or pardon, as in the cases referred to in paragraph 8; and the families of any Brahmin or Brahmins found guilty of murder under this rule shall, according to the order of the Governor-General in Council under date the 17th of June, 1789, and the publication made in conformity to it by the Resident at Benares, under date the 7th of July of the same year, be banished from the province of Benares and the Company's territories, and his and their estates in land shall be forfeited and disposed of as to Government shall seem proper; and accordingly the Sessions Court is required to subjoin this order to all sentences that they may pass on Brahmins for murder under this rule, at the same time reporting such sentence and order to the Nizamut Adawlut, together with as accurate an account as they may be able to procure, of the number, sex, and age of the persons composing the family of such Brahmin or Brahmins, and annexing their opinion how far it may be advisable, or otherwise, rigorously to enforce the banishment of the family of such Brahmin or Brahmins, or to confirm, or mitigate, or annul the order for the forfeiture of their real property; and the Nizamut Adawlut, on consideration of this sentence and order, and of the opinion of the Sessions Court, shall either wholly confirm, or grant such mitigation of the said sentence and order, as shall appear to them proper; and in all cases where the forfeiture of the landed property of such Brahmin or Brahmins, and that of his or their family, shall be confirmed by the Nizamut Adawlut, the said Court is to advise the Governor-General in Council thereof, nor shall such sentence be carried into execution, as far as regards the forfeiture of the landed property, without an order from the Governor-General in Council approving such part of the sentence, and directing in what manner the lands thus forfeited shall be disposed of.—Reg. XXI., 1795, sec. ix.; Reg. XIV., 1810, secs. ii., iii.

11. In the exercise of the discretion vested in the Nizamut Adawlut by the preceding paragraph of granting a mitigation of sentences and orders passed by the Sessions Court under the said paragraph, it shall be a rule, that whenever they shall deem it proper to limit the banishment either to the party or parties committing the murder, or to a certain number only of his or their family or families, no confiscation or forfeiture of the landed property shall in such instances take place, but the same shall be entirely left in the possession, and as the property, of those members of the family who shall be exempted from banishment.—Reg. XXI., 1795, sec. x.; Reg. XIV., 1810, secs. ii., iii.

12. In the month of December, 1789, the tribe of Raujekoomars having bound themselves to discontinue the practice of causing their female infants to be starved to death, it is now accordingly ordained, that from the establishment and opening of the City and Zillah Courts, and of the Sessions Court in Benares, if any Raujekoomar shall designedly prove the cause of the death of his female child, by prohibiting its receiving nourishment, as set forth in the preamble to this Regulation, or in any other manner, the magistrate, on receiving information thereof upon oath or affirmation, or such other information or proof as he shall deem sufficient to render the charge highly probable, shall cause such Raujekoomar to be apprehended in the manner prescribed, and make the inquiry ordered in Section V., Regulation IX., 1793 ("MAGISTRATES," paragraphs 27, 29, 31, and 38); when, if it shall appear to the magistrate that the crime has been actually committed, and that there are grounds for suspecting the prisoner to have been concerned in the perpetration of it, the magistrate shall cause him to be committed to prison to be tried before the Sessions Court, and shall at the same time take all the other precautions required in the section and Regulation last quoted, relative to securing the attendance of the original complainant or informant, and of the witnesses: and the prisoner shall be tried accordingly, in the manner directed in Regulation IX., 1793, and Regulation XVI., 1795, with respect to other cases of murder.—Reg. XXI., 1795, sec. xiii.

Execution of Brahmins.

13. The exemption of Brahmins in the province of Benares from the legal punishment for murder, to which they, as well as all other persons, are subject in every other part of the country, being obviously repugnant to the principles of equal justice, such exemption of Brahmins convicted of murder from sentence of death is abrogated. The execution of a Brahmin shall not take place within the limits of any spot of ground held sacred by the Hindoos, and the magistrates are enjoined to execute all sentences of death against Brahmins, at some convenient place without such limits.—Reg. XVII., 1817, sec. xv.

CONQUERED PROVINCES.

14. The Sessions Court shall be guided in its decisions and proceedings by the Regulations which have been enacted conformably to the rules prescribed in Regulation I., 1803, for the administration of justice in criminal cases in the provinces ceded to the English East-India Company by the Nawaub Vizier, or which shall be hereafter enacted, agreeably to the forms prescribed by the said Regulation, for the administration of justice in the territories aforesaid, ceded to the East-India Company by the Peishwa and Dowlut Rao Scindiah, or acquired by the British Government.—Reg. IX., 1804, sec. vi.

15. A magistrate shall be appointed in each of the zillahs in these territories, who shall exercise the powers now vested in the magistrates of the zillahs in the provinces ceded to the English East-India Company by the Nawaub Vizier, under the Regulations passed and published conformably to the rules prescribed in Regulation I., 1803, or such other powers as may be hereafter vested, by any Regulation so passed and published, in the magistrates of the zillahs included in the territories ceded to the English East-India Company by the Peishwa and Dowlut Rao Scindiah, or acquired as aforesaid.—Reg. IX., 1804, sec. vii.

16. It shall be competent for the Governor-General in Council, by an order in council, to make any alteration in the limits of the zillahs in these territories, or to make any annexations to the said zillahs, or separations from them, which shall hereafter appear to him to be advisable, or to form any part of the territories aforesaid into additional zillahs.—Reg. IX., 1804, sec. viii.

CEDED AND CONQUERED PROVINCES.

17. Provision is made by Section XXIII., Regulation VIII., 1803 (paragraph 50, "JAILS AND PRISONERS"), for the punishment of guards in charge of convicts who may have escaped, and in certain cases for committing or holding such guards to bail for trial before the Sessions Court. This provision is extended to guards in charge of prisoners who may escape from their custody, whether before or after conviction; but shall not be considered applicable to military guards from the provincial battalions (while such battalions shall continue subject to military law), or from any regular corps of the army. Whenever it shall appear to a magistrate that a guard furnished by a provincial battalion, or by any regular corps of the army, has been guilty of wilful neglect in guarding the prisoners under his charge, or in conniving at the escape, or the attempt to escape, of any prisoner, or of any other act of a criminal nature in the discharge of his duty, the magistrate shall cause the offender to be delivered over to the officer commanding the provincial battalion or the detachment to which he may belong, with a charge in writing, that he may be tried and punished on conviction by a court-martial.—Reg. VIII., 1805, sec. xiv., cl. 5.

18. The mode of proceeding against military guards, directed in the preceding paragraph, shall be observed with respect to any other offence involving a breach of military duty, and properly cognizable by courts-martial; but shall not be held applicable to any criminal charge against such guards or other sepoys, whether belonging to the provincial battalions or regular corps of the army, which may not involve a breach of military duty, and the cognizance of which therefore appertains to the Civil Courts.—Reg. VIII., 1805, sec. xiv., cl. 6.

CUTTACK.

19. A magistrate shall be appointed in the zillah of Cuttack, who shall exercise the powers vested in the magistrates of the zillahs in the provinces of Bengal and Behar, and the part of the province of Orissa heretofore subject to the dominion of the British Government, under the Regulations passed for those provinces.—Reg. IV., 1804, sec. iv.

20. The Regulations enacted for the administration of justice in criminal cases, and for the guidance of the magistrates, in the provinces of Bengal and Behar, and in the part of the province of Orissa heretofore subject to the dominion of the British Government, shall be considered to extend to the zillah of Cuttack, unless it shall be otherwise specially directed in any Regulation so enacted.—Reg. IV., 1804, sec. v.

MERIAH SACRIFICES IN ORISSA.

21. It shall be lawful for the Governor-General in Council, by an order in Council, to remove from the jurisdiction and superintendence of the commissioner and superintendent of tributary mehauls in Cuttack, any of the tributary estates specified in Section II., Regulation II. of 1816, of the Bengal code, and to place any such estates under the jurisdiction and superintendence of such officer (to be called the agent for the suppression of Meriah sacrifices) and his subordinates, as shall from time to time be appointed by the Government of Bengal in that behalf.—Act XXI., 1845, sec. i.

22. It shall be lawful for the Governor-General in Council, by an order in council, to remove from the jurisdiction and superintendence of the agent to the Governor-General, South-West Frontier, any portion of the tracts of country comprised in that agency, and to place any such portion under the jurisdiction and superintendence of such officer (to be called the agent for the suppression of Meriah sacrifices) and his subordinates, as shall from time to time be appointed by the Governor of Bengal in that behalf.

23. All such agents and their subordinates as shall be appointed under this Act shall, in the exercise of their jurisdiction and superintendence, be guided by such instructions as they may from time to time receive from the Government of India through their respective Governments.

24. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council, through the Governments of the aforesaid presidencies respectively, to prescribe such rules as he may deem proper for the guidance of such agents and subordinates, and to determine to what extent the decision of the said agents in civil suits shall be final, and in what suits an appeal shall lie to the Sudder Court, and to define the authority to be exercised by the said agents in criminal trials, and what criminal cases they shall submit for the decision of the Sudder Court.

TRIAL OF OFFENCES COMMITTED AT CHANDERNAGORE.

25. The magistrate of Hooghly is hereby declared competent to receive into his custody natives of India who may be forwarded to him by the superior authorities of Chandernagore, charged with the commission of murder, robbery, and other crimes of a heinous nature within the limits of those settlements.—Reg. II., 1820, sec. ii., cl. 1.

26. After due examination into such cases, the magistrate will either discharge the prisoner, or if he shall find sufficient grounds for that measure, will commit the accused to take his trial before the Sessions Court for the offence for which he may stand charged.—Reg. II., 1820, sec. ii., cl. 2.

27. The magistrate will not himself pass sentence of punishment on the accused, although the nature of the charge may be such as would warrant his doing so under the existing Regulations; but will either commit the prisoner to take his trial before the Sessions Court, or will discharge him, according to the circumstances of the case.—Reg. II., 1820, sec. ii., cl. 3.

28. The Sessions Court for the division of Calcutta, and the Nizamut Adawlut, are hereby respectively empowered to take cognizance of such cases, and to pass such sentence upon the prisoners as may be conformable to the provisions of the Regulations which are now or may hereafter be in force within the province of Bengal.—Reg. II., 1820, sec. iii.

29. The foregoing provisions are hereby declared to be applicable to persons charged with having committed offences of the nature described in paragraph 25, in the interval between the restoration of the settlements of Chandernagore and the date of this Regulation.—Reg. II., 1820, sec. iv.

MOUNTAINEERS OF BHAUGULPORE.

30. The inhabitants of the hills in the district of Bhaugulpore shall be considered, to all intents and purposes, amenable to the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts, and subject to the ordinary system of police, in like manner as the inhabitants of the other territories immediately dependent upon the presidency of Fort William: provided, however, that in all cases where it may be prescribed by the existing Regulations, that the Mahomedan law officer of the Court conducting a trial shall declare by a written futwa his opinion as to the guilt or innocence of a party under trial, or the law as applicable to the case, the provisions of the said Regulations shall not apply to any case in which a native of the hills of Bhaugulpore may be under trial; but in lieu of such law officer, a committee of hill manjees, not being less than three in number, shall sit as assessors on the trial, and declare their opinion thereon, according to the laws and customs of the hills, subject to the approval and confirmation of the sessions judge conducting the trial, in the manner provided by the existing rules in regard to the futwas of Mahomedan law officers: provided further, that in cases of the above nature referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, that Court shall pass sentence, or otherwise dispose of a trial so referred, according as to their judgment shall seem best, without referring the same to the law officers of the Court, and the concurring opinions of two judges of the Nizamut Adawlut shall suffice for the disposal of any such case, and for the issue of any sentence awarded thereon.—Reg. I., 1827, sec. ii., cl. 1.

31. The magistrate of the district shall keep a register of manjees eligible to the duty referred to in the preceding paragraph, and on each occasion of a sessions of jail delivery, when there may be individuals of the hill race for trial, he shall summon a certain number of manjees, not being less than twelve, to attend the sessions; and any three or more of these, selected by ballot or otherwise, as the judge of session may deem most proper and convenient, shall be competent to sit on the trial in the manner above described; provided, however, that any prisoner for trial shall be competent to challenge and object to any one, or to all of the three or more first chosen, and in that case a second set shall be similarly provided, who shall not be liable to challenge, except upon good ground shown to the satisfaction of the judge holding the trial.—Reg. II., 1827, sec. ii., cl. 2.

CRIMINAL JUDICATURE.

POLICE

NORTH WESTERN PROVINCES

Jurisdiction

1 The charge of the police of the country, throughout the whole of the North-Western Provinces, shall be vested, subject to the control of the zillah and city magistrates, or superintendents of police, in the officers who may be appointed to the superintendence of it on the part of Government, and subordinately to them in the landholders and farmers of land, who by their engagements are responsible for the preservation of the peace within the limits of their respective estates and farms —Reg XIV, 1807, sec iv

2 The several zillahs in the North-Western Provinces, together with the mehauls under the magistrate of the city of Benares, shall be divided into compact police jurisdictions, including, indiscriminately, the estates of huzoor tehseel landholders, and of mehauls paying revenue through a tehseeldar, as well as la-khiraj lands of every denomination held exempt from the public assessment —Reg XIV, 1807, sec v, cl 1

3 The police jurisdictions shall be of two descriptions First, such as are established at the station where the Zillah or City Court is held, and which shall be denominated the "Sudder police jurisdiction," Secondly, such as are established at any place not being the station where the Zillah or City Court is held, and which shall be denominated the "Mofussil police jurisdiction"—Reg XIV., 1807, sec v, cl 2

4 The Sudder police jurisdictions shall comprise the city or town at which the Zillah or City Court is held, together with such part of the suburbs and environs as it may be judged expedient to place under the superintendence of a cutwal, with an establishment of darogahs, jemadars, burkundazes, and chokeedars, or other watchmen, proportionate to the extent and population of the jurisdiction —Reg XIV, 1807, sec vi, cl 1

5 The Mofussil police jurisdictions shall respectively comprise a considerable town or gunge at which the superintendent of the jurisdiction shall be stationed, together with such part of the adjacent country as it may be deemed advisable to place under the superintendence of a darogah, with an establishment of jemadars, burkundazes, and chokeedars or other watchmen, proportionate to the extent and population of each jurisdiction —Reg XIV., 1807, sec vi, cl. 2

6. In proposing a distribution of Mofussil police jurisdictions and the requisite establishments for them, the magistrates are to attend as much to the population and number of towns, villages, and other inhabited places, as to the extent of country but the latter shall, in no instance, exceed ten coss square for any one police jurisdiction, unless peculiar local circumstances shall appear to require it, in which cases they are to be reported, through the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, for the consideration of Government —Reg XIV, 1807, sec vi, cl 3

7 If the principal town or gunge included in any mofussil police jurisdiction shall from its extent and population, appear to require a cutwalee establishment, or if it appear expedient in any instance to include more than one considerable town or gunge within a mofussil police jurisdiction, and to station a naib darogah or a jemadar, with a subordinate establishment of burkundazes, chokeedars, or other watchmen, at the town or gunge which may not be the station of the darogah of the jurisdiction, the magistrates shall propose such arrangement, through the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, for the orders of the Governor-General in Council —Reg XIV, 1807, sec vii, cl. 1

8 The police jurisdictions of the several zillahs, as well as those under the magistrate of the city of Benares, shall be numbered, and named after the places at which the superintending officers are stationed The magistrate shall, as soon as possible after the receipt of this Regulation, submit a statement of police jurisdictions formed according to the provisions of it, together with a statement of the requisite police establishments for each jurisdiction through the Sessions Courts, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, and after obtaining the approbation of the Governor-General in Council thereto, the names, numbers, limits, or establishments of the several jurisdictions shall not be changed without the previous sanction of Government.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. vii., cl. 1.

9. Provided that it shall be at all times competent to the Governor-General in Council to order the discontinuance of any police jurisdiction or establishment which may appear to him unnecessary, or any alteration therein which he may deem expedient.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. vii., cl. 2.

NOTE.—The rules in the above paragraphs are subject to the modifications and additions enacted in Regulations XVII., 1816, and XX., 1817, which will be found among the General Police rules, paragraphs 55 to 59.

10. Every cutwal and police darogah, previously to entering upon the execution of the duties of his office, shall subscribe the following declaration before the magistrate, or before such person as he may commission to receive it:

"I ——, appointed Cutwal of the city (or town) of ——, (or Darogah of the ward or police jurisdiction of ——), solemnly declare, that I will execute the duties of that office to the best of my abilities, with diligence, impartiality, and integrity, according to the Regulations enacted, or which may be hereafter enacted for my guidance; that I will not, directly or indirectly, receive, or knowingly allow any other person to receive, any fee, reward, or emolument whatsoever, on account of any matter relating to the exercise of my functions as cutwal (or darogah), and that I will, in all respects, faithfully discharge the trust reposed in me."—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. viii., cl. 4.

11. On the nomination of a person to the office of cutwal or police darogah being approved, such person shall receive a sunnud, under the official seal and signature of the magistrate, in the Persian language, and to the following effect:—

"Be it known to ——, inhabitant of ——, in virtue of the powers vested in me by Regulation XIV., 1807, I hereby appoint you Cutwal of the city (or town) of ——, (or Darogah of the ward or police jurisdiction of ——), within the limits specified at the foot of this sunnud. You are accordingly authorized and directed to perform the duties of the said office in conformity with the provisions of that Regulation, or of any other Regulation in force, which has been or may be enacted by the Honourable the Governor-General in Council, and which shall have been printed and published in the prescribed form. You are further required to obey all orders consistent with the Regulations, which may be issued to you by the magistrate of the zillah (or city) in which you are employed; and are to discharge the trust reposed in you faithfully and diligently, until this sunnud shall be recalled, when it is to be delivered back to the office of the magistrate. Herein fail not. Dated ——, A. C., corresponding with——."—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. viii., cl. 5.

SUDDER POLICE JURISDICTIONS.

12. No person shall be appointed cutwal of the cities of Benares, Allahabad, Agra, Furruckabad, or Bareilly, unless he shall have given security for his appearance in the sum of five thousand rupees; viz., himself in two thousand five hundred, and two responsible persons in one thousand two hundred and fifty each. The cutwals appointed to the town of Juanpoor or any other stations shall previously give security for their appearance in the sum of two thousand five hundred rupees; namely, the cutwal himself in one thousand two hundred and fifty rupees, and two responsible persons in an equal amount.—Reg. XVII., 1795, sec. xxv.; Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. viii., cl. 2.

13. The city or town constituting, with its suburbs, the sudder police jurisdiction, shall be divided into wards; each ward to be guarded by a police darogah, with a jemadar, and an establishment of burkundazes, chokeedars, or other watchmen. The several darogahs to be under the superintendence of a cutwal, and the whole under the immediate control of the magistrate.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 2.

14. The chokeedars and other watchmen are to be stationed by the cutwal as the magistrate may direct; and are particularly to watch the entrances of streets and passages, places where spirituous liquors are sold, and any places where numbers of people occasionally assemble, or where, from any circumstances, there may be reason for special vigilance, to prevent a breach of the peace or apprehend the persons by whom it may be broken.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 3.

15. The jemadars of the several wards, with half of the establishment of burkundazes, and the darogahs with the other half of their establishments, shall patrol their respective wards without intermission; and the one from sun-set until twelve o'clock at night, the other from twelve o'clock at night until day-light. The patrols are to move about with as little noise as possible, that thieves and other disorderly persons may not be apprized of their approach. The patrols of the several wards, and such part of the stationary watchmen as the cutwal shall appoint, are to be furnished with a singhara or horn, which they are to sound when they meet with robbers or other persons guilty of a breach of the peace, and have occasion to give the alarm to each other or to the inhabitants of the ward, that they may co-operate for the apprehension of the offenders. The cutwal is to be careful that the stationary watchmen, and the darogahs and their officers, perform the essential duties prescribed in this rule regularly and properly; and to report to the magistrate every instance in which they may be guilty of negligence or misconduct in the discharge of them.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 4.

16. To assist the darogahs in obtaining the earliest intelligence of any robbers or other offenders who may be concealed or have taken up their residence within their respective wards, the mohulladar and mohulladarin of each ward shall be subject to the orders of the darogah, to whom they shall convey immediate information of any offenders who may be found in their respective wards. It shall also be the duty of the bhutiarehs, or other persons in charge of the public serays, and of the ghaut manjees, to deliver in to the cutwal's office, or to the darogah of the ward, daily reports of the arrival and departure of travellers and of all persons of suspicious appearance.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 5.

17. All private watchmen entertained by individuals for guarding their houses, shops, or other premises within the cutwalee jurisdiction, are required to act in concert with the officers of police in maintaining the peace; and are declared subject to the orders of the cutwal and of the darogahs of their respective wards, in all matters relative to the police. If such watchmen be found deficient in performing the duties required from them, they shall be dismissed at the requisition of the magistrate, who is also empowered to see that none but proper persons are appointed in their stead.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 6.

18. It shall be the duty of the cutwals and of the darogahs of wards to apprehend all murderers, robbers, house-breakers, thieves, pick-pockets, and persons charged with or suspected of crimes or misdemeanors involving a breach of the peace; as well as all vagrants who may be lurking about their respective jurisdictions without any ostensible means of subsistence, and who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves. All such persons who may be apprehended by the darogahs between sun-rise and sun-set shall be conveyed to the cutwal's office immediately on their apprehension. If any such persons shall be apprehended between sun-set and sun-rise, they shall be conveyed to the cutwal's office early in the morning after the night on which they may have been apprehended. The cutwal shall every forenoon, by eleven o'clock, take before the magistrate all persons who may have been apprehended by him or by the darogahs during the night, or subsequently to his report on the preceding day. The cutwal and darogahs are prohibited detaining in custody any persons whom they may have apprehended beyond the time specified, without a special order from the magistrate.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 7.

19. The cutwal and darogahs shall not dismiss any persons whom they may have apprehended without authority from the magistrate for their release; excepting persons who may have been apprehended for petty offences of a bailable nature, and who shall tender sufficient bail for appearance before the magistrate at the time prescribed; or persons charged with trivial offences, such as abusive language, slight trespasses, and inconsiderable assaults or affrays, whom the cutwal and darogahs are permitted to discharge, if previously to the time prescribed for carrying them before the magistrate the complainants shall voluntarily deliver a razeenamah, or writing, desiring to withdraw the complaint, and the defendants shall consent to the complaint being withdrawn. The razeenamahs, in such cases, shall be attested by two creditable witnesses, and are to be transmitted by the darogahs, as well as all bail-bonds and recognizances, on the morning following the night or day on which they may have been executed, to the cutwal, who shall submit them to the magistrate the same morning on which he may have received them, together with any such writings relating to similar cases that may have been entered into before himself.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 8.

20. In receiving written complaints, issuing process of summons or warrant, taking bail when tendered in cases of a bailable nature, and taking recognizances from prosecutors and witnesses, when requisite, the cutwal and darogahs of wards are to be guided by the rules enacted for the guidance of the police-officers in general, in Sections XII., XIII., XIV., and XV., Regulation XX., 1817. They are also to observe the restriction contained in Section XII. of that Regulation ("POLICE," paragraphs 112 to 114), that no summons or other process shall be issued by any police-officer without special instructions from the magistrate, on any charge of adultery, fornication, calumny, or other offence, not involving a breach of the peace.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 9.

21. The duty of the cutwal and darogahs of wards, with regard to persons charged with, or found in the act of committing crimes or misdemeanors, is restricted in the first instance to apprehending them and bringing them before the magistrate, either in custody or under bail, as prescribed. They are not to make any inquiry into the truth of charges preferred to them, without special instructions from the magistrates; nor are they, in any case, to pass sentence, or impose a fine, or make any exaction, or inflict any punishment upon any person whatever.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 10.

22. The restriction in the preceding paragraph is not meant to prohibit the cutwal and police darogahs from taking inquests in cases of murder or other unnatural death, as prescribed by Section XIV., Regulation XX., 1817 ("POLICE," paragraphs 125 to 136), nor to prohibit their making the local inquiry directed in Section XV., Regulation XX., 1817 ("POLICE," paragraphs 137 to 144), on information being received of a recent robbery or other violent crime within their respective jurisdictions; nor to prevent their taking the voluntary confession of persons apprehended by them, in the manner authorized by Section XIX., Regulation XX., 1817 ("POLICE," paragraphs 171 to 187). But no person shall be detained in custody by them, for any of the purposes stated, without being taken before the magistrate, as required by paragraph 18.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 11.

23. The cutwals and darogahs, and all officers under their authority, shall be liable to a criminal prosecution before the magistrate and Sessions Court, or to a civil action in the Dewanny Adawlut, for corruption, extortion, or oppression, and for all acts done by them in opposition to this Regulation, or to the provisions of any other Regulation in force.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xi., cl. 12.

24. In the city of Benares there are sundry inhabited closes, or courts, with only single entrances, provided with phatucks or gateways, guarded by watchmen entertained and paid by the persons residing therein. These watchmen are to make daily reports to the darogah of their respective wards of such occurrences in the said places as may fall under the cognizance of the police; and if such watchmen be found inefficient by the magistrate, he is to appoint others in their stead; and he is to see that the inhabitants of such closes or courts pay to the watchmen the accustomed wages. The rules in this paragraph are extended to all similar closes or courts in the towns of Mirzapoor and Juanpoor.—Reg. XVII., 1795, sec. xxviii.

25. The dowms stationed at the ghauts of the city of Benares are to report on, and to receive the magistrate's sanction, before they proceed to burn the bodies of any Hindoos dying other than a natural death.—Reg. XVII., 1795, sec. xxvii.

26. The guard of the Deccan road to Mirzapoor is intrusted to certain persons paid from the custom-house establishment, who are responsible for all losses by theft or robbery committed within their limits, according to the engagements which they have executed.—Reg. XVII., 1795, sec. ii.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF LANDHOLDERS.

27. Landholders and farmers of land are to be considered responsible for robberies or thefts committed in their respective limits, estates, or farms; it being understood, however, that for night robberies in the open roads or woods, the landholders or farmers are not to be held responsible, unless it shall be proved that they had such knowledge of the circumstances as might reasonably have been expected to have enabled them to have prevented the theft or robbery; but that for thefts or robberies in inhabited places they are to be considered as liable to be made responsible, whether notice of the arrival of the owners of the property shall have been given to them or not, if, under the circumstances of the case, the magistrate shall be of opinion that the theft or robbery was committed with their connivance, or that the perpetration of it was ascribable to their want of care or vigilance.—Reg. XVII., 1795, sec. iii.; Reg. XXXV., 1803, sec. iii., cl. 1; Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xix., cl. 1.

28. The landholders and farmers of land who, by the preceding paragraph, are intrusted with the police of their respective estates and farms, are required, with the assistance of their pykes, chokeedars, pausbauns, and other descriptions of village watchmen, to give at all times their utmost care and vigilance to prevent affrays, assaults, and all other acts of violence and breaches of the peace within their respective estates and farms, as well as to apprehend and deliver over to the police-officers any persons who may be found in the act of committing a breach of the peace, or whom the police-officers may require their aid to apprehend in execution of the duties vested in them.—Reg. II., 1797, sec. ii.; Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xx.

29. All prosecutions instituted under paragraph 27, to recover losses sustained by theft and robbery shall be filed and decided in the Dewanny Courts, subject to all the rules provided by the existing Regulations for other civil suits cognizable in the said Courts.—Reg. VIII., 1797, sec. ii.

30. The landholders and farmers are further hereby declared responsible for the value of any stolen or plundered property proved to have been brought into their estates or farms with their knowledge or connivance, and which they may not have caused to be delivered up, or have given timely information respecting it to the local police-officer or to the magistrate.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xix., cl. 2.

31. All claims upon the landholders and farmers for the value of stolen or plundered property under the preceding rule are to be instituted, tried, and decided in the Civil Courts, subject to the general rules of appeal.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xix., cl. 3.

32. Any landholder or farmer of land who may be convicted of wilful neglect in the instances above referred to, and particularly of neglect to afford his ready and utmost assistance on the requisition of a police officer in apprehending persons within his estate or farm who may have committed, or be charged with having committed, a breach of the peace, is declared liable to the forfeiture of his estate or farm, or to such fine to Government as may be judged adequate to the circumstances of the case, and is to be proceeded against in the following manner.—Reg. II., 1797, sec. iii., cl. 1.

33. The charge of wilful neglect in the instances aforesaid is to be received and examined into by the magistrate, in the mode prescribed by the Regulations with respect to other charges of a criminal nature; and after hearing the defence of the party accused, with the evidence adduced against him in his behalf, if the magistrate shall be of opinion that the charge is not established, he is to pass judgment of acquittal, with damages to the party if the complaint shall appear to have been groundless and litigious. If the magistrate shall consider the charge established, he is to record his opinion to this effect, with the punishment he may judge adequate to the case, whether a fine (the amount of which to be specified) or a forfeiture of the offender's estate or farm (the annual jumma of which is to be in that case specified), and to transmit without delay a copy and translation of his proceedings to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. II., 1797, sec. iii., cl. 2.

34. The Nizamut Adawlut, on receipt of the magistrate's proceedings, are to pass such order thereupon as they may think proper, on due consideration of the evidence and all the circumstances of the case; and in all instances wherein they may order a fine to Government, their judgment is to be considered final, and immediately carried into execution by the magistrate, in the same manner as other fines are levied under the existing Regulations. But in case the Nizamut Adawlut shall adjudge a forfeiture of the offender's land or lease, they are, previous to ordering such judgment to be carried into execution, to transmit their proceedings, with those of the magistrate, to the Governor-General in Council, who will finally determine whether the judgment of forfeiture shall be put in force, or commuted to a fine, or otherwise; and who, whenever he may order the land or lease of the offender to be forfeited to Government, will at the same time cause the necessary instructions for the future disposal of the land to be conveyed to the collector through the Board of Revenue.—Reg. II., 1797, sec. iii., cl. 3.

35. The above provision shall be considered to extend to landholders or farmers of land who shall be convicted of having themselves been concerned, directly or indirectly, in any theft or robbery committed within their respective estates or farms, or of having been aiding or abetting therein, or privy to the same. Such landholders and farmers shall be liable to be proceeded against in the manner prescribed by the foregoing rules, subject to the penalties prescribed therein. —Reg. VIII., 1805, sec. xiv., cl. 8.

NOTE.—The preceding rule is of force only in the Ceded and Conquered Provinces, and not in Benares.

36. The huzoor tehseel landholders being exonerated from keeping up any police establishments, excepting such as they were bound to keep when under tehseeldars, for the maintenance of the peace within their respective estates, they will not be entitled to any part of the allowance formerly made to the tehseeldars on that account on their becoming huzoory.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xv.

37. The foregoing provisions shall also be considered equally applicable to all officers of Government intrusted with or employed in the collection of the public revenue, or the rents of estates held khas or under attachment; it being the duty of every public officer to render any assistance in his power for the support of the police and the prevention of crimes, or the apprehension of persons by whom they are committed, especially when called upon to aid the established officers of police.—Reg. XIV., 1807, sec. xxi.

CONQUERED PROVINCES.

38. The magistrates shall have the charge of the police of the country; and shall station darogahs of police in those parts of their respective zillahs, in which the aid of such officers shall be necessary for the maintenance of the peace of the country, in the same manner as the magistrates in the provinces ceded to the English East-India Company by the Nawaub Vizier are empowered to nominate darogahs of police within their respective zillahs. The magistrates shall be guided by the Regulations now in force, regarding the police in the provinces ceded to the English East-India Company by the Nawaub Vizier, or such other Regulations applicable to their respective zillahs as may be hereafter enacted. Provided, however, that this Regulation shall not be construed to exonerate the zemindars, farmers, or other holders of lands in the said zillahs, from the duties and responsibility imposed on them by the terms of their existing engagements, or by the ancient and established usages of the country, which may not have been superseded by such engagements, or by an order of a competent authority, for the prevention of robberies and other disorders, and for the maintenance of peace and good order within their respective limits. Such zemindars, farmers, and other holders of lands, shall continue to perform such duties, and be liable to such responsibility, notwithstanding any thing which may be said to the contrary in any Regulation enacted previously to the date of this Regulation.—Reg. IX., 1804, sec. ix.

CUTTACK.

39. The magistrates shall have the charge of the police of the country; they shall station darogahs of police in those parts of the country in which the aid of such officers shall be necessary for the maintenance of the peace of the country; and all the Regulations now in force, or which shall be hereafter enacted, regarding the police in the provinces of Bengal and Behar, and in that part of the province of Orissa heretofore under the dominion of the British Government, shall be considered to extend to the province of Cuttack, unless it shall be otherwise specially directed by any Regulation. Provided, however, that this Regulation shall not be construed to exonerate the zemindars, farmers, or other holders of lands in the zillah of Cuttack, from the duties and responsibility imposed on them by the terms of their respective tenures or engagements and the usages of the country, for the prevention of robberies and other disorders, and for the maintenance of peace and good order within their respective limits. Such zemindars, farmers, and other holders of land, shall continue to perform such duties, subject to the same responsibility as heretofore, notwithstanding any thing that may be said to the contrary in any Regulation enacted previously to the date of this Regulation.—Reg. IV., 1804, sec. vi.

40. The following rules shall be observed in the appointment of darogahs for the maintenance of the police in the zillah of Cuttack, and in the pergunnahs of Puttaspore, Kummardichour, and Bograe.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. iv., cl. 1.

41. In cases in which the zemindars, talookdars, and other landholders, have not been formally divested of the charge of the police within the limits of their respective estates, for misconduct or any other reason, either by the late Mahratta Government or by the Board of Commissioners for the settlement of the affairs of Cuttack, such zemindars, talookdars, and other landholders, shall continue, under the responsibility stated in paragraph 39, in charge of the police, according to established usage, within their respective estates; that is, the principal zemindars, talookdars, and other landholders, being proprietors of large estates, shall be constituted darogahs of police within the limits of their respective possessions; and the inferior zemindars, talookdars, and other landholders, being proprietors of petty estates, shall be considered to be subordinate officers of police, subject to the above-mentioned responsibility, under the immediate authority of darogahs, who shall be selected and appointed for the maintenance of the police in estates or mohauls of the latter description.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. iv., cl. 2.

42. In cases in which any of the zemindars, talookdars, and other landholders, have been divested of the charge of the police (as above noticed) within the limits of their respective estates, one, two, or more kandytes or sirdar pykes, according to the extent of such estates, shall, in conformity to established usage, be vested with the immediate maintenance of the peace, the apprehension of public offenders, and other duties of that description, within the limits of the said estates; subject, nevertheless, to the control of darogahs, who shall be appointed for the superintendence of the police and the general control of the conduct of the said kandytes and all inferior officers of police, within the limits of the authority of the said darogahs respectively.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. iv., cl. 3.

43. The darogahs who may be appointed under paragraphs 41, 42, shall receive such salaries as the Governor-General in Council may think proper to fix for their support, on a consideration of the labour and responsibility of the offices held by them.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. iv., cl. 4.

44. Certain lands having been assigned by the authority of the late Government for the maintenance of the said sirdar pykes and inferior pykes, under the control of such sirdars, for the support of the general police of the country, those lands shall be continued to the said sirdar and other pykes for the purposes to which they have been hitherto appropriated. It is to be understood, however, that all officers of that description shall be considered subject to the authority of the darogahs of police, whether zemindars or others, within their respective limits, and shall be bound to conform to all legal orders which may be issued to them by such darogahs, conformably to the powers with which the darogahs may be invested. It is further to be understood, that any sirdar or other pyke will be liable to be dispossessed of his lands for any disobedience of orders, neglect of duty, undue violence, or other misconduct; provided, however, that whenever a magistrate shall be of opinion that any kandyte or sirdar pyke ought to be dismissed from his office, or whenever the place of such officer shall become vacant from death or any other cause, the magistrate shall report the circumstances of the case to the Nizamut Adawlut, who will pass such orders on the subject as shall appear to them to be proper, under the general powers vested in them by Regulation V., 1804; provided, likewise, that whenever any vacancy shall occur among the inferior pykes, either from dismissal, death, or otherwise, the places of such pykes shall be supplied by the sirdar pyke, on declaring himself to the magistrate responsible for the conduct of the person recommended by him.—Reg. XIII., 1825, sec. v.

45. It shall be the duty of the darogahs of police, whether zemindars or others, under the guidance and instructions of the magistrates, to form a complete register of the sirdar and other pykes within the limits of the authority of the said darogahs respectively.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. vi.

46. It shall be the duty of the darogahs of police to ascertain and fix, under the orders of the magistrates, the limits of the local authority of the kandytes or sirdar pykes, and of the inferior officers of police attached to the said sirdars, so that every part of the province of Cuttack, whether consisting of lands paying revenue to Government or of lands exempt from the payment of revenue, may receive the protection of the subordinate officers of police, under the directions of the darogahs and the general control of the magistrates.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. vii.

47. Nothing contained in this Regulation shall be construed to exempt the zemindars, talookdars, farmers, and other holders of land, although they be not formally constituted officers of police, from the duty of affording every assistance in the prevention of breaches of the peace and in the apprehension of public offenders, who are immediately to be delivered into the custody of the nearest officers of police.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. viii.

48. Any zemindar, talookdar, or holder of land exempt from revenue, who may be suspected of conniving at any robbery or other public offence, will be liable to be prosecuted before the Criminal Courts of the country, and punished on conviction, under the general laws and regulations of the country.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. ix.

49. It shall be the duty of the collectors of Cuttack and Midnapore to form a complete register of the lands assigned for the support of the sirdar and other pykes, specifying the quit-rent payable to the zemindars, talookdars, and other landholders (if, according to established usage, the lands have been hitherto subject to the payment of such quit-rent), and to transmit a copy of the register required to the Board of Revenue, to be deposited among the records of that board.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. x.

50. The foregoing rules regarding the sirdar and other pykes, and the lands assigned for their support, are not to be considered applicable to certain doosauds, or village watchmen, entertained by the zemindars, talookdars, and other landholders, for the purpose of watching crops, guarding granaries, and other duties of that nature; which officers shall be left under the exclusive control of the zemindars, talookdars, and other landholders, as heretofore.—Reg. XIII., 1805, sec. xi.

51. All laws and regulations for the maintenance of the police, and for the administration of justice in criminal cases, in the province of Bengal, which have been or shall be enacted, and which shall not be inconsistent with or repugnant to the provisions contained in this Regulation; and likewise such of the rules contained in Regulation IV., 1804, as are not either specifically or virtually rescinded by the present Regulation, shall have full force and effect in the zillah of Cuttack, and in the pergunnahs of Puttaspore, Kummardichour, and Bograe, included in the zillah of Midnapore; provided, however, that no part of this Regulation shall be construed for the present to extend to the estates of certain hill or jungle rajahs or zemindars, of which the following is a list:

NATIVE POLICE.

Rules regarding Tehsildary Police in the Ceded and Conquered Provinces.

52. It shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council, by an order in council, to authorize any tehsildar or tehsildars to exercise the powers vested by the existing Regulations in darogahs of police, and to determine the local limits of their police jurisdictions, within which all officers of police, including the present thannah and village police establishments, shall be subordinate to, and subject to the control of, the tehsildar, in his capacity of chief police thannahdar. —Reg. XI., 1831, sec. ii.

53. Wherever the above arrangement may have effect, the individuals at present filling the office of darogah shall be designated Naib Darogah, and they shall be guided in every respect by the rules laid down in Section VI., Regulation XX.; 1817 (POLICE, paragraphs 56 to 59), the present thannahs being considered as outposts, and the powers and duties of the police-officers employed at outposts, as defined in the section above quoted, shall be held applicable to such naib darogahs.—Reg. XI., 1831, sec. iii.

54. In modification of Section IV., Regulation XX., 1817 (POLICE, paragraphs 49 to 52), it is hereby declared competent to the darogah and tehsildar, with the sanction of the magistrate, to make such disposition of the existing police establishments as may be most conducive to the public interests; but with this exception, the whole of the rules contained in the above Regulation shall be held applicable to the tehsildars who may be constituted police-officers under this Regulation.—Reg. XI., 1831, sec. iv.

55. The tehsildars who may be vested with the powers of darogahs under this Regulation are authorized to employ, when necessary, in aid of the regular police establishments, any chuprassies or other persons entertained on their fixed tehsildary establishments; and revenue officers, when so employed, shall be guided in the discharge of their police duties by all the rules now in force, or which may hereafter be enacted for the guidance of the police-officers. But the fixed thannah establishments shall not be employed in the collection of the land revenues, or in other revenue duties, except in cases of distraint for arrears of rent or revenue, or such other occasions as by the Regulations in force is now authorized.—Reg. XI., 1831, sec. v.

56. Whenever the Governor-General in Council shall see fit to carry into effect the arrangement herein authorized in any district or part of a district, a statement shall be drawn out, specifying the number and extent of the several police and revenue jurisdictions, the names and numbers of the officers attached to them, and the head-quarters or thannahs, and the outposts of the several divisions: this statement shall be drawn out in English, Persian, and the vernacular dialects, and suspended in a conspicuous place in the cutcherry of the collector and magistrate at the sudder station, and shall be published by proclamation throughout the district.—Reg. XI., 1831, sec. vi.

57. In any district in which the provisions of this Regulation may be carried into effect, it shall be the duty of the magistrate and collector to report to the Governor-General in Council, from time to time, any reductions which can be effected in the existing police establishments; and on the occurrence of any vacancy in the office of naib darogah, such office shall not be filled up, but its duties shall devolve on the jemadar of the outposts, or such other subordinate officer as may be deemed by the magistrate and collector competent thereto, whether belonging to the establishment of the tehsildar or to the original police establishment.—Reg. XI., 1831, sec. vii.

PREFATORY NOTE

TO THE SECTION "CIVIL AND CRIMINAL JUDICATURE."

THE title of this Section will not fully describe its mixed character, but this division of the work has been thus designated because it is chiefly supplemental to the two separate Sections of "Civil Judicature," and "Criminal Judicature." Some of the enactments which it consolidates include rules partially affecting the revenue department and its administration; but the whole are so essentially united in their provisions and operation that they do not admit of complete subdivision, and for these combined rules no place seemed so fit as the present Section. This will be endeavoured to be shown in noticing them in their order.

The first and most important division is that which contains the rules establishing and defining the powers and duties of the highest tribunal exercising a joint and supreme control over the other courts, civil and criminal.

Next follow the rules respecting the service of and resistance to process, which, like those which relate to the powers of the Sudder Court, are, in the code, often so framed as to refer conjointly to civil and criminal authorities, though sometimes limited in their scope to one or the other.

Some miscellaneous rules affecting the routine of the courts and their officers follow in succession; and these seemed naturally to lead to a topic of considerable extent and importance, the appointment and removal of Public Officers, the earlier rules on which are involved in some complexity; it may fairly be doubted whether many ought not rather to have been rules of official direction, than of legislative enactment. Closely connected with these are the rules which define the responsibilities of Public Officers having custody of public property, and the course of procedure for malversation and breaches of trust. The persons affected by all these rules are officers, not only of the courts of Judicature, but of other departments also; but beyond the partial classification which will be found to have been made, the severation of the rules seemed unadvisable and inconvenient, in some points impracticable.

The next topic on which the enactments are included in this Section, is that of the form and authority assigned to the laws framed under the provisions of Regulation XLI, 1793. Although the rules under which those laws were made have been superseded by the system now in operation, they are retained as a guide to the construction of those numerous and important laws, and generally to the mode of dealing with them. These rules, of course, embrace other authorities besides the judicial.

In sequence to the foregoing rules of general application, the appendix of enactments of local operation contains, first, some special rules relative to the penalties for resistance to process, as applicable to the condition of the holders of land in Benares. These seemed to be the only provincial regulations under this head which so far differed from those of the Lower Provinces as to need insertion. Where the variations are merely verbal, involving no difference in operation, the collection has not been encumbered with their repetition.

The Local Appendix to this Section seemed the proper place to insert the establishment of the several Zillah Courts, which are accordingly there enumerated. The future retention, creation, and abolition of such courts is now in the power of the Governor-General, by Order in Council. The collection concludes by an arrangement of special enactments regarding the operation of the laws as generally or partially extended to particular tracts of territory.

1. A court of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut shall be held at Calcutta.—Reg. VI, 1793, sec. iii; Reg. IX, 1793, sec. lxvi.

2. The court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, shall consist of as many judges as the Governor-General in Council may from time to time deem necessary for the despatch of the business of those courts. The Court shall have a register.—Reg. IX, 1793, sec. lxix; Reg. XII, 1811, sec. ii, cl. 2; Reg. III, 1829, sec. ii.

3. A court of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut is constituted for the Western Provinces, to exercise jurisdiction over the whole of the districts comprised within the divisions numbered in section ii, Regulation I, 1829, as Nos. 1 to 9 inclusive; and a court of Nizamut Adawlut for the province of Kumaoon, and the Saugor and Nerbudda territories.—Reg. VI, 1831, sec. iii, cl. 1.

VI, 1831, sec. iii, cl. 2.

5. The court of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut for the North-Western Provinces shall consist of one or more judges, and shall have a register, to be styled Register to the Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut for the Western Provinces; and such other officers as may be deemed necessary.—Reg. VI, 1831, sec. iv.

6. The judges who may be appointed to the courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut shall take the prescribed oaths of office before any person whom the Governor-General in Council may commission to administer them.—Reg. 13. It shall be competent to either of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut, by an order under the signature of the register of such court, to transfer to such register the duty of preparing appealed causes for trial, and of executing the decrees and orders of the said courts, and to authorize him to issue the necessary process, and to proceed thereupon agreeably to the rules prescribed by the general Regulations of Government.—Act XVII, 1841, sec. i.

VI, 1793, sec. iii.

20. The Court of Sudder Dewanny is to be an open court. The ordinary sittings shall be holden as the dispatch of business may require. Special sittings when necessary shall be summoned by the register on his receiving orders for that purpose. All process issued by the court shall be signed by the register under such instructions as shall be prescribed by the court for his guidance. —Reg. VI, 1793, sec. iii; Reg. II, 1801, sec. vi; and Reg. VI, 1831, sec. vii, cl. 1.

21. The Court of Nizamut Adawlut is to be an open court. The court shall meet once in every week or as often as the state of the business may require, and a regular diary shall be kept of its proceedings.—Reg. IX, 1793, sec. ix; Reg. II, 1801, sec. xiii: Reg. VI, 1831, sec. vii, cl. 1.

II, 1801, secs. v, and xii; Reg. VI, 1831, sec. vi.

23. The term "Sudder Court" shall be deemed applicable to the courts respectively of the highest civil and criminal jurisdiction, as the case may be, of the presidencies.—Act VIII, 1842.

24. Whenever and so often as only one judge may be present with the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or Nizamut Adawlut for the North-Western Provinces, or if any difference of opinion should arise when only two judges may be present in either court, in any matter requiring under the existing Regulations the concurrent voices of two judges, the question shall be referred, as the case may be, for the determination of one of the judges of the Court of Sudder Dewanny or Nizamut Adawlut stationed at Calcutta; Provided, moreover, that in such case it shall be sufficient that the judge to whom the point may be referred should form and record his judgment on a careful perusal and consideration of the proceedings, and without requiring the attendance of the parties or their vakeels.—Reg. VI, 1831, sec. vii.

25. Whenever three judges of the Sudder Court shall sit as a Dewanny or Nizamut Adawlut, and a difference of opinion shall arise between them, the voices of the majority shall determine the question; but if a difference of opinion shall arise when two judges only are present, the question before the court shall be adjourned until a third judge shall attend; but whenever there may be four judges present at a Court of Sudder Dewanny or Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, or in the Western Provinces, and there may be an equality of voices in cases which require a decision by the majority, it shall be competent to the court to refer the question for decision to a judge of a Sudder Dewanny or Nizamut Adawlut (as the case may be) at Calcutta, or in the Western Provinces respectively; and it shall be sufficient that the judge to whom the point may be referred, shall form and record his judgment on a careful perusal and consideration of the proceedings, and without requiring the attendance of the parties or their vakeels.—Reg. 26. The proceedings of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut, which have been heretofore kept in the English language, and copied for transmission to the Governor-General in Council and to the Honourable Court of Directors, are not required to be hereafter kept in English further than the courts may find convenient and conducive to regularity; nor will copies of the proceedings of either court be hereafter required, except in cases of appeal to Her Majesty in Council, or of reference to the Governor-General in Council as prescribed by the Regulations, in which cases attested copies and translations are to be furnished as heretofore.—Reg. II, 1801, sec. xvi.

27. Any translations which may be hereafter required by either Court of Sudder Dewanny or Nizamut Adawlut, are to be made by the registers and their assistants; or if, at any time, their other official avocations should not admit of their making the requisite translations, the court is empowered to cause the same to be made by any other competent person, as authorized with respect to trials referred to the Nizamut Adawlut, by sec. iii, Reg. X, 1799.—Reg. II, 1801, sec. xvii.

28. The Zillah and City Courts are directed to furnish translations of original papers transmitted to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in such cases only wherein translations may be required by the precepts of that court, or by any regulation or order requiring the same.—Reg. II, 1801, sec. xviii.

29. Whenever the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, upon appeals to Her Majesty in Council, or otherwise, may have occasion to require translations of any proceedings held or original papers filed in a zillah or city court, such translations are to be prepared by the Zillah and City Courts. —Reg. II, 1801, sec. xix.

30. The Courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut shall, from time to time, as circumstances require, prescribe the forms and fix the periods of transmission, and mode of preparation of all reports, calendars, registers, or other statements, to be furnished by the civil or criminal courts, European or native, or by the judicial or police officers under this presidency.—Reg. VII, 1829, sec. iii, cl. i.

31. Nothing in this Regulation shall be construed to supersede the necessity of the preparation and transmission as heretofore, of the prescribed reports and statements, until the Court of Sudder Dewanny or Nizamut Adawlut may specially prescribe any alteration in, or direct the discontinuance of, any particular report or statement.—Reg. VII, 1829, sec. iii, cl. 2.

32. It shall be competent for the Courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut to frame such rules of practice for the due exercise of the civil and criminal jurisdiction vested by the Regulations in those courts, as may from time to time be found requisite. And such rules, when so framed, shall be submitted to the Governor-General of India in Council; and after the same shall have been approved by the said Governor-General of India in Council, they shall be of the same force as if they were inserted in this Act.—Act XVII, 1841, sec. ii.

PROCESS.

GENERAL RULES RESPECTING ISSUE AND SERVICE—CIVIL AND CRIMINAL COURTS.

NOTE.—There is no specific enactment establishing the office of Nazir of the Zillah Courts, but it is recognized throughout the Regulations as existing.

33. The nazirs of the civil and criminal courts are to appoint their own naibs or mirdahs, and the peons of the court to which they may respectively belong, and to remove them at their pleasure.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. ii.

34. The principal sudder ameens and sudder ameens shall retain on their establishments officers denominated nazirs, to whom the provisions in paragraph 41 shall be applicable.—Reg. VII, 1832, sec. v, cl. 5: Act XIV, 1845, sec. ii.

35. The judges and magistrates of the several zillahs and cities shall select from their lists of peons employed by their nazirs in the execution of civil and criminal process who do not receive a monthly salary from Government, and also from the lists of peons proposed to be employed by the nazirs of the moonsiffs, sudder ameens, or principal sudder ameens, in the execution of civil process, and shall cause their names to be registered with the following particulars, viz., the names of their fathers, their age and places of abode, and a concise description of their persons; and the rules mutatis mutandis, contained in paragraphs 37 to 40, shall be applicable to the peons who may be employed under the foregoing rule.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 2; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. v, cls. 2 and 4; Act XIV, 1845, sec. ii.

36. The nazirs are hereby strictly prohibited, under pain of immediate dismission, from employing any person not registered in the mode above prescribed, and not being an officer on the public establishment, in the service of any process, civil or criminal, or in the execution of any order or official act whatever, without a special authority from the judge or magistrate or other public officer competent to give such directions, and in cases wherein process is served by an officer of the court and not by the party himself, the moonsiffs, sudder ameens, and principal sudder ameens are strictly prohibited from employing any person not registered in the mode above prescribed without the special authority of the judge.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 3; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. v, cl. 3.

37. The peons who may be registered as above required shall be furnished with an uniform belt, or such other badge of office, at the discretion of the judge, as shall suffice to distinguish them from the chuprassies on the fixed establishments. The expense of such badge shall be defrayed out of the tullubana of the peon receiving the same. The judges and magistrates of the several Zillah and City Courts are to frame a table for regulating the account of tullubana demandable on the service of process civil and criminal, according to the rates prescribed by the Regulations or established by usage. The table shall contain a statement of the several police jurisdictions or other more convenient local divisions, the computed distance of the centrical part of such local division from the sudder station, and the number of days for which tullubana is to be allowed on the serving of process within each local division, calculated on the computed distance of the centre of each local division from the sudder station.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 4.

38. The table so framed shall be suspended for general information in the cutcherries of the judge and magistrate, the moonsiff, sudder ameen, and principal sudder ameen, and of the collector of the district, and no tullubana shall be allowed in any instance beyond the rates, or for a greater number of days, than may be prescribed in such table, without a special written order from the judge or magistrate, or other public officer competent to pass the same.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 5; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. v, cl. 5; Act XIV, 1845, sec. ii.

39. The amount of tullubana which may be demandable according to the table mentioned in the preceding paragraph shall be specified on the back of each summons or other process, and the amount shall be paid by the person taking out the process to the nazir previously to the execution of such process. A receipt shall be endorsed on the process in each instance by the nazir, specifying the amount and the person from whom it was received.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 6.

40. When two or more processes may be served by one peon, the judge, magistrate, moonsiff, sudder ameen, principal sudder ameen, or other officer who may order the same to be served, shall determine in what proportions the fixed rates of tullubana shall be paid by the parties respectively, and shall sign an order to that effect on the face or back of the process.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 7; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. v, cl. 5; Act XIV, 1845, sec. ii.

41. When the process shall have been executed and returned according to the preceding rules, the nazir shall pay to the peon who may have served the same three-fourths of the amount of the tullubana received by him on account of such process, and the nazir shall be entitled to appropriate the remaining one-fourth of the tullubana to his own use.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 8.

42. The judges, magistrates, moonsiffs, sudder ameens, and principal sudder ameens, are required to take every possible precaution, and to give all practicable attention for the purpose of preventing illegal or undue exactions of diet or subsistence money under the name or pretence of tullubana.—Reg. XXVI, 1814, sec. xiv, cl. 9; Reg. VII, 1832, sec. v, cl. 5; Act XIV, 1845, sec. ii.

43. Whenever the judge of a civil court, or a magistrate or joint magistrate, or any other European public officer, authorised by the Regulations in force to issue process of arrest, or other judicial process, civil or criminal, upon the person or property of individuals amenable to their respective jurisdictions, may, for any special reason, deem it necessary to be personally present at the execution of such process, and to see that the same be duly executed in the manner prescribed by the Regulations, it shall be competent to the public officer who may have issued the process, to attend personally for the purpose above mentioned; and to adopt or direct any legal measures that may be necessary for the due execution thereof.—Reg. I, 1825, sec. ii.

44. Execution of process within Military Limits.—Reg. II, 1809, sec. iii, cl. 2; Reg. XX, 1810, sec. xix. See ("MILITARY" paragraphs 176 and 193.)

Reference on Construction of the Regulations.

NOTE.—The following rules, enacted to provide for cases of difference in the interpretation of the Regulations between the Courts of Appeal and Circuit and the Zillah judges and magistrates were not repealed on the abolition of the former courts. As the Zillah and Sessions Courts now stand in the relation of the Provincial Courts to the subordinate judicatories, the rules have been adapted to that relation. See Rules for the execution of the orders of Superior by Lower Civil Courts, paragraphs 66 to 68.

45. In all instances wherein a precept issued by a Zillah or Sessions Court to a subordinate civil or criminal court or magistrate, shall appear to the subordinate judge or magistrate to be contrary to, or unwarranted by, the existing Regulations, he is authorised to state to the Zillah or Sessions Court in what respect he considers their precept to be in deviation from the Regulations, and suspend an execution till receipt of a second precept in reply to his objections. But if the second precept of the Zillah or Sessions Court in reply to the objections of the subordinate judge or magistrate, shall confirm their first precept in whole or in part, and shall require the subordinate judge or magistrate to execute the same without further reference, he shall immediately comply with such requisition. In case, however, the second precept of the Zillah or Sessions Court should not satisfy the subordinate judge or magistrate that the Regulations have been rightly construed by the Zillah or Sessions Court, he is at liberty, at the same time that he certifies the execution of the order of the Zillah or Sessions Court, to request that they will transmit copies of their precepts to him and his returns thereto, with such other papers as may be necessary for the information of the circumstances of the case, to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut or the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, according as the case in question may relate to the civil or criminal department, and the Zillah or Sessions Court shall accordingly transmit such papers, as requested, without any unnecessary delay. Provided nevertheless, that nothing in this Regulation be understood to authorize any subordinate judge or magistrate to question the propriety of any order issued by a Zillah or Sessions Court, in cases clearly left to the discretion and judgment of the Zillah or Sessions Court by the Regulations; the reference to them, and eventually to the Courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut, meant to be authorized by this Regulation, being confined to cases in which the sense of the Regulations, from a difference of construction or otherwise, may appear doubtful and uncertain.—Reg. X, 1796, sec. ii.

46. In all instances wherein a reference to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut or the Nizamut Adawlut may be made under the preceding rule, the determination of those Courts, who are empowered to prescribe the forms and conduct to be observed by the Zillah and City Courts of Dewanny Adawlut, the Sessions Court, and the zillah and city magistrates, in all cases provided for by the Regulations, agreeably to their construction thereof, is to be held final and conclusive.—Reg. X, 1796, sec. iii.

47. Should any doubt occur to the Sudder Dewanny or the Nizamut Adawlut with respect to the meaning of any part of the Regulations, or should it appear to them, on occasion of any reference from the Zillah or Sessions Court, or the subordinate courts or the zillah or city magistrates, that the Regulations do not sufficiently provide for the case submitted to their decision, they are to report the circumstances of it to the Governor-General in Council, that a new Act may be framed in explanation of such doubt.—Reg. X, 1796, sec. iv.

Execution of Mofussil Process within the limits of the Supreme Courts.

48. Any writ, warrant, or other process, issued by any court, judge, or magistrate in the territories beyond the local limits of the Supreme Courts of Calcutta, may be executed within those limits in manner following:—A copy of such writ, warrant, or other process, authenticated as such by the attestation of the court, judge, or magistrate signing, or issuing the same, accompanied by a certified translation in the English language, shall be presented to any judge of Her Majesty's court, who may thereupon, under his hand and signature, indorse and direct the same to be executed within the local limits of any of Her Majesty's courts by the sheriff, or by any justice of the peace, according to the nature of such writ, warrant, or other process.—Act XXIII, 1840, sec. i.

49. Upon the delivery of every such writ, warrant, or process so indorsed as aforesaid to any such sheriff as aforesaid, every such sheriff shall make a memorandum of the date of such delivery, and shall execute such writ, warrant, or process in like manner as if the same had originally issued from any of Her Majesty's courts, and had been delivered at the date as appearing by the memorandum and such sheriff shall make no distinction as to priority or otherwise between the execution of any writ, warrant, or other process originally issued from any of Her Majesty's courts, and the execution of any writ, warrant, or other process under this Act; but every writ, warrant, and other process, whether original or indorsed as aforesaid, shall, amongst each other, be subject to the same rules touching the mode and order of execution as are now established in respect of writs, warrants, and other process originally issued from Her Majesty's courts of justice.—Act XXIII, 1840, sec. ii.

50. Every such sheriff shall be liable to be proceeded against in Her Majesty's courts of justice for all matters touching the execution of any writ, warrant, or other process executed under this Act, in like manner as if the same had originally issued from any of Her Majesty's courts of justice; and all persons and property seized or detained under any writ, warrant, or process executed by virtue of this Act shall be dealt with in like manner as if such persons or property had been seized or detained under the like writ, warrant, or other process issued from any of Her Majesty's courts of justice.—Act XXIII, 1840, sec. iii.

51. All persons disobeying or obstructing the execution of any writ, warrant, or other process indorsed under this Act, shall be punishable in Her Majesty's courts of justice, in like manner as if the same had issued from such courts; provided always that in the case of process for the attendance of witnesses, Her Majesty's courts shall be governed by the like rules, touching expenses and other matters, as are established in regard to subpœnas issued from such courts.—Act XXIII, 1840, sec. iv.

52. In the case of persons seized or detained by virtue of any writ, warrant, or other process executed under the authority of this Act by any justice of the peace or by any sheriff, it shall be the duty of every such sheriff or justice of the peace, if so required by the indorsement of the judge, to deliver the party in custody to such authority or persons as shall be particularly specified in such indorsement, and who shall have been charged with the execution of the writ, warrant, or other process by the authority originally issuing the same, and for that purpose to cause the party in custody to be conveyed to any place within the Company's territories beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's courts.—Act XXIII, 1840, sec. v.

53. Provided that in the case of any writ, warrant, or other process required to be indorsed under the authority of this Act, it shall be lawful for the judge who shall be required to indorse the same to remit the same for amendment to the authority issuing the same, if the same shall appear to be defective in any matter of form.—Act XXIII, 1840, sec. vi.

54. Provided that in the case of any writ, warrant, or other process required to be indorsed under the authority of this Act, for the seizure or detention of any person, it shall be lawful for the judge who shall be required to indorse the same to direct by indorsement that bail (the amount and number of sureties to be specified in such indorsement) may be taken, and for this purpose to call for such documents and to make such inquiry as he shall think proper.—Act XXIII, 1840, sec. vii.

55. All civil and criminal jails and houses of correction within the jurisdiction of any of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts shall, according to the nature of the case, be liable to be used by the the sheriff for the purposes of this Act; and the parties imprisoned therein under the authority of this Act shall be liable to the prison discipline thereof; and all sentences of imprisonment passed by any judge, court, or magistrate in the territories of the East India Company beyond the local limits of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts, may be executed in whole or in part within any of the jails or houses of correction aforesaid, provided that a copy of the warrant of commitment or other process authorizing the imprisonment be so indorsed as aforesaid, and such indorsement contain the necessary directions.—Act XXIII, 1840, sec. viii.

56. The Sudder Courts of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal shall make, and from time to time amend, a table of reasonable fees, to be taken on account of the execution by the sheriff of any legal process issued by any court, judge, or magistrate, beyond the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court established by royal charter in Calcutta, and of the sums to be allowed for costs of advertisements or other notifications of sales of property, according to the amount of the decrees to be satisfied by such sales,—which fees and sums shall be payable by the party applying for the process before it is sent to the sheriff for execution, and shall be deemed costs in the cause.—Act VIII, 1852, sec. i.

57. The said table of fees and sums, when made or amended as aforesaid, shall be submitted by the Sudder Court of the Lower Provinces of the presidency of Fort William to the Governor of Bengal, and by the Sudder Court of the North-Western provinces of the said presidency to the Lieutenant-Governor of those provinces, for his approval; and the said table of fees and sums shall have full force and effect, and the fees and sums therein mentioned may be lawfully demanded and taken, from and after the approval thereof by the said Governor or Lieutenant-Governor, as the case may be.—Act VIII, 1852, sec. ii.

58. Every such court, judge, and magistrate, issuing process as aforesaid, shall cause a separate account to be kept of the amount of all fees and sums so paid, and shall from time to time, as directed by Government, cause the amount thereof to be paid into the local treasury.—Act VIII, 1852, sec. iii.

59. The Government shall, twice in each year, account for and pay over to the sheriff for the time being, the amount of fees and sums so paid, after deducting all necessary expenses of receiving and keeping account thereof, and remitting the net proceeds thereof to Calcutta; or, where the amount has accrued in the shrievalty of more than one sheriff, shall apportion the sum paid accordingly between the sheriff for the time being and the then late sheriff.—Act VIII, 1852, sec. iv.

60. The said Government may compound with the sheriff for a monthly payment to be made to him instead of such fees and sums, and during such composition may appropriate the said fees and sums to the purposes of Government.—Act VIII, 1852, sec. v.

61. Over and above such fees and sums, or any such monthly payment received instead of such fees and sums, the sheriff shall be entitled to a fee after the rate of two rupees eight annas for each hundred rupees of the value of any goods or property taken and sold by him in execution of any process issued by any court, judge, or magistrate beyond the local jurisdiction of the said Supreme Court, which fee shall be taken to cover all expenses connected with the seizure and sale, except the expense of advertisements.—Act VIII, 1852, sec. vi.

62. No fee, estimated upon the amount of the sum for which any person is taken in execution, shall be payable to the sheriff of Calcutta, or any of their bailiffs, for taking the body of any person in execution on any process issued by any court, judge, or magistrate, out of the local jurisdiction of the said Supreme Courts respectively; but instead thereof, such fees shall be payable to the sheriff for taking the body of any person in execution of any such process as shall be settled from time to time by the Sudder Court as aforesaid.—Act VIII, 1852, sec. vii.

63. If any person taken in execution on any such process shall escape out of the legal custody of the sheriff, the sheriff shall not be liable to an action of debt for such escape, but shall be liable only to an action upon the case for damages in consequence of such escape sustained by the person or persons at whose suit the prisoner was taken.—Act VIII, 1852, sec. viii.

GENERAL RULES RESPECTING ISSUE AND SERVICE OF PROCESS—OF CIVIL COURTS.

64. Every process, rule, order, or decree of the civil courts is to be immediately served or executed without application to any person, or the interference of any individual whomsoever, according to the requisition of it, within the limits of the special jurisdiction of each court.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xiii.

65. All orders and process of the civil courts in original suits which may be directed to be served or executed on any person, are to be written or printed in such language as the Governor-General in Council shall direct, and are to be sealed with the seal of the court and signed by the judge. When a summons, or any process is addressed to a defendant or a witness in a cause, or any other person who may not reside or be present at the place at which the court may sit, and for the serving or execution of which a peon or peons may be necessary, each peon is to be paid by the party in whose behalf the summons or process may issue, four annas per day for his subsistence; excepting in districts where custom may have fixed the subsistence-money of peons at a lower rate, in which case the lower rate, and no more, is to be paid. The name of each peon deputed to serve the process, the amount of his subsistence-money, and the number of days for which he is to receive it, is to be endorsed on the writing. No greater number of peons than two are to be deputed to serve or execute any process of the courts, and one peon only is to be sent, excepting in cases in which the judges may think two peons necessary.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xx; Act XXIX, 1837.

Execution of process and orders of a superior by a lower court.

NOTE.—In the Regulations of 1793 parallel rules were enacted for the execution of the civil process and orders of the Provincial Courts by the Zillah Courts, and of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut by the Provincial Courts. The rules are here given as common to the relative powers of the Sudder and Zillah Courts standing to each other in the same relation in which the Sudder and the Provincial Courts formerly existed, or to the Zillah Court as taking the place of the Provincial Courts towards the courts of the uncovenanted judges.—(See ante, paragraphs 45 to 47.)

66. All orders and process in appeals which may issue from the civil courts, are to be directed to the court in which the original cause shall have been instituted. Every such order or process is to limit a certain time in which it is to be served, executed, and returned to the court from which it was issued.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xv; and Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xiii.

67. In all cases in which process, either to a party or witness, and all process whatever, and every rule or order for the execution of any decree or final order, or any order relating to a cause depending in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which may be directed by such court to any Zillah Court, or depending in any Zillah Court which may be directed to one of the courts of the uncovenan.ed judges, the court to which the process may be directed is to execute the order contained in the process, rule, or order, and return it so executed within the time limited, or return to the superior court good and sufficient reason why it has not been served or executed. When any process, rule, decree, or order for the execution of any decree or final order, or any order whatever, shall be transmitted by the superior court to a lower court to be served or executed, the return to such process, rule, order, or decree is to be made by the court, either by endorsement on the process, rule, order, or decree, or to be written on a paper firmly annexed to it; and if the return be made in the last-mentioned manner, there is to be an endorsement on the process, rule, order, or decree, referring the superior court to the return contained in such annexed paper, and the court is to cause a copy of the process, rule, order, or decree, together with the return to it, to be deposited amongst the records of the court. And in all cases in which the superior court may transmit any order or process to be served or executed by a lower court against a party in a cause, and the party on whom it is to be served or executed is not, after diligent search, to be found, or shall have absconded, or shut himself up in his own or any house or building, or retired to any place so that the process cannot be served upon him, the court to which the process may be directed is to cause to be fixed up in some conspicuous part of the room in which the court may be held, a writing containing a copy of the order or process, and a notice that if the party shall not obey the exigence of it within the time limited, the superior court will, without further notice, process, or order, proceed ex parte to hear, try, and determine the cause to which such process or order may relate; and the court is likewise to cause a copy of such writing to be fixed up, with all practicable despatch, on the outer door of the house in which the party may have commonly dwelt, or in some conspicuous place in the village in which he may have usually resided, and to return to the superior court, in the manner before directed, how he has executed the process.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xvi; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xiv.

68. If a lower court to which any process, rule, or order of the superior court may be transmitted, for the purpose of being served or executed on any party, shall return that the party has absconded, or shut himself up in his own or any house or building, or retired to any place so that the the process could not be served upon him, or that he was not, after diligent search, to be found, and that they had caused the writing to be fixed up in the places and manner directed, and the party shall not appear and obey the exigence of the process, rule, or order, the superior court is to proceed ex parte to try and determine the cause in which the process, rule, or order shall have issued, in the same manner as if the party had appeared and obeyed the exigence of the process.—Reg. V, 1793, sec. xvii; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xv.

GENERAL RULES RESPECTING ISSUE AND SERVICE OF PROCESS—OF CRIMINAL COURTS.

69. Rules regarding the process of Magistrates.—Reg. III, 1812, sec. ii, cls. 4 to 6; Reg. XVI, 1810, sec. viii; Act X, 1845. See ("MAGISTRATES," paragraphs 24, 33, 111, 112, and 117.)

70. All criminal process in cases of a heinous nature shall, as far as circumstances may admit, be served by public officers, receiving wages from Government, who shall not be entitled to demand or receive diet, money, or other allowances from the complainant or the accused, whether the case be adjusted by razeenamah or otherwise, and the demand or receipt of such by any public officer, directly or indirectly, in violation of this rule, shall be punishable as a criminal offence, on conviction before the magistrate or the Sessions Court. The offender shall also be compellable, either by a criminal prosecution, or by a civil action, to refund the amount received; besides being liable to immediate dismission from office, under the provisions contained in the existing Regulations.—Reg. IX, 1807, sec. xiv, cl. 2; Reg. VII, 1811, sec. iv.

71. When peons, or other persons not receiving wages from Government, may be unavoidably employed in serving any criminal process, as in cases of adultery and fornication, or of calumny, abusive language, slight trespass, or inconsiderable assault, shall be authorized by the magistrate to demand and receive tullubana, at the rate of two annas per diem (or three annas, in districts where such higher rate may be usual and necessary) during the time they may be so employed; and shall not demand nor receive more, upon any pretence whatever, under the penalties above stated, with respect to public officers receiving wages from Government. The tullubana, in such cases, shall be paid in the first instance by the party or parties at whose instance the process is issued (unless the charge be of a heinous nature, and the magistrate deem it proper that the necessary expense of process be paid on the part of Government), subject to reimbursement from the accused if the charge be established, under the discretion vested in the criminal courts.—Reg. IX, 1807, sec. xiv, cl. 3; Reg. VII, 1811, secs. ii, and iv.

72. Officers entrusted with the execution of a warrant, or other process of arrest in criminal cases, having the seal and signature of a magistrate, or any public officer empowered to act as magistrate, whether the person to whom the warrant is addressed be an officer of the police or otherwise, shall be guided in the execution of such process by the rules in clauses 5 and 6, sec. xxv, Regulation XX, 1817 ("POLICE," paragraphs 236 and 237), for the guidance of officers of police, and by any other Regulation in force, for the service and execution of warrants, or other process of arrest in serious criminal cases.—Reg. I, 1825, sec. iii, cl. 1.

73. The seventh clause of the section above mentioned ("POLICE," paragraph 238), whereby it is declared that any wilful abuse and perversion of the powers vested by the preceding clauses in the police officers for ends of public justice, will subject them, on conviction before the magistrate or Sessions Court to exemplary punishment, according to the circumstances of the case, besides immediate dismission from office, is also hereby made applicable to all persons, whether police officers or others, who may be employed to execute a warrant or other process of arrest issued by a magistrate, joint magistrate, or other public officer empowered to act as magistrate, and may be guilty of any wilful abuse and perversion of the powers vested in them by the present Regulation.—Reg. I, 1825, sec. iii, cl. 2.

RESISTANCE TO PROCESS— CIVIL COURTS.

74. If a zemindar, independent talookdar, or other actual proprietor of land, or a dependent talookdar, shall resist, or cause to be resisted, any process, rule, order, or decree of a Zillah or City Court, or of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the court, on proof of the resistance being made to its satisfaction, is to cause the offender to be summoned to answer to the charge. If the offender shall abscond, or shut himself up in his own or any house or in any building, or retire to any place, so that he cannot be served with the summons, the court is to proceed against him in the manner directed with regard to other persons absconding or acting as above specified, so that they cannot be served with the process of the court. If the offender shall not appear within the prescribed time, or if he shall appear, and after receiving his answer to the charge, and hearing the evidence which he may produce in his defence, it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court, that he is guilty of the charge, the court is to decree that the offender shall, from the date of the decree, forfeit his zemindarry, talook, or other estate, in which the resistance may have been made; or if the resistance shall have been made out of the limits of the estate of the offender, the zemindarry, talook, or other landed property that he may possess within the jurisdiction of the court, the process of which may have been resisted; or if the offender possess no zemindarry, talook, or other landed property within the jurisdiction of the court, whose process he may have resisted or cause to be resisted, so that no decree of forfeiture can pass against him, the offender on proof of the charge against him shall be liable to a fine to Government, to be levied under the provisions of paragraph 78. The Zillah Court, if the cause shall not be appealed within the time limited for preferring appeals, or the Sudder Adawlut, after passing the decree, is immediately to forward a copy of its decree and proceedings respecting the charge to the Governor-General in Council. If the offender shall appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut within the prescribed period, and the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut should confirm the decree of the Zillah Court, they are immediately to transmit a copy of their decree and proceedings and of the decrees and proceedings received from the Zillah Court, to the Governor-General in Council. It shall be at the option of the Governor-General in Council, either to order it to be executed, or to commute the forfeiture for such fine as, upon a consideration of the situation and circumstances in life of the offender, he may think adequate to the offence for which the decree may be passed. In the event of the Governor-General in Council commuting the forfeiture for a fine, the court upon receiving notice of the fine that he may impose, is to levy the amount of it by the same process as is prescribed for enforcing decrees of the court. In the event of the Governor-General in Council ordering the decree to be executed, the court is to issue a precept, requiring the collector of the revenue of the zillah to depute an ameen with a proper establishment of officers (whose allowances are to be specified in the precept) to sequester the lands and collect the rents and revenues. If the lands of the offender shall be deemed by the court too inconsiderable to admit of their being charged with the expense of an ameen, they are to direct a precept to be issued to the collector of the zillah to order the nearest tehseeldar, or any other officer who may be employed under him in the business of the collections, to take charge of the lands. The officer is to perform the duties prescribed to ameens in such cases, and under the same restrictions and penalties.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xxii; Reg. VI, 1793, sec, xxiv; Reg. IX, 1799, sec. ii.

75. If the decree adjudging the lands of the offender forfeited shall be confirmed, it shall be at the option of the Governor-General in Council, either to confer the rights which the offender possessed in the lands on his heirs, upon their agreeing to make good all sums whatever that may be due from him to Government on account of the lands forfeited, and to pay the fixed public revenue assessed upon them; or if the property forfeited be a dependent talook, the revenue payable from it to the proprietor within whose estate it may be situated; or to order the lands to be disposed of at public sale, under the rules prescribed for the sale of lands.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xxiii; Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xxv; Reg. IX, 1799, sec. ii.

76. If a farmer of land, holding a farm immediately of Government, shall resist, or cause to be resisted, any process, rule, order, or decree, which may at any time issue from any Zillah Court, or from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on proof of the resistance being made to its satisfaction, the court is to cause the offender to be summoned to answer to the charge. If the offender shall abscond, or shut himself up in his own or any house or building, or retire to any place so that he cannot be served with the summons, the court is to proceed against him in the manner directed with regard to other persons absconding or otherwise acting as above specified, so that they cannot be served with the process of the court. If the offender shall not appear within the prescribed period, or if he shall appear within the limited time, and after receiving his answer to the charge, and hearing the evidence which he may have to produce in his defence, it shall be proved, to the satisfaction of the court, that he is guilty of the charge, the court is to decree the lease cancelled from the expiration of the Bengal, Fussily, or Willaity year (according as the farm may be situated in Bengal, Behar, or Orissa) in which the decree may be passed. The Zillah Court, if the offender shall not appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut within the time limited for preferring appeals to that court, or the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut after passing the decree, is immediately to transmit to the Governor-General in Council a copy of the decree and of all the proceedings respecting the charge, or if the offender shall appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut within the prescribed period, and the court should confirm the decision of the Zillah Court, they are immediately to transmit a copy of their decree and proceedings, and of the decrees and proceedings received from the Zillah Court to the Governor-General in Council. It shall be at the option of the Governor-General in Council, either to order the decree to be executed, or to commute the forfeiture of the lease for such fine as, upon a consideration of the situation and circumstances in life of the offender, he may think adequate to the offence for which the decree may be passed; or if the offender shall not be desirous of being continued in his farm, to fine him as above prescribed, and compel him to retain the farm during the remainder of the lease, and to hold him and his surety responsible for the discharge of their engagements until the term of them shall expire. If a fine shall be imposed upon the offender, the court which shall have transmitted the final decree and proceedings to the Governor-General in Council, upon receiving notice of the fine, is to levy the amount of it by the same process as is prescribed for enforcing decrees of the court. If the lease of the offender shall be annulled, and a balance shall be due from him to Government at the close of the year in which the lease may be cancelled, both he and his surety are to be held responsible for the payment of it, and the collector of the revenue of the zillah is empowered to proceed against them for the recovery of it, in the manner prescribed for the recovery of balances due from farmers whose leases may be declared annulled. The offender is permitted to prosecute in the Dewanny Adawlut of the zillah in which the farm may be situated, the dependent talookdars, under farmers, and ryots, in the lands included in the farm, for any arrears of rent or revenue that may be due from them to him, on account of the period during which his lease remained in force.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xxiv; and Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xxvi.

77. In all cases of resistance to the process of any Zillah or City Court of Dewanny Adawlut, if the judge of the court whose process may have been resisted shall be of opinion that a fine to Government will be a more proper and adequate punishment for the offence than a forfeiture of the offender's estate or farm, he is authorized, instead of the decree of forfeiture directed by the above provisions, to adjudge the offender to pay such fine to Government as may appear proper, upon a consideration of his situation and circumstances in life, and the offence of which he may be convicted, as provided with regard to persons not being landowners or farmers of land by the following paragraph, and subject to the provisions in that paragraph for an appeal from the judgment of the court. It is further provided that no decree for the forfeiture of an estate or farm which may have been passed by a Zillah Court, or by the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and transmitted to the Governor-General in Council under the foregoing rules, shall be deemed final until confirmed by the Governor-General in Council, nor shall such decree be carried into execution until notice of the confirmation be received.—Reg. IX, 1799, sec. iii.

78. If any person, not being a zemindar, independent talookdar, or other actual proprietor of land, or a dependent talookdar, or a farmer of land holding a farm immediately of Government, shall resist, or cause to be resisted, any process, rule, order, or decree, which may at any time issue from any Zillah or City Court, or from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on proof of the resistance being made to its satisfaction, the court is to cause the offender to be summoned to answer to the charge. If the person for whom the summons may be issued shall abscond, or shut himself up in his own, or any house or building, or retire to any place so that he cannot be served with the summons, the court is to proceed against him in the manner directed with regard to other persons absconding, or otherwise acting as above specified, so that they cannot be served with the process of the court. If the offender shall not appear within the prescribed period, or if he shall appear within the limited time, and after receiving his answer and hearing the evidence which he may have to produce in his defence, it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court, that he is guilty of the charge, the court is to adjudge the offender to pay such fine to Government as may appear to it proper, upon a consideration of his situation and circumstances in life, and the offence of which he may be convicted. The Zillah Court, if the offender shall not prefer an appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut within the time prescribed for lodging appeals, or the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut after passing the decree, is to proceed to levy the amount by the same process by which it is empowered to carry its decrees for sums of money into execution. If the offender should appeal to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut within the prescribed time, and that court should confirm the decision of the Zillah or City Court, the court is to proceed to levy the amount by the same process by which it is empowered to carry its decrees for sums of money into execution.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xxv; and Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xxvii.

RESISTANCE TO PROCESS—CRIMINAL COURTS.

79. If any person amenable to the authority of the zillah and city magistrates or police officers shall resist, or cause to be resisted, any warrant, order, or other process of any zillah or city magistrate or police officer, the magistrate of the zillah or city in which such resistance may have been made, on the same being charged on oath or affirmation, shall, if practicable, cause the party accused to be apprehended and brought before him to answer to the charge. If the party shall abscond or conceal himself so that he cannot be apprehended, or if, on any account, he cannot be immediately apprehended, the magistrate is to cause a written proclamation, requiring the party to appear to answer the charge against him within a fixed period, not less than one month, to be publicly read and proclaimed by beat of drum, and to be affixed in some conspicuous part of his cutcherry, as well as on the outer door of the house in which the party may have usually dwelt, or some conspicuous place in the village in which he may have generally resided. If the party charged as above cannot be apprehended, and shall not, within the period fixed by proclamation, appear to answer the charge against him, or if he shall be apprehended or shall appear in pursuance of the proclamation, and after receiving his answer to the charge, and hearing the evidence he may adduce in his defence, it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the magistrate that he is guilty of the charge, the magistrate is to pass judgment against him in the following manner.—Reg. XI. 1796, sec. ii, cl. 1.

80. If the offender be a zemindar, talookdar, or other proprietor of land, paying revenue directly to Government, or the proprietor of altumgah, ayma, or other lands exempt from revenue, situated within the zillah or city in which the resistance was made, he shall declare such lands to be forfeited to Government, and by a precept, under his official seal and signature, shall immediately give notice to the collector of the district, who on receipt thereof shall cause the lands in question to be attached on the part of Government, and shall hold them in attachment till the receipt of a further precept from the magistrate to relinquish them, or of orders from the Governor-General in Council to be communicated to him in the manner hereafter directed.—Reg. XI, 1796, sec. ii, cl. 2.

81. If the offender be a sudder farmer, holding a farm from Government within the zillah or city in which the resistance may have been made, the judgment against him shall declare his lease cancelled; and the magistrate, by a precept under his official seal and signature, shall immediately give notice to the collector of the district, who on receipt thereof shall proceed as above required, with respect to lands declared forfeited to Government.—Reg. XI, 1796, sec. ii, cl. 3.

82. If the offender be not a proprietor of land or sudder farmer paying revenue to Government, as described in the two foregoing paragraphs, the judgment against him shall declare him liable to the payment of such fine to Government as may appear proper, upon a consideration of his rank and circumstances in life, and the offence of which he may be convicted; and the magistrate shall immediately proceed to the attachment of any property appertaining to the offender for the recovery of the same, in the manner authorized by the Regulations for the recovery of sums of money decreed by the civil courts of justice. In cases wherein the offender may have been apprehended, and may not be possessed of property adequate to the discharge of the fine adjudged against him, the magistrate, with the concurrence of the Nizamut Adawlut, may commute such fine to imprisonment or corporal punishment.—Reg. XI, 1796, sec. ii, cl. 4.

83. Provided always, that the whole of the judgments passed by the zillah and city magistrates under this Regulation be immediately reported, with a complete copy and translation of their proceedings, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, and the orders of that court be received under the following paragraph, before the judgment passed by a zillah or city magistrate under this Regulation be considered final and conclusive.—Reg. XI, 1796, sec. ii, cl. 5.

84. The Nizamut Adawlut, on receipt of the proceedings referred to in the last five preceding paragraphs, are to pass such order thereupon as they may think proper, on due consideration of the evidence and all the circumstances of the case; and in all instances wherein the forfeiture of the offender's lands or lease may appear to them too severe a punishment for the offence, they are authorized to commute the same for such fine to Government as they may judge adequate, and order the attachment of the lands to be taken off on the payment thereof. The sentence of the Nizamut Adawlut is to be final in all cases of fine and imprisonment; but in case they shall confirm the judgment of the magistrate for a forfeiture of the offender's land or lease, they are, previous to ordering such sentence to be carried into execution, to transmit their proceedings, with those of the magistrate, to the Governor-General in Council, who will finally determine whether the sentence of forfeiture shall be put in force or commuted to a fine, or otherwise; and who, whenever he may order the land or lease of the offender to be forfeited to Government, will, at the same time, cause the necessary instructions for the future disposal of the land to be conveyed to the collector through the Board of Revenue. In case the magistrate's judgment of forfeiture be set aside, either by the Nizamut Adawlut or Governor-General in Council, he is immediately on being informed thereof, and on receipt of the fine (if a fine be ordered), to issue a precept to the collector, requiring him to remove the attachment, and to cause a full and fair account to be rendered of all receipts and disbursements during the period of attachment.—Reg. XI, 1796, sec. iii.

85. If any person charged with an offence of a criminal nature shall abscond, or conceal himself so that upon a process issued against him by a zillah or city magistrate or police officer he cannot be found, the magistrate is to cause a written proclamation requiring the absent party to appear to answer the charge against him within a fixed period, not less than one month, to be publicly read and proclaimed by beat of drum; and shall cause such proclamation to be affixed in some conspicuous part of his cutcherry, as well as on the outer door of the house in which the party may have usually dwelt, or some conspicuous place in the village in which he may have generally resided. In case the party shall not appear and deliver himself up within the period fixed by such proclamation, the magistrate, on receiving the Nazir's return to this effect, is to order the attachment of any land or other real property held by the absentee within his jurisdiction, in the following manner.—Reg. XI, 1796, sec. iv, cl. 1.

86. If the absentee be a proprietor of land or sudder farmer paying revenue immediately to Government, he is to issue a precept, under his official seal and signature, to the collector of the district, requiring him to hold the land or farm of the absentee in attachment till the receipt of further notice. And the collector is accordingly to obey such requisition, and to take such measures as may be necessary for the due care and management of the lands whilst under his charge, subject to the instructions of the Board of Revenue, to whom he is to make an immediate report of any instances of land being delivered over to him under this Regulation; he is also to relinquish such lands, on being advised by the magistrate that the attachment has been taken off on the attendance of the absentee, and is to cause a full and fair account to be rendered of all receipts and disbursements during the period of attachment.—Reg. XI, 1796, sec. iv, cl. 2.

87. If the absentee be not a proprietor or farmer of land paying revenue to Government, but as a dependent talookdar, under-farmer, or ryot, or in any other capacity whatever, be the tenant of landed property capable of attachment, the magistrate is to issue a precept to the collector of the district, directing him to attach the same, and adopt the necessary measures for the due care and management of it whilst under his charge; paying from the product any rent which may become due to the zemindar or other person entitled thereto, and deducting all necessary expenses in the account to be rendered to the absentee, whenever he may attend and the attachment of his property be removed.—Reg. XI, 1793, sec. iv, cl. 3.

88. In all instances wherein an attachment of property may be ordered under the foregoing rule, the magistrate, immediately on the attendance of the party for whose appearance it was ordered, is to direct, by a written precept, that the attachment be removed, and that a full and fair account be rendered of all receipts and disbursements during the period of attachment.—Reg. XI, 1796, sec. v.

89. Should the absentee neglect to attend for a period of six months after the lands have been ordered under attachment, the magistrate is to report the case to the Governor-General in Council, who will pass such order upon it, and upon the future disposal of the lands, as he may judge proper. —Reg. XI, 1796, sec. vi.

90. In cases of resistance of process not attended with any aggravating circumstances, wherein the magistrate before whom the charge may be tried shall judge it sufficient to inflict the punishment of imprisonment, not exceeding fifteen days, or a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, it shall not be necessary to transmit his proceedings for the confirmation of the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. IX, 1801, sec. v.

NOTE.—For resistance to collectors' process of imprisonment for Arrears of Revenue, see "REALIZATION OF REVENUE."

91. If any person or persons shall resist or cause to be resisted the execution of any legal warrant or process which the officers of the Magistrate's Court, or the officers of police, may attempt to serve, or shall endeavour to rescue any person arrested, or under the custody of the magistrate's officers, or the officers of police, the darogah, if practicable, shall cause such offenders, as well as persons concerned in the resistance or rescue, to be apprehended and forwarded to the magistrate, with a report of the circumstances of the case, and the necessary evidence for establishing the misconduct of the accused; in case of actual rescue or violent resistance, he shall also, if necessary, call in the aid of the officers of police stationed in the adjacent thannahs, who shall conform to such requisitions, provided they are conveyed in writing.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 1.

92. If the person convicted of resisting, or causing to be resisted, the process of a magistrate or police officer, be a proprietor of land, or a sudder farmer paying revenue to Government in any zillah or city jurisdiction, not being that in which the offence shall have been committed, and it appear just and proper, on due consideration of the circumstances of the case, to extend the penalty of forfeiture declared in paragraphs 79 to 83, to the whole or any part of such lands or farms, it shall be competent to the magistrate to adjudge the same, subject to the prescribed confirmation of the court of Nizamut Adawlut, and the final orders of the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 3.

93. In like manner, if a person charged with an offence of a criminal nature, who may abscond or conceal himself, so that the process issued against him cannot be served, shall possess land or other immoveable property, or a sudder farm paying revenue to Government in any other zillah or city jurisdiction than that wherein the offence charged against him may have been committed, and it shall appear necessary to attach the same with a view to cause the attendance of the accused person under the provisions of paragraphs 85 to 89, it shall be competent to the magistrate to whom the charge may be preferred, to order the attachment of the whole or any part of such property or farms; and the provisions of the paragraphs referred to shall be considered applicable in such cases.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 4.

94. In all instances of resistance to the process of a magistrate or police-officer, wherein the magistrate may be of opinion that a fine to Government, not exceeding two hundred rupees, commutable, if not paid, to imprisonment, not exceeding six months, will be an adequate punishment for the offence, he is authorized to adjudge the same instead of the forfeiture of land or farm; and his judgment in such cases, as well as in all cases wherein a similar judgment may be passed by him against persons not being proprietors of land or sudder farmers, shall not be referable to the Nizamut Adawlut, but shall be final, unless altered or rescinded by the superior criminal courts, under the general rules in force.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 5.

95. If any person amenable to the authority of the zillah or city magistrates and police-officers shall resist, or cause to be resisted, any warrant, summons, or other process of a zillah or city magistrate, or of any authorized magistrate or police-officer, and such person cannot be apprehended: or if any person charged with a criminal offence of a heinous nature shall abscond or conceal himself, so that on a warrant issued against him at his usual place of residence by the local magistrate or police-officer, he cannot be found, and the party so resisting or evading the process against him be not a proprietor or sudder farmer of land, capable of attachment under the provisions of the paragraphs above referred to, but shall be in possession of any moveable property which can be attached, and the removal of which might be expected, if not placed under immediate attachment, the police-officer issuing or serving the warrant in such cases is authorized, on receipt of credible information that the person against whom the warrant is issued has recently absconded, or concealed himself for the purpose of evading it, to cause the attachment of any moveable property belonging to the absconding or concealed party within his jurisdiction, giving at the same time immediate information to the magistrate of the district, whose previous instructions shall be applied for when there may be reason to expect a removal of the property.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 6.

96. The magistrate, on receipt of information directed in the above paragraph, will determine whether the case be such as to require a continuance of the attachment till the appearance of the accused person, or till a proclamation shall have been issued for his attendance, under the provisions of paragraphs 79 to 89, and will transmit instructions to the police-darogah accordingly, either for the release of the property attached by him, or for continuing the attachment, and taking an inventory of the property, in conformity with the following paragraph. Till the receipt of such instructions, the police officer shall adopt such measures only as may be requisite to prevent a removal of the attached property.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 7.

97. On receipt of the magistrate's instructions for an attachment of moveable property, the darogah of police, in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the place, shall cause an exact inventory of the articles attached to be taken and duly attested, after which he shall deliver the property in charge to the head men, or any two or more respectable inhabitants of the place, taking an acknowledgment for the same, which shall be forwarded, together with an inventory of the property, to the magistrate.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 8.

98. In all instances where an attachment of property may be made under the foregoing rule, the police-darogahs shall enjoin the persons into whose charge the same may be delivered, to take care that there is no injury done to the property; and if the person charged appear within the period specified in the proclamation, the magistrate shall immediately, on the attendance of the party, cause the attachment to be removed, and a full account rendered of the property attached, subject only to any unavoidable expense which may have attended the attachment.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 9.

99. If the proclaimed person shall not appear within the period fixed by the proclamation, the attached property, in case of resistance of process, will be liable to public sale by order of the magistrate, for the purpose of making good any fine imposed on the offender; or should the attachment of moveable property have taken place under an evasion of process, it shall, at the end of six months, supposing the absentee not to attend during that period, be at the disposal of Government, in common with any landed property attached under similar circumstances in pursuance of the Regulations in force.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec xxvi, cl. 10.

100. Whenever a proclamation may be issued through a police-darogah by order of a magistrate, requiring the attendance of any person who may have evaded or resisted the processes of the court, the darogah shall, in the presence of two or more creditable persons, not connected with the thannah establishment, cause such proclamation to be publicly read and promulgated by beat of drum, and affixed in the police-thannah, and on the outer door of the house which the party may have usually inhabited, or some conspicuous place in the village in which he may have generally resided.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 11.

101. On the expiration of the period specified in the proclamation, if the offender shall not appear to answer to the charge alleged against him, the darogah shall certify to the magistrate the mode in which the proclamation has been issued, and the date, time and place of promulgation, and shall send a sufficient number of witnesses to prove the due publication of the process.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 12.

102. If any zemindar, farmer, local manager, or other person, to whom a magistrate may have issued a warrant or order, in pursuance of Regulation III, 1812; or of any other Regulation in force for the apprehension of a person or persons proclaimed or charged with or suspected of a crime, shall apply to an officer of police for co-operation and support in the execution of such warrant or order; the police officer to whom the application may be made shall afford every assistance in his power for the due enforcement of the process, and if required so to do in conformity with the sixth clause of section ix, Regulation III, 1812 ("POLICE," paragraph 386), shall receive charge of the prisoner from the zemindar, farmer, local agent, or other person, and shall grant a written acknowledgment, specifying the name of the prisoner and the date on which he was delivered into his charge; he shall also, without delay, forward the prisoner under safe custody to the magistrate. If the person named in the application made to the police-officer should not be apprehended, the particulars of the application, and of the measures taken in consequence, shall be recorded, for the information of the magistrate, in the thannah-diary, prescribed by section viii, Regulation XX, 1817 ("POLICE," paragraphs 64 to 78.).—Reg. XX, 1817, , sec. xxvi, cl. 13.

103. If any police-officer intrusted with or assisting in the execution of any legal warrant for the apprehension of a person charged with murder, robbery, or other heinous crime, or pursuing a robber or murderer immediately after the commission of the crime, or resisting him during his attempt to perpetrate the crime, should wound or slay the offender in endeavouring to apprehend him, such police-officer shall be held guiltless of any criminal act.—Reg. XX, 1817, sec. xxvi, cl. 14.

CONTEMPT OF COURT AND OBSTRUCTIONS TO JUSTICE.

104. If any person shall be guilty of contempt of court in open court, or of undue arrogations of the authority of the court, or of illegal exertions of judicial authority in his own cause, the court is immediately to punish the offender by fining him in a sum not exceeding two hundred rupees, and keeping him in custody until the fine shall be paid. The courts are to regulate the amount of the fines which they may impose under this paragraph, according to the situation and circumstances in life of the offenders.—Reg. IV, 1793, sec. xxi.

105. All persons whatsoever, whether generally amenable to the courts of the East India Company or otherwise, using menacing gestures or expressions, or otherwise obstructing justice in the presence of any zillah or city magistrate, joint magistrate, or other officer under a magistrate empowered to try criminal cases, or any superior or inferior court, civil or criminal, of the East India Company, shall be liable to be fined by the authority whose proceedings are obstructed, to any amount not exceeding two hundred rupees, or in case such fine be not paid, to be imprisoned for any period not exceeding one month. Provided that from the award of punishment in such cases an appeal shall lie, if preferred within one month, to the authority, civil or criminal, appointed by law to hear appeals in all other cases from the decisions of the officer by whom the fine was imposed; and provided also, that notwithstanding anything in this Act it shall be lawful to indict any person amenable to Her Majesty's Supreme Courts as for a misdemeanor in any of the cases aforesaid sustainable before this Act, if no proceeding shall have been had against the offender in the court where the offence was committed, but not otherwise.—Act XXX, 1841, sec. i.

106. The Sudder Board of Revenue, the local commissioners, or other officers exercising the powers of either of those authorities, the collectors, or other officers exercising the powers of collector, shall be competent to punish any obstruction of the nature aforesaid, by fine to an extent not exceeding two hundred rupees, and in case such fine be not paid, by imprisonment in the civil gaol for a period not exceeding one month. Provided that the orders passed in such cases shall be subject on appeal to the revision and control of the superior revenue authorities, as in all others, and shall, as well as the sentences passed under the preceding paragraph, be carried into effect by the magistrate, on application being made to that officer, in the usual mode.—Act XXX, 1841, sec. ii.

VACATIONS OF COURTS.

107. The Zillah and City Civil Courts shall be annually adjourned during the Hindoo festival called Dussarah, which occurs in the Bengal month Assin or Kartick, corresponding with the English month September or October; and also during the Mahomedan festival Mohurrem, which depending on the lunar year is not fixed to any particular month. The former adjournment (or Dussarah vacation) shall commence ten days before this festival, and continue for the period of one month of thirty days: the latter adjournment (or Mohurrem vacation) shall commence five days before this festival, and continue for fifteen days. Under this rule, when the time of the two festivals may coincide, the vacations also will of course be blended, and no separate adjournment will be necessary: except as far as the fixed period for the one may extend beyond that of the other: as when part of the Mohurrem vacation only may fall within the period fixed for the Dussarah vacation; or on the other hand, when part of the latter only may fall within the period of the former.—Reg. III, 1798, sec. ii.

108. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are authorized to adjourn that court during the periods of the two vacations above-mentioned, or otherwise as they may judge proper.—Reg. III, 1798, sec. iii.

109. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut are empowered to authorize and direct an occasional dispensation with the rule for periodical vacations, in the instance of any particular court wherein, from the arrear of business or other cause, it may appear expedient that the vacations thereby provided for, or either of them, should not take place.—Reg. I, 1806, sec. x.

NOTE.—No rules appear to exist for vacations of the criminal courts, but the closing of the civil courts involves the adjournment of the criminal, subject to any directions of the controlling authorities.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE OF JUDGES AND MAGISTRATES.

110. Any zillah or city judge, or any magistrate who may be desirous of quitting his station, on whatever account, is to apply for permission to the Governor-General in Council; and, except in emergent cases of indisposition, is not to leave his station until such permission shall have been obtained and received. The letter of application is to specify the purpose for which the leave of absence is applied for; the period for which it is desired; and the name of the senior officer on the spot, to whom the charge of the office will devolve, if not otherwise provided for.—Reg. IV, 1796, sec. ii.

111. Previous, however, to any zillah or city judge, or any session judge or magistrate, being permitted by Government to quit his station, a reference shall be made to the Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut to ascertain the state of the public business depending before such judge or magistrate, and whether the leave of absence desired can be conveniently granted or otherwise.—Reg. II, 1801, sec. xv.

112. The Governor-General in Council will determine, in every instance wherein he may grant leave of absence to the judge or magistrate to quit his station, whether to delegate the temporary execution of the duties of judge or magistrate to the senior officer on the spot, or to appoint any other person by a special commission thereto, or to make other provision for carrying on such part of the business of the station, civil and criminal, as cannot be postponed, according to the urgency and circumstances of the case. The result of this determination will be immediately communicated to the judge or magistrate, and the person appointed to act for him; and notice of it is to be given at the same time to the Courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut..—Reg. IV, 1796, sec. iii.

113. The zillah or city judges or magistrates, to whom leave of absence may be granted, are to report their actual departure from their stations, as well as their return thereto, to the Governor-General in Council, and the Courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. IV, 1796, sec. iv.

PRESERVATION OF RECORDS OF CIVIL AND CRIMINAL COURTS.

114. Two native keepers of the records shall be appointed to keep the Dewanny Adawlut and Foujdarry records in each Zillah and City Court, and in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XVIII, 1793, sec. ii.

115. The offices of keepers of the records are declared not to be hereditary.—Reg. XVIII, 1793, sec. iii.

116. The keepers of the records are to keep a register, in such languages as may be directed, of all the Dewanny and Foujdarry proceedings, documents, and other records belonging to the courts to which they may respectively be attached, in a book, each leaf of which shall be attested by the official signature of the judges and magistrates of the zillahs and cities, and the registers to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and the Nizamut Adawlut, and on the last leaf of which they shall specify in their own handwriting, the number of pages contained in the book.—Reg. XVIII, 1793, sec. iv.

117. The keepers of the records are to endorse upon the back of every paper or document which they may enter in the register, the number of the page in which it may be registered, and the endorsement is to be attested with the official signature of both or either of them.—Reg. XVIII, 1793, sec. v.

118. It shall be the duty of the keepers of the records to see that the records of the court are not destroyed by insects, damp, or otherwise, and that they are not removed without the orders of the court.—Reg. XVIII. 1793, sec. vi.

119. If any records entered in the register shall be destroyed in consequence of the neglect or any omission of the keepers of the records, or if any such records shall not be forthcoming, and they shall not be able to give a satisfactory account of them, they shall be liable to dismission from their offices.—Reg. XVIII, 1793, sec. vii.

120. The keepers of the records are to be careful to attend to any rules or orders respecting the duties of their office, that may be prescribed to them by any Regulation, and also to any directions that may be given to them by the court to which they may be attached, or the register thereof, for the better keeping, preserving, or registering the records.—Reg. XVIII, 1793, sec. viii.

121. The civil courts established in the several zillahs and cities are to keep a book in which the daily proceedings in each cause, and every order or act of the court are to be minuted in such language as may be directed, and attested with the signature of the judge. The plaint, answer, reply, and rejoinder of the parties, and every deposition, exhibit, and paper whatever, read and filed in each cause, is to be minuted and referred to in this book, by marks or numbers, corresponding to marks or numbers to be endorsed on each document when it may be read in the cause.—Reg. XVIII, 1793, sec. ix.

122. The judges of the civil and criminal courts are enjoined to be careful that the registers and books of proceedings, prescribed in the foregoing rules, are duly kept as therein directed, and that due attention be paid to the rules for preserving the original records of their respective courts.—Reg. V, 1798, sec. xvi.

USE OF THE PERSIAN LANGUAGE.

123. It shall be lawful for the Governor-General of India in Council, by an order in council, to dispense, either generally, or within such local limits as may to him seem meet, with any provision of any Regulation of the Bengal code which enjoins the use of the Persian language in any judicial proceeding, or in any proceeding relating to the revenue, and to prescribe the language and character to be used in such proceedings.—Act XXIX, 1837, sec. i.

124. It shall be lawful for the said Governor-General of India in Council, by an order in council, to delegate all or any of the powers given to him by this Act, to any subordinate authority, under such restrictions as may to the said Governor-General of India in Council seem meet.—Act XXIX, 1837, sec. ii.

DUTIES OF MINISTERIAL OFFICERS OF THE CIVIL AND CRIMINAL COURTS.

125. The judges of the civil and criminal courts are empowered to assign to all ministerial officers attached to their several courts, the particular duties or business to be performed by them respectively.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. v.

PUBLIC OFFICERS.

APPOINTMENT, REMOVAL, AND PROCEDURE FOR MALVERSATION.

NOTE.—The subject of the appointment and removal of ministerial officers is involved in much perplexity, as Reg. V, 1804, and Reg. VIII, 1809, have not been repealed, though the effect of subsequent enactments and the abolition of the Provincial Courts of Appeal and Circuit, have wrought such important changes in their operation that it is extremely difficult to show what portions of either of those Regulations are still in force.

Reg. V, 1804, treated conjointly of the native public officers of the Judicial and the Revenue Departments. It virtually divided those officers into three classes—the first consisting of those whom it termed "Head Ministerial Officers," who were to be appointed and removed only under the authority of Government and to this class were added the law officers and kazis of towns; the second, of ministerial officers of lower grade, but receiving more than ten rupees a month, who were to be appointed and removed under the sanction of the Courts of Appeal and Circuit, or the Board of Revenue; the third, the inferior class, receiving less than ten rupees a month.

Reg. VIII, 1809, relieved the Government from the task of examining and approving the proceedings in the appointment and removal of all but the law officers, and it placed in the same category as to appointment and removal the ministerial officers of the Judicial and Revenue Departments, subjecting the proceedings of the Zillah Courts as well as those of the magistrates, to the supervision of the Provincial Court of Appeal and Circuit.

The suppression of the Provincial Courts of Appeal by Regs. V, 1831, and VII, 1832, and of the Courts of Circuit by Reg. VII, 1831, and Act VII, 1835, removed the intermediate authority between the Civil and the Sessions Courts of the Zillahs and the Sudder Courts, and there was no enactment transferring the control before exercised by that intermediate authority to the Sudder Courts. The matter was in truth so much one of merely official regulation, that it could not but be inconvenient that the details should be regulated by legislative enactment.

It appears that under the circumstances above stated, the Zillah judges have been declared by the controlling authority of the Sudder Court competent to remove the native ministerial officers and vakeels, without reporting and obtaining the previous sanction of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. (See Circular Orders of the Calcutta and Western Courts, March 2, 1832.—CIVIL GUIDE, paragraph 112, edition 1848.) It would seem to follow by an almost necessary consequence that the Sessions' judge must be vested with an equally independent authority in respect of his native ministerial officers.

In respect of the appointment and removal of the ministerial and police officers subordinate to the magistrates, it is declared by sec. iv, Act XXIV, 1837, that the Superintendent of Police shall exercise all the powers which were vested in the Commissioners of Circuit, that is, the powers formerly exercised by the Courts of Circuit. As the Sessions judges now take the place of the Commissioners of Circuit under the operation of Act VII, 1835, it would seem to follow that the Superintendent of Police would exercise his authority in this branch of his duty rather according to the spirit than under the actual letter of the rules of Regs. V, 1804, and VIII, 1809.

The confirmation of appointments and resignations of the officers of the Revenue Department appears still to be vested in the Revenue Boards.

Viewing the effects of the changes above referred to, it has seemed to be desirable to separate the rules which relate respectively to the Law Officers, the Ministerial Officers in the Judicial Department, and those in the Revenue Department.

LAW OFFICERS.

126. The Cauzy-ool-Coozat and the law officers of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut are to be appointed by the Governor-General in Council, and shall not be removable but for incapacity or misconduct in the performance of their public duty or for any act of flagrant profligacy in their private conduct proved to his satisfaction.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. ii; Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iii; Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. ii; Reg. XI, 1826, sec. iii.

127. The law officers of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall be the law officers of the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec, iv.

128. The Governor-General in Council shall appoint as many law officers to the Courts of Nizamut Adawlut as the state of business in each may appear to render requisite.—Reg. VI, 1832, sec. vi.

129. The law offices in the several Courts are to be conferred on persons well versed in the laws and of unblemished character.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. iii.

130. Any person may be appointed to be a Hindoo or Mahomedan law officer in any of the courts of justice under the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, who shall have successfully passed through such an examination as the Government of the said presidency shall from time to time prescribe.—Act V, 1845.

131. The law officers of the Zillah and City Courts are to be appointed by the Governor-General in Council. The Sudder Court is empowered to confirm their removal and resignation. —Reg. XII, 1793, sec. ii; Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iv, cl. 1; Reg. XI, 1826, sec. iv, cl. 1.

132. Whenever a law officer of any of the courts of justice shall be desirous of resigning his office, the judge shall receive such resignation in open court and record the same.—Reg. V, 1804, secs. v and x.

133. Whenever a Zillah or City Court may see cause for the removal of a law officer, on the ground of any misconduct or neglect of duty, experienced incapacity, or other disqualification, such court shall report the circumstances of the case, with its opinion on the subject, to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, who will pass such order on the report so made as may appear to be proper, or will call for any additional information, or direct any further inquiry, which the nature and circumstances of the case may require.—Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iv, cl. 2.

134. In cases in which a law officer of any of the courts of justice may have been guilty of such gross misconduct as to require his immediate suspension from the exercise of his functions, the judge is empowered to suspend him until his case shall have been finally disposed of.—Reg. V, 1804, secs. vi, x, and xvii.

135. Whenever a law officer may be removed from his station, or whenever a vacancy may occur in the office of law officer in any of the courts of justice from death, resignation, or otherwise, the judge or judges of the court in which the removal or vacancy may have occurred, shall nominate for the approbation of the Governor-General in Council, a person duly qualified to succeed to the station so vacated, and shall at the same time report fully the past employments, character, qualifications and age of the proposed successor. The Governor-General in Council, on consideration of such report, or after calling for any further information that may appear necessary, will either confirm the person so nominated to fill the vacated office, or will issue orders for his examination, or appoint any other person whom he may deem better qualified for the office.—Reg. XI, 1826, sec. iv, cl. 2.

Law Officers Occasionally Appointed.

136. The Governor-General in Council, or the Nizamut Adawlut, may specially appoint any competent individual of the Mahomedan persuasion to officiate as law officer in any Sessions Court whenever such arrangement may appear desirable or necessary from the absence of the proper law officer, or other cause, though such individual be not at the time of such special nomination regularly attached to any court as law officer, nor holding any public office under Government, and in all such cases the trials held shall be in every respect and to all intents and purposes as good and valid as they would have been had the futwas therein been delivered by the Mahomedan law officer attached to the Sessions Court in which such trials were held.—Reg. IV, 1830, sec. ii.

137. Whenever, from the absence of the proper law officer, or other emergency, the services of an officiating law officer may be necessary to carry on the duties of the sessions, and there may not be sufficient time, without inconvenience, to make a previous reference on the subject to the Nizamut Adawlut, it shall be competent to the Session judge to employ a duly qualified individual, of the Mahomedan persuasion, to officiate as law officer; a special report of such temporary arrangement being immediately made in each instance for the information and orders of the Nizamut Adawlut.—Reg. IV, 1830, sec. iii.

Cauzies of Towns.

138. The cauzies stationed in the cities, towns, or pergunnahs in the three provinces, shall not be removable from their offices, except for incapacity or misconduct in the discharge of their public duty, or acts of profligacy in their private conduct.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. iii, cl. 1.

139. The rule contained in the preceding paragraph is not to be construed to preclude the Governor-General in Council from abolishing the office of cauzy at any place where, from the number of cauzies stationed in the district or other cause, the continuance of such an officer may appear to him unnecessary.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. iii, ch 2.

140. When the office of cauzy in any pergunnah, city, or town, shall become vacant, the judge of the Zillah or City Court, within whose jurisdiction the place may be situated, is immediately to report the vacancy to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and recommend such person as may appear to him best qualified for the succession from his character and legal knowledge. The name of the person so recommended is to be communicated to the head cauzy, who, if he shall deem him unqualified for the office, either from want of legal knowledge or the badness of his private character, is to report the same in writing to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. If there shall appear to the head cauzy no objection to the appointment of the person who may be so recommended, he is to report accordingly to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut. The person who may be appointed to the office shall be furnished with a sunnud of appointment, under the official seal of the head cauzy, in which the date of his appointment is to be specified.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec iv; and Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iv, cl. 2.

141. The office of cauzy is declared not to be hereditary.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. v.

142. The Zillah and City Courts are to report to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut every instance in which it may appear to them that the cauzy of any pergunnah, city, or town, within their respective jurisdictions, is incapable, or in which it may be proved to their satisfaction that he has been guilty of negligence or misconduct in the discharge of his public duty, or of acts of profligacy in his private conduct.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. vi, cl. 1; and Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iv, cl. 2.

143. It shall likewise be the duty of the head cauzy to report to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, in writing, every instance in which it may appear to him that the cauzy of any city, town, or pergunnah is incapable, or in which such cauzy may have been guilty of misconduct in the discharge of his public duty, or acts of profligacy in his private conduct.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. vi, cl. 2; Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iv. cl. 2.

144. The Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut is empowered to confirm the removal and resignation of the cauzies of cities, towns, and pergunnahs, on receiving the reports prescribed.—Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iv, cl. 1.

145. Whenever a Zillah or City Court may see cause for the removal of a cauzy, on the ground of any misconduct or neglect of duty, experienced incapacity, or other disqualification, such court shall report the circumstances of the case to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, who will pass such order on the report so made as may appear to be proper, or will call for any additional information, or direct any further inquiry, which the nature and circumstances of the case may require.—Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iv, cl. 2.

NATIVE MINISTERIAL OFFICERS—JUDICIAL.

146. The Sudder Courts and the Zillah Courts shall exercise the power of appointing, removing and accepting the resignation of the principal native ministerial officers acting under them respectively, as well as any other native officers on their respective establishments.—Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iii.

147. Whenever the head ministerial native officers of the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut, of the Zillah and City Courts, of the Courts of Sessions in the several zillahs and cities, including the keepers of the records, or any other native officers of the Courts of Judicature, whose salary or other allowance may amount to ten rupees per mensem or upwards, shall be desirous of resigning their offices, the above authorities are required to receive and record such resignations in their public cutcherries; and whenever the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut shall receive reports from the Zillah and City Courts, inclosing the resignations of their native ministerial officers, they will pass such decision thereupon as they shall see fit.—Reg. V, 1804, secs. v, viii, x, xv, and xvi; Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iii.

148. Whenever the authorities specified in the preceding paragraph may see cause for the removal of their native ministerial officers, of the description of those above mentioned, on the ground of misconduct, incapacity, or otherwise, they shall communicate to such officer the grounds upon which they consider him undeserving of continuance in his station, and call upon him to state what he may have to offer in his defence.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. vi; Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iii.

149. It is declared that an order of Government shall be sufficient without a new Regulation, to extend the above provisions to any offices now subsisting, or which may be hereafter instituted in the judicial department.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xix.

150. All ministerial officers of the courts of moonsiffs, sudder ameens, and principal sudder ameens, shall be nominated and appointed by those courts respectively, subject to the general control of the zillah and city judges and Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, within whose jurisdiction the said courts may be situated.—Act XXV, 1837, sec. xii.

151. The nazirs of the several Courts of Judicature, civil and criminal, shall be allowed, as heretofore, to appoint their own naibs, and the mirdahs and peons, or any similar descriptions of public servants employed under their immediate direction and control, and to fill up all vacancies which, from time to time, may occur in such appointments, subject to the approbation of the judges and magistrates superintending the courts to which they are attached. They are to enter into a penal obligation in such sum as may be required by the courts to which they are attached, for the good behaviour of the naibs, mirdahs, and peons whom they may appoint. They may also as hitherto, remove the persons so appointed by them, provided they can state sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the judge and magistrate, but not without his previous knowledge and sanction.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. ii; Reg. V, 1804, sec. xii.

152. Nothing in Regulation VIII, 1809, shall be construed to preclude the Governor-General in Council, or the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut, from ordering the removal of a native officer, upon just and sufficient ground appearing for such order. Nor is any part of that Regulation meant to prevent the exercise of the general authority vested in the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut by the Regulations in force.—Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. xiii.

NOTE.—For rules relating to the native ministerial officers of magistrates, see "POLICE," paragraph 32 and following.

NATIVE MINISTERIAL OFFICERS—REVENUE.

153. The Boards of Revenue, Customs, Salt, and Opium, shall exercise the power of appointing, removing, and accepting the resignation of all native officers on their respective establishments. —Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. iii, and sec. x, cl. 3.

154. Whenever the principal native officers employed under the secretaries to the Board of Revenue, or the head native officers of the collectors of the land revenue, (including the keepers of revenue records, the tehseeldars for the collection of the revenue in Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, and the khezanchees) and of the customs, or of the agents for the provision of salt and opium, or any other native revenue officers receiving an allowance of ten rupees per mensem, or upwards, shall be desirous of resigning their offices, the above mentioned authorities are required to receive and record such resignations in their public cutcherries; and whenever the Boards of Revenue, Customs, Salt, or Opium may receive any reports from the collector, or agents under their authority respectively, they will pass such decision thereupon as they shall see fit.—Reg. V, 1804, secs. v, viii, x, xv, xvi, and xix; Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. x, cl. 3.

155. Whenever the authorities above mentioned may see cause for the removal of any of their native officers of the description mentioned in the preceding paragraph on the ground of misconduct, incapacity, or otherwise, they shall communicate to such officer the grounds upon which they consider him undeserving of continuance in his station, and call upon him to state what he may have to offer in his defence, and they shall also report the circumstances of the case, with their opinion on the subject, to the Board of Revenue, Customs, Salt, or Opium, as the case may be, who will pass such orders thereupon as they shall see fit, or will call for any additional information, or direct any further inquiry, which the nature and circumstances of the case may require.—Reg. V, 1804, secs. vi and xvi; Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. x, cl. 4.

156. In cases wherein any of the native officers above described may have been guilty of gross misconduct, such as to require his immediate suspension from the exercise of the functions of his station, the officer under whose authority he may be employed is empowered to suspend him, and if requisite for the public business, to nominate another person duly qualified to act in his place, until the orders of the Superior Board can be obtained upon the case. But such suspensions and nominations are to be reported, with the least possible delay, for the information and orders of the Board of Revenue or Customs, according to the proper department.—Reg. V, 1804, secs. vi and xvii.

157. The tehseeldars in the province of Benares, and the provinces ceded by the Nawaub Vizier being responsibly employed in the collection of the public revenue, they shall not be liable to suspension under the preceding paragraph, except by order of the Board of Revenue, or the collectors; and the nomination of persons to fill vacancies in the office of tehseeldar in the above provinces, shall be made by the collectors to the Board of Revenue.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. x.

158. Whenever an actual vacancy shall occur in the station of any of the native officers described above, from death or other cause, and whenever any vacancy shall occur by the resignation or removal of any such officer under the sanction or orders of the Board of Revenue, the authorities before specified, in whose immediate department such removal or vacancy may occur, shall nominate, for the approbation of the Board of Revenue, a person duly qualified to succeed to the station so vacated; and shall, at the same time, report fully any information obtained of the past employments, character, and qualifications of the proposed successor. The Board of Revenue, on the receipt of such reports, or after calling for any further information that may appear necessary, are authorized to confirm the person nominated to fill the vacant office, or to direct that a further nomination be made for their approval.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xviii.

159. It is declared that an order of Government shall be sufficient authority, without a new Regulation, to extend the above provisions to any offices now subsisting, or which may be hereafter instituted in the Revenue department, though not within the exact denomination of the offices described in this Regulation.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xix.

160. The collectors of land revenue and customs, and the agents for the provision of salt and opium, are authorized to administer an oath or affirmation to any witnesses whom it may be necessary to examine respecting the conduct of any native officer employed under them respectively. Provided that, if any witness shall refuse to take the oath or affirmation required from him, he shall be sent to the judge of the Zillah or City Court to be confined as prescribed by the Regulations in similar cases.—Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. x, c. 5.

161. The naib nazirs, the mirdahs, peons, jemadars, and burkundauzes, or other similar descriptions of public servants employed in the revenue department, or in the departments of salt and opium, shall be allowed to fill up all vacancies which may occur in the offices of the public servants employed under their immediate direction and control, and they may also remove the persons so appointed by them.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xiii.

NOTE.—Act XII, 1850, prescribes security to be taken from all "public accountants;" and Act XIII of that year provides for the punishment of breaches of trust by public servants. Regulation II, 1813, prohibits the use of public money by native officers.—Those enactments must be consulted in carrying out the intentions of the following paragraphs.—See paragraphs 169 to 177, and 197 to 213.

162. The collectors are to take security for the personal appearance of the tehseeldars, sezawuls, ameens, serishtadars, moonshees, mohurrers, and all native officers entrusted with the receipt or payment of public money or the charge of public accounts, who now are, or may be hereafter employed under them, in their capacity of collectors of the revenue. The surety is to bind himself to produce the officer for whom he may become security before the collector, whenever his attendance may be required, until he shall be discharged from the public service, and shall have received a writing from the collector, signifying that he has no demand upon him on the part of Government, either for money, papers, or accounts belonging to the public, that may have been committed to him or come into his possession in his official capacity; and further, that in the event of his not producing such officer, he will be responsible for all demands that the collector may have upon him for public money, papers, or accounts, and be liable to be proceeded against in every respect in the same manner as the officer himself, had he been forthcoming. When any such officer is removed or resigns, the collector is to grant him an acquittal to the above effect, after he shall have delivered up all public papers, accounts or money that may have been committed to his charge. The collectors may require such officers to give new sureties, in cases in which they may have ground to believe that the former sureties, whether admitted by themselves or their predecessors, are not responsible.—Reg. III, 1794, sec. xv.

163. If a collector shall have a claim, on the part of Government, on any of the native officers described in the preceding paragraph, for a balance of accounts, or money or papers belonging to Government, he is to require the payment of the money, or the delivery of the papers, by a writing under his official seal and signature, and the signature of his head native officer of his dufter for the time being, specifying the amount of the money, or the particular papers required, and the date and place that may be fixed for the delivery of the money or papers. If the officer shall not discharge the money or deliver up the papers by the limited time, the collector is empowered to apprehend him, and convey him to the gaol of the Dewanny Adawlut of the zillah, the judge of which court shall detain him in confinement until the sum demanded of him shall be discharged, or he shall have delivered up the papers. The collector is authorized, likewise, to attach such part of the real or personal property belonging to the officer, as may be sufficient to make good the sum which may be due from him. If his property shall be in another zillah, he is to apply to the collector of that zillah, who shall cause it to be attached. If the property shall be within the cities of Patna or Moorshedabad, the collector is to apply to the judge of the zillah, through the vakeel of Government, to make application to the judge of such city to attach and deliver it into the charge of the nearest collector. The Board of Revenue are empowered to order the property to be sold, under the rules by which the lands of proprietors are directed to be disposed of for the discharge of arrears of revenue. In the event of the death of any such officer, the surety is to be exonerated from all responsibility, and the collector is to proceed against his heirs, by a regular suit in the court to which they may be amenable, for any claims which Government may have upon the deceased. The suit is to be carried on by the vakeel of Government, and at the public expense, and the rules in Regulation XIV, 1793, regarding suits so carried on by the collectors, are to be held applicable to it.—Reg. III, 1794, sec. xvi.

164. If any such native officer, who may have retained public money or papers in his possession shall abscond or not be forthcoming, the collector may proceed against the surety upon his engagement, or apprehend the offender and commit him to prison, if he be within the limits of the zillah; or if he shall have taken refuge in any other zillah, or in either of the cities of Patna or Moorshedabad, and the collector shall deem it necessary to require his personal attendance that he may proceed against him instead of his surety, the collector is to apply to the judge of the zillah to request the judge within whose jurisdiction the officer may be or reside, to cause him to be apprehended. The judge to whom the application may be made is to convey the officer in safe custody to the gaol of the zillah from which he may have absconded.—Reg. III, 1794, sec. xvii.

165. If a collector shall have occasion to require any such officer to attend to adjust his accounts, that the sum due from him may be ascertained, and he shall not attend upon being required by a writing to that effect, under the official seal and signature of the collector, to be fixed up in his cutcherry, and at the place in the zillah at which the officer may have last resided, the collector is empowered to prepare the most accurate statement that he may be able of the money or papers in the possession of such officer, and proceed against the surety, upon his engagement, for the balance or papers, in the same manner as if the accounts had been adjusted, and the list of the papers prepared in the presence of the officer; or he may cause the officer to be apprehended by his own authority, under paragraph 163, if he be within the limits of the zillah, or if he shall have taken up his abode, in any other zillah, or in either of the cities of Patna or Moorshedabad, by application to the judge, in the manner directed in paragraph 164. If it should afterwards appear, upon inquiry before the court, that no part, or a portion only, of the sum demanded was due from him, or that the papers required were not in his possession, the collector shall not be liable to pay any damages for having confined him, and all costs that may be incurred in the suit or inquiry shall be paid by the officer.—Reg. III, 1794, sec. xviii.

166. If any such officer or his surety shall be confined on account of a claim for public money, and previous to the sale of his property, or supposing the collector not to have been able to get possession of any property belonging to him at any time subsequent to his confinement, shall deny the justness of the whole or any part of the demand made upon him by the collector and find some responsible person who will become security that he will institute a suit in the court in fifteen days against the collector to try the demand, and to pay the sum that may be awarded against him, with costs and interest at the rate of twelve per cent. from the date on which the sum may be demanded of him to the date of the decree, the court is to discharge the officer or surety, and proceed to the trial of the suit; and if any property belonging to the officer or surety shall have been ordered to be sold, the sale shall be countermanded, and the property restored to the owner.—Reg. III, 1794, sec. xix.

167. If any such native officer or his surety shall be committed to custody by the collector, and shall not obtain his release in the mode specified in the preceding paragraph, he shall nevertheless be at liberty, whilst in confinement, to sue the collector by whom he may have been confined, should he deem the demand upon him unjust.—Reg. III, 1794, sec. xx.

168. The collectors are to appoint one of the authorized vakeels of the courts to defend any suits which may be instituted against them by any such native officer, or their heirs or sureties, under this Regulation; and all the rules in Regulation XIV, 1793, regarding suits instituted against the collector for sums demanded or received by him on behalf of Government, and which are not repealed by this Regulation, are to be considered applicable to such suits.—Reg. III, 1794, sec. xxi.

169. Khazanchies, tehseeldars, and other native officers intrusted with the charge of public money, are hereby strictly prohibited from making use of such money for their own advantage or that of any other individual.—Reg. II, 1813, sec. ii.

170. Any person infringing the rule contained in the foregoing paragraph shall be deemed to have been guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished, on conviction thereof, before a Sessions Court, at the discretion of the said court, under the authority vested in the Sessions Courts by clause 7, sec. ii, Regulation LIII, 1803, in cases liable to discretionary punishment: provided, nevertheless, that no person convicted of the offence specified in the preceding paragraph shall be sentenced by a Sessions judge, to the punishment of stripes or to hard labour. If in any instance imprisonment for the term of seven years shall appear to the Sessions judge to be an inadequate punishment for the offence, he shall transmit the trial, with his sentiments thereupon, to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, for the final sentence of that court.—Reg. II, 1813, sec. iii.

171. It shall be the duty of the Board of Revenue to submit to Government a special report respecting all convictions and sentences which may take place under the provisions of the present Regulation, in order that the Governor-General in Council may have an opportunity of considering whether the guilty persons should not also be declared incapable of again serving Government in any public capacity.—Reg. II, 1813, sec. iv.

Public Accountants.

172. Every public accountant shall give security for the due discharge of the trusts of his office, and for the due account of all moneys which shall come into his possession or control by reason of his office.—Act XII, 1850, sec. i.

173. In default of any Act having special reference to the office of any public accountant, the security given shall be of such amount and kind, real or personal, or both, and with such sureties (regard being had to the nature of the office), as shall be required by any rules made or to be made from time to time by the authority by which each public accountant is appointed to his office, subject to the approval of the Governor or Governor in Council of the presidency or place.—Act XII, 1850, sec. ii.

174. Every person is a public accountant within the meaning of this Act, who, by reason of any office held by him in the service of the East India Company, is intrusted with the receipt, custody, or control of any moneys or securities for money, or the management of any lands belonging to the East India Company, or as official assignee or trustee, or as surberakar, or in any other official capacity, with the receipt, custody, or control of any moneys or securities for money, or the management of any lands belonging to any other person or persons.—Act XII, 1850, sec. iii.

175. The person or persons at the head of the office to which any public accountant belongs, may proceed against any such public accountant and his sureties for any loss or defalcation in his accounts, as if the amount thereof were an arrear of land revenue due to Government.—Act XII, 1850, sec. iv.

176. All Regulations and Acts now or hereafter to be in force for the recovery of arrears of land revenue due to Government, and for recovery of damages by any person wrongfully proceeded against for any such arrear, shall apply, with such changes in the forms of procedure as are necessary to make them applicable to the case, to the proceedings against and by such public accountant.—Act XII, 1850, sec. v.

177. All sales of estates, summarily sold before the passing of this Act, in satisfaction of the security bonds of any public accountants within the meaning of this Act, shall be deemed as good and valid, and be as liable to be reviewed and annulled as if such estates had been sold under authority of this Act, and no further or otherwise.—Act XII, 1850, sec. vi.

NOTE.—For Canongoes and Putwarries see "LAND REVENUE."

RULES APPLICABLE TO ALL NATIVE OFFICERS OF GOVERNMENT.

178. In cases of gross misconduct, neglect, or incapacity, such as to require the immediate suspension of any native public officer of the Government, the officer under whose authority such native officer may be placed is authorized to order the same. He may also, in addition to the general powers vested in him by the Regulations for the punishment of any specific crime or misdemeanor, fine any such native officer under his authority for neglect of duty, in a sum equal to one month's salary, and cause the same to be levied by a stoppage of the fixed allowance payable to such officer. And it is hereby declared, that native officers of every denomination, in the service of Government, will be liable to removal from the public trusts committed to them without proof of any specific act of criminality, whenever there may be sufficient reason to believe them incapable or neglectful of their prescribed duties, or in any respect unworthy of public confidence.—Reg. VIII, 1809, sec. v, cl. 5, and sec. ix.

179. Any future removals and appointments of the native officers described in this Regulation, and receiving an allowance of ten rupees per mensem or upwards, which may be sanctioned by the Governor-General in Council, or by the Courts of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut, or the Board of Revenue, shall be communicated to the civil auditor, for the purpose of making the requisite alteration in the book of civil establishments.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xxi.

180. The several authorities and officers referred to in this Regulation, who may hereafter have accounts to render to the accountant-general, or to the accountants in the judicial and revenue departments, or to the civil auditor, which by the rules and orders now in force, or by such as may be passed in future, are or may be required to be accompanied with detailed statements of the establishments of native officers, shall uniformly insert in such statements the names of the native officers actually employed, and receiving an allowance of ten rupees per mensem, or upwards, as sanctioned by the Governor-General in Council or by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Nizamut Adawlut or by the Board of Revenue, under the provisions contained in this Regulation.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xxii.

181. The several officers of Government in the judicial and revenue departments, and in the department of salt, opium, and customs, who are already restricted by their official oaths, or by the known declarations and orders of Government, from deriving any personal advantage whatever from their fixed establishments of native officers, are further hereby positively prohibited from making any alteration whatever in the distribution of the salaries of such officers, or in the number and designation of the several descriptions of native officers, which now compose, or may hereafter compose, their authorized establishments, without the express sanction of the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xxiii.

182. Nothing in the Regulations shall be construed to establish a claim of inheritance to any public office whatever, or to prevent the abolition of any such office by order of the Governor-General in Council, whenever he may judge it unnecessary to continue the same for the public service.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xxiv.

Officers receiving less than ten rupees per mensem.

183. Any inferior native officers forming part of the fixed establishments of the Zillah and City Courts, civil or criminal, or of any officers acting under the authority of the zillah and city judges and magistrates, or of any other court or office in the judicial department; or forming part of the fixed establishments of the collectors of the revenue, of any officers acting under the authority of the collectors of the revenue, or of any other office in the revenue department; or forming part of the fixed establishments of the agents for the provision of salt and opium, or the collectors of the customs, and of any officers acting under the authority of these officers, or of any other office in the departments of salt, opium, and customs (provided that the salary, or other allowance of the several inferior officers herein referred to shall not amount to the sum of ten rupees per mensem), may be appointed whenever vacancies occur in the stations of such officers; and on proof of misconduct, or other sufficient cause, may be removed, without any reference to any superior authority, by the public officer on whose establishment they are entertained. The whole of the officers herein described, however, are directed to record upon their proceedings the grounds upon which any native officers may be removed by them, and are required to exercise the power vested in them, in the appointment and removal of the inferior officers acting under them respectively, with due regard to the public service and the rights of individuals, by selecting proper persons to fill all vacancies in the situations of such officers, and by continuing in office the persons appointed, whether by themselves or their predecessors, whilst they discharge the duties assigned to them with diligence and integrity.—Reg. V, 1804, sec. xiv.

EUROPEAN OFFICERS.

184. The judges and magistrates of the Zillah and City Courts, and the Sessions Courts, and their assistants, or other officers being covenanted servants of the Company, and the collectors of the revenue and their assistants, are prohibited lending money, directly or indirectly, to any proprietor or farmer of land, or dependent talookdar, or under-farmer or ryot, or their sureties, and all such loans as have been made in opposition to the repeated prohibitions of Government, or which may be hereafter made, are declared not recoverable in any court of judicature.—Reg. XXXVIII, 1793, sec. ii.

185. No person being a creditor of any zillah or city judge or magistrate, of any collector of the land revenue or customs, or of any agent for the provision of salt or opium, shall be appointed to any official situation on the establishment of the person whose creditor he may be. It shall consequently be the duty of the Boards of Revenue of the Zillah and the Sudder Courts, on receiving the reports prescribed by the provisions of Regulation VIII, 1809, to satisfy themselves fully that the natives recommended to fill any vacancies on the establishment of the European officers acting under their control, respectively, are not the creditors of the latter. With this view, it will be the duty of the said boards and courts to make full inquiries on the subject, not only from the officers from whom such reports may be received, but through such other channels as may be necessary to guard against any infringement or evasion of the provisions of the present Regulation.—Reg. XXI, 1814, sec. ii.

186. The rules contained in the preceding paragraph for precluding the creditors of the public officers above mentioned from being employed on their public establishments shall be considered equally applicable to the relatives and dependents of such creditors: the former as well as the latter shall consequently be equally precluded from being employed on the establishments of any of the public officers above described.—Reg. XXI, 1814, sec. iii.

187. Any native causing himself to be appointed to any office in opposition to the provisions of the two preceding paragraphs, or in any way knowingly accepting office in contravention thereof, shall forfeit to Government a sum equal to ten times the yearly salary or allowances attached to the situation to which he may be appointed.—Reg. VII, 1823, sec. vii.

188. All covenanted civil servants, in whatever department of the public service they may be employed, are prohibited, under pain of dismissal from office, from borrowing money from, or in any way incurring debt to any native officer under their authority, or under the authority of any of their subordinate functionaries, or from or to the known surety, agent, relation, connection, or dependent of any such native officer, or from or to any person of whom such native officer may be known to be or to have been the servant, agent, surety, or dependent.—Reg. VII, 1823, sec. ii, cl. 1.

189. In like manner and under the like penalty, all officers of Government, being covenanted civil servants, are prohibited from borrowing money from, or in any way incurring debt to any manager, guardian, executor, ameen, sezawul, gomashtah, farmer, motuwullee, or other person, who may in any way be officially accountable to them, or from or to the known surety, agent, relation, connection, or dependent of such person.—Reg. VII, 1823, sec. ii, cl. 2.

190. All judges of Zillah and City Courts, all magistrates, joint magistrates, and assistants to magistrates, all collectors and deputy collectors of the land revenue, all assistants to such collectors or other officers exercising the powers of such collector, are prohibited, under pain of dismissal from office, from borrowing money from, or in any way incurring debt to any zemindar, talookdar, ryot, or other person possessing real property, or residing in, or having a commercial establishment within the city, district, or division to which their authority may extend.—Reg. VII, 1823, sec. iii.

191. All persons are prohibited from lending money, or otherwise becoming in any way creditors to any officer of Government, being a covenanted civil servant, in contravention of the above rules: and any person lending money, or in any way becoming creditor to any such public officer in breach of this prohibition, shall forfeit to Government a sum equal to the amount for which he shall have so illegally become creditor.—Reg. VII, 1823, sec. iv.

192. If any covenanted servant, who may be appointed to any office, shall at the time of such appointment be indebted to any person with whom it would be illegal for him to contract a loan while holding such office, it shall be incumbent on such servant, before entering on the duties of the office, to make known the circumstance to the Governor-General in Council; and failing to do so, he shall be subject to the same penalty as if the debt had been contracted subsequently to his being appointed to the said office.—Reg. VII, 1823, sec. vi.

193. Suits for the recovery of penalties incurred under this Regulation shall and may be instituted under the special instructions of the Governor-General in Council, and shall be conducted by such other officer as Government may nominate for that purpose; such suits shall be instituted in the Zillah Court of the division within which the transaction may have taken place, or the lender may reside, or may possess real or personal property. An appeal shall lie from judgments passed in such cases, in like manner as from other judgments passed in original suits, by the Zillah Courts; and the judgments shall be enforced under the provisions of the Regulations for the execution of other decrees of the civil courts.—Reg. VII, 1823, sec. viii.

194. The whole of the officers of Government employed in the judicial department, civil or criminal, are prohibited, under penalty of dismissal from office, from employing, directly or indirectly, their private servants, of whatever description, or any other persons, not being public officers duly appointed or nominated in conformity with the rules in force relative to such appointments, in the discharge of any part of their public duties, or in the execution of any public duty in which the person so employed may not have been duly authorized to act.—Reg. VIII, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 1.

195. The whole of the judicial officers are in like manner, and under the same penalty, prohibited from employing any of the public officers on their establishments, not being peons, or other inferior servants, in personal attendance upon a judge, magistrate, or other officer of Government in the judicial department, in the performance of any part of their private business, or in the execution of any private trust relating to their personal concerns.—Reg. VIII, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 2.

196. The Sudder Court is empowered to suspend from office any judge of a City or Zillah, or Sessions Court, or any zillah or city magistrate for wilful disobedience, or neglect of any process, rule, or order of the court, or for a false return thereto, as well as in cases of disobedience, or neglect, or false return by a zillah or city magistrate to any process, rule, or order, of a Sessions judge, and in the last-mentioned cases the Sessions judges are directed to report immediately such disobedience, neglect, or false return to the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut. Such suspension is to be notified within ten days, with all papers and proceedings relating thereto, for the determination of the Governor-General in Council. The Sudder Court is also authorized on receiving reports as prescribed in the Regulations, of neglect or misconduct (other than corruption or extortion, for which special rules are established) of any ministerial officers of the courts or magistrates who may be covenanted servants of the Company, to make such inquiry as may be judged necessary in explanation of the circumstances stated, and if the case appear to require the notice of the Governor-General in Council, to report the same to him, with a copy of all proceedings and papers received on the subject of it, for such orders as may be judged proper. The Sudder Court is directed to report to the Governor-General in Council all instances of wilful neglect of duty or aggravated misconduct by a covenanted servant of the Company employed in any of the civil or criminal courts, whether in a judicial or ministerial capacity; and whether such neglect or misconduct may have been reported to the Sudder Court, Zillah or City Court, or by a Sessions judge or magistrate, or may otherwise appear from the proceedings and papers before the court. But if the case should appear to the court to involve an error of judgment only, or a slight default for which an admonition from the court may be deemed a sufficient correction, the Sudder Court in the former case, is authorized to notice the error for the information and guidance of the party who may have committed it, or in the latter case, to advise him of his default and to admonish him accordingly.—Reg. VI, 1793, sec. xiii; Reg. II, 1801, secs. vii and xiv.

BREACHES OF TRUST.

197. Every person employed in the public service of Her Majesty, or of the East India Company, and intrusted by reason of such employment with the receipt, custody, or control of any chattel, money, or valuable security, who shall embezzle the same, or any part thereof, or in any manner fraudulently apply, use, or dispose of the same, or any part thereof, for any purpose other than a purpose to which the same is applicable under the trust reposed in him, shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. i.

198. All official trustees, assignees, and receivers of money, by virtue of their several offices or appointments, all justices of the peace, coroners, and other persons receiving by virtue of their offices or appointments any fines, forfeitures, penalties, or other monies, on behalf of Her Majesty or of the East India Company, all sheriffs, under sheriffs, bailiffs, officers, and other persons employed to levy money in execution of the judgment or order of any court, or in receiving any taxes or other moneys directed to be levied by any Regulation of the Governor-General in Council or by any Act of the Governor-General of India in Council, and also all subordinate officers and servants employed in the office or service of any of the persons hereinbefore enumerated, and intrusted with money in the course of such employment, are declared to be persons employed in the public service within the meaning of this Act; but this special enumeration of some of the persons included in the general description of persons in the publice service of Her Majesty or the East India Company, shall not be taken to abridge the meaning of that general description.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. ii.

199. The clauses respectively numbered 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, and 104 in an Act of Parliament passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act for improving the administration of Criminal Justice in the East Indies," are repealed, except as to all things done or forborne to be done before the passing of this Act.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. iii.

200. Every clerk or servant who shall steal any chattel, money, or valuable security belonging to, or in the possession or power of his master, shall be punishable in the same manner as persons convicted of felonious stealing under this Act.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. iv.

201. Every clerk or servant, or any person employed for the purpose, or in the capacity of a clerk or servant, who shall, by virtue of such employment, receive or take into his possession any chattel, money, or valuable security, for or in the name or on the account of his master, and who shall fraudulently embezzle the same, or any part thereof, shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same from his master, although such chattel, money, or security was not received into the possession of his master, otherwise than by the actual possession of his clerk, servant, or other person so employed.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. v.

202. Every member and officer of a trading corporation or company, and also every banker, merchant, factor, broker, attorney, or other agent, whether he be commonly so employed, or be employed as an agent in that instance only, and whether he act as such agent gratuitously or otherwise, to whom any chattel, money, or valuable security is intrusted for safe custody, or for any special purpose, and whether with or without any authority to sell, negotiate, pledge, or employ the same, but with an authority limited to some defined purpose as to the application of such money, chattel, or valuable security, or of any part thereof, or of the proceeds or of any part of the proceeds thereof, who shall fraudulently apply, use, or dispose of the same, or any part of the proceeds thereof, for any purpose other than a purpose for which the same was intrusted to him, shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. vi.

203. Every sub-agent, clerk, or servant of any such trading corporation or company, or of any banker, merchant, factor, broker, or other agent as aforesaid, who, knowing the purpose for which such chattel, money, or valuable security was intrusted to the corporation, company, person or persons, by whom he is employed, shall fraudulently apply, use, or dispose of the same, for any purpose other than a purpose for which the same was intrusted to his employer or employers, shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same, though he were not himself immediately employed or intrusted with the disposition thereof by the person entitled thereto.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. vii.

204. Every person possessed, or having the receipt, custody, or control of any chattel, money, or valuable security, in trust for any other person or persons, who shall embezzle the same or any part thereof, or in any manner fraudulently apply, use, or dispose of the same, for his own use or benefit, in breach of the trust reposed in him, shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same. —Act XIII, 1850, sec. viii.

205. Every person convicted of having feloniously stolen any chattel, money, or valuable security under this Act, shall be liable to be transported out of the territories under the Government of the East India Company for life, or to be imprisoned with or without labour for any term not exceeding seven years.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. ix.

206. Every instrument entitling or showing the title of any person to any share or interest in any public stock or fund of any country or state, or in any stock of any corporation or company, or for the transfer of any such share or interest, or for the receipt of any dividend or interest on any such share, or entitling or showing the title to any deposit in any bank, and every warrant, order, or instrument for the payment of any money on any event, certain or contingent, or for the delivery or receipt of any goods or merchandize, on any such event, is a valuable security within the meaning of this Act.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. x.

207. Any offender under this Act may be proceeded against on the same charge for any number of distinct acts of embezzlement or fraudulent application, use, or disposition as aforesaid, committed by him within six calendar months, from the first to the last of such acts; and proof of a gross deficiency in the accounts of any such trustee or public servant shall be evidence of the offence charged until such deficiency is otherwise explained.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. xi.

208. If the offence relates to money or to any bank note, bank post bill, banker's cheque, bill of exchange, promissory note, Government paper, or other like security for the payment of money, it shall be enough in the indictment or charge to allege the embezzlement or fraudulent application, use, or disposition of money, without specifying any particular coin or valuable security; and such allegation shall, so far as regards the kind of property, be sustained, if the offender is proved to have embezzled or fraudulently applied, used, or disposed of any amount of money or any valuable security, though the particular kind of coin or valuable security, of which such amount was composed shall not be proved.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. xii.

209. It shall not be necessary, in any proceeding against any offender under this Act, to declare the person to whom the property embezzled or fraudulently applied or disposed of belongs, otherwise than hereinafter provided, or to give any other description of it than by stating its general character according to the provisions of this Act; and if the offence be that of embezzlement or fraudulent application, use, or disposition, by a person in the public service of the Crown, or of the East India Company, of property intrusted to him by reason of such employment, or part thereof, it shall be enough to state that the defendant was in such service, and that he received the property by reason of such employment, and embezzled the same, or part thereof, or fraudulently applied, used, or disposed of the same, as the case may be; and, if the case be one of fraudulent application, use, or disposition, by any person not being such public servant, but intrusted as aforesaid, it shall be enough to state that such person was intrusted with the property (describing its general character as aforesaid), and it shall be enough to state shortly the purpose of the trust, and that he fraudulently applied, used, or disposed of the same contrary to his duty on that behalf.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. xiii.

210. The court before which any offender is tried under this Act shall have power upon the trial to make any amendments that may be necessary, by reason of any variance between the statements of the charge and the evidence, either in the description of the property, or of any person, or of any office, appointment, or employment, or of the purpose of the trust or otherwise, when, in the opinion of the court, the person charged cannot have been misled as to his defence by such imperfect or erroneous statement.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. xiv.

211. Every offender under this Act may be tried and punished by any court of competent jurisdiction, either in the place where he is in custody, or where he committed the offence.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. xv.

212. The punishment of any offender under this Act shall not be deemed to take away or lessen his liability or the liability of his sureties to make good any loss sustained by Her Majesty or the East India Company, or any other person or persons, by his misbehaviour or breach of trust.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. xvi.

213. Every person charged with a felonious breach of trust under this Act, who shall be proved to have knowingly made up or furnished false statements or accounts of the sums of money received or paid by him, or intrusted to his care, or of the goods or balance of money in his custody or control, shall be liable to fine in the discretion of the court, although no actual embezzlement or fraudulent application, use, or disposition of trusts, moneys, chattels, or valuable securities, is proved against him, and in addition to such fine may be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, as the court shall adjudge, for any term not exceeding one year; but no person convicted of felonious breach of trust as aforesaid, shall be punished also for making up false accounts in connection with the same breach of trust.—Act XIII, 1850, sec. xvii.

PROCEEDINGS FOR CORRUPTION.

214. All native ministerial officers of the civil and criminal courts are amenable to the courts to which they are attached for acts of corruption or extortion, and the courts are empowered to receive any such charges that may be preferred against them, provided that before receiving such charges the complainant make an oath or declaration to the truth of it. Security shall not be demanded in the first instance for the prosecution of any such charges, but in the event of it appearing necessary at any time in the course of the inquiry sufficient hazirzaminy security may be required from the prosecutor or accuser to attend and prosecute the charge to a conclusion.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. ix, cl. 1; Reg. X, 1806, sec. x.

215. The Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut are empowered to receive any charge of corruption or extortion against any native ministerial officer of a Zillah or Sessions Court, and to refer the charge for trial to the court to which the accused is attached, provided that if the offence was committed in any suit or matter depending before the court to which the said native officer was attached, the complainant shall prove to the satisfaction of the Sudder Court that he preferred the suit in the first instance to the lower court, and that such court refused or omitted to receive the charge.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. ix, cls. 2 to 6.

216. Charges of corruption or extortion which may be preferred against the native ministerial officers of any civil or criminal court of judicature are to be considered as civil actions, to be prosecuted in the civil courts; but this provision, the principal object of which is to enable individuals who may be aggrieved by any of the native officers of justice to obtain redress by an action in the civil courts, is not meant to preclude a criminal prosecution, in cases of corruption, extortion, or embezzlement, which may appear to call for exemplary punishment.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. ix, cl. 7; Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. vi, cl. 1.

217. If a native ministerial officer of any civil or criminal court, who may be prosecuted for corruption or extortion under these rules, shall be proved to have received or taken the whole or any part of the money or property which he may be charged with having received or taken, the court is to adjudge him to refund the amount or value of the money or property which he may be so proved to have so received or taken, and to pay a fine of three times the amount of it to Government. In enforcing the decision, the court is to observe the rules prescribed for enforcing other decisions of the court. If the officer against whom such decree may be passed shall not appeal from it within the limited time, or if an appeal shall not lie from the decision, the court is to transmit a copy of the decree to the Governor-General in Council. If an appeal shall lie from the decision, and such officer shall prefer an appeal, and the decision shall be confirmed in appeal, the court by which the final decision may be passed is to transmit a copy of it to the Governor-General in Council, who reserves to himself the power of declaring such officer incapable of serving Government in any capacity. The courts may suspend a native officer against whom a charge of corruption or extortion may be preferred until the final decision may be passed, if they shall see cause for so doing.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. ix, cl. 8.

218. If any person shall prefer a charge of corruption or extortion against a ministerial officer of any civil or criminal court of judicature under these rules, and the charge shall not be proved, the accused is to have the option of suing the accuser for damages in any court of civil judicature to which he may be amenable.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. ix, cl. 12.

219. The foregoing rules are to be held applicable to charges of a similar nature that may be preferred against the Hindoo or Mahomedan law officers of the several courts, with the following qualifications.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. viii, cl. 1.

220. An appeal shall lie to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut from all decisions which may be passed by the Zillah Courts, whereby a charge of corruption or extortion against any law officer may be decreed not proved, or by which any such charge may be adjudged to be proved, whatever may be the amount decreed to be paid, notwithstanding anything that may be said to the contrary in any Regulation passed on this date.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. viii, cl. 2.

221. No decree passed by any Zillah or City Court, adjudging a Hindoo or Mahomedan law officer guilty of corruption or extortion, shall be carried into execution, in the event of the law officer against whom such decree may be passed appealing from the decree, in cases of appeals from decisions for sums of money passed by those courts respectively, and the execution of which they are empowered to suspend upon such securities being given.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. viii, cl. 3.

222. The Zillah and City Courts are to enforce, by the usual process, all decrees that they may pass adjudging their law officers guilty of corruption or extortion, which may not be appealed against within the limited time, and transmit copies of the decrees to the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. viii, cl. 4.

223. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut is to transmit to the Governor-General in Council a copy of every decree which they may pass, adjudging a law officer of any civil or criminal court guilty of corruption or extortion, within one week after it may be given.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. viii, cl. 6.

224. The Governor-General in Council, upon the receipt of any decree adjudging a law officer of a civil or criminal court guilty of corruption or extortion, which may be transmitted to him under these rules, reserves to himself the power of dismissing the offender from his office, or of both dismissing him from his office and declaring him incapable of exercising any employment under Government. The Governor-General in Council likewise reserves to himself the power of suspending any law officer against whom a charge of corruption or extortion may be preferred, until a final decision shall be passed on the charge, whenever it may appear to him expedient, either upon the representation of any of the courts of judicature, or in consequence of any other information which may come before him.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. viii, cl. 7.

225. When a Zillah or a City Court shall adjudge a charge of corruption or extortion that may have been preferred against any law officer not to be proved, and the prosecutor shall not appeal from the decree within the limited time, the court is to transmit a copy of it to the Governor-General in Council. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, within the above-mentioned period, are to transmit to the Governor-General in Council copies of all decrees which they may pass, whereby any charge of corruption or extortion that may have been preferred against any law officer may be adjudged not proved.—Reg. XII, 1793, sec. viii, cl. 8.

226. Whenever a law officer, or ministerial native officer, may not, by the result of a civil action, have been subjected to the penalties for corruption or extortion provided for in the foregoing rules, and there may appear to be sufficient grounds for a criminal prosecution against any such officer on a charge of corruption, extortion, or embezzlement, he is hereby declared liable to a criminal prosecution before the zillah or city magistrate and Sessions Court, as provided for in other cases of misdemeanor by the Regulations, and on conviction before a Sessions Court, or the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, he shall be subject to discretionary punishment, to the extent and under the provisions stated in paragraph 170, with respect to native officers convicted of making use of the public money intrusted to their care.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. vi, cl. 2.

227. Paragraph 171, directing a report of convictions and sentences to the Governor-General in Council, for the purpose of enabling him to determine whether the guilty persons should be declared incapable of again serving Government, shall also be considered applicable to any convictions and sentences under the present rules.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. vi, cl. 3.

228. The Regulations in force not containing any provision for a summary proceeding to inquire into and recover embezzlements of money, or other property paid into, or deposited in the Civil or Criminal Courts of Judicature, or received by the nazir, khazanchy, or other native officers of those courts, in execution of decrees, or on account of deposits, or on any other account, in their official capacity; and it appearing expedient that provision should be made for this purpose as well as for compelling the native officers of the civil and criminal courts to deliver up any public accounts which may have been kept and withheld by them; the following rules are enacted for this purpose.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. vii, cl. 1.

229. Whenever any native officer attached to a civil or criminal court may be charged with having embezzled any money or other property paid into, or deposited in the court to which he is attached, or received by him in his official capacity, in execution of a decree, or on account of a deposit, or on any other account whatever; or whenever the judge or judges of a civil or criminal court may have reason to suspect any such embezzlement on the part of a native officer attached to the court, they shall immediately institute a summary inquiry to ascertain the truth of such charge or suspicion; and shall, at the same time, require the native officer accused or suspected to give sufficient security for his attendance during the inquiry. In the event of such security not being given, and of its being necessary to keep the officer in custody pending the inquiry, it shall be competent to the judge or judges to order the same, and to keep the party in custody of peons, or to confine him in the jail of the Dewanny Adawlut, until he shall give the required security, or his detention appear no longer necessary.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. vii, cl. 2.

230. When the summary inquiry has been completed, if it be established thereby that any money or other property has been embezzled by the person accused, or suspected in his official capacity, he shall be required to pay the same into court within such time as may be limited for that purpose; and on his failure to comply with such requisition, it shall be recoverable from him as well as from his surety, if he have given security on account of the office held by him, by the usual process of recovery in execution of judgments of the civil courts.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. vii, cl. 3.

231. A similar mode of proceeding shall be observed when a native officer attached to any Civil or Criminal Court of Judicature may withhold any public accounts which it is his duty to prepare and furnish, and the summary judgment in such cases shall not only order the immediate delivery of the accounts withheld, but shall also impose such fine to Government as may appear just and proper, on consideration of all the circumstances of the case, and the situation of the party.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. vii, cl. 4.

232. Any person dissatisfied with the judgment of a Zillah or City Court, given under the provisions of paragraphs 228 to 231, shall be at liberty to prefer a summary appeal, thereupon under the rules applicable to such appeals, to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; and provided sufficient security be given for performing the decree of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, on the appeal, the decision of the Zillah or City Court shall not be carried into execution till confirmed by Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. vii, cls. 5 and 6.

NOTE.—For rules respecting Summary Appeals see "CIVIL JUDICATURE," page 77.

233. Whenever any native ministerial officer, of any civil or criminal court, or any Hindoo or Mahomedan law officer, against whom an action may have been brought in the civil court to recover money or property, extorted or corruptly taken, shall be proved to have received or taken the whole, or any part of the money or property which he may be charged with having received or taken, the court is to adjudge him to refund the amount of the money, or value of the property, which he may be proved to have so received or taken, with interest when it may be a case of money taken, at such rate, not exceeding twelve per cent. per annum, as to the court may appear equitable, and to pay full costs to the plaintiff in the suit. The court shall not, in such case, be competent to award any fine against the defendant.—Reg. III, 1827, sec. iii.

234. Any law officer or ministerial native officer, charged with corruption or extortion, against whom there may appear to be sufficient grounds for a criminal prosecution, shall be liable to such prosecution as laid down in paragraph 226, whether the civil action provided for in the preceding paragraph, shall have been brought or not, and whatever, if brought, may have been its result.—Reg. III, 1827, sec. iv.

235. It shall not be necessary for any party, from whom money or property may have been corruptly taken or extorted, to institute a civil action for the recovery thereof: but on proof of the charge in a criminal prosecution for those offences, a certified copy of the conviction by a Sessions' Court, or the Nizamut Adawlut, shall be received as sufficient authority for enforcing the refund of the amount or value so taken with interest on application to that effect being preferred by the aggrieved party to the civil court, on the stamp paper prescribed for miscellaneous petitions.—Reg. III, 1827, sec. v.

236. Whenever it may be established by the process described in paragraphs 228 to 232, that any native officer attached to a civil or criminal court may have embezzled any money or other property duly paid into or deposited in the court to which he is attached, or regularly received by him in his official capacity, in execution of a decree, or on account of a deposit, or on any other account whatever, it shall be the duty of the European controlling authority to refund to the party or parties whose property may have been so embezzled the amount or value of the embezzlement from the public treasury, in the first instance, without reference to the solvency or otherwise of the defaulter or his surety; the Government reserving to itself the right of adopting such measures for the recovery of the money so refunded as may be deemed expedient with reference to the nature and circumstances of each case.—Reg. III, 1827, sec. vi.

237. If a native servant or dependant of any judge of a civil or criminal court of Judicature, not being a public officer attached to the court, shall extort or receive, directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable consideration, under any pretence whatever, from any party or person, on account of any suit to be instituted, or that may be depending or have been decided in the court, he shall be committed as for a contempt of court, and be punished by a fine equal to treble the sum of money extorted or received, or by imprisonment at the discretion of the court; and the judge is required to discharge such servant or dependant, and never to employ him, directly or indirectly, in his public or private capacity. If the offender shall not appeal against the decree within the limited time, or if an appeal shall not lie from the decision, or if the decision shall be confirmed in appeal, the court by which the final decree may be passed shall transmit a copy of it to the Governor-General in Council, who, in addition to the penalties or punishments specified in the decree, will, if there shall appear to him grounds for so doing, declare the offender incapable of serving Government in any capacity.—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. xi.

238. If the Darogah of a jurisdiction, or any officer under his authority, shall be guilty of corruption, extortion, or oppression, or commit any act repugnant to this Regulation, the party injured is hereby permitted to prosecute him, either criminally before the Sessions Court, or for damages in the Dewanny Adawlut. The judges of the above-mentioned courts are required to take cognisance of all such prosecutions or suits as may be brought before them under this Regulation, and to pass such sentence or decree as may appear to them equitable, upon a consideration of the circumstances of the case.—Reg. XXII, 1793, sec. xxii.

239. Whenever the local Government, or the head officer of a department or office under Government, shall be of opinion that there are good grounds for making a public inquiry into the truth of any imputation of corruption, extortion, embezzlement, or other malversation committed at any time during tenure of office, by any ministerial or police officer, subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of the East India Company, and subordinate to such Government, or employed in such department or office, as the case may be, it shall be lawful for such Government, or any such head officer as aforesaid, to prosecute such officer on the part of Government in a criminal court, or to nominate some person to conduct such prosecution; and it shall also be lawful for such Government, or head officer as aforesaid, in their or his discretion, to undertake on the part of Government the prosecution in a criminal court of any such charge as aforesaid, which may be brought by an aggrieved private party against any such ministerial or police officer, and such prosecutions as aforesaid shall not be barred, or affected, by reason of the party prosecuted having ceased to be in the service of Government at the time at which the charge may be brought against him.—Act XXXII, 1852, sec. i.

240. Provided always, that no collector, magistrate, nor head of an office in the salt, abkarry, or customs' department, under the grade of commissioner, shall commence or undertake a prosecution under this Act, until he shall have obtained the permission of the court, board, or officer to whom he is immediately subordinate, to institute the same.—Act XXXII, 1852, sec. ii.

241. No collector, magistrate, judge, or other officer, who may prosecute any officer under this Act, or cause such prosecution to be instituted, or who may conduct any preliminary investigation into the conduct of such officer connected with such prosecution, nor any of his deputies, assistants, or subordinate officers, shall act as judge in any such prosecution.—Act XXXII, 1852, sec. iii.

NOTE.—For proceedings against officers of the Customs, and Revenue Ameens see "REVENUE."

242. The ministerial officers of the courts of the moonsiffs, sudder ameens, and principal sudder ameens, shall be liable to the same penalties for acts of corruption, extortion, or other misconduct, as the ministerial officers of the Zillah and City Courts are now liable under the general Regulations.—Reg. V, 1831, sec. xxv, cl. 2; Act XXV, 1837, sec. xi.

INQUIRIES INTO THE BEHAVIOUR OF PUBLIC SERVANTS NOT REMOVABLE WITHOUT THE SANCTION OF GOVERNMENT.

243. Whenever the Government shall be of opinion that there are good grounds for making a formal and public inquiry into the truth of any imputation of misbehaviour by any person in the service of the East India Company, not removable from his office without the sanction of the same Government, it shall cause the substance of the imputations to be drawn into distinct articles of charge, and shall order a formal and public inquiry to be made into the truth thereof. —Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. ii.

244. The inquiry may be committed either to the court, board, or other authority to which the person accused is subordinate, or to any other person or persons, to be specially appointed, by the Government, commissioners for the purpose: notice of which commission shall be given to the person accused ten days at least before the beginning of the inquiry.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. iii,

245. When the Government shall think fit to conduct the prosecution, it shall nominate some person to conduct the same on its behalf.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. iv.

246. When the charge shall be brought by an accuser, the Government shall require the accusation to be reduced to writing, and verified by the oath or solemn affirmation of the accuser, and every person who shall wilfully and maliciously make any false accusation under this Act, upon such oath or affirmation, shall be liable to the penalties of perjury: but this enactment shall not be construed to prevent the Government from instituting any inquiry which it shall think fit, without such accusation on oath or solemn affirmation as aforesaid.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. v.

247. Where the imputations shall have been made by an accuser, and the Government shall think fit to leave to him the conduct of the prosecution, the Government, before appointing the commission, shall require him to furnish reasonable security that he will attend and prosecute the charge thoroughly and effectually, and also will be forthcoming to answer any counter-charge or action which may be afterwards brought against him for malicious prosecution, or perjury, or subornation of perjury, as the case may be.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. vi.

248. At any subsequent stage of the proceedings the Government may, if it think fit, abandon the prosecution, and in such case may, if it think fit, on the application of the accuser, allow him to continue the prosecution, if he is desirous of so doing, on his furnishing such security as is herein-before mentioned.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. vii.

249. The commissioners shall have the same power of punishing contempts and obstructions to their proceedings as is given to civil and criminal courts by Act XXX, 1841 (paragraphs 105 and 106), and shall have the same powers for the summons of witnesses, and for compelling the production of documents, and for the discharge of their duty under the commission, and shall be entitled to the same protection as the zillah and city judges, except that all process to cause the attendance of witnesses, or other compulsory process, shall be served through and executed by the zillah or city judge in whose jurisdiction the witness or other person resides, on whom the process is to be served; and if he resides within Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, then through the Supreme Court of Judicature there. When the commission has been issued to a court, or other person or persons having power to issue such process in the exercise of their ordinary authority, they may also use all such power for the purposes of the commission.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. viii.

250. All persons disobeying any lawful process issued as aforesaid for the purposes of the commission shall be liable to the same penalties as if the same had issued originally from the court or other authority through whom it is executed.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. ix.

251.—A copy of the articles of charge, and list of the documents and witnesses by which each charge is to be sustained, shall be delivered to the person accused, at least three days before the beginning of the inquiry, exclusive of the day of delivery and the first day of the inquiry.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. x.

252. At the beginning of the inquiry, the prosecutor shall exhibit the articles of charge to the commissioners, which shall be openly read, and the person accused shall thereupon be required to plead "guilty" or "not guilty" to each of them, which pleas shall be forthwith recorded, with the articles of charge. If the person accused refuses, or without reasonable cause neglects, to appear to answer the charge either personally or by his counsel or agent, he shall be taken to admit the truth of the articles of charge.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xi.

253. The prosecutor shall then be entitled to address the commissioners in explanation of the articles of charge, and of the evidence by which they are to be proved; his address shall not be recorded.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xii.

254. The oral and documentary evidence for the prosecution shall then be exhibited; the witnesses shall be examined by or on behalf of the prosecutor, and may be cross-examined by or on behalf of the person accused. The prosecutor shall be entitled to re-examine the witnesses on any points on which they have been cross-examined, but not on any new matter, without leave of the commissioners, who also may put such questions as they think fit.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xiii.

255. If it shall appear necessary before the close of the case for the prosecution, the commissioners may in their discretion allow the prosecutor to exhibit evidence not included in the list given to the person accused, or may themselves call for new evidence, and in such case the person accused shall be entitled to have, if he demand it, an adjournment of the proceedings for three clear days, before the exhibition of such new evidence, exclusive of the day of adjournment and of the day to which the proceedings are adjourned.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xiv.

256. When the case for the prosecution is closed, the person accused shall be required to make his defence, orally or in writing, as he shall prefer. If made orally, it shall not be recorded; if made in writing, it shall be recorded, after being openly read, and in that case a copy shall be given at the same time to the prosecutor.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xv.

257. The evidence for the defence shall then be exhibited, and the witnesses examined, who shall be liable to cross-examination and re-examination, and to examination by the commissioners, according to the like rules as the witnesses for the prosecution.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xvi.

258. All witnesses, either for the prosecution or defence shall be examined on oath, or, if exempt from taking an oath in courts of justice, on solemn affirmation, to be administered in either case by one of the commissioners; and every witness so examined and wilfully giving false evidence on any material point, shall be deemed guilty of and liable to the penalties of perjury. When the prosecution is not conducted on behalf of Government, the prosecutor may himself give evidence for the prosecution and may be examined for the defence.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xvii.

259. The commissioners, or some person appointed by them, shall take notes in English of all the oral evidence, which shall be read aloud to each witness by whom the same was given, and, if necessary, explained to him in the language in which it was given, and shall be recorded with the proceedings.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xviii.

260. If the person accused makes only an oral defence, and exhibits no evidence, the inquiry shall end with his defence; if he records a written defence, or exhibits evidence, the prosecutor shall be entitled to a general oral reply on the whole case, and may also exhibit evidence to contradict any evidence exhibited for the defence, in which case the person accused shall not be entitled to any adjournment of the proceedings, although such new evidence were not included in the list furnished to him.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xix.

261. When the commissioners shall be of opinion that the articles of charge, or any of them, are not drawn with sufficient clearness and precision, the commissioners may, in their discretion, require the same to be amended, and may thereupon, on the application of the person accused, adjourn the inquiry for a reasonable time. The commissioners may also, if they think fit, adjourn the inquiry from time to time, on the application of either the prosecutor or the person accused, on the ground of the sickness or unavoidable absence of any witness, or other reasonable cause. When such application is made and refused, the commissioners shall record the application, and their reasons for refusing to comply with it.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xx.

262. After the close of the inquiry, the commissioners shall forthwith report to Government their proceedings under the commission, and shall send with the record thereof their opinion upon each of the articles of charge separately, with such observations as they think fit on the whole case. —Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xxi.

263. The Government, on consideration of the report of the commissioners, may order them to take further evidence, or give further explanation of their opinions. It may also order additional articles of charge to be framed, in which case the inquiry into the truth of such additional articles shall be made in the same manner as is herein directed with respect to the original charges. When special commissioners have been appointed, the Government may also, if it thinks fit, refer the report of the commissioners to the court, or other authority to which the person accused is subordinate, for their opinion on the case; and will finally pass such orders thereon as appear just and consistent with its powers in such cases.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xxii.

264. The word "Government," as used in this Act, means the Governor-General in Council, the Governor or Deputy-Governor of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, the Governor in Council of the presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay respectively, and the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces of Bengal, whose sanction is necessary for the removal of the person accused.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xxiii.

265. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to repeal any Act or Regulation in force for the suspension or dismissal of principal and other sudder ameens, or of deputy-magistrates or deputy-collectors, but a commission may be issued for the trial of any charge against any of the said officers, under this Act, in any case in which the Government shall think it expedient.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xxiv.

266. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to affect the authority of Government, for suspending or removing any public servant for any cause without an inquiry under this Act.—Act XXXVII, 1850, sec. xxv.

267. It having been doubted whether a Sessions judge holding a zillah or city gaol delivery can, upon misconduct appearing before him in the course of a criminal trial or otherwise, order the dismissal of a police officer, or other native officer, it is hereby declared that a Sessions judge, holding a zillah or city gaol delivery, may order the dismissal of any native officer convicted before him of a criminal offence, which under any express provision in the Regulations is punishable by dismission from office; and on the same being notified to the magistrate or other European public officer, under whom the native officer so dismissed may have been employed, it shall be the duty of the magistrate or other European officer to take measures for the appointment of a successor to the vacant office, in conformity with the Regulations. In all other cases, if the removal of a native officer appear necessary to a Sessions judge holding a gaol delivery, he shall communicate the same, with the grounds of his opinion, to the magistrate or other European public officer under whom such native officer may be employed; and the magistrate, or other European officer receiving such communication, shall either conform thereto and proceed to fill the vacant office in the mode prescribed by the Regulations, or shall report the case to the proper court, board, or other authority vested with the final power of removing the native officer referred to, under the provisions of Regulation VIII, 1809, or any other Regulation in force.—Reg. XXV, 1814, sec. xv.

OATHS OF OFFICE.

268. All public officers shall take and subscribe the prescribed oaths of office before such person as the Governor-General in Council may commission to administer them.—Reg. II, 1793, sec. iii,; Reg. V, 1804, sec. xxv; Reg. III, 1829, sec. iii.

269. It shall be lawful for the Governor-General in Council to dispense with any oath which by any Regulation, or by any Act of the Governor-General of India in Council is now required to be taken, and it shall be lawful for the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces to dispense with any oath which by any Regulation or any Act of the Governor-General of India in Council now in force within those provinces is now required to be taken.—Act XXI, 1837, sec. i.

270. Provided always that the dispensing power given by this Act shall not extend to any oath now required by law to be taken in any stage of any judicial proceeding.—Act XXI, 1837, sec. ii.

271. Whenever any oath is dispensed with under the authority given by this Act, the person who but for such dispensation would have been legally required to take such oath shall, in the presence of the functionary by whom, but for such dispensation, such oath would have been administered, make and subscribe a declaration in writing to the same effect with such oath.—Act XXI, 1837, sec. iii.

272. Whoever shall, in any declaration made and subscribed according to the provisions of this Act, knowingly state any untruth, such that if that untruth had been stated on oath, the person stating it would have been guilty of perjury, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or fine or both.—Act XXI, 1837, sec. iv.

273. Such parts of the Regulations in force as direct that the law officers, or ministerial native officers of the Courts of Judicature, civil or criminal, or any other native officers employed in the judicial or revenue departments, or in any public office whatever, shall take and subscribe an oath, previously to their entering upon the discharge of the duties of the office to which they may be respectively appointed, or which in like manner prescribe an oath of office to be taken by the moonsiffs and sudder ameens, and by the native pleaders attached to the civil courts, are declared subject to the following modifications.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. ii. cl. 1.

274. Instead of the prescribed oath, which is required by the Regulations in force, the several native officers referred to in the above paragraph shall hereafter make and subscribe, in open court, or in the established public office, before the judges, boards, collectors, and agents, or other European authorities to which they may be respectively subject, a solemn declaration to the same effect, with the form of oath heretofore prescribed, except that the word "declare" shall be substituted for "swear;" and that the declarer shall not be sworn thereto.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. ii, cl. 2.

275. The judges, boards, collectors, or other European officers before whom such declarations are required to be made and subscribed, shall attest the same as publicly read and subscribed before them, in pursuance of the above paragraph, and shall be careful to enforce a due observance of the rule therein contained by the native officers appointed to act under them respectively.—Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. ii, cl. 3.

276. The serishtadars, or other head native officers, moonshees, mohurrers, and nasirs of the Civil and Criminal Courts, previous to entering upon the execution of the duties of their offices, are to take and subscribe the following oath or declaration in open court, before the judge or judges of the court to which they may be attached:

"I, A. B., appointed to the office of serishtadar (or other head officer, or moonshee, mohurrer, or nasir) to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut or the Nizamut Adawlut, or the Dewanny Adawlut or Sessions Court of the zillah or city of . ), solemnly swear (or declare) that I will truly and faithfully perform the duties of the office to which I have been nominated to the best of my knowledge and ability; that I will not receive, directly or indirectly, any present or nuzzer, in money or effects of any kind, from any party whomsoever, on account of any suit to be instituted, or which may be depending or have been decided in the court; that I will not knowingly permit any person or persons under my authority, or in my immediate service, to receive, directly or indirectly, any present or nuzzer, in money or effects, from any party or person whomsoever, on account of any suit to be instituted, or which may be depending or have been decided in the court; and that I will not derive, directly or indirectly, any advantages or emoluments from my office, excepting such as the orders of Government do or may authorize me to receive."—Reg. XIII, 1793, sec. iv.

277. With the modification contained in paragraphs 273 to 275, the rules in force, which require that certain native officers attached to the Civil and Criminal Courts of Judicature, and to other public offices, shall take and subscribe an oath, solemnly engaging to perform the duties of the office committed to them faithfully and uprightly, according to the Regulations, are hereby declared to extend to the native record keepers and thaseeldars, or native treasurers of the civil and criminal courts, though not specifically named in the preceding paragraph, as well as to all other native officers of Government holding any situation of trust and responsibility in the public service. —Reg. XVIII, 1817, sec. iii.

NOTE.—For Judicial Oaths, See "CIVIL JUDICATURE," page 49.

REGULATIONS.

FORM AND AUTHORITY.

278. Every rule or order that may be passed by the Governor-General in Council regarding the administration of justice, the imposition or levying of taxes or of duties on commerce, the collection of the public revenue assessed upon the lands, the rights and tenures of the proprietors and cultivators of the soil, the provision of the Company's investment, the manufacture of salt or opium, and generally all Regulations affecting in any respect the rights, persons, or property of the natives, or any individuals who may be amenable to the Provincial Courts of Judicature, shall be recorded in the judicial department, and there framed into a Regulation, and printed and published as hereafter directed.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. ii.

279. The Regulations passed annually shall be numbered. The first Regulation enacted in each year shall be numbered one, and all subsequent Regulations according to the order in which they may be passed. The number of each Regulation, and the year in which it may be enacted, is to be inserted at the top of every page as in this Regulation.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. iii.

280. Every Regulation shall have a title expressing the subject of it as concisely as possible, similar to the title prefixed to this Regulation.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. iv.

281. First.—There shall be a preamble to every Regulation stating the reasons for the enaction of it.

Second.—If any Regulations shall repeal or modify a former Regulation, the reasons for such repeal or modification are to be detailed in the preamble.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. v.

282. Every Regulation is to be divided into sections. Each section shall be numbered according to the order in which it may occur. The preamble is to be considered as the first section. The sections, where necessary, may be divided into clauses; in which each clause is to be numbered in the same manner as the clauses in section v, of this Regulation.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. vi.

283. In framing a Regulation, if there shall be occasion to refer to any clause or section of a Regulation, or any Regulation at large; as, for example, the second clause of the fifth section, or the fifth section of this Regulation, or this Regulation generally; the reference, in each case, shall be expressed in the following manner: clause second, section v, Regulation XLI, 1793; section v, Regulation XLI, 1793; Regulation XLI, 1793;—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. vii.

284. The subject of every section and clause shall be inserted opposite to it in the margin as concisely as possible.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. viii.

285. The civil and criminal courts of justice are to be guided in their proceedings and decisions by the Regulations which may be framed and transmitted to them as above directed, and by no other.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xiii.

286. In the English drafts of Regulations, the same designations and terms are to be applied to the same descriptions of persons and things, in order that rights, property, tenures, privileges, deeds, courts, process, offices, officers, and generally all persons and things, may be uniformly described by the same designations and terms throughout the judicial code.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xiv.

287. Every Regulation with the marginal notes shall be translated into the Persian and Bengal languages by the Persian translator to the Government, or such other person as the Governor-General in Council may expressly appoint for that purpose. The number of the Regulation and the year in which it may be passed, and the numbers of the sections and clauses shall be inserted in the translates, in the same manner as in the English drafts of the Regulations.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xv.

288. The translator is to be particularly careful to preserve in the translates the same uniformity in the designations and terms applied to persons and things, as is directed with regard to the English code in paragraph 286. Whenever he shall have occasion to insert the designation or name of any person or thing that he may have reason to believe may not be intelligible to the natives in general, and which may not have been used and explained in the translates of any former Regulation, he shall, in the first passage in which such word or term may occur, subjoin an explanation of it, that upon its recurring no doubt may be entertained as to its true meaning and import.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xvi.

289. It shall be the duty of the translator to revise the proof sheets of the printed translates, and to correct all errors of the press.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xvii.

290. The translator is to translate the Regulations into plain and easy language, and in all possible cases to reject words not in common use. As far as may be consistent with the preservation of the true meaning and spirit of the Regulations, he shall adopt the idiom of the native languages, instead of giving a close verbal translation of the English drafts, which must necessarily render the translates obscure, and often unintelligible to the natives.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xviii.

291. One part of a Regulation is to be construed by another, so that the whole may stand.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xix.

292. If any Regulation shall be passed differing from a former Regulation, either wholly or partially, the new Regulation is to be considered as a virtual repeal of the old one as far as it may differ from the latter; provided that the new Regulation be couched in negative terms, or by its matter necessarily imply a negative.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xx.

293. If a Regulation that rescinds another Regulation is itself afterwards rescinded, the original Regulation is to be considered as revived, without any formal declaration to that purpose.—Reg. XLI, 1793, sec. xxi.

294. On receipt of translations of the Regulations in the country languages, the zillah and city judges and magistrates shall cause the same to be publicly read in their cutcherries; and shall require the native pleaders of their respective courts to take copies of the translations of any Regulations which relate, directly or indirectly, to the administration of civil justice. The judges shall also cause the copies which they are required to furnish to the cauzees stationed in the several towns and pergunnahs within their respective jurisdictions, to be read and published, for general information, at the cutcherries of the moonsiffs, and of the police daragahs or tehseeldars in charge of the police.—Reg. XXXIX, 1793, sec. x.; Reg. XI, 1806, sec. xii, cl. 2.

295. Production of a Government Gazette proof of an "Act" having passed.—Act X, 1835. (See "Miscellaneous," paragraph 3.)

ZILLAHS.

NOTE.—By Act XX, 1836, the Governor-General in Council is empowered to create new zillahs and to alter the limits of existing zillahs. Such changes, therefore, as are the subjects of the following enactments will be no longer effected by Acts. It appears under these circumstances sufficient to present here a list of the Regulations which have heretofore effected local creations and changes, and the places to which they severally referred. Zillah Courts were originally established for Bengal, Behar, and Orissa by Regulation III, 1793, and successively in the province of Benares, and in the Ceded and Conquered Provinces, in the years 1795, 1803 and 1805. ## LIMITED OPERATION OF THE REGULATIONS IN CERTAIN DISTRICTS.

NOTE.—The following enactments provide for special administration, and the partial application of Regulations in particular tracts of country.

Delhi.

11. The city of Delhi, and the conquered territory situated on the right bank of the river Jumna, the revenues of which are assigned to his Majesty Shah Alum, are hereby declared not to be subject to any of the laws or regulations of the British Government, printed and published in the manner prescribed in Regulation I, 1803.—Reg. VIII, 1805, sec. iv.

12. The administration of the revenue, of the police, and of civil and criminal justice, which has heretofore been superintended by the resident and chief commissioner at Delhi, is hereby declared, from and after the date of the promulgation of this Regulation, to be vested, as regards civil matters, in the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as regards criminal matters, in the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, and as regards revenue matters, in the Sudder Board of Revenue for the North-Western Provinces; and all cases actually pending before the resident and chief commissioner at Delhi on the date of the promulgation of this Regulation shall be transferred to one or other of the three departments above specified, as the subject may refer to one or the other of those departments.—Reg. V, 1832, sec. ii.

13. In the conduct of civil and criminal trials, in the administration of the revenue, and in all other matters, the commissioner of the Delhi territory, and all other officers acting under his control, shall ordinarily conform to the principles and spirit of the Regulations applicable to such subjects, and shall regularly furnish to the Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut, and the Sudder Board of Revenue for the North-Western Provinces, all such statements and reports as are prescribed by the existing Regulations to be submitted by the Commissioner of Revenue and Circuit, or as may be specially prescribed in future by the authorities to whom by this Regulation they are declared to be subordinate.—Reg. V, 1832, sec. iii.

14. Provided, moreover, that it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council whenever it may be deemed expedient, to introduce the whole or a part of the Regulations in force into the Delhi territory, and that an order or resolution of Government, under the official signature of the secretary, shall be sufficient authority for that purpose.—Reg. V, 1832, sec. iv.

Dehra Dhoon.

15. The Courts of Civil Judicature shall not be deemed competent to take cognizance of civil claims in the Dehra Dhoon, the cause of action in which may have originated previously to the 15th of May, 1803, being a period of twelve years antecedent to the date of the convention, by which that tract of country was surrendered to the British Government.—Reg. IV, 1817, sec. iii.

16. The Courts of Criminal Judicature are prohibited from taking cognizance of any crime or offence which may have been committed in any part of the Dehra Dhoon, previously to the 15th of May, 1815, being the date of the convention by which the said tract of country was surrendered to the Honourable the East-India Company.—Reg. IV, 1817, sec. iv, cl. 1.

17. The Governor-General in Council reserves to himself the power of fixing the periods, for which the settlement of the land revenue shall from time to time be formed in the Dehra Dhoon, according as local circumstances may appear to require, adhering, however, as nearly as practicable, to the principles established for the settlement generally of the lands in the territories ordinarily denominated the Ceded and Conquered Provinces.—Reg. IV, 1817, sec. v.

18. The administration of criminal justice in the Dehra Dhoon, and in the reserved tracts between the Jumna and Sutlej above mentioned, shall hereafter be conducted under such rules and instructions as the Governor-General in Council may please to issue for the guidance of the officers to whom it may be instructed.—Reg. V, 1829, sec. iii, cl. 2.

Kumaon.

19. The functionaries who are or may be appointed in the province of Kumaon are respectively placed under the control and superintendence, in civil cases, of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut; in criminal cases, of the Court of Nizamut Adawlut; and in revenue cases, of the Sudder Board of Revenue for the North-Western Provinces; and such control and superintendence shall be exercised in conformity with such instructions as the said functionaries may have received, or may hereafter receive, from the Government of the North-Western Provinces of the presidency of Fort William.—Act X, 1838, sec. ii.

Garrow Hills.

20. The tract of country now comprised in the thannah jurisdictions of Gwalpara, Dhoobree, and Kurreebaree, in the district of Rungpore, is hereby declared separated from the said district; and the operation of the rules for the administration of the police, and of civil and criminal justice, as well as those for the collection of the land revenue, customs, abkaree, and stamp revenues, together with all other rules contained in the Regulations printed and published in the manner prescribed by Regulation XLI, 1793, are suspended, and shall cease to have effect therein from the date of the promulgation of this Regulation, except in so far as may be hereinafter provided.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. ii.

21. The administration of civil and criminal justice, the collection of the revenue, the superintendence of the police, and every other branch of Government within the tract above described, are hereby declared to be vested in an officer appointed by the Governor-General in Council, and denominated the Civil Commissioner for the North-Eastern parts of Rungpore; the said officer shall conduct the same agreeably to the principles and spirit of the existing Regulations, subject to the restrictions and modifications hereinafter provided, and to such other alterations and amendments as may from time to time be ordered by the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. iii.

22. In the administration of criminal justice, the commissioner shall be competent to exercise all the functions and authorities now exercised by magistrates in respect to the apprehension and trial of persons charged with offences; and further to hold trials and pass sentence to the extent permitted by the Regulations to a Sessions judge; but without reference of the proceedings for futwa to a Mahomedan law officer.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. iv, cl. 1.

23. In the exercise of the powers and authorities above conveyed to the commissioner, he shall ordinarily conform to the principles and spirit of the Regulations applicable to such subjects; so likewise the police officers, and all other officers acting under his control: provided, however, that the commissioner and all such officers shall be bound to conform to any special rules or orders that may from time to time be issued by the Governor-General in Council for regulating the process before trial, or the forms of trial to be observed in the case of different classes of the population, and the same shall be to all intents and purposes legal and valid. Moreover, it shall be competent to the Governor-General in Council to extend, limit, or modify any part of the authority to be exercised by police officers, and likewise to confer on the commissioner the power of granting conditional pardon to accomplices without previous reference to the Nizamut Adawlut, as required by the existing Regulations, or in any other way to extend or modify the magisterial and judicial functions vested in the commissioner by the preceding paragraph. An order or resolution of Government, under the official signature of a secretary to Government, shall be sufficient authority for such modification; anything in Regulation XLI, 1793, or in any other Regulation of Government, to the contrary notwithstanding.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. iv, cl. 2.

24. If the commissioner shall deem an offender brought to trial before him to be liable to a punishment exceeding that which by the existing Regulations a Sessions judge is competent to adjudge, without referring the case to the Nizamut Adawlut, he shall not pass any final sentence thereon, but shall transmit to the Nizamut Adawlut the record of the proceedings held on the trial, together with a full English report of the circumstances of the case, and of his opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner or prisoners tried, as likewise an explanation of any special custom of the parties or witnesses that may be necessary to the proper understanding of the proceedings.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. iv, cl. 3.

25. Upon the receipt of any trial referred by the commissioner under the three preceding paragraphs, the Nizamut Adawlut shall, without submitting the proceedings for the futwa of their law officers, proceed to pass a final judgment, or such other order as may, after mature consideration, seem to the court requisite and proper, in the same manner, with exception to the requisition of a futwa, as if the trial had been sent up in ordinary course from a Sessions judge.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. v.

26. In the exercise of the duty of administering civil justice within the tract defined in paragraph 20, the commissioner shall hold a court, and proceed, in cases wherein persons not of the race of Garrow Mountaineers, or other rude tribes, are exclusively concerned, according to the existing Regulations, subject to the modifications provided for by this Regulation, observing as far as practicable the rules prescribed for zillah judges holding and presiding in the Adawluts of the country; provided, however, that there shall be no limit to the amount for which a suit shall be cognizable by the commissioner, and an appeal from his judgment shall not lie to the Zillah Court. If the stake or interest involved (calculated according to the rule contained in Article 8, Schedule B, Reg. X, 1829,) do not exceed in amount or value the sum of five thousand rupees, the decision passed on the case by the commissioner shall be final. If the interest involved, calculated as above, exceed in value or amount the sum of five thousand rupees, an appeal shall lie in such cases direct to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, who will proceed in the hearing and adjudication thereof in the same manner as in the case of appeals entertained by the court from judgments of the Zillah Courts. The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut shall likewise be competent to grant a special appeal in cases of a less amount than five thousand rupees, should there appear, either on the face of the decree, or from circumstances established to the satisfaction of the court, substantial reason for concluding that there has been a failure of justice in the award of the commissioners.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. vi.

27. If the parties in a civil action be Garrow Mountaineers, or of any other similar rude tribe, or if either of them be of that description, the form and process that may be sanctioned and prescribed by the Governor-General in Council shall be adopted in the trial and adjudication of the matter at issue, and in the execution of the award; and any civil judgment that may be passed according to such form shall have full authority and effect in the same manner as a decree passed by a competent court of final jurisdiction.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. vii.

28. In the conduct of the revenue duties of the tract of country placed under the commissioner, as well as those relating to the customs, abkaree, stamps, and other miscellaneous items, as to the land revenue, the commissioner shall observe the rules and principles of the general Regulations, with such limitations and restrictions, as to the authority to be exercised by himself, as may be provided in the instructions he may receive from time to time from the Governor-General in Council; provided, however, that it shall be competent to the Governor-Gene al in Council to direct the separation, temporarily or permanently, of any tract of country occupied by Garrow Mountaineers or other rude tribes from the estates of any neighbouring zemindars to which the same may now be claimed to be attached; also to discontinue the collection by zemindars or others of any cesses, tributes, or exactions, on whatsoever pretence the same may be levied from such people, and to make arrangements either for the remission of the same, or for their collection direct by the officers of Government, making such compensation to zemindars or others justly entitled thereto for the relinquishment of the same, as may to him seem most equitable and proper.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. viii, cl. 1.

29. No suit or action shall be entertained by any civil court having jurisdiction, or that may hereafter have jurisdiction, within the tract of country subject to the authority of the commissioner, on account of any act of the above description done under the authority of the Governor-General in Council.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. viii, cl. 2.

30. In all matters connected with the tract of country specified in paragraph 20 or with the races of mountaineers and rude tribes above described, if from the want of any special provision, or from doubts as to the applicability of the rules in existence, any difficulty shall arise as to the course to be pursued, a reference shall be made to the Governor-General in Council, to whom it shall be competent to prescribe, by an order under the official signature of a secretary to Government, what specific measures shall be adopted in the particular instance, as well as to annul, modify, and explain any existing rules or orders.—Reg. X, 1822, sec. ix.

Chinsurah.

31. The town and settlement of Chinsurah shall be annexed to and included in the zillah of Hooghly.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 1.

32. The late Dutch factories at Calcapore and Dacca, and the lands appertaining to them, shall be annexed to the city jurisdictions of Moorshedabad and Dacca respectively; those at Fulta and Balasore shall be annexed to the zillah jurisdictions of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs and Cuttack respectively; and the late Dutch factory at Patna, and the lands appertaining to it, shall be annexed to the jurisdiction of the city of Patna.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. ii, cl. 2.

33. Subject to the provisions contained in this Regulation, the rules for the administration of civil and criminal justice and the police in the provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, as well as those for the collection of the land revenue, customs, abkaree, and stamp revenues, and generally the whole of the Regulations in force for the internal administration of the provinces above mentioned (the special rules for Cuttack only excepted), are declared to be in full force and effect in the settlement and territories specified in the two preceding paragraphs, from the date of the promulgation of this Regulation (25th August, 1825).—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. iii.

34. In all civil suits determined after the promulgation of this Regulation, the general rules in force for appeals will of course be applicable.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. iv, cl. 5.

35. The Civil Courts of Judicature are prohibited from entertaining any claim or suit which, from the production of a former decree, or from the records of court, shall appear to have been finally heard and determined by any former judge, or superintendent of any court of competent jurisdiction. If any doubt should arise respecting the competency of the former jurisdiction, the case shall be reported for the instructions of the Governor-General in Council, whose determination upon this point shall be conclusive.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. v.

36. All deeds of whatever denomination, whether written on stamp paper, or otherwise, that may have been regularly and legally executed according to the Dutch law, or established local usage, previously to the promulgation of this Regulation, are hereby declared to be valid, and the several Courts of Civil Judicature are empowered and directed to admit such deeds in evidence; and in any judicial proceedings that may be held on such documents, the courts are to be governed by the law and usage under which the same were prepared and executed.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. vi.

37. In the decision of all civil suits regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, and special contract, in which the parties may be Europeans, heretofore subject to the Netherlands authorities, or their descendants, and as well as generally in all cases where the parties may be Europeans, or foreigners of any description, or their descendants, the courts shall be guided, as far as practicable, by the spirit of the rule prescribed in section xv, Regulation IV, 1793 ("PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS," paragraph 230), which directs, that "in suits regarding succession, inheritance, marriage, and caste, and all religious usages and institutions, the Mahomedan laws with respect to Mahomedans, and the Hindoo laws with regard to Hindoos, are to be considered the general rules by which the judges are to form their decisions."—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. vii.

38. In all criminal trials for offences committed before the promulgation of this Regulation, whenever it may appear that the punishment of the offence, under the provisions of this Regulation, would be more severe than the punishment prescribed for the same offence under the laws in force when the settlement and territories referred to in this Regulation came into the possession of the British Government, the punishment to be adjudged against the prisoner shall be regulated by the law which was in use when the said territories came into the possession of the British Government.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. viii.

39. An officer, to be denominated "the Dutch Law Officer or Fiscal," shall be appointed by the Governor-General in Council, on the establishment of the judge of zillah Hooghly; and it shall be his duty to expound the laws and usages of the settlement of Chinsurah, and its late dependencies, in all cases that may be submitted to him, either by the civil or criminal courts.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. ix, cl. 1.

40. It shall be the further duty of the "fiscal" to furnish translations of all papers filed in the Dutch language, and to interpret them truly to the respective courts, as well as generally to perform such other duties as may be especially assigned to him by the local judge or magistrate.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. ix, cl. 2.

41. Provided always, that the particular law, custom, or usage which may have influenced the final judgment of the court, shall be specifically stated or referred to in the decree, sentence, or order affected thereby, and the fiscal's written opinion shall remain attached to and be constantly kept with the record of the case.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. ix, cl. 3.

42. The fiscal, or Dutch law officer, shall moreover, by virtue of his office, be deemed a sudder ameen, with the full powers invested in judicial officers of that description by Regulations II and III, 1821 ("CIVIL COURTS CONSTITUTION AND JURISDICTION" and "MAGISTRATES"), within the town and settlement of Chinsurah; in this capacity he shall be employed in the trial and decision of any suits or cases, civil or criminal, that may, under the general Regulations, be referred to him as sudder ameen, by the zillah judge or magistrate respectively; and shall be governed in the trial and decision of such cases by the rules and Regulations which are or may be in force for the guidance of sudder ameens.—Reg. XVIII, 1825, sec. ix, cl. 4.

84. Provided always, that no court shall try or determine any case civil or criminal, with respect to which a final decision was pronounced previously to the said 6th day of July 1853, by any court or person within the said tract of land, having at the time of the decision lawful power and authority to pronounce it; and that with the exception of cases within the provisions of Section iv, of the said Regulation VII, of 1816, no act committed within the said tract of land prior to the 31st day of August, 1853, shall be deemed an offence punishable under the provisions hereof, if at the time of the commission of such act the same was not contrary to the laws then in force in the said tract of land.—Act XVII, 1853, sec. iv.

85. Nothing in this Act shall extend to any crime or offence within the provisions of Sections iii, or iv, of the said Regulation, committed before the passing of this Act; but every such crime or offence shall be dealt with and punished as if this Act had not been passed.—Act XVII, 1853,

XXII, 1812, sec. iv.

Saugor and Nerbudda Territories.

95. The administration of the police, and of criminal justice in the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, has been heretofore conducted by British officers under instructions issued for their guidance by the Governor-General in Council; but it is hereby declared that from and after the date of the promulgation of this Regulation (1st November, 1831), as regards criminal matters, those territories shall be subject to the Nizamut Adawlut for the Western Provinces.—Reg. VI, 1831, sec. x.

96. The commissioner to whom the superintendence of the territories in question is or may be confided, is hereby declared competent to hold trials and pass sentence to the extent permitted by the Regulations to a commissioner of circuit (but without reference of the proceeding for futwa to a Mahomedan law officer), as well as to exercise all the functions and authorities now exercised by the commissioners of circuit under Regulation I of 1829.—Reg. VI, 1831, sec. xi.

97. If the commissioner shall deem an offender brought to trial before him to be liable to a punishment exceeding that which by the existing Regulations a sessions judge is competent to adjudge, without referring the case to the Nizamut Adawlut, he shall not pass any final sentence thereon, but shall transmit to the Nizamut Adawlut for the Western Provinces the record of the proceedings held on the trial, together with a full English report of the circumstances of the case, and of his opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner or prisoners tried, as likewise an explanation of any special custom of the parties or witnesses that may be necessary to the proper understanding of the proceedings.—Reg. VI, 1831, sec. xii.

98. Upon the receipt of any trial referred by the commissioner under the preceding paragraph, the Nizamut Adawlut in the Western Provinces shall, without submitting the proceedings for the futwa of their law officers, proceed to pass a final judgment, or such other order as may, after mature consideration, seem to the court requisite and proper, in the same manner as if the trial had been sent up in ordinary course from a sessions judge.—Reg. 99. In the conduct of criminal trials, and in all other matters, the commissioner, as well as the police officers, and all other officers acting under his control, shall ordinarily conform to the principles and spirit of the Regulations applicable to such subjects, and shall regularly furnish to the Nizamut Adawlut in the Western Provinces all such statements and reports as are prescribed by the existing Regulations, to be submitted by the sessions judge, or as may be specially prescribed in future by the authority to whom, by this Regulation, they are declared to be subordinate.—Reg. An order or resolution of Government, under the official signature of a secretary to Government, shall be sufficient authority for such extension or modification.—Reg. VI, 1831, sec. xv.

Commissioner in Cuttack.

NOTE.—The office of Commissioner of Cuttack was established as a temporary measure, and for special purposes, by the following Regulation, with large powers, including those of the Revenue Board, and the Provincial Court of Appeal and Circuit; and these powers were confirmed, with slight modifications of his civil jurisdiction, by sec. viii, Reg. I, 1829, which appointed Commissioners of Revenue and Circuit for divisions throughout the provinces. Regulation I, 1830, relieved the Commissioner of the 19th Division from part of his local jurisdiction, but no enactment of subsequent date has declared to what extent the powers recognized by sec. viii, Regulation I, 1829, are still retained, or annulled. As the modifications consequent on the abolition of the Provincial Courts of Appeal and Circuit, and the discontinuance of the exercise of the functions of circuit judge by the Commissioners, will not dispose of the whole questions of the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Cuttack, the original Regulation is here given entire.

101. Whereas considerations connected with the present state of the district of Cuttack, and with the nature of the disturbances which recently prevailed in various parts of that district, have rendered it expedient that a commissioner should be deputed for the temporary superintendence of the civil affairs of the said district; and whereas it is necessary, with a view to the prompt and effectual execution of the important duties assigned to the commissioner, that he should be vested with special powers as well in the administration of civil and criminal justice, as in the superintendence of other local duties hitherto conducted by the Boards of Revenue and Trade; the Vice-President in Council has been pleased to enact the following rules, to be in force within the local limits of the district of Cuttack, from the date on which the commissioner may assume the charge of his office.—Reg. V, 1818. Preamble.

102. The provisions of the existing Regulations, by which the Board of Revenue, the Board of Trade, the Provincial Court of Appeal and Circuit for the division of Calcutta, and the local committee for superintending the embankments, are respectively authorized or directed to exercise any powers or functions, or to discharge any duties in the administration of the civil affairs of the district of Cuttack, are hereby suspended.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. ii.

103. A commissioner shall be deputed to the district of Cuttack, who shall be authorized, from the date on which he may assume the charge of his office, to exercise and discharge the whole of the powers and duties heretofore exercised and dicharged with regard to the affairs of that district under the Regulations in force, by the Board of Revenue, by the Board of Trade, by the judges of the Provincial Court of Appeal for the division of Calcutta, either individually or collectively, and by the judges of the Court of Circuit for the division of Calcutta, either individually or collectively, and by the Local Committee of Embankments.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. iii.

104. The foregoing provisions shall not operate to prevent the judge of circuit, who is now holding the sessions of jail delivery of the zillah of Cuttack, from completing that duty under the Regulations heretofore in force; but from and after the completion of the present sessions, the sessions of jail delivery of the zillah of Cuttack shall be held from time to time by the commissioner, at such periods as he may judge most expedient for the public service.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. iv.

105. The records of civil suits of every description, originating in the district of Cuttack, which may be depending before the Provincial Court for the division of Calcutta, whether in appeal from the decision of the Zillah Court of Cuttack, or instituted in the first instance in the Provincial Court, shall be transferred to the commissioner; and such cases, as well as all other civil cases coming under his cognizance, shall be investigated and decided by him, at any place or places situated within the limits of the district of Cuttack, under the same powers as are vested in the judges of the Provincial Court, either individually or collectively.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. v, cl. 1.

106. The pleadings and the management of suits which may be brought under the cognizance of the commissioner in Cuttack shall be conducted, either by the parties themselves, or by agents duly authorized by them for that purpose; and it shall not be requisite that any regular pleaders should be attached to the court of the commissioner, or that any duties in the court of the commissioner should be performed by such pleaders.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. v, cl. 2.

107. The commissioner in Cuttack shall be empowered to dispense with the rules contained in sections iii, iv, v, vi, and vii, Regulation XXVIII, 1814, ("PROCEDURE ON THE TRIAL OF ORIGINAL SUITS") in all instances in which he may judge it expedient to permit persons to sue either in his own court or in the Zillah Court of Cuttack, as paupers, without requiring such persons to fulfil the conditions specified in those sections.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. v, cl. 3.

108. The commissioner in Cuttack, and the judge and magistrate of that district, shall also be respectively empowered to dispense with the rule contained in section xix, Regulation XXVIII, 1814, ("STAMPS") in all instances in which they may judge it expedient.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. v, cl. 4.

109. The orders and decisions passed by the commissioner, in original civil suits, or in appeals cognizable by him, whether regular or summary, shall be to all intents and purposes final and conclusive: Provided, however, that an appeal shall lie to the Sudder Dewanny

Adawlut, from the decisions of the commissioner on civil suits, which from their amount or value may be appealable to the King in Council, under the provisions of the existing Regulations.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. v, cl. 5.

110. Nothing contained in this Regulation shall be construed to affect or alter the powers vested in the Court of Nizamut Adawlut with regard to the administration of criminal justice in the district of Cuttack; and the commissioner in Cuttack will stand in the same relation to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, as the judges of the Provincial Court of Circuit for the division of Calcutta have hitherto stood either in their individual or in their collective capacity.—Reg. V. 1818, sec. vi.

111. The provisions of Regulation XXII, 1817, are hereby rescinded, and the commissioner in Cuttack shall exercise the same powers in confirming the appointment and removal of the native officers of the judge and magistrate of Cuttack, as are exercised by the Provincial Courts of Appeal and Circuit, with regard to the appointment and removal of the native officers on the establishment of the zillah judges and magistrates generally.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. vii.

112. The judge and register of zillah Cuttack are hereby empowered to hold their court for the investigation of summary suits regarding rent or dispossession from lands, in any part of the district of Cuttack; and it shall be competent to the commissioner, with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, to employ the registers or the assistants to the judge and magistrate of Cuttack, on local duties in the territorial department, when such employment shall appear calculated to promote the public service.—Reg. V, 1818, sec. viii.

COURTS MARTIAL AND OTHER MILITARY COURTS FOR THE TRIAL OF OFFENCES.

1. Whenever a detachment of the Bengal native troops may be on foreign service, or at Prince of Wales' Island, Fort Marlborough, Malacca, or any other part of the British possessions beyond sea, the Commander in-Chief of the forces in Bengal shall have power to issue his warrant to the officer commanding in chief where such detachment is stationed or serving, authorizing him to convene native general courts-martial as occasion may require The Commander-in-Chief may also delegate by his warrant to such commanding officer, either absolutely or under such restriction as he shall think fit, the power of confirming or directing the revision of the sentence of courts-martial —Reg II, 1809, sec ii.

2 A native general court-martial shall not consist of fewer than nine native commissioned officers, subadars, or jemadars, unless such court-martial be holden by virtue of a warrant from the Commander-in-Chief, in the situations and under the circumstances mentioned in the preceding paragraph In cases of general courts-martial so holden, where the number of nine officers cannot, in the judgment of the officer convening the same, be conveniently assembled, any number of native commissioned officers, subadars, or jemadars, not less than five, shall be competent to form such general courts martial for the trial of native officers or soldiers belonging to such detachments. But no sentence of death shall be passed by such courts-martial, unless two-thirds of the members, or four where the court consists of five, shall concur therein.—Reg. II., 1809, sec. iii.

These sections have not been repealed, but they seem to be superseded by Arts 73 & 74, Act xix, 1847

3. Any zillah or city magistrate shall be competent to give effect to the sentence of a general court-martial adjudging imprisonment with hard labour among the convicts of the civil power, on the offender being delivered into his custody, and the sentence being certified to him for the purpose of his giving it effect, by the judge-advocate-general, or his deputy, under the authority of the Commander-in-Chief, and the sentence so certified shall serve as the magistrate's warrant and authority for carrying it into effect according to the terms of it —Reg. IV., 1820, sec. ii.

This section is not repealed, but it seems to be superseded by Art. 84, Act xix, 1847

4 In all cases in which, by a general order of the Governor-General of India in Council, dated the 24th of February, in the year of our Lord 1835, it is made competent for courts-martial to sentence soldiers of the native army in the service of the East-India Company to the punishment of dismissal from such service, it is and shall be lawful to sentence such soldiers to be imprisoned with or without hard labour for any period not exceeding two years, if the sentence be pronounced by a general court-martial, or not exceeding one year if the sentence be pronounced by a garrison or line court-martial, or not exceeding six months if the sentence be pronounced by a regimental or detachment court-martial And every soldier so sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour for any period whatever, or to imprisonment without hard labour for any period exceeding six months, shall, after confirmation of his sentence, be dismissed from such service, provided always, that all sentences under this Act pronounced by any court-martial inferior to a general court-martial shall require the confirmation of the general or other officer commanding the division or field force to which the person convicted belongs —Act XXIII, 1839

5 Whenever, under Act No XXIII, of 1839, any sentence of a court-martial shall adjudge imprisonment, or imprisonment with labour, for any offence, it shall be the duty of every judge, magistrate, sheriff, or other officer in charge of any gaol, to give effect to such sentence on the offender being delivered into his custody, and on being furnished with a copy of the sentence by the officer commanding the division, garrison, regiment, or detachment, as the case may be, to which the offender belongs —Act II, 1840, sec. i.

6 In cases in which an offender, being a soldier, is punishable under Act No. XXIII, of 1839, any offender amenable to any Articles of War for the East-India Company's native forces, not being a commissioned officer and likewise any person serving with any part of the army and receiving public pay in any capacity, menial servants, and other camp followers of every description, shall be punishable according to that Act, as well as otherwise, according to law; and Act No. II., of 1840, shall be applicable to offenders imprisoned under thisAct.—Act XXVIII., 1841, and Act XII., 1842, sec. ii.

These Acts have not been repealed, but they seem to be superseded by the Articles of War, Act xix., 1847.
